NO EVIDENCE

Stratford, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, and other points. It states that with the excepion of the Nash jobber-broker combine which operates in Western provinces and which handles a portion of the Ontario crop, "No evidence has been found of any combine in Canada prejudicial to the interest of the public in the distribution of Ontario fruits and vegetables, but that the denial of adequate market facilities in Toronto has resulted in giving commission houses occupying space on the Toronto fruit market a quasi-monopolistic control of the distribution of domestic fruits and vegetables in and through Toronto otherwise than by farmers or truckers direct to retailers; and that such control has been accompanied by irregular practices in making returns to growers, the extent of which it is impossible to estimate in view of the fact that in many cases the existing records do not permit complete accounting to be made.

The commission finds:

"That in the flush season of the Ontario crop, commission dealers on the Toronto fruit market are unable to dispose of all the fruit and large quantities of fruit and vegetables are destroyed; and that the provision of facilities for disposing of such surpluses direct to the consumer on a public market would result in a saving both to the grower and to the consumer.

"That there is a tacit agreement among the commission houses occupying space in the Toronto fruit market to charge 12 1-2 per cent commission plus a certain sum for cartage; that the cartage charge amounts to an extra commission of over 1 per cent on commission sales; that this charge is made whether goods are delivered or not; but that the sums collected from growers for cartage over a year approximately equals the actual cost of delivery of goods sold on commission during the year; and that sums collected for commission and cartage give a gross percentage profit on commission sales which in some cases is double and in others is four times the gross percentage profit made by the same firm on merchandising transactions."

Stratford, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, and other points. It states that with the excepion of the Nash jobber-broker combine which operates in Western provinces and which handles a portion of the Ontario crop, "No evidence has been found of any combine in Canada prejudicial to the interest of the public in the distribution of Ontario fruits and vegetables, but that the denial of adequate market facilities in Toronto has resulted in giving commission houses occupying space on the Toronto fruit market a quasi-monopolistic control of the distribution of domestic fruits and vegetables in and through Toronto otherwise than by farmers or truckers direct to retailers; and that such control has been accompanied by irregular practices in making returns to growers, the extent of which it is impossible to estimate in view of the fact that in many cases the existing records do not permit complete accounting to be made.

The commission finds:

"That in the flush season of the Ontario crop, commission dealers on the Toronto fruit market are unable to dispose of all the fruit and large quantities of fruit and vegetables are destroyed; and that the provision of facilities for disposing of such surpluses direct to the consumer on a public market would result in a saving both to the grower and to the consumer.

"That there is a tacit agreement among the commission houses occupying space in the Toronto fruit market to charge 12 1-2 per cent commission plus a certain sum for cartage; that the cartage charge amounts to an extra commission of over 1 per cent on commission sales; that this charge is made whether goods are delivered or not; but that the sums collected from growers for cartage over a year approximately equals the actual cost of delivery of goods sold on commission during the year; and that sums collected for commission and cartage give a gross percentage profit on commission sales which in some cases is double and in others is four times the gross percentage profit made by the same firm on merchandising transactions."

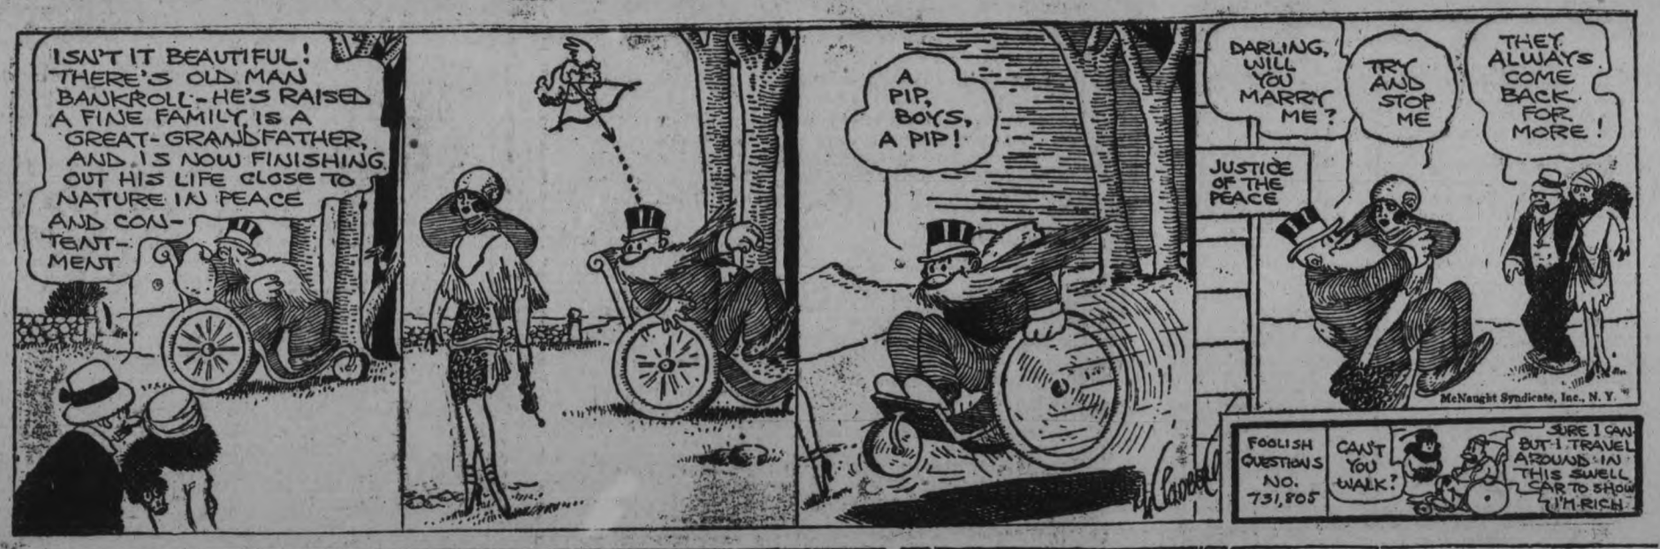
CARTOON FOLLIES OF 1926—By RUBE GOLDBERG



"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

COUPLE WELCOMED BY DUMMER PEOPLE

WARSAW, Aug. 24.—On Thursday evening a large number of people, representing families from Carmel to south of Warsaw, and from Douro, gathered at Mr. and Mrs. Richard Batten's home to welcome, as home makers, among them, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Batten (nee Miss Mildred Bentham from Inniskillen, who taught for some time in the Garbutt school). The comfortable farm house was filled to overflowing, as both young people are very popular among those who know them. There was a general meeting of friends, after a time there was a game of French tag, then an "age" contest. The company was divided into three groups and the losing group had to sing, That group was composed of most of the best singers, so that the singing was much appreciated. After a "floral love story," Mr. Fred Crow recited "How he hunted the mouse," and soon the bride and groom were asked to take places near a table. Rev. H. B. Herrington said a few words of welcome to the young couple, and spoke of the help Mr. Batten had always so willingly given. There were no formal addresses. The two little girls, Lucille Herrington and Murietta Jory, drew in a large, decorated barrel, which was heaped up with gifts. Mrs. Clayton Jory and Mrs. Harry Digweed unwrapped and handed the gifts to Mrs. Batten. The barrel did not hold all of them. There were kitchen articles, granite and aluminum, kettles and pans, a carving set, water pitcher, tea pot, towels of all descriptions, comforters, blankets, vases, odd pieces of china and crystal, an alarm clock from several young men, and a mantel clock from the village choir, in which representatives of those in charge of the music of each village church took part. Mr. Batten thanked the people for their gifts, and for coming to spend the evening. He was asked to sing, which he did. Refreshments were served, and the last dainty was wedding cake, passed by the bride. She had made the cake herself. After a few songs the gathering dispersed.

The meeting of the United Ladies' Aid next Wednesday will take the form of a picnic, to which Zion Ladies' Aid, the Warsaw Women's Institute, and the Missionary Society are invited.

Miss Mary Cooper is visiting her brothers in and near Warsaw.

Mrs. Atkinson (nee Miss Ada Payne) is visiting her mother.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—With cattle receipts over the week-end numbering 4,691 head, together with 1,075 cattle billed through, the market opened at steady prices with slightly slower trade.

Good butchers cattle are selling steadily, buyers preference being for light handyweight cattle of good quality. A few steers sold for export at prices ranging from $7.50 to $8.15, with choice butchers selling at $7.25 to $7.75, and other classes ranging according to quality.

There is a dull feeling on common and medium butcher cattle, but the market will be practically all cleaned up for these on today's market.

Good cows sold yesterday at from $4.50 to $5.50.

Bulls are being bought by the abattoirs at top price of 5 1-2c for butcher bulls. Export men expect to complete part of their shipments with bulls and expect to pay up to 5s for same.

The export trade has not been very brisk, buyers not being overly anxious to buy any heavy cattle. The best price paid was $8.15 for a load of 22 cattle averaging 1,270 lbs. each.

For good stockers and feeders $5.50 to $6.25 a cwt., was paid. About 1,000 head of Western stockers came in yesterday's market, with the majority of them fair. One exceptionally good load of Western stockers weighing around 800 each, brought $6.60.

The baby beef trade is slow, prices ranging from $10 to $12 a hundred.

With calf receipts at 586 head the trade opened firm, $12 to $13 a hundred being paid for choice stock. Grassers sold at from $5 to $6 a hundred.

Hogs are unsettled in price at the opening of the market. Packers are bidding 25c lower than last week, $12.75 off cars, $11.75 f.o.b.; premium $2.42 per head for selects.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Corn took the lead in the grain markets yesterday, both as to activity and strength, wheat reflected the upward swing of corn values, which in turn were given stimulus by exce sive rain, persistent lack of sunshine and by increasing danger that a large part of the new corn crop will fail to mature ahead of frost. Corn and wheat both closed firm, corn 1 1-4 to 2 1-8 net high, wheat 1-4 to 3-4 up, oats at 1-4 to 1-8 up, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 25 cents.

Corn trade expanded right from the start and prices quickly began to climb. Much of the buying came from previous sellers who were in position to collect a profit. Other buying was accelerated as a result of warnings from field experts that there has been unusual dearth of conditions requisite to bring the corn crop as a whole to safety this season before the advent of frost.

A big decrease of the corn visible supply total tended further to lift the corn market. Oats followed corn. Wheat was easy, much of the time but later rallied owing to the notable strength of corn. There was an evident absence of selling pressure in the wheat market throughout yesterday, despite better harvest conditions in Canada and notwithstanding a large decrease of the United States wheat visible supply.

Provisions averaged higher by the action of hog values and of grain.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 20,000; few strictly choice yearlings offered, about 4,500 grasscattle in run; these selling steady to strong; both to killers and feeder dealers; top yearlings 10.65; heavies 10.20; 1,624 pound averages 9.60; vealers steady at 13.50 to 14.50.

Hogs 35,000; mostly 15 cents to 25 cents higher; bulk desirables 210 pounds down, 13.40 to 13.70; most good and choice 240 to 280 pound butchers 12.25 to 12.90; late sales medium grade offered mostly 12.00 to 12.65; better grade 300 to 340 pound butchers 11.50 to 12.00; bulk desirables packing sows 10.25 to 10.75; few lightweights above 11.00; bulk better slaughter pigs 13.00 to 13.50; shippers took 6,000; estimated holdover 9,000.

Sheep 18,000; fat lambs steady to 10 cents higher; bulk westerns 14.65 to 14.85; top natives 14.85, bulk 14.25 to 14.65; culls strong at 9.50 to 9.75; fat ewes largely 5.50 to 7.00; feeding lambs strong; bulk 13.50 to 14.50.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.84 3-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 7-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Owing to the majority of foreign bids being below local exporters' views, the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday continued quiet. The local demand for Canadian western oats was also limited and prices were steady.

The feature of the flour trade was the demand developed from the British West Indies for new crop winter wheat grades and a fair amount of business was worked in this direction for September shipment. The local trade was quiet but firm. Car lots of old grades were quoted unchanged, while new quality was offered at $6.30 to $6.40 per barrel.

A fair volume of business was worked in spring wheat grades of flour with foreign buyers, but the local demand was small. Prices were unchanged.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for millfeed and prices were advanced $1.00 per ton for all grades. This was attributed to the increased demand of late and the small supplies available. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but prices ruled steady.

The tone of the market for baled hay was steady, but the trade volume was small. Ordinary No. 2 timothy was quoted at $14 to $15 per ton.

An easier tone developed in the butter market and prices were reduced 1-2c to 1-2c per pound. The receipts were 3,987 packages.

In spite of the dullness that has prevailed in the cheese market of late and the large supplies on hand, local dealers advanced prices yesterday 3-8c to 5-8c per pound. The receipts were 8,563 boxes.

The egg market was fairly active and prices were firmly maintained. The receipts were 963 cases.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for beans, and prices were unchanged There was more demand for car lots of choice white handpicked grades at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CROPS DESTROYED AROUND BURNBRAE

BURNBRAE, Aug. 24.—The terrific wind and rain storm of Saturday and Sunday was one of the most destructive to crops ever seen in this district. The storm was not unexpected and under threatening skies local farmers had been rushing harvesting operations with all possible speed, with the result that many fields of oats are lying just as the sheaves fell from the binder. A great deal of careful handling will be needed to keep this grain from sprouting in the stook if the damp weather continues. While cut grain is in a bad condition, the standing stuff is almost worse. Fields of oats are flattened in some cases with the heads almost buried in the ground. With the ground soft and offering little or no traction for the binder the job of cutting the rest of the crops will be a real one.

Perhaps the most damage has been done to the corn crops. The high wind preceding the rain started the mischief and with the heavy rain following, the corn is in a hopeless tangle. Farmers will certainly need the proverbial patience of Job when the corn harvesting season arrives.

The rain in itself will prove beneficial in many respects. Potaoes and other root crops as well as the later crops such as buckwheat and millet will be given another boost. Failing water supplies will be replenished and the pastures given a fresh start. The very cold spell during the latter part of the week affected dairy cows to such an extent that the milk flow decreased in many cases 25 per cent. It is doubtful if even improved pasture would bring the iiow back to normal.

The rain has delayed threshing operations again. Had dry weather continued a great deal of stookthreshing would have been done during the next week.

A CLEAN FIGHT.

A most pleasing feature of the present election campaign, so far as West Peterboro is concerned, is the absence from the speeches made on both sides of any personalities in regard to the opposition candidate.

Conservative speakers have nothing but good words to say about Mr. Duffus; Liberal speakers have nothing but good words to say about Mr. Peck.

That is as it should be.

The candidates are well-known citizens, held in high esteem throughout the district and with a splendid reputation for honesty and fair dealing, and it is seeming that each should be referred to with respect by opposing speakers.

The electors of West Peterboro appreciate the cleanliness of the campaign in this respect, and are able to give their attention to the issues of the election.

In this respect the local contest is in marked contrast to campaign fights in some other constituencies.

A TIME TO KEEP COOL.

(Manitoba Free Press.)

With a hot campaign just around the corner, this is a good time for the citizen to resolve to keep his shirt on. He will be told this and he will be told that, in the press, on the platform and on the side lines. If he is told one thing by one party and something the direct opposite by another party, obviously some one is trying to string him. This is the time he should put his own judgment to work. Leaving prejudice and inclination aside, he should attempt to get at the truth for himself. When a statement is made for his consumption he can do something for Canadian politics by asking: "Is this the truth? Is this a statement of fact, or is it only a half-truth, or is it something that isn't the truth at all?" Such an attitude would go a long way toward compelling political speakers to get rid of much of the drivel that marks the platform oratory during an election campaign and forces them to debate the issues like reasonable men talking to a reasoning and informed audience.

"SMART ALECK" DRIVERS.

A judgment given in a Western Ontario County Police Court the other day by which a young motorist was convicted of reckless driving and fined $24.55 should be of interest to all drivers.

The offender, who, in addition to the fine, faces the possibility of having his right to drive taken away from him and spending a period in the County Jail, was given a severe reprimand by the presiding magistrate.

He was one of the "Smart Aleck" type of drivers, his offence consisting of driving his car in front of another machine at a slow rate of speed and zigzagging across the road as if to prevent the other car from passing.

When at last the second driver succeeded in going past, the defendant would speed up his car, get in front again and repeat the process.

There are drivers of that calibre in every district, and their behaviour is not only irritating but dangerous to everybody else on the road.

Local offenders who have been guilty of this kind of driving are asked to take notice of the penalties handed out in this case and to consider whether or not it would be cheaper and safer to handle their car in a more orthodox and courteous manner.

BOOST THE EXHIBITION.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition is three weeks away.

The programme arranged by the directors for this year's Exhibition, which will run for a whole week, is the most ambitious ever attempted here, and it is safe to say that there will be more features of interest than ever before.

Citizens of Peterboro can do much to ensure an attendance record proportionate to the attractiveness of the programme by mentioning the Exhibition when writing to their friends and by discussing it wherever they go.

Better still, invite your friends to plan their visit to you so as to be here for Exhibition week.

The problem of entertaining your visitors will thus be solved, and at the same time you will be giving the Peterboro Industrial a chance to leave last year's attendance record of 36,000 well in the rear.

With every citizen a booster and publicity agent for the Exhibition during the next three weeks, the effect upon the attendance would be tremendous.

There is no reason why 50,000 people should not attend the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition of 1926.

Do your part by saying a good word whenever the chance is offered you.

THE PASSING OF AN OLD NAME.

With the beginning of next month the vast organization so familar to Canadians under the name of the Dominion Express Company will be known as the Canadian Pacific Express Company, and the company has marked the occasion with a most attractively printed booklet telling the story of the growth of the organization.

While the passing of the old title will be to Canadians something in the nature of the passing of an old friend, there will be satisfaction in the adoption of a distinctly Canadian name, and one that will link the organization with a railway whose name is world famous.

The Dominion Express Company, it may not be generally known, commenced the express transportation service in 1882 over the lines then being operated in the West by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Half a dozen loyal and enthusiastic employees, one horse and a second-hand wagon enabled the company at that time to serve the Canadian public at seven small agencies.

Today its goods, transportation and financial services extend from coast to coast in Canada to the United States and to far distant corners of the world.

It is an essentially Canadian organization, which originated in Canada, owes its success to the goodwill of the Canadian people, and to that development of Canadian economic life to which it has contributed in some measure.

UNSAVORY MESS.

Had the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton, Ohio, publisher, a few weeks ago been the uninspired act of a degenerate thug, it would have been an atrocious crime, but investigation reveals Mellett to have been the victim of a fiendish conspiracy, in which ,it is charged, police officials and a police court judge were implicated, says The Hamilton Spectator. It is one of the most unsavory messes ever uncovered, and it will be surprising if the public does not rouse itself from its apathy and demand the visitation of summary justice upon those involved. Mellett, through the medium of his newspaper, sought to rid Canton of the lawless, bootleg element and charged that the criminals and police were in cahoots. He received many letters threatening his death if he did not cease his attacks, and one night, after returning from a motoring trip with his wife and some house guests, he was riddled with bullets on the verandah of his home, the assassins having concealed themselves in the shrubbery. It was because there was a conspiracy, as Mellett had charged in his paper, that the task of the authorities in running down his murderers was simplified. It is a police axiom that where many are involved, one will be found who will talk. Full confessions are reported to have been secured from two members of the gang and further useful information is said to have been coughed up by a former assistant police prosecutor, implicated by the prisoners. If additional testimony was needed that bribery and corruption are in the saddle in the United States, this dastardly murder in Canton has provided it. Cantonites who have been patrons of the bootleggers who engineered this killing should hang their heads in shame. They cannot consider themselves as other than accessories before the fact.

A DISCREDITED LABOR LEADER.

A settlement of the miners' strike in Britain, which has now lasted more than three and a half months, seems at last within sight. Even "Emperor" Cook, the dictator of the coal diggers, and the man responsible more than any other for the prolonged and disastrous conflict, realizes that the game is up. Having ignominiously failed by his threats, boasts and slippery manoeuvres to force the hands of the Government which he has persistently attacked and defied, Cook has been forced by the stern logic of events to change his tactics and plead for conciliation.

He who, for weeks and months, was as a ramping and a roaring lion now coos as gently as a sucking dove, and is all for peace, almost at any price. What he formerly rejected and denounced with all the vehemence that is his chief stock-in-trade is now the object of his moving appeal. The Government, he announces in a press interview, will be asked to invite the miners' leaders to meet its representatives at a conference with a view to arranging a national agreement and a national minimum wage, and also for the purpose of discussing the reorganization of the mining industry.

It is a course that should have been followed long ago, and that it has been unduly delayed is the fault, not of the Government, but of the leader who now coolly purposes its adoption. From the failure of the negotiations preceding the general strike which he was chiefly instrumental in precipitating, Cook has stood out resolutely against Government intervention except upon terms of his own making. His dream of revolution, rudely shattered in those eventful days in May, was succeeded by a policy of no surrender and defiance of authority.

When the coal-owners, forced by the pressure of public opinion to resume negotiations with the miners' representatives, held out an olive branch, the "Emperor," regarding their overtures as a sign of weakness, became more autocratic than ever, rallying his followers to the slogan of "not a penny off, not an hour on," and declaring with all the emphasis of a martyr that the miners would rather starve than yield. With a loyalty to be pitied rather than commended, the vast majority of the miners did respond to the call of their leader, only to find their resources exhausted, public sympathy alienated, and the other trade unions antagonized by their obduracy.

It was only when in some districts the men began to drift back to work, and help from abroad was not forthcoming in a measure sufficient to meet the needs of the strikers, that Cook realized that if his leadership was to accomplish anything he must do something more than shout. With conditions becoming desperate, the proposals of the church representatives seemed to offer an easy way out of an awkward situation. Acceptance of these proposals, Cook calculated, would at once favorably influence public opinion, force Government action, and vindicate his authority.

Acceptance was accordingly recommended, but with scarcely the result expected. The Miners' Federation, by a decisive majority, rejected the advice of its executive, and voted down the settlement proposals of the church representatives, leaving the "Emperor" in the position of a general discredited and deserted by the army he had led into battle.

His final overthrow should not be long delayed. Even if his belated appeal to the Government for action does result in a settlement of the strike which he engineered and prolonged, no credit will be due to him. Nothing he may do now can redeem the reckless folly of a leadership which plunged Britain into the worst industrial war in her history and which has crippled and all but wrecked a great industry, caused untold misery and suffering, and, as Havelock Wilson recently pointed out, reduced to bankruptcy nearly every trade union in the country.—Ottawa Journal.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

Sir Joseph Davidson, J.P., Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge, Belfast, Ireland, speaking to a meeting of Orangemen at Winnipeg, Manitoba, on Aug. 12, 1926, declared: "We believe in the great British Empire. I do not believe that those who secede from the Empire can succeed."

I wonder what this gentleman thinks of Mr. Meighen's declaration that in the defence of that empire he favoured going to the people first in a general election in order to find out if Canada wished to take part in defending it or not. Mr. Meighen himself does not say what his own private policy is regarding that defence. He is ready apparently to go which ever way the cat jumps. A leader such as that is no man for premier of this country and no man supporting such a policy should be elected. A party which does not know where its allegiance tie lies and whether it is going to be loyal to the Empire or not is not the party to govern Canada and I am persuaded that when Mr. Meighen spoke for the Conservative party he did that party a great wrong. How comes it that in the six years following the Great War in which Canada played such a heroic part, the high spirit of Canadians should have suffered such a tremendous slump. The truth is that an attempt is being made by Mr. Meighen to sell us all out in order that he may get votes enough along with ours to put him in power. It can't be done.

A short time ago some enthusiastic preachers announced that Canada would never again go to war. That statement raised a storm of disapproval throughout the country. No one wants war but no healthy man or woman wants to be a coward when the testing time comes. If war is forced upon us who amongst us will lie down and be trodden under foot? Is the flag that braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze to be hauled down at the bidding of unscrupulous and disloyal vote-catchers?

If Mr. Peck wants our votes he will have to repudiate Mr. Meighen's "war policy." This bold attempt to rush us out of the Empire, for those who are not for that Empire are against it, will result in Ontario at least in the overwhelming defeat of anbody making it. Think of our people walking to the polls to register their votes in favour of a statement that we will see what we will do in case of an attack on the Empire but that we don't know yet.

"Don't count on us ye brother Britons overseas, we have become a craven people whose traditions have been forgotten and whose former high spirit is dead. We have become a reproach among the nations."

That would be a nice message to send to the British Dominions beyond the seas. Unless Mr. Meighen recants and disowns his new war policy he will never be Prime Minister of Canada.

"I'd rather be a dog and bay the moon than such a Briton."

J. H. BURNHAM.

To the Editor, Examiner.

Sir:

Permit me through your paper to make a few comments on Mr. Burnham's letters in The Examiner, under date of the 17th inst, wherein he intorms the Conservatives of West Peterboro that the Hon. Mr. Meighen's Hamilton declaration, to quote: "means that the Empire may be in the deadliest peril and that Canada may not be called on to defend it." And he would persuade Conservatives that they are disloyal if and when they follow the leadership of Hon. Mr. Meighen. There is also something in Mr. Burnham's letter about prohibition. If anyone is disloyal on that question it is Mr. J. H. Burnham, as for years through the press he has been trying to persuade the electors of this Province to disregard this law. In a letter to The Globe he has said that the result of prohibition is to make Ontario politically, socially, and religiously completely demoralized, and that inasmuch as it is a prohibitory law it should be disregarded. Mr. Burnham knows that the O.T.A. is a provincial law passed by the Provincial Legislature on a mandate from a majority of the electors and that the laws are made to be obeyed and that he is disloyal to his province to disregard it, to quote from the late U.S. president, Harding: "It is absolutely essential to the maintenance of secure society and the attainment of a proper moral plane that the law should be recognized as sacred and supreme and have at its back and enlisted in its support every element of the community that realizes the desirability of sound, secure and stable institutions." All honor to the individual who is loyal to the home, to his country and his province. Can those who are not, be loyal to the Empire?

Yours truly,

J. F. LILLICRAP.

Dear Sir:

In a recent issue of The Examiner I noticed among other items relative to the fire at Chemong, a card of thanks from Mr. Hancock, in which he thanked the Township of Smith for calling the fire brigade. We do not wish to take credit for this, as it was not the township that called them, Mr. Phelan, acting Mayor, called me on the telephone about 1.20 Sunday morning and said the pavilion at Chemong was on fire and they wanted the fire brigade to go out. I asked him who called them and he said it was the proprietors. I asked if they intended to pay for it, and he said he had no doubt they would, but the fire chief would not go without permission from the township. I told him I had no objection to them going but whoever called them would have to pay them.

MUCH UNCUT GRAIN DAMAGED BY WIND

Corn Also Suffered From Elements on Saturday Morning.

WARSAW, Aug. 24.—The heavy wind Saturday morning flattened a great deal of the uncut grain and of the corn. The corn may come up, as generaly the stalks were strong and healthy, and one farmer thought it would come up more readily as it was blown towards the north west it will rise to meet the sun. The grain is not so apt to come up. Much of the uncut grain is badly rusted and the stem weakened. Some have cut their grain decidedly green because of the rust. While there is much short grain with poor heads ther is also much good grain, well headed.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"MAY MR. S. AND ME GO?"

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

A correspondent asks:

"Is it correct to say, 'May Mrs. S. and me go downtown?'"

It is difficult to imagine how this correspondent could have acquired the idea that a sentence such as the one quoted could be correct. She would not say or write, "May me go downtown?" instead of "May I go downtown?" Why, therefore, should she say, "May Mrs. S. and me go downtown," instead of saying "May Mrs. S. and I go downtown?"

Possibly there is in her mind some connection between the word "may" as denoting permission, and the verb "let," denoting the same meaning. It would, of course, be correct to say, "Will you let Mrs. S. and me go downtown?" and not "Will you let Mrs. S. and I go downtown?" But in that case the word "let" is a verb, and has for its object "Mrs. S. and me," and the pronoun must be put in the form of the objective case, which is "me," not "I."

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE BASIS OF JOBS

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

A slight flurry on the New York Stock Exchange a few weeks ago caused a drop in stocks.

The depression lasted for about a week. The grocers and milkmen felt it not at all. But during that time four night-supper clubs went into bankruptcy.

One group catered to the human necessities of society, the other to its foibles.

One was solidly grounded, the other rested upon a vacillating, unstable foundation.

This calls attention to the basis upon which a job rests.

Occupations which supply human necessities are always on the soundest basis, while those which cater to classes and groups, to wealth and luxury, to whims and foibles, are most uncertain.

The farmers, carpenters, grocers and butchers found that there was a demand for their services just the same. Their jobs lasted in spite of hard times.

People had to eat and have houses, depression or no depression.

But those who were engaged in entertaining or pleasing—the actors, artists, poets, perfumers and dealers in the rare, the expensive, and the luxuries of life—were the ones who found their living cut from under their feet.

Jean Jacques Rousseau when he wrote "Emile," his famous book on child training, decided to train his imaginary charge in carpentry so his life work would be based on something solid and lasting.

Nations as well as individuals are influenced by the basis upon which their income rests.

One reason given why the financial recovery of Great Britain took place before that of France is that the former has a sounder basis of income.

Her exports are to a greater degree basic necessities—steel, oil, rubber and such materials. France on the other hand is famed for and depends to a greater extent for her income upon the production of luxuries and fashions, upon wines, perfumes, silk and similar commodities.

In a world depleted in buying power the nation dealing in human necessities always has the firmer basis of prosperity.

HASTINGS PEOPLE BID FAREWELL TO P. M. HOWARD AND HIS FAMILY ON HIS DEPARTURE FROM VILLAGE

COMMUNITY AFFAIR

(Examiner Correspondence).

HASTINGS, August 24.—The citizens of Hastings bade farewell last night at a community assembly in Lynch's Hall to Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Howard and their children, Kathleen, Patrick and John, who are leaving on Thursday morning to reside in Toronto. Heavy rain throughout the evening probably prevented quite a number from venturing out, but in spite of the unpleasantness of the weather the attendance was large and representative of the community in which the name of Howard has been an honored one for little less than three-quarters of a century.

"Pat" Howard was born at Mather's Corners in Otonabee Township, and as a small boy went with his father, John Howard, and the other members of the family to live at Hastings. School days were soon forgotten in the broadening affairs of youth, and the older generation, the dwindling minority, proudly recalls the famous Hastings lacrosse team of which young Howard was one of the outstanding players.

The speeding years, that brought manhood and its responsibilities, eventually set P. M. Howard in the ranks of business, as an undertaker and furniture dealer. Financial success rewarded his kindly, conscientious performance of duty to the public, and after a long period which has seemed to his friends so short in retrospect Mr. Howard's activities have come to an end. This summer saw the Howard block sold, the Howard business change hands, and the name that has been knit into Hastings affairs these many years will soon be only a memory where it was once so prominent. The Howard properties are being disposed of, and the Howard home will have a new tenant after the echoes of Monday's auction sale have faded. The roots of the Howard family are being torn from the soil in which they had been so soundly planted, just as the ties of those friendships which come only once in life, the heritage of school days and youth, strengthened by the associations of manhood are being surrendered.

And Hastings demonstrated the sincerity of its appreciation of good citizenship and frankly exposed its finest sentiment by paying Mr. and Mrs. Howard and their children the warmest of tributes and wishing them happiness in the city.

Several addresses were read and a table of gifts presented to the guests of the evening. Alex. Wilson, as chairman, himself a school companion of Mr. Howard's, read an address from his fellow-citizens to P. M. Howard, the citizen, and Mr. C. R. Fowlds presented him with a Jaeger blanket. This followed an address to the family collectively, read by Mrs. T. A. Walsh, and the presentations by Mrs. A. U. Bailey of a silver entree dish to Mrs. Howard and a gift to Miss Kathleen, while Hugh Walsh and Cecil Lynch tendered the public's remembrances to John and Patrick Howard. Finally Mr. J. F. McCarthy, on behalf of St. Mary's court of the Catholic Order of Foresters supplemented the eulogies paid to Mr. Howard, who is a charter member of the C.O.F., and presented him with a token of the society's esteem.

And to these formal encomiums were added impromptu expressions of respect and regret by John Coughlan, Rev. Mr. Thompson, Walter Fowlds, J. B. Plant, Dr. Wilson and Joseph Power of Chicago who is home on vacation.

Rev. Mr. Thompson especially referred to the leadership of Mrs. Howard as Regent of the I.O.D.E. in co-operation with the war-time endeavor of Canada's womanhood. Mr. Howard had throughout the years proved himself a worthy citizen whom the people of Hastings would remember with the kindliest feelings.

It was all pleasantly informal with little touches suggesting the comprehending intimacies of a big family, and like the sensibilities of

MEIGHEN DENIES RESPONSIBILITY OF STATEMENT

Had Been Made By Conservative Speaker at Lennox Picnic.

FOREIGN BORN.

Says He WasPresent But Left the Gathering Early.

ABERDEEN, Sask., Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press.) — Premier Meighen returned yesterday to the wheat fields of Saskatchewan. His first day was one of crowded hours. At breakfast time he spoke at Rosetown; in the afternoon he had meetings at Aberdeen and Bradwell. His Aberdeen meeting was held in the open air right on the prairies. Mr. Meighen spoke from the verandah of a farm house. His meeting was almost fringed with wheat elevators.

Mr. Meighen referred to a statement about the foreign born which, he said, was being circulated as having been made by a Conservative speaker at the Lennox picnic, near Toronto. In some way, Mr. Meighen added, he was being personally held responsible for the statement.

"I was present at the picnic," Mr. Meighen continued, but I left early. I did not hear the statement, and I was not responsible for it."

"I am bound by what I say," Mr. Meighen continued, "by what I have said I stand, but there my responsibility ends. My ministers follow the policy we adopt. If they don't follow it then my business is to see that they sever themselves. I have no responsibility for what some one else says. That is his look out."

Mr. Meighen declared the Liberal tariff programme had only been adopted with a view to fool the people of the prairies. Not ten per cent of that programme had actually been put into effect. "How do you like being fooled?" Mr. Meighen asked. "If you prefer to be fooled keep on voting for Mr. King and the Progressive party."

"I would like to see the luxury tax off everything," said Mr. Meighen discussing the Robb budget, "but if you can't take it off everything, would not it be better to take it off clothes than to take it off automobiles?"

CAVAN PERSONALS.

CAVAN, Aug. 24.—Mr. A. H. Monk, Bethany, had charge of the services on Cavan circuit on Sunday, in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. J. O. Totten.

Snnday school was withdrawn in Cavan Centre on Sunday morning on account of the rain.

Mrs. R. Matchett and Mrs. E. Syer were visitors to Peterboro on Saturday.

The heavy rain on Friday and Saturday put the grain and corn down badly. In some fields it had the appearance of a roller having passed over it.

On account of the rust so prevalent this season, it may not straighten up again.

This will likely make it harder to cut; some of it may have to be cut one way.

It helped the root crop and made the ploughing very much easier. The latter work had become almost impossible in some fields.

There are a few cases of small pox reported in Cavan and Millbrook.

Mrs. Milligan spent the week end in Peterboro.

Mr. John Perrin and the Misses Lottie and Effie Perrin, South Monaghan, visited Mr. J. W. Perrin on Friday evening. Miss Alma Perrin returned with them for a visit.

GIRL CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Was Sentenced to Six Months in Good Shepherd's Home.

FROM LAKEFIELD

LINDSAY, Aug. 24.—At a session of the Police Court yesterday a young girl from Lakefield, who was arrested about ten days ago on a charge of vagrancy, was sentenced to six months' definite and a year indefinite confinement in the Good Shepherd's Home, Toronto.

The girl, who is only eighteen years ago, left the village in company with a Lindsay young man named Joseph Sullivan, who, the girl states, gave her money during her stay in Lindsay. She was rounded up in a home in company with another young girl of shady reputation, and has been confined to jail ever since.

Mr. L. V. O'Connor appeared for the parents at yesterday's court session. The girl, it appears, is unmanageable, and openly declared she would runaway again if taken back home.

Police Magistrate Bradford scathingly arraigned the young man who had taken her from Lakefield to Lindsay in a car and contributed to her delinquency.

CHINA WEDDING DAY OBSERVED

Mr. and Mrs. I. Mager Receive Dishes From Friends in Emily.

OMEMEE, Aug. 24.—On Friday evening last a most enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wiliam Howden, when in response to invitations, over one hundred guests assembled at the old home of Mrs. Isaiah Magee to do honor to Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Magee, now of Peterboro, on this occasion of their china wedding anniversary. Both Mr. and Mrs. Magee were born in Emily and until a few years ago resided in this vicinity later taking up farming in the West where Mr. Magee had the misfortune to lose his eyesight. They later returned to Peterboro where Mr. Magee has suffered much by this handicap and the bulk of the burden of raising a family and keeping the home ties together has fallen on Mrs. Magee. Yet neither has become disheartened but have retained their cheerful disposition and it was for this reason that those present entered wholeheartedly into the success of the affair.

An orchestra from Peterboro provided the musical entertainment for the guests and when all had assembled on the lawn so that everyone might enjoy the presentation and programme, the gathering was called to order by the chairman, Mr. F. G. Sandy, who in a few opening remarks expressed the pleasure that all the guests felt at being present on this occasion. He touched on the importance of the wedding day and to other important events in a life-time, and also to the handicaps and cross-currents that come to everyone in life. "Almost anyone can sail when the waters are calm and the winds favorable but it takes a real mariner to smile in the face of a storm," he said. "It is perhaps for that reason we are here to enjoy the handshake of one who is smiling through and to the queen of the evening, Mrs. Magee, who has acted the part of a real heroine."

The programme consisted of trios, solos, etc., after which the following address was read by Rev. E. Rowland of Omemee and a beautiful set of dishes was presented by two nephews of the bride and groom, Messrs. Aubrey Bland and Orville Toole:

Omemee, Aug. 20, 1926.

Dear friends:—

"How often we are urged not to reserve all the kind words and flowers for those near and dear to us until they are dead, but rather to show them our appreciation while in life. We believe this to be sound advice and we, your comrades in life's pilgrimage, have assembled here this evening that we might express to you our love and sincerely congratulate you on having reached the 25th anniversary of your wedding day.

"Twenty years ago, having plighted your faith, either to other, hopefully you set out on the untrodden path. Time has told its story of gain and loss, of joy and sorrow, of labor and reward. To some of us is given to bear heavy marks of the struggle through which we pass but if we have but cheerfully tried to accept the situation and discharged the duty that come to us day by day, then there can come to none of us ultimate loss or failure. We believe, Mr. and Mrs. Magee, that through the years you have shown this spirit. When the sun was taken from your sky, you never lost hope nor were you driven to bitterness or despair. Surely you must have drawn much from the wells of life and your faith was rooted in an ordered universe and a kind Heavenly Father. May our presence here today persuade you to think that you have made many warm friends, and we wish you a golden future—'To find the soul of a friend, we've made is the end of a perfect day.'

"We cannot allow thtese hours of merriment to pass without giving them some tangible form and we do so by asking you to accept this gift."

Signed by the committee:
Mrs. Harry Magee,
Mrs. T. Z. Webster,
Mrs. Stuart Fallis,
Mrs. W. T. Howden,
Mr. Moses Ruth.

At this juncture little Melba Magee, niece of the groom, presented Mrs. Magee with a lovely bouquet of flowers, after which she rose to the occasion and in a most pleasing manner expressed her thanks not only for the gift but for the thoughts that prompted it and for the presence of everyone gathered. She spoke of her husband's affliction, but by his smiling attitude and bright countenance it had been possible for her to carry the load she had to bear. The groom also replied briefly in a humorous vein.

Short addresses were given by by Mr. Moses Ruth and Mr. J. J. Magee of Janetville after which the guests were invited to the house where in a novel way, partners were secured and later dainty refresments were served. After meeting and mingling with friends a very pleasant evening, in every sense of the word, was brought to a close.

Among the guests present from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Thornton and son Harry, of Janetville, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hannah of Janetville, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Magee of Janetville, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Howden, Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams of Peterboro, Mrs. Eagleson of Orono, Mr. and Mrs. T. Z. Webster of Lakefield, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Fallis of Millbrook, Mr. and Mrs. S. Endicott of Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Magee of Lindsay.

REBEKAH PICNIC AT CHEMONG PARK

Millbrook Lodge Holds Its Annual Outing Last Week.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 23.—Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, held its annual picnic at Chemong Park on Thursday afternoon, when a most enjoyable time was spent.

Owing to the busy season on the farms, and because of the holiday time, and other events intervening, the attendance was not as large as usual, but the members who availed themselves of the outing were well repaid for any special effort made in order to be present.

A game of softball provided entertainment for a goodly part of the afternoon, and if the rules were not adhered to very closely, at least the players had plenty of fun out of the seven innings. P. I. Bentley acted as umpire and the line-up was Aubrey Fallis, c; Witmott Merritt, p; W. E. Ball, 1b; Alice Armstrong, 2b; Isabel Syer 3b; Ada Attwooll, ss; Mrs. H. A. Fallis, rf; Mrs. P. I. Bentley, lf; Thelma Ball, cf.

D. Sheppard, p; L. Syer, c; Jean Syer, 1b; E. Morden, 2b; Lottie Lupxon, 3b; Mrs. Merritt, ss; Margaret Luxon, rf; P. Burnham, lf; Mrs. W. E. Ball, cf.

No disputes with the umpire's decisions were allowed, and the score was unevenly balanced, A. Fallis' side being the winners in the contest by a wide margin. Races completed the sports programme, Mrs. A. J. Henderson and Mrs. H. Ball coming first and second respectively in the one "for those without bobbed hair."

Single Ladies' Race.—1, Thelma Ball; 2, Alice Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Bentley, who are always interested in I.O.O.F. and Rebekah activities, are holidaying at Mr. R. N. Jones' cottage and, through their courtesy, the tea tables were laid on the lawn in front of "Merrilyn," and certainly the supper hour proved not the least enjoyable part of the day's outing.

The next event, of a somewhat similar nature as the picnic gathering, to which the members of Golden Sheaf look forward at this time of year is the annual corn roast, usually held in September, the date and place to be definitely decided upon at the regular business session in the near future.

Two cases of smallpox have developed recently, one in the village and the other in the immediate vicinity, both of a mild type, and to prevent if possible any further spread of the disease, Dr. H. A. Turner has offered to vaccinate free of charge any who desire to take this wise precaution. By the provisions of the Health Act no child will be permitted to return to school when it reopens without a certificate of vaccination, and this provision will be rigidly enforced in Millbrook and in the Township of Cavan.

Dr. H. A. Turner, who has been holidaying at his summer home, Crowe's Landing, Stony Lake, has returned and resumed his practice, and Dr. D. Avison, who was in charge for a few weeks, has rejoined his wife and family in Toronto.

W. A. MEETING

Ladies of Anglican Church Hold Regular Gathering at Roseneath.

ROSENEATH, Aug. 23. — The Woman's Auxiliary of the Anglican church met this month at the home of Mrs. Ross McCracken with a very good attendance. The president, Mrs. J. T. Drope, conducted the meeting, which opened by repeating the W. A. prayer in unison. Mrs. Timlin gave a very interesting reading on Sisterhood Service; Mrs. J. Webb read a piece entitled, "Pray For One Another,"

Miss Lettie Williams, of Toronto, who is visiting friends in the neighborhood, spoke a few moments on the Woman's Auxiliary, in connection with the work that had been completed and the co-operation in which the different circles of the church work together. The meeting closed by repeating the Lord's Prayer. A dainty lunch was then served by the hostess.

Mrs. Lottie Nichol is visiting friends near Cobourg.

PRIZE LIST OUT FOR FALL FAIR

Lakefield Agricultural Society Makes Alterations That Seem Beneficial.

PAINT STATION

LAKEFIELD, August 24. — The prize list is out for the annual fall exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society and it is exceptionally attractive, having been thoroughl revised, with several additions, and some omissions, as seemed necessary by the committee.

A special drive has been made for membership which means greater co-operation between the village and the country for this great exhibition, which is after all the largest and most important local event. It is an event of importance to every local business man and to every farmer, and only by co-operation can the Lakefield fair take its rightful place among the fall fairs of Ontario.

The C.N.R. station is receiving a coat of paint which greatly improves its appearance. The work was begun on Thursday but was halted on Saturday by the storm.

Very high winds and torrents of rain on Saturday proved to be a mixed blessing to farm and garden, both of which were in great need of rain, as the ground was powder dry, but some fields of ripening grain were fairly beaten down, and corn fields, too, suffered from the wind. Branches and twigs were blown from the trees, and in some cases whole trees were blown down.

Band Concert.

The Citizens' Band gave an open air concert on Thursday evening, which was very much appreciated by a large number of citizens, in spite of the evening being rather too chilly for a prolonged stay out of doors in summer attire. On these occasions one hears the need of some part of seats on the square on which music lovers can sit in more or less comfort and enjoy the concerts. Cars were parked along the sides of the streets on Thursday evening and a few of the occupants applauded the selections with their motor horns.

This appreciation means a good deal to the bandsmen, all busy men, who give of their scant leisure the time spent in practice for concerts and gala days. This contribution to the community life is voluntary and deserves a greater evidence of appreciation. A singer or pianist who received no applause after a selection could hardly be induced to perform again and we must remember that our bandsmen are all the better for the outward signs of appreciation which they so well deserve.

Entertainment.

A very successful concert was held at Deer Bay on Friday evening last, the proceeds of which were devoted to the North Smith band. Mr. C. S. Tanner of Lakefield, occupied the chair in a most acceptable manner. The programme was lengthy and of variable character, all the numbers being well rendered and heartily appreciated. This was the most successful of the series given this season. The following is the programme:

Band, selection.
Solo, Dr. J. C. Smith.
Recitation, Miss Margaret Tanner.
Piano recital, Miss Lucille Funkhouse.
Chairman's address, Mr. C. S. Tanner.
Clog dance, Mr. Walter Trude.
Band selection.
Song, United States girls and boys.
Dance by Miss Phillips and Miss Viola Gardener.
Band selection.
Solo, Mr. Sam Woods.
Solo, Miss Webb.
Song, Canadian boys and girls.
Band, selection.
Religious chant Mr. Baird and family.
Solo, Miss Webb.
Band, selection.
Solo, Dr. J. C. Smith, and encore.
Selection, band.
Solo, Mr. Sam Woods.
Recitation, Mr. Harry Reid.
God Save the King.

PECK MEETING AT LAKEHURST

Conservative Candidate and J. F. Strickland Speak on Election Issues.

DISCUSS PROBE

Issues of the election campaign from the standpoint of the Conservative party were laid before the electors of Harvey township last night by E. A. Peck, the candidate, and J. F. Strickland, at a meeting held in the town hall, Lakehurst. The meeting was well attended and was presided over by William Clarkson.

Mr. Strickland was the first speaker. He said that the main issue was the record of the King Government. He advised a return to the two-party system, so as to avoid the dickering of the last session, when Mr. Forke really controlled, although leading only a small group.

Mr. Strickland dealt mainly with the customs report. He said that it was a deplorable state of affairs that the people of Canada had to depend on a group of private individuals to protect them from the activities of smugglers, instead of being protected by the Government. He referred to the letter from the Commercial Protective Association in June 1924 as evidence that the King Governmnet had known of the condition of the department before the probe was made necessary by the charges made by the Hon. H. H. Stevens.

Mr. Strickland quoted from Mr. Lucas' address to his constituents of Camrose regarding letters written by Messrs. Campbell and Fansher which had been used as threats against them by Mr. King, and referred to Mr. Bissailon's letter asking if the customs officers at a certain point should be taken off for the "good of the party," as suggested by the member for that riding.

Mr. Strickland said that the constitutional issue raised by Mr. King was only a blind to direct attention away from the probe, and compared him to a defendant asking the dismissal of the jury after the evidence had been heard.

Mr. Peck dwelt briefly on the events of the session, and then turned his attention to the budget. He said that all parties approved a decrease in taxation when it was possible, and that Mr. Robb had shown a surplus to justify his tax cuts.

Mr. Peck charged, however, that the decreases in taxation had been to the advantage of those with substantial incomes. The ordinary farmer or workingman, who had paid no income tax before, could not be said to have gained any advantage from the increase in exemption. It had benefited rather the man with a good income who could afford to pay a few dollars toward lowering the national debt. The removal of the tax on receipts and the return to penny postage had also been to his benefit. A man who wrote half a dozen letters or so in a year would not save much money.

The removal of the luxury tax on automobiles and the cut in the duty had brought about a decrease in price, but the man who had an old one to turn in found his allowance had also decreased. A tax reduction that would have been to the advantage of everyone, siad Mr. Peck, would have been the removal of the sales tax on clothing.

Mr. Peck took up at some length the customs probe and said that Mr. King had been very careless in the matter. He said that the responsibility for the actions of his ministers rested with Mr. King and quoted from the report of the customs committee.

In conclusion he asked for the support of the electors as being a member of the party most likely to be returned to power, and promised that he would do his best to carry out the wishes of his constituents.

The meeting closed with three cheers for Mr. Peck.

MEIGHEN CABINET IS NEARLY COMPLETED

Three Portfolios Yet Remain Open After Appointments of Yesterday.

OTTAWA, August 24 (Canadian Press).—With the appointment yesterday of Hon. Andre Fauteux and Hon. Dr. Eugene Paquet to the Cabinet, the Meighen Government is nearly complete. Three portfolios remain vacant. Those of Interior and Immigration are usually considered Western portfolios, and one of them, it is understood, is being held for a Saskatchewan man. Marine and Fisheries will probably go to Quebec, which now has four representatives. Ontario has seven representatives, British Columbia has two, and Alberta, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have one each.

NEW BROADCLOTH SEEN

Much is promised for broadcloth this fall—not the only shiny-surfaced fabric, but a softer, duller toned material that has greater adaptability.

HASTINGS PEOPLE BID FAREWELL

families when partings rend them were the overtones of regret and even sadness at the approaching absence of some of "the old familiar faces" from old familiar places which for all their daily monotony have been hallowed by the men whose years and labor were spent there.

Citizens' Address.

Dear Mr. Howard: It is with deep regret that we have heard that you are leaving us to take up your residence in Toronto.

When we look back over the many happy years we have spent together it is with sadness we think of the future without your genial presence.

Some of us remember our schooldays passed together in the basement of the Methodist church where we all were one family. Then afterwards on the cricket and lacrosse teams, both of which you played, and in both games your valued assistance helped clear the slate and bring home the bacon.

In lacrosse you and the other members of the team made the name Ironclads and Hastings famous, for wherever lacrosse is mentioned, the names of Pat Howard and Ironclads is inseparable. You played the game and in the different lines of business in which you have been engaged you have played the game as well.

Pat, you have been so closely associated with the welfare of the village, having filled the offices of school trustee and councillor for some years, that we will sorely miss you and as a fan of baseball and lacrosse, we do not know how we can replace you.

Now, Pat, we your old friends, wish you to accept this remembrance of the many happy days spent together, and we wish you, your wife, and family, long life and continued happiness.

Signed: A. Wilson, C. R. Fowlds, W. R. Learmouth, W. E. Wilson, W. P. Plant, T. A. Coughlin, J. F. McCarthy, William Londerville, A. U. Bailey, W. M. Fowlds.

Mr. Howard was almost unable to control his emotions as he rose to reply. He briefly said that words failed him to acknowledge the kindness of his friends, and he asked his sons to speak for him.

After the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," refreshments were served, and some of the young folks danced until the parting hour of midnight, when Mr. and Mrs. Howard and their children took leave of their friends with reluctant farewells.

Happiness in Toronto, whose opportunities for a young family are of necessity sought by Mr. and Mrs. Howard, was the subject of the good wishes expressed, with "Auld Lang Syne."

BISHOP PLEADS FOR CANADA TO REMAIN BRITISH

Urges British Immigration in Place of Southern Europeans.

ELOQUENT ADDRESS

Premier Ferguson and Canon Cody Support Visiting Prelate's Views.

To an audience that packed Convocation Hall, Toronto, Right Hon. and Right Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, Bishop of London, again voiced his plea for the populating of Canada with Britishers in preference to Southern European people and for support of the Church of England project for Empire settlement. Pleading at times, warning at others, but eloquent throughout, the speaker made a deep impression upon the large concourse of people and raised them to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

Heartfelt Plea

"I am going to plead with you to maintain the grandeur and greatness of the British Empire," he declared, "and I am going to plead in spite of all the social and financial inducements which come from your neighbors to the south.

"In the near future there is going to be a strong undercurrent of social and financial interest drawing Canada across the border away from British influence," his Lordship warned, and made his plea for the grandeur and greatness of the Empire.

Stirring addresses made made by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, who presided, and by Rev. Canon H. J. Cody, who proposed the vote of thanks to Dr. Winnington-Ingram. The former, in a short speech, outlined the steps taken by the Province of Ontario to bring out from the Old Country, youths in their teens, while Dr. Cody was at pains to assure the Bishop of London of the intense loyalty of Canada, as a whole, notwithstanding threats of secession from small bodies in certain parts of Canada.

Degrees in Loyalty.

"Do not let us hide our faces from the real danger," his Lordship urged. "I know perfectly well that not all Canadians are as loyal to the British Empire as those in Toronto and Ontario, and I want to look at the case of those who find great difficulty in thinking it is to their interest to remain part of the British Empire."

Sterling tribute was paid by the speaker to the sincere loyalty of French-Canadians, who, he stated, did not want to go under the American flag. "But can we expect the same loyalty to British ideals from those Galicians, Poles, and heaven knows who, who are now populating the West?" he asked. "Can we expect those who do not understand a word of English to be equally keen about the British Empire?

"Then, again, you must notice the very strong financial reason some may have to wish for another arrangement," he went on, and amplified this by citing the foreign-born farmers of the West who have to pay taxes on every beast shipped across the border. "There is naturally a strong financial inducement to have that thing removed, especially on the part of those who do not belong to the British race at all. Then there is a very great social intercourse between Canada and the United States, bringing the people closely together."

Population Necessary

He declared that it was not only necessary for England to get rid of her surplus population, but it was necessary to populate the Dominions of the Empire. Then he plunged into details of the Empire settlement scheme of the Church of England, of which he spoke a few days ago. He felt that if foreigners could make money and own automobiles in Western Canada, then the British immigrant was equally capable of doing so.

In his brief address, Premier Ferguson declared that the outstanding problem facing the British Empire at the present time was how to rearrange its population so as to meet the change in economic conditions that has developed during the last decade. "The congestion in the Motherland must be relieved without weakening the vitality and strength of this great Empire," the Premier said. "And the one and only way is by transplanting British stock to the newer and further portions of the Empire."

In expressing to the Bishop of London the thanks of those present, Canon Cody assured his Lordship of the loyalty of Canada as a whole, and said the British Empire was the only country in the world today that was trying to stand up to its international trust.

MANY TREATIES CAUSE ANXIETY

Agreements Registered in League Seem to be Inoccuous.

REASONS CONCEALED

PARIS, August 24.—The chancelleries of the leading countries are in a fever of activity discussing the paragraphing and signing of so-called mutual defence treaties.

The Franco-Roumanian and the Italo-Spanish treaties were hardly signed before it was announced that Poland and Jugo-Slavia were about to sign one of their own. France is working on one with Jugo-Slavia and Italy is projecting a series of treaties making agreements with most of the countries in the Balkans and Central Europe.

All of these treaties are declared to be under the rules of the League of Nations and in accordance with the spirit of Lucerne. Those which have been registered with the League appear to be innoculous statements of good will. This is also true of the recent Italo-Spanish treaty and presumably true of the Franco-Roumanian treaty, which has not yet been published.

Reasons Said to be Concealed.

Under these circumstances it has struck some observers as strange that there is such a rush to sign mutual protestations of friendship. Due to the frequency of the treaties it has become an open secret that the feverish activity is a renewal of the old European diplomacy of signing up one's friends and that the documents, as they become public, do not reveal the whole extent of the engagement.

In some cases it is known and in others it is suspected that there are secret clauses promising in detail and with precision exactly what military support each contracting power is to expect from the other in case of need. These unpublished understandings, where they exist, are the real reason for making the treaties. They are not published because they appear merely as technical notes, but they are the essence of the treaties and the effect of their existence is to create a series of secret military alliances.

Renewal of Secret Diplomacy.

As secret diplomacy is supposed to have been renounced, it has struck some observers as folly for important countries to let themselves in for severe censure in the future by starting up the old military alliance game, but the explanations that are coming from the holy of holies of the chancellories is that it is necessary.

It is said to be known beyond a doubt that Germany and Russia made a secret military agreement when they signed the Rapallo Treaty, which, since has been renewed in a much firmer alliance. It is also declared to be known that the Soviets made a secret military alliance with Turkey when Foreign Minister Tchitcherin signed the Treaty of Paris with the Angora Government.

Germany is thus in the position of a bad boy who started the game and the others have done the same in self-defence. The cause for the freshened activity in recent months is declared to be the Russian-Turkish understanding and the strength ening of the military understanding between the Soviets and Germany.

Effectiveness is Doubted.

Benito Mussolini's imperialistic expressions are also given as the reason for other states taking precautions. Curiously enough, while the chancellories are feverishly active, no one seems to believe in the efficacy of the hidden agreements which are considered hardly worth hiding away in vaults, because experience has shown that hidden agreements cannot be made to work unless public opinion favors the measures they contain.

A case in point cited to the correspondent is the agreement of Greece during the war to come to the support of Serbia, which she did not and could not do because Greek opinion opposed such action.

The chief utility of the new understandings is to throw a veil of mystery over European diplomacy again.

SCOUTS GATHER IN SWITZERLAND

40 NATIONS.

KANDERSTEG, Switzerland, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Henri Kaberlein, president of the Swiss Republic, attended the opening yesterday of the International Boy Scout conference, at which 32 nations were represented, incluring Canada, Great Britain, the United States, Japan, Brazil and Scandinavia.

At the first international committee meeting, Sir Robert Baden-Powell ated as chairman. The League of Nations was represented by two delegates. James West, chief scout executive of the United States, was appointed chairman of the committee on resolutions.

The annual report presented by the committee showed an active membership of nearly 2,000,000 boys of 40 nations.

A resolution was adopted to found a Scouts Alpine Club, under the patronage of the Prince of Wales, the Prince Consort Henry of the Netherlands, Dr. Motta, former president of Switzerland, and Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

MOURN VALENTINO.

ROME, Aug. 24.—(United News.)—The death of Rudolph Valentino is mourned in movie circles, although his popularity with the masses of Italians had not reached the heights that it did in England and France. Valentino suffered from the displeasure he incurred in his native land where he renounced his Italian citizenship and became an American. His most remarkable picture, which was produced in Italy, was the "Four Horsemen."

Cut with a batteau neck to slip on over the head, this attractive frock elects plaits at the sides to flare the "straight-line" silhouette. A narrow belt appears at the top of the plaits and short kimono sleeves provide a summery air. The diagram pictures the simple design of this frock, and the pattern provides long sleeves. NO. 1081 is for misses and small women, and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 2¼ yards bordered material; or 2¾ yards 36-inch plain material; long sleeves ⅛ yard additional. Price 20 cents.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A SIMPLE STREET OUTFIT.

I had an interesting discussion with a friend the other day, who plans to go into business for herself in the Fall.

"It's to be entirely on my own, and I shall love it," she said. "The work is to advise women who come to me on the type of clothes they should wear, what colors, and the like. The aim is to help women develop their best beauty possibilities."

"Your clientele will probably be among women who have lots of money to spend, like Madame's clients, won't it?" I queried.

"I hope not altogether," this enterprising young woman replied. "I contend that women who have a limited amount to spend on their wardrobes can appear to much better advantage if they buy with care and taste."

"Excellent principle to work on," I agreed.

"For instance," my friend continued," I have two friends to whom I have always given this advice, and that was what really gave me the idea of going into business. They have little to spend, still they both appear far better dressed than most women I know who have large sums to spend on clothes, and who simply throw their money away."

"This young girl has awfully little to spend, I know, yet she makes some clothes for her self and buys others, and she always appears as smartly dressed as anybody I know.

"That's a smart gray crepe de Chine frock you are wearing," I commented while we talked.

"I made it out of a remnant," she answered. "I liked the shade of gray because it has a good deal of tan in it, and there was just enough for the simple overblouse and pleated skirt."

"Did you make the lovely white batiste vestee and jabot?" I asked.

This Gray Crepe de Chine Frock Has a White Batiste Collar and Jabot.

"No, I bought it ready-made, for I find that these dainty white collars one sees in the shops are oftener prettier than those made at home," she replied.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

EDMUND KEAN AND CHARLOTTE COX

The famous tragedian, Edmund Kean, was the victim of what would be known today as a con game, and the most ancient one of the series. That is the familiar group consisting of the poor seduced wife, the villain lover and the righteous husband thirsting for vengeance but not averse to accepting heart balm in cold cash.

The woman in the case of Edmund Kean was Charlotte Cox, and the husband Robert Albert Cox, a London alderman. Kean was playing his celebrated role of the Moor in "Othello" one night in England when a lady in one of the stage boxes, who had watched Kean with the greatest interest during the performance, was so overcome by the intensity of his acting that she fainted. In the confusion that followed the people near her by a strange chance took her over the stage and brought her to Kean's dressing room to recover. The recovery took place when everyone had gone from the dressing room and left her alone with Kean. Then she told him what had made her faint and fired a bettery of languishing glances at the actor. Shortly afterwards, the husband came in, a meek, considerate, wonderfully believing man, innocent of all guile, and a jolly good fellow. He thanked Kean for the attention which the latter had paid his wife in her fainting spell and begged for the honor of Kean over at the Cox home for dinner.

That was how it began. And it lasted for eight years. Mrs. Cox was a handsome woman and an expert coquette. Kean was married, but he gave himself over entirely to Mrs. Cox, not only himself, but his purse, too. He lost himself entirely in Mrs. Cox's embraces, which grew more ardent, as drafts upon her lover's money became more frequent. And throughout the period of this amour, Mr. Cox was remarkably unsuspicious. He believed implicitly in Charlotte and thoroughly approved of her friendship with Kean. More, he thought it great sport to have Kean visit his wife at night while he promised not to be home until three a.m.

All this time Mrs. Kean was suffering tortures and the poor woman and her son Charles had to resort to dodging Kean wherever he went in an attempt to keep him from Mrs. Cox. This made Kean furious and he partly registers his indignation at his wife's treatment in the following love letter to Charlotte:

"Darling love: I am in such a vortex of perplexity and mortification that I can scarce collect my thoughts sufficiently to thank you for your letter and to tell you how much I love you. It is now, my dearest girl, that I wish for you, now that I am suffering under the most painful sensations of wounded pride, my mind boiling with rage and grief; I want now my own dear darling, Wy love, to condone with; my fevered head wants to rest in the bosom of my Charlotte. Indignation, resentment and all the passions of the furies guide my hand while I tell you that in this infernal city (Bath) where I was a few years since the idol of the people, my endeavours are totally failing. I have not yet acted one night to expenses. Come to me, Wy darling, come to me, or I shall go mad. If my provincial career is followed up by this terrible sample, heaven or hell must be opened for me; I bore my elevation with philosophy; I feel I cannot long submit to the opposite.

"Meet me as soon as possible at Birmingham, that is, as soon as safety will permit, and believe me, I love you to distraction and in heart I am solely yours, for ever, ever, ever."

Mrs. Cox did not hesitate to meet him in Birmingham.

At the end of eight years Mrs. Cox decided to fall in love with her husband's clerk and her affair with Kean had naturally to terminate. Then it happened that the trusting Mr. Cox found a package of Kean's love-letters to Mrs. Cox in a cupboard and was so heart-broken by the disclosure of his wife's faithlessness that he sued Kean for alienation of her affections.

The suit almost ruined Kean's career. Kean refused to put in a detailed defense and Cox was awarded six hundred pounds damages. For a time thereafter the tragedian was hissed and pelted with oranges whenever he appeared on the stage. So great was the agitation against him that mob riots took place on the Kean nights at the theatre and this protest against the lax morals he showed in his private life only simmered down in time by reason of his wonderful art.

Yet, knowing the baseness of his Charlotte, Kean could not forget her. So deep was his infatuation that he wrote on one occasion: "I would banish every pleasure in life, shut myself up in the most dreary cave, lose even the recollection of language for want of use, if at the end of twenty years I would be sure of making her my own."

MOLE TO BE POPULAR.

Mole, somewhat neglected as a fur recently, is mentioned most favorably as a fall trimming. It combines advantageously with the fashionable greens and reds of the moment.

THE SHOWDOWN

I came out of my thoughts, as I heard Mr. Elkins, Jr., say that he had loaned to Mr. Robinson $300,000, taking as security his share of the department store.

"I haven't any concrete idea what the property would bring today, but I know when I had Mr. Robinson's books audited before I made him the loan, that they showed a gross profit of over $500,000 last year. According to the terms of the will, both Mr. and Miss Meredith have the chance to buy out Mr. Robinson, or they can call this loan and make some arrangements whereby Mr. Robinson may pay off his indebtedness in a short or long time as they desire.

"Personally I would advise you that this should be done, as you understand that your other property from which you derive a good income, is free and clear of all debt."

"How much money can I realize at once?" inquired John, quickly. "Have I enough liquid assets to finance a three years' trip to South Africa?"

"I think so, Meredith," answered the elder Elkins, "but I would advise caution. How much do you want?"

"I want at least $250,000 to begin with."

"That will not be hard to get," answered Mr. Robinson. "I think I can raise half the face value of my note, which with Joan's consent I will pay to John. I am sure tha he will be able to make up the rest."

"Thank you, dad," said John.

"Oh, that's all right. When are you leaving?"

"As soon as I can get away. Within the month at the very latest. Symington tells me that we can get ready within that time, and you know how I hate civilization."

Joan was told that she had plenty of money at her disposal to make her trip abroad, but she seemed to have changed her mind.

"I do not think I shall go for a month or two now. I want to stay here until Bud goes away. You'll come out here, John, and stay at the house until you are ready to go."

Her brother hesitated. He knew that the house and everything it contained had been left to Joan according to the will, but he also knew that he would be less conspicuous there than at an hotel, even though he was sure I was going to live with his sister. I caught him looking at me rather dubiously.

I smiled at him openly and said "Do come and stay with Joan, Mr. Meredith, for I am going to be there and I want to hear all about your trip. It looks to me as though it were going to be very interesting."

The color came into his cheeks.

"If you can find a place for Symington, Sis, I think I'll come over and sleep, but I'm afraid you won't see very much of me."

Tomorrow—A Bombshell.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, 1926, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Tomorrow is read as fairly favorable to the dwellers on the planet Earth. According to astrology there are several strongly benefic aspects discernible.

Women now come under a sway that is fortunate for their group ambitions and have the forecast of a busy season in clubs and other organizations.

Love and friendship both should flower under this direction of the stars which is most promising for human relations.

This is read as a lucky day for all who are connected with the theatrical profession, which is to become organized in a way profitable to actors as well as managers.

Motion pictures are subject to a planetary government that presages many changes and tremendous development.

All the seers read tremdnous activity in engineering and in the construction of immense public buildings.

While the signs are promising regarding the beautifying of cities there may be much graft and double dealing, astrologers predict, for there is a menacing sign.

By this same sign it is predicted that an international crime involving the forgery of important documents will be discovered.

Public health will now receive scientific attention and it is well for every one to observe the laws of hygiene as epidemics are foreshadowed by the stars.

Today is not favorable for initiative of any sort. It is wise not to begin anything important, if the seers are to be relied on.

Criticism and ill nature may be prevalent today under this rule and for that reason it is well to cultivate a noble spirit.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be careful about entering into binding agreements of any sort.

Children born on this day probably will be inclined to travel and to seek changes. They may have many romances.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

REBECCA

Of good old Biblical stock is Rebecca, which is translated "noosed cord." It is said to come from the Hebrew word rabak—at least that was the origin of the first Rebecca, a name which seems to have been coined especially to be bestowed upon the wife of Isaac, of Biblical fame.

The Rebeccas of the world should make excellent wives, since the word Ribka, a later rendition of rabak, which means a cord with a noose, is given to convey the firmness of the marriage bond. The Septuagint and the Latin both give evidence of the name Rebecca in very early times. Another version, said to be the authorized one, makes her Rebekah. This latter form seems to be the one affected to-day by every young miss who is called by the name of the good old Biblical heroine.

Despite the religious significance which history has given to the name, Rebecca has been a great favorite with writers, who have employed her in more or less frivolous romances. Two Rebeccas who will never be forgotten by present-day readers are The "Becky" Sharpe of Thackeray's immortal "Vanity Fair" and the charmingly quaint little "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" which is endeared to the hearts of American admirers of Kate Douglas Wiggin.

The bloodstone is Rebecca's talismanic gem. It has the power to guard its wearer from all dangers and preserve her bodily health, and secure her consideration and respect. Moreover it is said to guard her from deception, especially of her lover. Sunday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. The violet, signifying modesty, is her flower.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press).

NEW YORK, August 24 (United Press).—Fall costume accessories are already asserting themselves, mingling with summer styles and offering us new details. We include in accessories jewellery, millinery ornaments, gloves, handbags, shoes and hosiery. Many of the fall style accessories are merely repetitions of previous seasons. However, without them we are lost as far as chic is concerned.

Pearls still predominate in necklaces. The pea-sized pearl necklaces that comes in 60-inch length, and drapes twice around the neck is among the favorites. Twisted ropes of pearls which extend below the waist line and twisted chokers are good. Real seed pearls of multi-strands with an occasional semi-precious bead such as lapis, jade, amethyst or carnelian are designed for those who go in for semi-precious jewels.

Bracelets of slave type continue to lead. Huge links of gold or silver interspersed with semi-precious stones are popular for day wear. Bracelets match necklaces and earrings. Complete sets including necklace, bracelet, ring and earrings are among the new notes. Crystal jewellery is popular for evening wear. Crystal, likewise is a leading hat ornament.

Hosiery shades for fall are a bit darker than at present. Thus dusty tan, cocoa brown and gunmetal are among the newer shades, which match the fall shoes of patent leather, brown reptile and brown and black suede. Navy blue and wine colored kid shoes are among the color novelties. For evening, paisley brocades and metallic kids hold the leadership.

Leather handbags of flat type combining two leathers are sponsored. Envelope shades and flat pouch shades prevail and they are not over large. Bags take on the popular dress colors and brilliant reds and greens are not stressed. Gloves are of pull-on type for general wear. For more dressy occasions the one-button glove with fancy cuff is chosen. Rose-beige, cocoa and nude tones are favorite among the pull-on types. Beaver and squirrel gray are also good colors for the coming season.

THE LAKE OF GARDA.

The Lake of Garda, a little off the direct route to the famous cities of Italy, has not been visited by the tourist as much as have Lakes Maggiore and Como, although it is easily seen on the Milan-Venice line at Desenzano, at its south-western extremity. It was here that I alighted and took the Lake steamer to Riva, which before the war was in Austria. Calling as we did at the little shore resorts en route, I had a fine opportunity to see the amazing beauty of this lake country. There is never monotony of scene on the Italian Lakes, but on Garda the contrasts are striking. In the north, about Riva, the surroundings are rugged and wild and precipitous cliffs tumble into the dark depths. Limone, noted for its lemon cultivation and other little villages on that shore nestle in the shadow of the cliffs, the lemon trees terraced on the hillsides. On the western shore, Tremosine is the most remarkable village, perched high and almost dangerously on the rock. From ancient to modern days, poets of all climes have praised this lake—Catullus, Virgil, Dante, Goethe, Heine, Carducci and Tennyson.

You will notice a film on your child's teeth. That's a frequent danger sign—an invitation for tooth and gum troubles. The same stubborn film that you can feel by running your tongue across your own teeth. You must combat it. Ordinary dentifrices don't fight it successfully.

Film is the greatest enemy of tooth health. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs breed in it and imperil both teeth and gums. The acid that leads to early decay forms. Old-type methods failed to combat it. Men of science undertook to discover an effective combatant.

Now in Pepsodent, two new combatants are embodied—combatants approved by highest dental authority. It curdles the film, gently removes it; then firms the gums. It keeps the teeth whiter, cleaner, more sparkling. It is the modern scientific method for better tooth protection. Insist upon it. Get a tube today. Mail the coupon.

Fence Line Dispute.

The fence viewers appointed by the Council for the east side of the river have reserved their decision in the dispute between J. I. Adams and Wesley Brady regarding the fence between their properties on Ranney Street. Messrs. J. McCook, Alf. Hay and W. W. Clark examined the fence, or rather fences, yesterday morning. Some time ago Mr. Adams had the line between the two lots surveyed, and found that he owned part of the land claimed by his neighbor. He then erected a wire fence inside the dividing line, and Mr. Brady on his side has a hedge and outside it a fence which, it is understood, he purposes replacing with one of boards six feet high. A tree near the intersecting line is involved in the controversy which the arbiters have been called upon to settle.

Fence Line Dispute.

The fence viewers appointed by the Council for the east side of the river have reserved their decision in the dispute between J. I. Adams and Wesley Brady regarding the fence between their properties on Ranney Street. Messrs. J. McCook, Alf. Hay and W. W. Clark examined the fence, or rather fences, yesterday morning. Some time ago Mr. Adams had the line between the two lots surveyed, and found that he owned part of the land claimed by his neighbor. He then erected a wire fence inside the dividing line, and Mr. Brady on his side has a hedge and outside it a fence which, it is understood, he purposes replacing with one of boards six feet high. A tree near the intersecting line is involved in the controversy which the arbiters have been called upon to settle.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Those who are beset by doubt or anxiety should observe the old superstition concerning the garnet, which is today's talismanic gem. In ancient times the garnet was thought to be all powerful in solving a mystery or in determining for its owner that course to take in a doubtful situation.

Fortunate, indeed are they who possess their natal stone the ruby. Worn as an amulet, it will protect them from real or imaginary troubles.

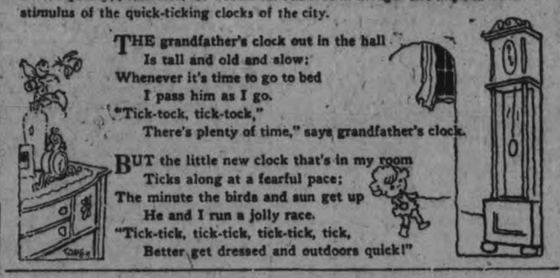
Clocks

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

ON the farm, the grandfather's clock ticks slowly, with wide swinging pendulum, while grandmother rocks by the window, knitting, or not knitting, for there's no hurry about finishing the mittens. The gray cat stretches lazily under the stove and the tea kettle sings its soft song. Outside, far down on the road, the greyhound busses tear cityward, as in a dream. Someway, near the old clock, I too sit quietly, unhurried, for I seem far removed in thought and impulse from the stimulus of the quick-ticking clocks of the city.



THE grandfather's clock out in the hall
Is tall and old and slow:
Whenever it's time to go to bed
I pass him as I go.
"Tick-tock, tick-tock,"
There's plenty of time," says grandfather's clock.

BUT the little new clock that's in my room
Ticks along at a fearful pace;
The minute the birds and sun get up
He and I run a jolly race.
"Tick-tick, tick-tick, tick-tick, tick,
Better get dressed and outdoors quick!"

KING ADDRESSES MANY MEETINGS

Is Halted By Crowds at Many Places in Eastern Townships.

LEAVES FOR EAST.

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Through five constituencies the Right. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King motored and addressed ten meetings in the course of his trip throughout the Eastern Townships.

The Liberal leader's original plan was to motor from Montreal to an advertised meeting at Sherbrooke, stopping at Granby only for the purpose of laying a wreath on the grave of the late Hon. George H. Boivin.

All along the way from Montreal, however, Mr. King's car was held up by crowds which blocked the roadway and refused to let him pass until he had delivered an address. The result was that he was over three hours late in reaching Sherbrooke.

Proceeding to the home of Mr. Boivin to pay his respects of the family, Mr. King found Main Street blocked by a crowd which overflowed from the market place. The Liberal leader tendered Madame Boivin a bouquet of red roses and later spoke in the market place.

Mr. King in a speech at Sherbrooke, which was cut short by the departure of his train for the east, emphasized Canada's return to prosperity. The forecasts of the Liberals, made a year ago, he said, were plainly before the people today. A prosperity which Canada had never before enjoyed was everywhere. In three out of four years in office, he said, the Liberal Government had produced a surplus in the management of the country's affairs.

"We have helped industries and aided the consuming public," he said, in telling of the tariff changes made on automobiles.

The reductions in taxation had effected every individual in Canada, he said, and exemptions increased all along the line.

"And in French-Canadian families of sixteen there is no need whatever to worry about the income tax," he said.

ESTIMATES VARY ON STAR'S ESTATE

Some Say Valenino Was Wealthy, and Others Deny It.

NEW YORK, August 24 (Canadian Press).—It is reported from Los Angeles that Valentino, whose body, lying in an undertaker's parlor, is the magnet for a crowd which block traffic, left an estate of more than $750,000. More than one-third of this sum is said to be represented by a collection of antique weapons, armor, and furniture, which made his home, "Falcon Lair," above Beverly Hills akin to a museum.

But Joseph Schenck, head of the film corporation, said the sheik left practically nothing. He spent nearly every cent of the one million he made last year.

Mr. Schenck denied Valentino was insured for one million dollars in his favor, but said he was insured for $200,000 in favor of the company.

Italian admirers in Los Angeles already have started a movement for funds to erect a monument to Valentino.

Marian Benda, Follies girl, who was Valentino's companion the evening before he entered hospital, declared here that he had no intention of re-marrying.

"He was not engaged to marry Miss Negri," said Miss Benda. "You'll notice all the statements came from her. He never denied them because he was too fine. He did think a great deal of her."

Corn
gone in half-an-hour

Thanks to Radox Bath Salts.

The true facts behind the picture above are best told in the customer's own words. Here they are:—

"My wife tried plasters, salves, "salts and soda to try and remove a "corn which has nearly driven her "mad the last three months. But "they moved neither the corn nor "the pain. We sent for Radox Bath "Salts at 6 o'clock and at twenty "minutes to seven my wife was "pulling the corn out, after years "of agony. Radox is worth $20 a "package."

When you put your feet in a foot-bath containing Radox the salts soften the hard outer layers of the corn and the dead skin (of the corn) combines with the Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn itself. This dissolves in the water and so loosens the corn that it can be lifted out bodily.

Radox Bath Salts do not affect the living skin. It is only the corn which they dissolve. Your druggist stocks Radox Bath Salts. 60c. Half pound Pink Pkg.

Wheat Prices Drop On Account Of Weather

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices took an early downward course today influenced by better wether conditions for the Canadian harvest. Besides, crop reports from Canadian railroad sources tended to confirm recent optimistic forecasts of a Liberal yield. Opening unchanged to 3-8 off, wheat underwent a moderate general setback. Corn and oats were easier, corn starting at 1-4 to 5-8c decline, and subsequently sagginb a little more. Provisions showed strength.

Higher estimates of wheat production in Canada appeared to be again acting as a handicap to the buying side of the wheat market today, largely offsetting unfavorable European crop advices and falling off in the amount of wheat on ocean passage. Notice was being taken too, that for the fourth consecutive week, the United States visible supply showed a large increase.

With no indications of immediate liberal export business and with the movement of Canadian wheat wheat crop close at hand, considerable attention was given to the fact that the price level of future deliveries of Canadian wheat is below the current quotations for United States wheat.

Prominent Gold Stocks Figure In Active Market

TORONTO, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press)—Strength exhibited in several of prominent gold stocks featured trading on Standard Mining Exchange today. Market was quite active, nearly 450,000 shares changing hands in the session. Lake Shore, McIntyre, Hollinger, Argo 2 1-2 cents to 27, and Premier 33 cents to 2.49 its high for the session. Teck Hughes was up three cents to 4.71. Kirkland Lake four to 1.05, Wright Hargraves five to 8.75, Barry Holly one half to 68 1-2, West Dome 1-4 to 22, while Gold Hill was off one to 64. In the silvers Beaver gained 3 1-2 cents to 80 1-2. Amulet at 1.40 and Noranda at 19.20 were unchanged.

Spectacular Advances Feature Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — Spectacular advances by Brazilian Traction and Consolidated Smelters featured a moderately active session of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Brazilian, with a turnover in excess of 3,000 shares, registered a net gain of 2 1-4 points to close at noon at 118 1-4, while Smelters jumped 2 1-2 points to close at 240 1-4. Remainder of the list was more or less featureless with the exception of Abitibi, which, in light trading, dropped five points to 82 3-4.

International Nickle was active in trading and firmed one quarter to 37, while Massey Harris common gained seven-eighths to 64. Winnipeg Railway advanced seven-elghths to 53 7-8, while Canners preferred firmed one quarter to 68 5-8. Kelvinator Com was up one to 16, and Imperial Bank one to 205. British American Oil was active but weak in the unlisted section with a decline of 1 1-8 to 58 3-4. Imperial eased one-eighth to 36 3-8. Page Hersey common was also off three quarters to 46 1-4. Teck Hughes gained six cents to 4.74 and Noranda four to 19/29. McIntyre advanced 35c to 26.50 and Dome ten to 11.25.

Frequent Shifts Feature Bullish Demonstrations

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. — Canadian Press. — Frequent shifts of spec ulative sentiment characterized today's stock market, which showed a tendency to heaviness. Renewed bullish demonstrations in General Motors carried that issue up nearly 5 points to 214 3-4 but large offerings appeared on rally and stock had cancelled its gain by early afternoon.

Persistent liquidation continued in United States Steel Common, which sold down 2 points below last night's close before it began to meet effective support. Bullish activity in rails undoubtedly was predicted on exceeding favorable character of many July earnings reports now being published. An extreme break of nine points in United States cast iron pipe probably was influenced by reports that German manufacturers were the successful bidders on several recent pipe contracts in this country.

Acute weakness also developed in merchandizing issues particularly in Woolworth and Montgomery-Ward, which were heavily sold by bear traders.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A BOY ALL BOY

There's a brand new knife and a brand new wall,
And a brand new mark in the brand new hall,
For he had to see if the knife would cut,
And he had to know, was it steel or not?
Oh, they do such things that it's hard to see
Why they do such things, why a boy must be
Like a boy just seems, when his tricks annoy—
But it all proves this, that the boy's all boy.

And the time will come when he'll wonder, too,
Why he used to do what he used to do,
Why he didn't look, why he didn't think,
When he lost the cap, when he spilled the ink,
I have seen a few that were not that way,
And they played like girls when they used to play,
But to tell the truth, though they broke no toy,
I rather longed for a boy all boy.

For the boys grew up, as the children will,
And the nice little boy was a nice boy still,
But the boy all boy, with his flag unfurled,
Was fighting on in the great big world.
He was building roads, he was leading men,
Yes, he made his mark as he made it then,
And the boy all boy seemed the nobler plan,

Tribune Writer Who drew Calling Down From Valentino Compares News Value Of Deaths Of Rudy and Eliot

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 (United News).—The Chicago Tribune, whose editorial writer drew a severe lashing through the mails by attacking the screen idol as an "effeminate pink powder puff man," dismissed his death editorially by comparing it in news value to the death of Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard.

The Tribune, like many other dailies, has been featuring Valentino's illness, but gave only one column headline to the death of Dr. Eliot. Commenting on this The Tribunte said:

"The idealist gazes, groans and despairs of the Republic. The cynic smiles at another proof that mankind cherishes those who entertain rather than those who instruct."

"Valentino was to the millions, not Valentino, but all the heroes that he played, and if none of these presented the highest sort of man, they were all romantic answers to some dream, cherished sheepishly or unashamed by most of us.

When The Tribune called Ruddy "effeminate" several weeks before he took ill, the film idol sent the paper a letter demanding that he be allowed to meet the editorial writer in the fight ring, "with bare fists." The paper ignored the challenge.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite.)

That continuous advertising will put new life in any business and keep it alive.

That continuous advertising is business-getting ammunition. Use plenty of that kind of ammunition.

The popularity of well advertised lines is deserved because they have proven themselves the best by every test.

Proposes Headlight Test His Own Proves Defective

Three hundred years ago, a Scotsman named Douglas, the Earl of Morton, introduced into Scotland a machine, known as the "Maiden" which was used to speed up the business of beheading political offenders. This gentleman was later executed himself, and tradition says he was one of the first victims of his own innovation.

Last night, a Scotsman in Peterborough, bearing a somewhat similar name, Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, brought his car to the Market Square, to submit the headlights to the inspection which he had first sponsored in the Kiwanis Club. The mechanic examined the headlights and found one of them out of position, so that a visit to a local garage was necessary before Mr. Paterson qualified for the Kiwanis certificate as the owner of a pair of "A" headlights.

MILLBROOK NEWS

MILLBROOK, August 23.—Miss Charlotte Luxon has been engaged as principal of the Continuation School at Severn River, Ont., and her sister, Miss Margaret Luxon, as teacher of Fairview School, Fourth Line, Cavan.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Armstrong and family motored to Crowe's Landing on Thursday and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Hunter.

Among those from this vicinity who went west on the harvesters' excursion on Wednesday were: Messrs. H. J. Armstrong, Richard Hard, S. Elmer, George Ward, W. Davy, Maurice Williamson, S. Bonner, Eldrich Todd, G. Howson, Albert Colon, R. Savery, Alvin Brown, Harold Patton, William Sexsmith.

Owing to the cases of smallpox in the vicinity, and by the advice of the Medical Health Officer, the reception which was to have been held to welcome Rev. E. R. and Mrs. Howard to the parish of Millbrook and Cavan, the various congregations participating, on Friday evening in the Sunday School Hall, has been postponed until a later date.

Miss Verna Strong of Peterboro has been engaged as teacher of the school on the highway just east of Donaldson's Corners.

The local public school will reopen on Wednesday, September 1, and the Continuation School on Tuesday, September 7.

Mrs. M. Wetherup was a recent visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Larmer, Peterborough.

Mrs. J. Wesley Walsh, who has been visiting her son, Mr. George Walsh, Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Porter, Lakefield, is now the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Payne. After visiting a number of friends in this vicinity, Mrs. Walsh will go to Montreal for an extended stay with her son, Mr. Alfred Walsh, and with Rev. T. Anson and Mrs. Halpenny.

Rev. F. H. and Mrs. Howard and family, who have been on a motor trip in the Muskoka district, returned home last week. As Mr. Howard's holidays have still a week or more to run, a further trip is in prospect, though necessarily a brief one, owing to the re-opening of school in the near future.

"MOOI HOLLANDE"

The scenery of Holland is very generally the lovelinness of the plain and lowland. In parts of Gueldres and Limburg miniature mountains and woods do present a picturesque landscape. This is specially true around the heights of Arnhem, in the wods of Het Loo, on Holland's one mountain, the Wisselschebosch. On the boundary between Limburg and Germany there is a range of hills for the eyes only of the Netherlanders, for they belong to Germany. Despite the flatness however, the attractiveness of the country has never been questioned. The absence of the sensational scene and the abnormal landscape, centers attention on listening to an anthem of little harmonising sounds which create a fresh ideal of beauty. It has made the Dutch so love their country, that many of them never leave it. To adventure away into the next province is often called "going abroad" so far does it seem. The whole nation is dominated with a quiet content with its quaint beauty, which explains why the folk here often refer to their country as "Mooi Hollande", — "pretty Holland."

HEADLIGHT TEST SHOWS DEFECTS

NEED FOCUSING.

That the headlight testing scheme sponsored by the Kiwanis Club was an innovation long overdue was amply demonstrated at its inauguration last night when out of a number of cars examined not one had headlights which conformed exactly to the requirements of the Highway Traffic Act. Ninety per cent of the headlights required slight focusing to bring them within the law; the remainder requiring larger adjustments were advised to have the alterations made at any of the garages of the town.

The first citizen to take advantage of the scheme was Alderman R. S. Cotton who drove into the square and after inspection and a slight adjustment received the Kiwanis certificate. Other cars soon followed. The mechanic for the evening, C. H. Edwards, took the opportunity to have the headlights of his own car tested and found that a slight alteration was necessary.

Several owners of cars who appeared on the Square with the intention of having their headlights tested, went home after the rain commenced to pour.

There was a fair crowd of interested onlookers at the testing. A member of the police force was on hand to lend assistance.

The garages of the town are cooperating with the Kiwanis Club to the extent of placing a mechanic on duty for the inspection. C. H. Edwards of the Selkirk and Elliot garage was on duty last night.

Tonight a mechanic from J. J. Duffus and Company will carry out the inspection and minor adjustments. Kiwanians Tom Mark, Hugh Niven, Herb. Gilgour and D. C. Grant will be on the Market Square.

POLICE NEEDED AT COAL MINES

NUMBER DECREASES.

MANSFIELD, Eng., Aug. 24.—Canadian Press. — Special police have been drafted to various collieries in this area as a result of complaints that intimidation of miners desiring to return to work by strike pickets, is creating a threatening situation. Many of the strikers' pickets are armed with cudgels, the complaint says.

Temper in the Nottinghamshire coal field, where several thousand miners have resumed work, is rising, although acts of open violence so far have been few. Reports from various pitheads within a radius of ten miles of Mansfield, stated that, with one possible exception, the number of miners at work to-day was much less than yesterday.

BOOTLEGGERS TO BE DEPORTED

American Government Considers Sending Aliens Out of Country.

ONE ATTEMPT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (United Press).—Deportation of bootleggers who are not citizens of the United States, an often discussed but so far unused weapon, may soon be attempted on a major scale.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews is expected to confer with Labor Department officials on deportation proceedings when he returns from his vacation.

The Dry authorities said today that the effort to banish George Remus, convicted Cincinnati liquor vendor, from America as undesirable, was only a forerunner of what might be expected to follow.

70 YEARS OLD; FIGHTS POLICE

Threatens Provincial Police With Rifle Before Being Overpowered.

HAS HOME BREW.

BELLEVILLE, August 24.—Frank Blakely of Denby, a 70 year old man who stands six feet two inches in his stocking feet, and who had to be overpowered by two Provincial officers before he was captured, was fined $400 and sentenced to two months, or in default of fine, five months, in the police court yesterday for keeping liquor for sale.

The officers went into ambush to meet Blakely and his rig. Perched alongside of Blakely on the seat was a high powtred rifle fully loaded. At first Blakely said that he would use the rifle unless a way was cleared for him. He was overpowered after a struggle and taken to Napanee. In his wagon were found five barrels of alleged home brew, which were confiscated.

CIVIL WAR FEARED.

Heavy Cannonade is Reported Near Bulgar-Greek Frontier.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—A heavy cannonade has been reported a few miles south of the Greco-Bulgarian frontier near the village of Aivatovo, southeast of Salonika, Greece. It was reported that the garrison at Salonika had been attacked and a civil war has broken out.

AT THE CROSS ROADS OF EUROPE.

The country which to-day seems to stand at the crossroads of Europe is Czechoslovakia. To many this name is a "terra incognito," but when the eye picks out Prague, Carlsbad, Marienbad, Frazenbad and Pilzen, it is immediately recognized as an old haunt of tourists. If you travel on almost any of the great continental railroads, it is easy to find yourself within Czechoslovakian territory. I never miss a chance to see something new in Prague. This was a favorite city with Goethe, Chateaubriand, George Sand, Prevost and Brandes, who has praised it as "the Rome of the North." Here is the famous Hradcany, ancient seat of the Kings of Bohemia and now the residence of the President. Here also is the majestic Gothic Cathedral of St. Vitus and the beautiful Charles Bridge over the Vlatava. Other places of interest in the country are Pilzen with its famous beer, Kuttenburg, a treasure haunt of Czech art, Tabor with its quaint streets and memorials of the Hussite Wars, and the great spas already mentioned. The most striking natural beauty of the land are the resorts in the Tatia Mountains, for there I saw castles and ruins, quaint costumes and rugged peaks, reminiscent of the Alps.

WANT ALIENS DISFRANCHISED

Native Sons Want Names on U. S. Quota List Taken Off Voters' List.

MAKE PROTEST.

TORONTO, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press)—Because of the declared presence within Canada of perhaps 30,000 or 40,000 overseas "transients" who through application to enter the United States under the quota law are alleged to be making of this country a back door through which to gain entry into a foreign nation, Toronto assembly, Native Sons of Canada, has forwarded to the Prime Minister of Canada a protest against such people being permitted to vote at the forthcoming or any subsequent election within Canada. The Native Sons conteend that as every foreigner entering the United States before being given entry, is required to make a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the American Republic—which involves further an oath of allegiance to the United States—the mere application for entry, involving such a declaration, is sufficient reason for disqualification particularly as the declaration involves the renunciation of allegiance to King George V.

LABOR DISPUTE ABOUT EMBASSY

Amerian Labor Says British Building Must Be Built By Union Men.

THREATEN BOYCOTT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (United Press).—Another dispute of serious international complications was threatened here today through what American Labor feared was a plan to build the new British Embassy with non-Union labor.

Organized Labor all over the country will boycott British goods unless union workers are employed, Henry Miller, chairman of the adjustment committee of the Central Labor Union, said today.

Construction of the new building has not actually been started. A steam shovel was in operation at the site today, however, and the Central Labor Union charged it was manned by a non-Union crew.

AROUND THE CITY.

The Honorable G. N. Gordon returned from Ottawa this morning. He was in attendance at a meeting of the National Liberal executive for the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Final arrangements were made at this meeting for the speakers and meetings on behalf of the Liberal party in the province of Ontario.

The Fire Department received a call at 11.15 a.m. to-day to 431 Bolivar street, where an overheated stove pipe caused a slight blaze. No difficulty was experiened in putting out the glim.

LEAGUE COUNCIL MEETS SEPT. 2

Re-organization Report Is Principal Item of Business.

GERMAN ENTRY SURE.

GENEVA, August 24 (Canadian Press).—The forty-first session of the Council of the League of Nations will be officially convened on September 2, under the Presidency of Dr. Eduard Benes, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, who has heretofore served as a temporary chairman of the League Assembly.

The chief question on the agenda will be the report of the Commission on Reorganization of the Council, which probably will hold its decisive meeting on August 30, when the Spanish claim to a permanent seat probably will be decided.

It is generally assumed that the Great Powers will allow nothing to interfere with the entrance of Germany to the League and to a permanent seat in the Council, and that, even if Spain should unexpectedly obtain a permanent seat, it would not be until after Germany has taken her seat in the Council.

BOILER EXPLODES.

Great Damage Done To Engine and Passengers Shaken Up.

ORLAND, August 24. — Yesterday afternoon about 3.50, just as the fast C.N.R. passenger train from Toronto to Ottawa passed through Brighton, the boiler of the engine exploded, causing a terrific noise and shaking several of the passengers up badly.

The train had only gone about 300 feet beyond the Brighton station when the explosion occurred. The shaft from the drivers to the steam box broke loose. This drove in the head of the steam box, and whirling in a circle swept everything away from the left hand side of the engine, scattering the broken pieces for 100 feet and more.

The sound of the explosion was heard for one and a half miles in the surrounding district, and nearly deafened the passengers.

SAMUEL J. McINTYRE.

Mr. Samuel J. McIntyre, a well-known resident of Almonte, passed away on Tuesday, August 10, at his home on Union Street after a long illness. He was 56 years of age.

Mr. McIntyre was a native of Peterborough, Ont. A portion of his early life was spent in the United States, where he learned the woollen business. Then he came back to Canada. Before being appointed chief of the carding department of the Rosamond Woollen Mill he was three years in Renfrew. He had been about ten years in Almonte. About a year and a half ago he became seriously ill and his life was despaired of, but he rallied and resumed his duties at the mill. However he became ill again, and although not often confined to his room his health gradually failed.

He was twice married, and leaves behind him a widow, who was Miss Lottie Lodge, and five children. The daughters are Queenie and Helen, of New Haven, Conn., and Elsie of Ottawa. The sons are Carol, in Chicago, and William at home. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth McIntyre of Peterborough, also survives. His father, James McIntyre, died 35 years ago. He leaves two sisters and a brother, Mrs. Ed. Curtis of Peterboro, Mrs. Geo. Billings of Toronto, and Mr. Walter McIntyre of Gonic, N.H.

The late Mr. McIntyre was a man of fine character and had a large circle of friends. The funeral, which took place under the auspices of Mississippi Lodge A.F. and A.M., on Thursday, was very largely attended. Rev. J. R. MacCrimmon of Bethany United Church conducted the service, Interment was made in the Auld Kirk cemetery. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Thomas Lodge of Smith's Falls, Joseph Lodge, W. N. Washburn, James Barbour, Andrew Elliott and Ed. Nicholson.

Amongst those from a distance who attended the funeral were Mrs. Elizabeth McIntyre of Peterborough, Miss Elsie McIntyre of Ottawa, Miss Helen McIntyre of New Haven, Conn., and Miss Billings of Toronto.—Almonte Gazette.

MISS MALLORY REGAINS SINGLE CHAMPIONSHIP FOR EIGHTH TIME

COURAGEOUS FIGHT.

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press.—With one of the most courageous uphill fights any tennis title battle has even seen, Miss Molla B. Mallory plucked victory from the brink of defeat yesterday against Miss Elizabeth Ryan and won the national women's singles championship for the eighth time.

Mrs. Mallory's come back to the peak after an interval of three years was accomplished in spectacular fashion after she had lost the first four games of the final set and later been within a point of defeat. Against an opponent who had been a pronounced favorite to win the 32-year-old New York woman, by her bull-dog grit and the sheer power of her game, smashed her way to a thrilling victory by scores of 4—6, 6—4, 9—7.

Miss Ryan gathered some share of title glory when she returned to the courts later to win the doubles championship final with Miss Eleanor Goss as her partner. They defeated Miss Mary K. Browne of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin of Springfield, Mass., in another prolonged uphill struggle, 3—6, 6—4, 12—10.

By lifting the big silver trophy for the eighth time Mrs. Mallory shattered all world's records for the number of victories in major national championships, here or abroad. No woman star, not even the great Suzanne Lenglen, has touched this mark and in men's competition the record is seven triumphs, achieved first by R. D. Sears, the first American singles champion, and equalled later by William A. Larned.

The victory of Mrs. Mallory yesterday ranks among the most startling upsets in tennis annals, for she not only conquered an opponent heavily favored to win, but did it against the most discouraging odds. In something like nine times they have met before here, and Miss Ryan always has been victorious, usually by clean-cut margins.

This time, however, the veteran Californian became erratic and uncertain as she found herself arrayed against a woman whose nerve and pluck never deserted her and whose smashing power carried all before it at critical moments.

Miss Ryan's unsteadiness, her erratic diving and unstable service all contributed to her downfall, but in the final analysis it was the terrific power behind Mrs. Mallory's baseline game that upset her rival and turned the tide in her favor.

Few sets have been packed with any more excitement or thrill than the final set in which Miss Ryan twice had victory seemingly in her grasp only to have her tenacious opponent refuse to yield.

CITY RUGBY LEAGUE MAY BE STARTED

There is material in City for Four Good Teams.

It has been suggested that a Rugby League for the city, composed of four teams, could be made to operate successfully this year. In 1922 a league was formed consisting of four teams and operated very successfully a single schedule. A double one had been suggested but the season was started late and it was decided to call it after the finish of a single schedule to enable an intermediate entry to train and participate in the Intermediate series of the O.R.F.U. The four teams comprising this league were the Excelsiors, Crescents, Belmonts and the P.C.I. entry in the inter-scholastic series. In this series the Excelsiors were the winners.

A suggestion that four strong teams to compose this year's league would be the Belmonts, the Crescents, a team representing either the De Laval or the C.G.E. or a combination team from these two plants and the local Junior entry. There is no doubt that four strong teams could be secured as there is plenty of talent available. There are a number of enthusiastic boosters of Rugby in the Belmont Club as Clare Sturt, Frank Jobbitt and Joe Batten. The Crescent entry could certainly be served by Jack Dainnard. The De Laval has an enthusiastic booster and player in Johnny Ward while the C.G.E. contains one in Gordon Evans. The Junior entry would of course be a sure starter for this would furnish the practice and games necessary for their O.R.F.U. series.

From this City League an Intermediate team to represent Peterboro could be chosen, so here is an opportunity to boost the game and also to see some good games by coming along to the meeting on Wednesday evening at 8.00 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A.

YANKS INCREASE LEAGUE LEAD BY TEN FULL GAMES

Make Decisive Win Over Cleveland By 3 to 2 Score.

PITCHING DUEL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press))—The New York Yankees increased their lead in the American League to ten full games here yesterday when they defeated Cleveland 3 to 2. Urban Shocker bested Emil Levsen, Cleveland's young star, in a pitching duel.

The Philadelphia Athletics made it two straight over the Chicago White Sox by winning 4 to 1. Recruit Alex. Mattzler distinguished himself in the field by throwing a runner out at the plate in the fourth inning and in the eighth he robbed Falk of an extra base hit by a race to the rear and leaping catch. His catch cut off at least three runs.

Detroit trimmed Boston 9 to 1 by hard and timely hitting. Collins did his part by holding the Red Sox to eight scattered hits, while his team mates chalked up 11 off three Boston pitchers.

A wild pitch by Marberry and poor defensive play by the Washing Senators in the eighth inning enabled the St. Louis Browns to score four runs to break a tie and win 8 to 4.

TORONTO WINS OPENING GAME FROM SKEETERS

Is Their Sixteenth Victory in the Last Eighteen Games.

WALKS FIVE MEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The Toronto Leafs won the opening game of their final home stand by a score of 3 to 0 against Jersey City. It was their sixteenth victory in their last eighteen games. Cantrell walked five men, while Stewart pitched steady ball aided by the batting of Otis Miller and Mickey Heath, both inserting a hit when it was useful.

Baltimore gained half a game on the league leaders, winning both ends of a double-header from Rochester, the first one in fifteen innings by 4 to 1 and the second 6 to 4 in seven innings. The pitching of Chambers in the first game was a feature, allowing the Tribe only four hits.

The Buffalo Bisons and the Newark Bears halved yesterday's double-header, the Clymerites bagging the opener 9 to 5 and the Bruins reversing matters in the seven innings affair, 6 to 3. A home run by Andy Anderson over the left field fence in the ninth inning of the first game broken the 5-5 deadlock. Brown, Fonseca and Kingdon smashed out homers in the second game for the Bruins.

The Syracuse-Reading game was postponed, to be played as part of a double-header tomorrow.

AUSTRALIA ON WAY TO VICTORY

AT TAUNTON

TAUNTON, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press)—The second day's play in the scheduled encounter between the touring Australians and Somerset here yesterday, saw the visitors well on the way to a decisive victory, unless Somerset in their next turn at bat show considerably improved form. To the 225 registered by the Antipodeans in the first innings the home county responded with 153. The Australians went in a second time and did much better than formerly, only three wickets having fallen at the close of the day with the score standing at 197. The victims were W. H. Ponsford, J. M. Taylor and J. L. Hendry, while H. L. Collins, the captain, and J. S. Ryder, continued at bat. Taylor's score was 75.

Several good innings were recorded by Somerset, notably by E. F. Longrig and G. F. Earle, while J. C. W. McBryan, M. D. Lyon and Young were also good scorers. The rest of the team, however, were indifferent and were easy prey for Clarence Grimmett and Richardson who between them took 9 wickets for 82 runs. Grimmet's average was five for 64 and Richardson's 4 for 18.

It was the fourth straight game the Reds carried into extra innings and their ninth straight victory. George Kelly hit over the left field fence for a home run in the sixth.

Philadelphia-Chicago and Boston-St. Louis were postponed on account of rain.

MILL WILL PLAY GENERAL MOTORS

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 24. — Softball fans of the district will get their first opportunity to watch an outside team in action in a championship game today at the Agricultural Grounds, when the Oshawa General Motors team play here in a first round intermediate Ontario Softball Association game.

The good Mill team will have the honor of representing Campbellford and win or lose Oshawa will know they have been in a game. The Mill may not be the smoothest fielding team in the local group, but they are considered the hardest hitting, every member of the squad being capable of poling out a solid drive.

SUZANNE'S PROFESSIONALISM WORRIES TENNIS ASSOCIATION

And Recalls Similar Knotty Problems Which Officials Had to Solve.

MAY REVISE RULES

May Prohibit Amateurs From Competing Against Pros.

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 (United Press).—With all the controversies with athletes who made side money by selling sporting goods, by writing high-powered articles, by padding expense accounts of by otherwise violating the ethics of the code, "Sport for Sport's Sake," the constition of the United States Lawn Tennis Association has been placed on the operating table at every meeting in recent years.

The officials were labored and worried hunch-backed when they emerged from a fight with Bill Tilden that almost caused an inner revolution and an outlaw association. It wasn't a tremendous victory that the association scored over Tilden but the association seemed happy to get out of it with a head standing reasonably high and Tilden, of course, was satsified with a decision that permitted him to go right ahead making fancy money in literature and losing it in dramatics so long as he wasn't branded officially as the "world's tennis champion."

Peace or at least a truce on both sides seemed to be the reward of the association until C. C. Pyle, manager of Red Grange, who turned a coal and ice reputation into a fortune, dashed to the cable offices in Paris and announced that Mlle. Lenglen had turned professional and would troupe the States with him.

Immediate fears were laughed off with a consolation born of hope that Mlle. Lenglen would not give the same answer that Joe Jackson gave when the kids said—"Tell us it ain't so, Joe."

But, in like manner, she said—"It is so. I've worked long enough for myself."

And then there popped up the problem—"What can be done about it? Supposing our boys and girls decide to get out and work for themselves."

This was followed by the happy thought that Lenglen couldn't play by herself, that there were no women professionals in the United States and that the amateurs could not play against her.

There was a scamper to the rule books when the question was advanced—"Why not?"

When the association told Tilden that he couldn't write any longer for a salary larger than a lot of editors were getting, Tilden asked "Why not?" The association found that there was no rule covering the point and had to put one in the books to cover the point. And it was about three years later that the rule was finally worded to cover all possible points, and the boys and girls are still writing.

There is nothing in the constitution now which prohibits an amateur player from playing against a professional player.

If C. C. Pyle appears suddenly before the officials of the association with the Mlle. in tow and says:

"Gentlemen, here is Mlle. Lenglen, my tennis star, she wants to play in Madison Square Garden and we want some opponents for her."

The officials, under existing circumstances, can only reply that no amateurs can play in an unsanctioned tournament. Pyle could come back and put it up to them—"Well, sanction this list of tournaments."

The offcials could refuse and Mr. Pyle could consult his lawyers because he, like Jeck Dempsey, has found that public prominence forces the prominent to become more than socially acquainted with lawyers. Pyle might get an injunction and the right of the association to be the national dictator of tennis would have to be passed upon by higher courts.

It is a matter of easy memory to recall the time and the money spent by organized baseball to prove that its organization and its rules did not make a trust of it and did not violate inter-state commerce, or something inter-state.

The association has a lot of money—made from tournaments in which their amateur boys and girls were playing—but it hasn't the million dollars or more that organized baseball had to spend to save its official neck.

There also may be a lurking fear that Mlle. Lenglen will plead her own defence if she is criticized too strongly for becoming a professional.

Unless all the many stories heard in Europe and the United States are pure myths, Mlle. Lenglen could tell some interesting stories about other players and about some of the clubs which conduct amateur tournaments.

The association, no doubt, will have to adopt another rule this winter which will prohibit amateur players from competing against professionals in exhibition matches or in tournaments and the wording of the rule or the action to be taken already has been discussed at several unofficial meetings of the more important officials.

There are few places Pyle could get an outdoor tournament even if he did succeed in getting some other players to join his troupe, but there is Madison Square Garden in New York and a number of huge armories and there are large armories in almost every city of the United States and there are a lot of customers who would be willing to pay to see Suzanne even if she is a professional.

Mr. Pyle however, has to figure on Mlle. Lenglen's temperament. Maybe she wouldn't play in a big barn.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By WILLY EVANS

Baserunner starts to steal second, catcher has a short passed ball that makes it easy. Does he receive credit for a stolen base?

If the runner is stealing second with the pitch, in other words has started on the way before the battery error has been committed, he receives credit for the stolen base.

In all such instances the battery error is also charged against either the pitcher or catcher, the player at fault.

Should the runner be "flat-footed" until the battery error is committed, then starts and reaches the succeeding base in safety, he is not credited with a stolen base.

HAS DEMPSEY LOST ABILITY IN IDLE YEARS

Long Absence From Ring May Have Impaired Speed and Eye.

IS IN CONDITION.

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 (United Press). — Jack Dempsey's biggest concern as he prepares himself for his fight with Gene Tunney or the next defence of his title against any opponent will be to find out how much has been taken out of his weapons by three years of idleness.

In training he can find out how good his wind is and correct any deficiency by proper exercise and diet. He can find out how strong his legs are and do more foadwork if the thinks he hasn't the proper strength. He can improve his speed and his boxing by sparring with fast and shifty partners.

But there is no way for him ro recover any lost mental spark, the thing called co-ordination which makesthe hand and foot respond to the eye and the brain automatically.

All the work he could do in the gymnasium or the training camp would not improve an eye that was one-thousandth of the second slow because the best of sparring partners are not good enough to give him the real test or they would not be sparring partners.

Not many critics give Tunney a big chance if he meets Dempsey. They admit that Tunney is younger but they do not class him as a killing puncher. They admit that the long absence from the ring may have impaired Dempsey's speed, eye and boxing, but they refer to the Carpentier and Firpo fights as proof that Dempsey can take it even no matter how many times Tunney hits him.

But, if memory serves correctly, Dempsey was hit by Carpentier and Firpo when he was stepping back or rolling with the punch. He didn't have to take the double force that a boxer gets when he steps into a punch or "runs into one" as the boxers put it.

Dempsey looked to be in almost perfect condition when he came to New York and seemed to be within a few pounds of fighting weight. He had speed in the ring and a punch on the bags.

But, some very good trainers pointed out that you can't tell about the inside. They still point out that doctors who looked over Jim Jeffries before he fought and lost to Jack Johnson said that he was fat inside and couldn't last long under punches to the body.

Tunney no doubt has figured for some time that his chance for victory rested on an attack to the body, based perhaps on the belief that Dempsey would be hurt more inside by his long absence from the ring.

Before Dempsey went to his training camp, some friends in New York gave him the laugh when he said he was not taking Tunney lightly.

"Explain, if you can," one of them said, "how you can lose unless you're in such bad shape that you collapse from your own exertion. Tunney can't hurt you——"

"Listen," Dempsey interrupted, "any man can be hurt if he's hit in the right spot, and I've got just as many right spots as any other champion."

KRIM LEAVES SOON FOR DISTANT EXILE

FEZ, Morocco, August 24 (Canadian Press). — Ab El Krim, fallen chieftain of the Riff, will get a short glimpse of Southern France when he lands at Marseilles on September 1 on his way to exile on Reunion Island. The French Government has chosen that isolated spot in the Indian Ocean as the Emir's future home, instead of the enchanting Riviera, which he himself would have chosen. The Emir is scheduled to sail for Marseilles on September 3, accompanied only by his immediate family and the French officer entrusted with the task of escorting him to his exile.

MEIGHEN TALKS AT MANY POINTS

Spends Busy Day With Rural Saskatchewan Audiences.

DEFENDS BLACK.

SASKATOON, Aug. 24 (Canadian Press)—After a busy day during which he addressed audiences at a number of rural points in Saskatchewan, Premier Meigher spoke before a Conservative rally here last night, reiterating that it was the intention of the Conservative Governmen, if returned to power, to complete the Hudson Bay Railway; that he was opposed to statutory freight rates for any part of Canada; and that the Conservative party would maintain the Canadian National Railways. The Premier made a vigorous defence of Hon. W. A. Black, Minister of Railways, when asked if Mr. Black's appointment was permanent.

The appointment had been made, the Premier said, with the same assurance of permaney given any minister ever appointed in any cabinet. Mr. Black, he said, had a record as a Canadian citizen "unexcelled in this country."

At Borden and Bradwell in the afternoon Premier Meighen had discussed charges which, he said, had been made against him because of speeches made by other persons. He declared that he had "no responsibility for what some one else says." His ministers, he said, follow the policy adopted by the Conservative party, but if they did not it was "My business to see that they sever themselves."

THEATRE

MARION DAVIES, IN "BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK."

The lovely Marion Davies has the stellar role in the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for this weekend, "Beverly of Graustark," which had a good attendance at last evenings performance, for which also the Capitol orchestra, back again in full force, played a fine performance.

As a boy prince, Miss Davies reveals her stellar powers in acting, as she has often done as a beauty in roles of a different type.

"Beverly of Graustark" is a picture of the opera bouffe type, artificial and extravagant in texture, but it makes an excellent evening's entertainment, and there was plenty of applause last night for the clever acting of the pretty lady as Beverly Calhoun, the American girl whose cousin succeeds to the throne of Graustark, is hurt in an accident, and whose place she takes while he convalesces. She forgets the role time and again, particularly in the scenes with Dartany (Antonio Moreno) the pseudo sheep-herder, who saves the Prince from a death-plot of the jealous General Marlanax, and with whom she immediately falls in love. There are exciting and interesting scenes a-plenty in the unfolding of the bright story although the heroine fails to register as the regal beauty whose memory a lady with a boyish haircut can't really live up to.

There is a laughable comedy in "Wandering Willies," and the usual excellent short reels.—Jeanette.

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

After getting the foregoing practice perfectly, or even a little before, bend just a litle lower and grasp the ankles with the hands. Then fall from the float or springboard.

This will be easier after the practice with hands on knees, and one should get used to the position with out a great deal of difficulty.

It is just as well, however, to keep practicing until the movements are as natural as can be, because that first entry into the water should be the basis of all future diving.

If either of the falls into the water create nervousness or apprehension, go back into shallow water and practice ducking for an hour and then come back to it.

Don't rush and don't really try to dive until you get the hang of falling into the water head first.

MEMORIAL DEDICATED IN HONOR OF CANADA'S WORLD WAR NURSES WAS UNVEILED IN HALL OF FAME

First Permanent Monument To Be Erected in Famous Hall.

BRILLIANT FUNCTION.

Government Officials From All Parts of Dominion Attend.

OTTAWA, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—At one of the most brilliant functions ever seen in Ottawa, a monument to Canada's nursing sisterhood was unveiled yesterday. It is the first of the permanent monuments to be erected in the great Hall of Fame in the Parliament Buildings.

Thousands assembled on Parliament Hill in mid-afternoon sunshine to hear the preliminary ceremonies. In the centre of the Esplanade, Miss Jean E. Brown of Toronto, President of the Canadian Nurses' Association, tendered the memorial as a gift to the nation. Sir Henry Drayton, acting Prime Minister, accepted on behalf of the people of Canada. Around them on the platform were representatives of the Governor-General, the Churches, the Government, the Senate, and the House of Commons, the Military and Naval Authorities and of civic and private life. Conspicuous in the throng was Canada's war-time Premier, Sir Robert Borden; Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario; Mayor Balharris of Ottawa; General MacBrien, Commodore Hose were in places of honor. Nurses from Canada, Great Britain an the United States were there, and the sombre drab of the Catholic Nursing Sisters contrasted with the delicate blue of the Canadian nurses and the grey-and-scarlet of the British contingent.

Major the Rev. G. G. D. Kilpatrick read the opening prayer, following the singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past." Miss Browne reviewed the history of nursing in Canada from the time of the French nuns who pioneered in the hazardous days of three hundred years ago until now. Sir Henry Drayton, describing the installation of the monument as a "fitting end to a chapter of great glory," expressed his satisfaction in being able to accept the acquisition to the Parliament Buildings on behalf of the people of Canada.

Addresses were read from the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader; the Imperial Nursing Associations, and the American Nurses' Association of the United States; Dame Maud MacCarthy, Matron of the Teritorial Army Nursing Services of Great Britain, spoke in eulogy of Canadian nurses, past and present. Dame Margaret Macdonald, Matron of the Canadian Army Medical Corps Nursing Services, read the roll of honor, and

ITALY EXTENDS PODESTA RULE

Every Municipality Will Be Governed By Fascist Appointee.

NO ELECTIONS.

ROME, August 25. Canadian Press. —Every city, town and village in Italy will be governed by a representative appointed by the National Fascist government under the terms of the new decree which will be adopted on August 30, by the council of Ministers, according to well informed political circles.

The new system amounts to an extension of the Podesta System already used in communes of less than 5000 population. It will go into effect within a year.

One of the first consequences of the system will be the revocation of the right of administrative suffrage granted to women by a recent law, since elections of all sorts will be abolished. The innovation is an economic projert.

Pictures Through Walls Will Soon Be Possible

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—George Harris, of Washington, D.C., former president of the Photographers' Association of America, in addressing the National Convention yesterday, predicted that soon cameras will be invented that will take pictures through walls.

Window photography and X-ray pictures are two improvements of the double decade, according to Mr. Harris. "The next step will be color pictures," he predicts. "Coloring moving pictures and still pictures in their natural color. Pictures will be made through fog, smoke and walls. If we can see the idea of man through an X-ray, why can we not produce cameras strong enough to pierce stone walls. I say that detective and police work soon will be utilizing such cameras.

"Public men and society women enjoy being photographed to-day. They are ready and willing to help the newspaper cameraman and the photographers who may ask for permission to publish their portrait. That is another important advance."

CLUB BUILDING BADLY BURNED

Fire of Unknown Origin Damages Belmont Club Property.

STARTS IN KITCHEN

Fire, the cause of which is unknown, was responsible for considerable damage to the club house of the Belmont Club, which is situated on the bank of the river at Fradette Avenue, in the south end of the city.

The blaze was first noticed about noon today by some boys. It apparently started in the kitchen and spread to an adjoining portion downstairs, which is used for storing canoes. Some five canoes were in this portion of the building and all were removed, only one of them being badly scorched. Willing neighbors rendered yeoman service and succeeded in putting out the fire by the use of pails of water carried from the river. The upstairs part of the building, which is used as sleeping quarters by the members of the club, escaped the effects of the blaze.

Spooning a Fine Thing Says Methodist Pastor

CHICAGO, Aug. 25 (United Press).—Cozy corners for courting were advocated by the Rev. Philip Cone Fletcher, of Little Rock, Ark., Methodist pastor, to an audience here Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Fletcher said he first advocated approval of spooning in 1909, from the pulpit of the First Methodist Church in St. Louis, and that he had not seen fit to change his mind.

"Courtship is a very necessary thing," he said. "It can't be done in stuffy parlors in boarding houses. Automobiles with their freedom from restraint, offer too much in the way of temptation. I approve of Chicago park officials allowing spooning on park benches, because spooning is an old-fashioned necessity, which leads to marriage."

IS CRITICIZED FOR HIS SPEECH ON MIGRATION

Bishop of London Censored in Editorials of Westminster Gazette.

SPOKE AT TORONTO.

LONDON, August 25 (Canadian Press).—In an editorial headed "A Bishop Let Loose," the Westminster Gazette criticizes the Bishop of London for a speech on migration which His Lordship made in Toronto last week and which the Gazette refers to as "a little disquieting."

"Bishop Winnington - Ingram," the Gazette says, "is reported as having asked in public: 'Can we expect the same loyalty to British ideals from Galicians, Poles and God knows who else who are populating Canada, and who do not know a word of English?'"

The Gazette refers to this as a "rather frenzied inquiry," and expresses the hope that "His Lordship's oratory on his trip will only occasionally, if at all, take these hectic flights."

Continuing, the Gazette says: "The Bishop of London should cease to regard himself as a missioner of empire and be content to remember that it is no part of divine providence that humanity should speak the English language to please Tory clerics. Even non-Christians have gloried in the polyglot character of the British Empire and have regarded it as a civilizing mission to bring English ideals of tolerance and liberty to millions of people of every clime and tongue.

"In Canada there are at least 2,500,000 French citizens, and these are among the most loyal to British connection. The words of the Bishop of London are likely to be misconstrued all over the Empire, and we hope he will take prompt steps to explain that this lapse into Imperialism was a regrettable inadvertance due to the strange excitement of globe-trotting."

HONOR FOR CITIZENS.

Winnipeg Proposes Scheme To Reward Service To Community.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press). — To give civic holidays greater significance and to keep alive in the memory of citizens those among them who render distinctive service to the community, a proposal is a foot to institute a memorial award in the shape of a medal and an honorary seat on the city council. A board of trustees, it is proposed, will confer the award every two years, excluding persons who act for the city in an elective capacity. It is tentatively suggested that the award be known as the Sir Augustus Nanton Memorial Award. No definite steps have yet been taken.

DIWAN ARRIVES.

Indian Noble Who Will Open C. N. E. Is Now In Toronto.

TORONTO, August 25, Canadian Press. — Wearing his picturesque turban, Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya, Diwan of Cochin, India, arrived in Toronto to-day from Eastern Canada. The Diwan will officially open the Canadian National Exhibition here on Saturday.

T. P. Chandi, a graduate of Madras University, also wearing a turban, was one of those at the station to meet the distinguished visitor. They were known to each other in India as Chandi was director of the Y.M.C.A. work in Cochin, the Indian Province, where Diwan served as Minister to the Maharajah.

PREMIER AND OPPONENT

Premier Meighen, left, will be opposed for re-election in the constituency of Portage la Prairie by E. A. McPherson, right, prominent barrister of that city, who was the unanimous choice of a Liberal convention held last week. It will be a straight fight in the riding as the Progressive party has announced that it will not contest the seat and Liberals are hopeful of wresting the constituency from the Tory chieftain.

INVESTIGATION INTO WORKINGS OF CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT BEGUN

Only One Witness Is Heard In This Morning's Session.

RULING SURPRISING.

Lawyers Comment on Decision Against Search of Canadian Vessels.

HALIFAX, August 25 (Canadian Press).—In the history legislative council chamber of Nova Scotia, with paintings of long dead monarchs of Great Britain adorning the walls, Sir Francois Lemieux this morning opened the investigation in to the Department of Customs and Excise. The proceedings were brief, but one witness being examined this morning.

R. L. Calder, K.C., associated counsel with W. F. O'Connor, K.C., for the Commission, intimated, however, that to-morrow there would be plenty for the Commission to do. One witness, A. J. Doucet, former Conservative member of Parliament for Kent, will be examined this afternoon.

"I hope this Commission will be held as a national commission to serve the ends of the people and the interest of the country at large," said Sir Francois in opening the investigation.

"I would say liquor," replied the witness, who stated that the Customs Department at Ottawa had ruled that Canadian vessels must not be seized or searched outside the three-mile limit.

"A most extraordinary decision," interjected Mr. O'Connor. Mr. Calder referred to this ruling as a "staggering conclusion to those of us who are familiar with the constitutional law."

A. J. Doucet, former member for Kent, told the Royal Commission on Customs this afternoon that he was satisfied after the Quebec hearing that there was nothing immoral in the conduct of the Hon. Ernest Lapointe or the Hon. Jacques Bureau during the Margaret trip. He produced the log books of the vessel to show that Mr. Lapointe had been on the vessel. The extract from the log as read was an entry made at Charlottetown. It read as follows: "Left with launch, Hon. J. Bureau, Hon. Ernest Lapointe and party on board. Took them round harbor."

STABLES BURN; LOSS IS HEAVY

Winnipeg Cartage Firm Loses Big Building With Equipment.

HORSES LED OUT.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press)—Fire which late last night swept with incredible rapidity through the stables and warehouse of the Manitoba Cartage Company caused property damage which may reach $200,000.

A large part of the city fire brigade was called out to battle the fire but a few minutes after the blaze was discovered the whole structure was a blazing mass, and little was saved. The horses stabled in the building were led to safety.

The two storey brick building, covering a whole city block, was valued at $100,000. The loss was added to by the destruction of a large number of wagons and other equipment.

J. S. McGiffin, Editor of the Canadian Horticulturist, has been selected as the judge for the annual lawn and garden competition of the Peterborough Horticultural Society. The judging will take place during the week beginning August 30, and it is hoped that as many entries as possible will be received before that time, although the lists will remain open until August 31.

Entries should be sent to the secretary, F. G. Stinson, at the offices, 358 George street, 'phone 1360.

LARGE DECREASE IN HARVESTERS

Officials Make Every Effort To Overcome Scarcity of Labor.

DOWN TO HALF.

REGINA, Sask., August 25. — (Canadian Press).—Officials of the Saskatchewan Bureau of Labor are making every effort to overcome the scarcity of harvest labor now in the province, the result of the marked decrease in the number of men who came out in the early excursions from the East. Thomas M. Molloy, commissioner, stated yesterday the number was just about half as compared with previous years, and had created a situation on the prairies that could not have been foreseen.

Farmers on hailed out and dried out areas are being urged to assist those in good crop districts. Immigration authorities have been asked to relax regulations at border towns to as great a degree as possible in order to allow men to enter from the United States, and finally the railways are being asked to run still another series of harvest excursions from the East.

RESUMES PRESIDENCY.

Admiral Coundouriotis Issues Statement of His Return To Office.

ATHENS, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—In a message published this morning, Admiral Coundouriotis announces that he has resumed the Presidency of Greece which he relinquished when General Pangalos last year, by a coup d'etat, overthrew his government and became dictator. Pangalos was himself overthrown last week by General Condylis and is a prisoner on Aegina Island.

Earl Carroll's "Vanities" Compete With Dead Star

NEW YORK, August 25. — (United Press).—While only a few blocks away thousands fought for a chance to gaze upon the corpse of Rudolph Valentino, Earl Carroll's "Vanities" had its long heralded 1926 opening last night.

There were no vacant seats, although the first 200 orchestra seats were priced at $200 a pair.

After the revue had whirled through its programme of entrancing music and brilliant scenes, scores from the audience went on up Broadway to the funeral parlor where the movie idol who, had he lived, undoubtedly would have been in one of the top price seats, lay dead.

Dancing Girls Dropped From Bombay's Payroll

BOMBAY, August 25.—Since abdication of the Maharajah the administration of the Indore State has been subject to overhaul, and many retrenchments have taken place. Among the most important is the abolition of the bevy of dancing girls and their attendant musicians. These dancing girls, of whom Mumtaz Begum, the girl whom officials of the ex-maharajah tried to abduct from Bombay, was one, were noted throughout India. On this alone the saving to the State will be about $15,000 a year. The ruler's private purse has also received attention, and a retrenchment of about $40,000 a year has been effected in this direction.

MINORITIES CALL CONVENTION FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

Small National Groups Under Alien Flags Want Protection.

MANY RACES.

Fear Greater War Than Ever May Result From Conflicts.

GENEVA, Aug. 25—Apparently dissatisfied with the way the League of Nations handles the problems of minorities, a congress of national groups who form a minority under the flags of the European nations has been convoked for today at Geneva, to treat questions of common interest and seek protection of language, race and religion.

The groups represented are those resident in thirteen countries. They include: Germans in the Italian Tyrol; Russians, Jews and Germans in Poland; Poles and Danes in Germany; Hungarians, Poles and Germans in Rumania; Poles, Germans and Jews in Czechoslovakia; Germans in Hungary, and Catalonians in Spain. Germans predominate.

A preliminary manifesto issued last night admits that rectification of the frontiers will not solve the minority problem, because, even if carried out, the populations of Europe are now so mixed millions would still be under foreign flags. It declares that justice can be achieved only by common battle to further mutual interests.

The agenda includes guarantees for economic equality, the rights of citizenship, and the establishment of some means to regulate conflicts between Governments and national groups so that a new European catastrophe may be avoided.

Formula Is Accepted

The French algebraic formula to compute the average age of navies met with a cold reception today from the British, United States, Japanese and Chilean delegations at the preliminary Disarmament Conference. They voted against it, but the formula was adopted, 8 to 4, with four abstentions. Tomorrow the conference will decide whether the French formula can be equitably applied to computing the value of one fleet against another.

Delay Affects Franc

BRUSSELS, Aug. 25—The delay of the French Government in ratifying the London and Washington debt accords may have an unfavorable reaction, not only on the French franc, but also on the Belgian franc, it is feared, in financial and governmental circles in Brussels.

It is freely admitted by those close to M. Franqui, the Belgian Minister of Finance, that during his recent visit to Paris, accompanied by M. Vandervelde, the Foreign Minister, he strongly urged the French Premier to lose no time in settling the debt question both with Great Britain and the United States. M. Poincare is reported to have replied that the debts were of less importance than the internal fight in defense of the franc, and to have contended that no improvement was shown in the Belgian franc or the Italian lira after the debt settlements of these countries.

She gave birth to sixteen children, and has outlived ten of them. She boasts she had never yet had to visit a dentist. The entire tribe reveres her for her advanced age.

HUNDREDS OF CHOICE FLOWERS IN DISPLAY OF STRIKING BEAUTY AT CANADIAN GLADIOLUS SHOW

Fifth Annual Exhibition of Society is Being Held in Armouries.

MANY ENTRIES

Thousands of gladiolus blooms made the drill hall of the Armories look like some florist's store yesterday on the occasion of the opening of the fifth annual show of the Canadian Gladiolus Society, which is being held in the city.

The blooms are of all colors, shapes and sizes. Some growers, particularly those entering their flowers in the open classes, had hundreds on exhibit. There were single spikes, bunches of three, baskets and sprays, and all sorts of combinations. There were white flowers, yellow ones, red ones, purple ones, pink ones, mottled ones. All in all they made a wonderful exhibition of the variety and beauty that can be imparted to a garden by these splendid summer flowers.

C. S. Thompson, president of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, headed the energetic committees which made the arrangements for the show. Last night, as chairman for the formal opening, he welcomed the members of the society to the city. He complimented the members on the fine showing of bloom and thanked the members of the local committee for the support given and the efforts made to make the show a success.

Acting-Mayor N. E. Phelan welcomed the visiting exhibitors on behalf of the city. He congratulated them on choosing Peterborough for their fifth annual show and on the success that they had attained, and spoke of the great work done in the city by the Horticultural Society.

J. W. Crow of Simcoe, president of the Canadian Gladiolus Society, also made a few remarks. He complimented the local society on the fine arrangements that had been made and on the beauties of the city. He said that it had been decided to hold the show in Eastern Ontario this year to foster the love of flowers, particularly gladioli, in this district, and spoke of the benefits to be gained from this pursuit.

Those in charge of the show are:

TWO LOCAL MEN ARE DIRECTORS

Messrs. Thompson and Callander on Board of Canadian Gladiolus Society.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Canadian Gladiolus Society held its annual meeting in the Armories this morning, and several important matters were discussed, the principal one being the plan of holding the annual flower show in connection with the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto. The idea had been taken up with some of the C. N. E. directors, and given very favorable reception. A committee was appointed to meet the Toronto directors with power to complete arrangements for holding the show in Toronto for at least one year.

The election of officers placed the main officials back again for another year, and two Peterboro men were put on the board of directors. They were Messrs. C. S. Thompson and J. H. Callander. Mrs. E. Schumacher, the efficient secretary, was with difficulty prevailed upon to act again as secretary-treasurer.

To-night brings the show to a close, and the visiting members are enthusiastic in their expression of satisfaction with the success of the show and the preparations made by the local Horticultural Society. A vote of thanks was tendered to the city organization, and responded to by President C. S. Thompson.

65 NAMES PUT ON VOTERS' LIST

Judge Huycke Received Many Applications at First Sitting.

FEWER TO-DAY.

His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke granted sixty-five applications from persons to have their names placed upon the voter's lists yesterday. Seventy persons applied but five claims were disallowed for various reasons.

His Honor, up to noon today had granted another five, the rush apparently dying off somewhat.

Agents of both parties are busily engaged in the task of getting eligible voters registered.

His Ambulance Joy Ride Costs Him Nine Months

BOSTON, August 25. — Nine months in the House of Correction and fines amounting to $40 were imposed in the Roxbury Court upon James P. Frayne of 142 Salumet Street, Roxbury, for alleged violations of the motor vehicle laws growing out of his ride in a stolen ambulance. Frayne appealed and was held in $3,000.

It was charged that a fortnight ago Alfred McLellan, driver of a Veterans' Bureau ambulance, left the machine outside his home at 947 Parker Street, Roxbury. When he came out, the ambulance was disappearing down the street. McLellan gave chase in another automobile and caught up with the ambulance at Heath Square. After it had collided with another automobile he seized the driver, alleged to have been Frayne, but a crowd of young men who gathered, took Frayne away from McLellan and permitted him to escape. McLellan continued the chase, however, when once more a crowd of youths effected his release.

Frayne was finally overtaken and arrested.

SCARS ARE HEALED WOULD FREE WIFE

Chicago Millionaire Seeks Pardon For Throwing Acid.

CHICAGO, Ills., August 25. — (United Press).—The scars of hate which prompted young Darby Day, the millionaire sportsman, to have his wife sent to prison for throwing nitric acid on him during a rage of jealousy, have disappeared, along with the marks which disfigured his face.

After a delicate operation Day's handsome features have been completely restored by Dr. Henry J. Schireson, and the wealthy Chicagoan said that he will now get out to obtain his wife's release from a California prison.

"I cannot love Bernice any more but I feel that I owe her the kindness of doing what I can to set her free," Day said. "I can now go before the California Pardon Board and show them that the marks of her jealousy have been removed."

The operation by which the 23-year-old millionaire's face was remodelled is said to be one of the most unusual on record.

The dash of acid which Mrs. Day hurled into her husband's face a year ago in Los Angeles burned away one eyebrow, mutilated the eyelid and left one cheek a mass of ugly scars. Dr. Schireson grafted skin from other parts of Day's body onto his cheek and eyelid, "planted" a small segement of scalp over the eye for a brow, when the last of the stitches were removed to-day Day's face was found to have been restored completely.

In a few days he will leave for California to start working for his wife's release. He will ask for her pardon on the grounds that her attack had caused him no permanent injury.

BROKERS EXECUTED FOR MONEY DEALS

Chinese Province Trying To Sustain Value of Its Currency.

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Fifteen brokers have been executed within the last three days in an effort to sustain the fictitious value of the Fenghio, or military currency issued by the authorities of Fengtien Province. Chinese brokers who have taken refuge in Japanese concessions are thoroughly terrorized. No one is permitted to enter the Stock Exchange here without a permit, through fear of Government spies.

MISSIONARY DIES.

TORONTO, Ont., August 25. — (Canadian Press).—Filled to the brim with thrilling experiences, and replete with goodly deeds has been the life of Major Maggie Andrew, an Ontario-born Salvation Army missionary in India, news of whose death has just been received here. She was in India for nine years. Major Andrew had an interesting and eventful life in missionary work. She was in the Klondike for some years. At Lethbridge, Alta., she was the spiritual adviser of a condemned murderer. She was the instrument in reclaiming a girl sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. In India, Major Andrew had many thrilling experiences, once narrowly escaping death by a fraction of a second when a poisonous cobra struck at her.

THANK C.G.M.M.

For Safe Transit, Free of Charge, of Stones For Cathedral.

LONDON, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—A letter of thanks has been received by the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Limited, in London, for the safe conveyance of five ancient stones, forwarded by the authorities of Canterbury Cathedral and carried free of charge to the Bishop of British Columbia for incorporation in the new Christ Church Cathedral in Victoria.

The five stones were first used in building the Abbey Church of the Monastery of St. Augustine between A.D. 597 and A.D. 605. Later they were built into Canterbury Cathedral itself. The Cathedral of Christ Church, British Columbia, in which they will be incorporated, will have two towers, rising to a heighth of 135 feet, and joined by an arch 185 feet high. A central tower will rise 185 feet above the level of the nave floor and will be visible all over the city and far out at sea. The corner-stone of the new cathedral will be laid next month by the Bishop of London.

HEN MOTHERS KITTENS.

Mother Cat Will Have Nothing To Do With Her Offspring Now.

PASQUA, Sask., August 25. — (Canadian Press).—A peculiar case of adoption among animals is reported here at a farm of R. Foote, east of Pasqua. An unnatural feline gave up her litter of kittens and would not go near them. A hen then undertook to provide attention in the best way she knew how, and is found daily sitting over her charges.

The mother cat sometimes comes near now, but will have nothing to do with her offspring, since the hen had taken charge of affairs. The kittens are reported to be doing nicely.

A BOMBSHELL

Mr. Elkins and his son left shortly after and Joan was called away.

John Meredith did not rise as his sister left the room. He still sat in the big chair. I knew he was determined to sit there until I also left. I was, however, determined that he should not, for I knew that every time he gave in to his sensitiveness over his crippled leg and arm, it became worse.

"I hope you will pardon me, Mr. Meredith, but I must tell you that I think you have been very selfish to leave your sister to the care of strangers as you have done all these years."

"Do you, Miss Dean?"

The question was coldly insolent.

"Yes, I do. You think you're the most unfortunate man in the world just because you happened to have been born with a deformed hand and foot."

"Miss Dean, I think you forgot yourself."

"Perhaps, but I am going to tell you a few unpleasant truths."

"I hardly think so, Miss Dean. I shall ring for my sister immediately and tell her that I cannot stay in this house."

I laughed. "You are a coward, aren't you?" I said. "Your mind is more deformed than your body and I really think your soul is warped."

This had the desired effect. John Meredith, I expect for the first time in his life, forgot that he was a cripple. He suddenly arose to his feet in a blind rage and limped across the room and punched the bell. Then he turned his back on me. The man answered his ring and told him that Miss Meredith had gone out.

"What do you know about your sister?" I asked.

He looked at me, startled.

"Why—why-why," he stammered. "I think she is one of the prettiest girls I ever saw and probably one of the most fortunate beings on earth. She can have her every wish."

"Do you think so?" I asked.

"What do you mean?" he queried.

"What if I should tell you that your sister has never been very happy."

Again he spoke in a softer voice.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean that Joan has been left entirely to strangers. She never has had love, which, of course, is the one thing she has wanted. You should feel a great sympathy for her, because this is the one thing you have always wanted.

"How do you know that?" he asked.

"Because you have deliberately avoided all human contact, except that which you have bought and paid for. Because you have thought only of yourself and left your sister to outsiders."

"I thought she was happy," he apologized.

"You had no business to think so. Do you know that a girl in her position is one of the most unfortunate in the world?"

He smiled derisively.

"That's absolutely true. A girl that has so much money that she has everything done for her, only has to do what you, yourself, have been doing—think of herself. Joan has become bored to death with everybody and everything, until a few months ago, when she fell in love with a dancing man, one who haunted public dance halls."

"Heavens, how did my sister happen to go to such a place?"

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

VICTOR HUGO AND ADELE FOUCHER

Two friends married; both were overjoyed and happy in their good fortune. One said: "You have a daughter and I shall have a son; when they grow up they will marry."

The two friends were Major Hugo and Registrar Foucher and the pact so strangely and so unthinkingly suggested by Major Hugo, was carried out by fate and circumstance to the letter. Victor Hugo was the son and Adele Foucher, the daughter, and they loved each other truly and well, married and lived happily.

It is as strange a story as any that Victor Hugo could have fashioned for one of his novels or plays and it is remarkable what great a love the girl, who had been predestined for him by his father, inspired in him. Both children grew up together and Hugo gives a lovely picture of their childhood days and their first love blossoming timidly out:

"Our mothers used to tell us to run out and play together. We used to take walks instead. We were told to play but we preferred to talk . . .

"Before long the time came when she was leaning on my arm and I was proud and experienced some new emotions. We walked slowly; we spoke softly. She dropped her handkerchief. I picked it up. Our hands touched each other's and trembled. She began to talk about the little birds, about the crimson afterglow the sunset left behind the trees, about her school mates, her frocks, her ribbons. We talked innocently of common-place things; yet we both blushed, for our little girl had grown a maiden."

The following is one of the love letters Hugo wrote his sweetheart, a beautiful young girl with cherry lips, when he was lost in the transports of love at eighteen:

"A few words from my beloved have again changed my state of mind. Yes! you can do everything with me; and tomorrow, were I even dead, the sweet tones of your voice, the tender pressure of your lips, would call me back to life again. How differently I shall feel tonight as I go to sleep from what I did last evening! Yesterday, Adele, all confidence in the future had abandoned me; I no longer believed that you loved me; yesterday the hour of my death would have been welcome to me. And yet I said to myself: 'If it is quite true that she does not love me and nothing in me has deserved her love, that love without which there is no charm left for me in life, is that any reason why I should die? Is it for my personal happiness that I exist? Oh no, my whole existence is devoted to her, shall be her's in spite of herself, and by what right have I aspired to win her love? Am I more than an angel or a deity? I love her, it is true—I—even I! I am ready for her sake to sacrifice everything with joy—even the hope that she may love me . . . .! Such were my thoughts of yesterday, Adele, my much beloved . . .

"Then it is true that you love me, Adele! Tell me, may I put faith in that most ravishing idea. Does it not strike you that I might become mad with joy if I could pass my whole life at your feet, sure of making you happy, as I should be myself, sure of being adored by you even as I adore you? Oh, your letter has given me back peace; your words this evening have filled me with happiness. Receive my thanks a thousand times; Adele, my beloved angel, I should like to kneel before you as I would before a divinity. How happy you have made me! Adieu, adieu! I shall have happy night dreams of you."

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

Good health is assured those who wear a coral ornament since it is today's talismanic gem. It is believed to preserve its wearer from contagion. It has also the power of strengthening bodily and mental health. A lowering of the vitality is registered bythe paling of the coral.

The onyx, today's natal gem should be worn if its powers are desired to the fullest extent. Coolness and poise will distinguish its wearer.

Rose color, worn today, attracts courage and confidence; social ambitions are likely to be realized by the wearer of this color today.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called 'acid indigestion.'

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis, accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Today's Fashion By Vera Winstor

This Silver Cloth Evening Wrap Exploits a Full Length Cape.

The cape idea was so well received on its initial appearance that it continues to play an important part in Fall fashions.

Surely there is no more effective version of the cape mode than that shown in the lovely evening wrap above. It is made of supple silver cloth and lavishly trimmed with ermine. The slightly circular cape back drops as long as the body of the wrap itself, and is lined with silky white velvet.

Other effective evening wraps are of velvet of metal cloth, lined throughout with fur, which extends into a soft collar to frame the face.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 (United Press) — The mannish girl in her tuxedo dinner coat, white vest, stock collar, scant skirt and boyish haircut, makes herself most evident when dancing among her more femininely dressed sister these warm nights. At nearly every evening function we see at least one of her type. She is usually a slender little flapper or an elderly girl who wishes to be different. From a rear view she can't be distinguished from her boy friend. Summer, with its warm nights doesn't seem to be the time to cavort in broadcloth jackets and high stocks and we have a feeling that the mannish girl suffers much to gain an effect.

The mannish trend towards sports clothes has undoubtedly brought about the mannish evening garb among women. This year has been one in which simple tailored clothing has prevailed almost to a fault. It's been a year since we have seen a natural looking flower on a bonnet When a flower is used it's a cubist sort of posey that lacks femininity. Long sleeves are covering arms that a year ago were considered a feminine charm. Only at evening time do we see girls who look girlish in their lacy frocks. Even now we are beginning to resent this trend toward the masculine in feminine dress. Sleeky bobbed girls are resorting to the most feminine of dinner and dance frocks. Ruffles, lace insets and pleats adorn both chiffon and organdy dresses.

Earrings also provide a feminine touch to the boyishly bobbed Miss. Long pendant types of dainty crystal beads suspended on tiny chains are among the most popular ones. For day wear the pearl, jade or coral button earring is favored. Necklaces and bracelets are jewels which add a becoming contrast to the sleek-haired miss or matron.

Handkerchiefs cannot be too sheer or lacey and floating chiffon scarfs also provide a girlishness to the simple frock.

Of course, shoes and stockings are entirely feminine this year. The heavy sports shoe with low heel is a thing of the past.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

EUNICE

Eunice, like Evangeline, is one of the "glad" names in the lexicon of feminine cognomens. Like Evangeline also, it comes from the Greek word meaning well, or happy. Eunice is translated to mean "happy victory."

Because of its significance, the Greek word from which Eunice was derived, was taken over in early times by the Christians, who adored names of happy augury. The names coming from this favorite word are almost beyond enumeration, but curiously, only a few of them have survived to modern times.

Eunice is one of these latter. It made its appearance as Eunike, one of the fifty Nereids. Her name straightway became popular among Greek women, but it remained for Eunice, the Jewish mother of Timothy, to give it vogue in the days of early Christianity. English lovers of Bible names have favored it for centuries and it is still popular in all the countries of Europe, though particularly adapted to English and American usage.

The topaz is the talismanic gem assigned to Eunice. "The chrysolite of sunrise," Shelly calls it. It is said to preserve its wearer from all dangers and to warn of approaching evil by paling in color, but it will be rendered impotent unless it is set in gold. To dream of it signifies that no harm shall befall. Tuesday is Eunice's lucky day and 5 her lucky number. The chrysanthemum, signifying cheerfulness, is her flower

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE FLYING SHIP—XI — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

A KING ONCE OFFERED HIS DAUGHTER AND HALF HIS KINGDOM TO ANYONE WHO WOULD BRING HIM A FLYING BOAT. AN OLD MAN TOLD A SOLDIER HOW TO FIND THE BOAT, AND HE FLEW TO THE PALACE, WITH SOME STRANGE COMPANIONS. THE KING, NOT WANTING A SOLDIER SON-IN-LAW, SET HIM SOME HARD TASKS. THE COMPANIONS DID THEM ALL. ONE OF THE MEN HAD SOME MAGIC WOOD.

THE SOLDIER TOLD THE MESSENGER THAT IF THE KING REFUSED LONGER TO KEEP HIS PROMISE HE WOULD WAGE WAR AGAINST HIM AND CARRY OFF THE PRINCESS BY FORCE.

DURING THE NIGHT THE SOLDIER AND HIS COMRADES WENT TOGETHER INTO A BIG FIELD, NOT FORGETTING TO TAKE THE BUNDLE OF WOOD WITH THEM, WHICH THEY SPREAD OUT IN ALL DIRECTIONS.

SEE CANADA A FIRST.

Sometimes, even out of a political speech, there comes a message that is of prime importance.

In such a category could be put the advice given by Hon. Chas. Dunning in a campaign address in Nova Scotia the other night to "See Canada first."

Undoubtedly, if the East knew more about the West, if the people of the Maritimes visited us in Ontario more often than they do, or if we dropped down East once in a while, the problems that seem to divide us into unfriendly camps would not loom up as large as they now appear.

Too many of us know all about Detroit or Buffalo or Rochester or Atlantic City, and too little about Montreal or Ottawa or London.

We have a wonderful country and we should be more familar with it before we mark our course for other lands.

And if we were perhaps many of our political and economic problems would be found much easy of solution than at present they seem.

TRANSIENT CANADIANS.

For the contention that transient residents of Canada who are merely waiting in the country until they can legally enter the United States under the quota regulations should not be allowed to vote in the Federal election, there will be much support.

The Examiner has more than once referred to the large number of immigrants using Canada merely as a stop-over station and accepting temporary employment until the doors of the Republic are open to them.

Such people have not the slightest interest in this country save as a convenience; they have not the least intention of becoming permanent residents of Canada.

Even though they comply with the electoral law in regard to a year's residence in this country, their opinion of the composition of Canada's next Government is not of the slightest value, and should not be allowed to kill the votes of real Canadians who are here to stay.

Whether these psuedo Canadians could be segregated and disinfranchised is, of course, another matter, but at least there will be approval of the stand taken by those who would have such fly-by-night voters trimmed from the lists.

A NEW TYPE OF CANDIDATE.

Col. J. J. Carrick, who is to be an Independent candidate in the constituency of Port Arthur, has introduced a novel policy for the electors of that riding to ponder over during the next few weeks.

Col. Carrick not only announces himself as an Independent but he promises if elected to support whichever party forms the next Government.

For those who believe that it is of the greatest value to a constituency to have its representative a member of the Government, the Colonel should be an ideal candidate.

His election would automatically give Port Arthur a Government member as its representative, inasmuch as he is already pledged to support the party that is in power after the election.

Possibly the electors of Port Arthur may prefer, however, to know in advance just what policy they are voting for, and to support a particular policy whether or not it be favoured by the majority of other constituencies.

Usually Independent candidates are satisfied to promise to vote as they consider in the best interests of their riding.

Col. Carrick is the first to announce that he is ready to support the party that wins the verdict.

THE VOTERS' LISTS.

One of the essentials to a greater interest in politics is the removal of the electoral machinery from party control, and a simpler and more business-like method of preparing voters' lists.

Of the value of the first there can be not the slightest doubt; as to the necessity of the second, the experience of many electors at the present time furnishes ample proof.

At each election there is a needless amount of confusion over the voters' lists.

Citizens who have lived for years in the same subdivision find their names omitted; others do not realize until it is too late the necessity of registration.

Everything that can be done to facilitate the polling of the largest possible vote should be carried out; as it is even the best efforts of political organizations and the friendly assistance of newspapers does not succeed in preventing numbers of electors from finding themselves on election day without an opportunity to mark their ballot.

In the present campaign it cannot be too often urged upon those eligible to vote to make sure before it is too late that their names are on the list, and that they are in a position to discharge the duties of their citizenship on September 14th.

AN ANCIENT TRADING COMPANY IN MODERN ENTERPRISE.

In the minds of the people of Eastern Canada the Hudson's Bay Company is known chiefly through history and works of fiction for the part it played in the romantic days of fur-trading when intense rivalry existed not only between French and English but after 1763 between great rival companies operating under the same flag. With the extension of settlement the purely fur-trading activities of the company have been merged into activities covering a much greater sphere and today, in spite of our eastern ignorance, the Hudson's Bay Company is still a pioneer in the development of trade based on the resources of unsettled Canadian territories.

An example of the way in which this ancient company has kept pace with trading opportunities is furnished by their recent experiments in the refrigerated transport of Canadian salmon to British markets. Within the company's territory in Canada are many of the world's finest salmon rivers, some of which have been hitherto too remote from civilization for commercial exploitation. Recently the company raised nearly $10,000,000 of new capital for the extension of its enterprises, among which will be the development of these remote salmon fisheries.

In this new activity the company will employ modern refrigerating methods. Two ships will be specially fitted out with brine freezing apparatus and will be employed in navigating the more remote rivers for the freezing of fish directly it is caught. The method of freezing employed will obviate the rupture of cells and in the case of salmon will result in the preservation of the oils and juices on which the texture and flavour of this fish depend, says the British trade journal, Cold Storage, and the fish will be delivered for consumption on British tables as fresh as the salmon of Scottish or Irish waters with which it is said to be identical.

Already a first shipment of salmon handled in this way has been disposed of in Great Britain with most satisfactory results as to condition and quality, and further shipments on a limited scale are expected to follow this year. Next year the enterprise will be on a greatly enlarged scale as the scheme comes more fully into operation. Thus an old company continues with modern methods the development of resources in the remote and unsettled parts of Canada. And who shall say that this latest activity does not possess the quality of romance in modern enterprises that fur-trading held in past days of explorations in a vast, uncharted wilderness?—Brockville Recorder and Times.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

The city of London, Ontario, has been having a discussion lately on the subject of aldermanic and mayoralty salaries. Majority opinion, among the Aldermen, seems to be that they should receive some compensation for their services.

In Windsor the Mayor draws $4,200 per annum, most of this as head of the City Council and the remainder through his membership on the Hydro and Water Commissions. The other members of these commissions are paid yearly salaries, while members of the City Council receive $5 per meeting. The School Trustees, to date, have not seen fit to follow the example of the other bodies.

The Mayor of Windsor, no matter whom he may be, is a busy man. The calls upon his time are many and varied. He must be here and there and everywhere, day and night. The position calls for frequent absences from the city, for attendance at meeting after meeting of the Council and the various other bodies of which, by virtue of the chief magistrate's office, he is a member. It is an active position and makes heavy demands upon any man who fills the job. In addition, there is an important expense in connection with the office. Campaigns cost money, as those who have been through them will testify. But the campaign is only the beginning. If the candidate is successful he immediately becomes a target for every individual and organization raising money for this purpose or that. The Mayor and the local members of Parliament are expected to head every subscription list, and woe to the public man who is niggardly in this respect. Indeed it is not too much to say that the salaries public men receive meet, in nine cases out of ten, but a portion of the expense with which they are faced for election purposes and in the term of office following.

The Border Cities Star is not finding fault with the amount of money paid the chief magistrate in Windsor, even though it may be higher than that authorized in some other places. Considering the size of the city, the many demands on the Mayor's time, Windsor's peculiar situation as the centre and the largest unit in a group of municipalities that have so many inter-dependent interests, the chief executive is not overpaid. Possibly he should get more. The Star does contend, however, that it is the height of nonsense to maintain as many public bodies as we are now maintaining, and that it is equally bad to continue a Mayor and Council of 12 in a way that may have been satisfactory half a century ago but that does not fit in with modern business practice at all.

The Star believes—and it has so stated on other occasions—that the City Council as we now know it could be dispensed with in favor of a small paid council or commission, this commission in turn appointing a competent and highly paid man to act as city manager. The manager would control all branches of municipal activity and report directly to the council or commission, which, of course, would be headed by the Mayor. In this way the present Hydro Commission, the Water Board, the Parks Board, and several other bodies—perhaps even the Board of Education—could be done away with, large sums of money saved and greater efficiency secured all around. The process, in short, would be simply that of adapting the best private practice to the conduct of public affairs.

All this proposition needs to bring it to consummation and to make it a success is a leader. It furnishes for Mayor Mitchell or whoever may be chief magistrate next year an opportunity for history-making service to the community.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is easy to get on the voters' lists now—but impossible, in the case of an urban voter, on election day.

"American Praise City's Waterfront," reads a Toronto newspaper heading. But somehow we had the idea that many of the visitors from across the line were not particularly interested in water.

It may be, as a contemporary expresses it, that the fact that few people are talking election may mean that the electors have their minds made up as to how they are going to vote.

Dr. Smirlie Lawson is a Liberal candidate in Toronto. If the "Big Train" hits the political line as he used to smash through on the football field, there is likely to be trouble ahead for somebody.

American judges seem so prone to lock up juries for the night that we suggest they extend the system to include a few of the defendants.—Life.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.84 1-4.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-4.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The only business transacted on the Montreal grain market yesterday was the sale of a few loads of Manitoba spring wheat to the United Kingdom and the Continent. An odd load of oats and barley were also worked, but business on the whole was quiet.

The demand for cash grain in the domestic market was again somewhat limited and the only business reported was a sale of 30,000 bushels of tough No. 3 Canadian Western oats at 3 cents per bushel over the October option, c.i.f. Montreal. The car lot trade was quiet.

Owing to the renewed weakness in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation, a weaker feeling developed in the local market for spring wheat grades of flour and prices were reduced 10 cents per barrel. The market was moderately active. The winter wheat situation was fairly active and firm. Old crop grades were unchanged, while new crop qualities were offered at $6.30 to $6.40.

The undertone to the millfeed market was firm at the recent advance in prices noted. The volume of business was fair. The movement of rolled oats was small and prices were unchanged.

The feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh extras and firsts, and prices were advance 1 cent per dozen. This was attributed to the increased demand and the small supplies available. The receipts were 1,368 cases.

The butter market was dull and featureless, but prices ruled steady. The receipts were 4,826 packages.

Prices for all qualities of cheese were well maintained in spite of a limited demand from local and foreign buyers. The receipts were 15,981 boxes.

A moderate amount of business was done in beans, and the tone of the market was steady with sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

DON'T FORGET THE "ELSIE"

A word that is frequently omitted when it should be used is "else." Sometimes even writers and speakers who are ordinarily careful are guilty of this error. An example was noted recently in the "society column" of a newspaper, in which the writer said:

"Mr. McAllister knew society, and was better equipped than any one to write about the smart set of his day."

The word "else" should be inserted after the word "one," in the foregoing sentence, to make good English of it. Without it the sentence is incomplete, and the writer contrasts Mr. McAllister with himself (he is, of course, included in "any one") which is absurd and logical.

"The discouraging fact that meets the teacher," says "The Teaching of English," by Percival Chubb, "is that, although she may secure passably good speech, written and oral, in the class room, there is during recess and on the playground and the street a barbaric reversion, with a sense of relief, to the patois of 'real life.'"

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir.—The vote of Mr. Peck on the Budget has reached the acute stage. It will be remembered that I tried to help Mr. Peck out of his embarrassment, but he said at Nogie's Creek the other night: 'I have been charged with having voted against the Budget. I did not do so. What I did do was to vote for Dr. Manion's amendment." Why Mr. Peck persists in this unnecessary statement it is difficult to say. On page 3684 of Hansard, May 18, appears this record: "The House divided on the main motion (Mr. Robb).

* * *

Nays: Mr. Peck."

I have consulted a number of people to whom I have shown Hansard and they agree with me that an explanation is due to the electors by Mr. Peck for his statement that he did not vote against the Budget. Am I wrong or he?

WHAT GREAT BRITAIN SAID WHEN SHE HEARD OF MEIGHEN'S DECLARATION.

Sir: What did the Old Country think about it?

About what?

About Mr. Meighen's "war" policy, and (as he said) the whole Conservative party's policy of waiting until it had been referred to a general Dominion election, or referendum before Canada should announce what she is going to do to towards defending the Empire? Here's what they said in England:

"London: Official sentiment (note that officialdom took the matter up) here does not seem to be greatly concerned over Mr. Meighen's declaration that Canada should not enter future wars without the consent of the people expressed at a general election. If Britain became involved in another war she would not look to Canada in any case for immediate help and the few weeks' delay involved in an election would therefore make little difference."

There's a fine piece of quiet contempt for you! And what if the general election went against the proposition?

Do you think either the rest of the Empire or the war would wait for us? But what I want particularly to impress upon your readers is that this is the comment of official Britain. Nothing said by Mr. Meighen about trying it out at this general election. Oh, no. Is it any wonder that the Royal Black Knights kicked Meighen's proposition into the middle of next week.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A WOMAN'S WORK

Pails and kettles and pots and pans—
Oh, a woman's work isn't much like man's
For a man's out there where the shouting is,
It's a different world that work of his.
But he comes back home when the shouting dies,
And he thinks of cake and he talks of pies,
And he loves to come—and that helps lots
With pails and kettles and pans and pots.

Pails and kettles and pots and pans;
He stands around and he plots and plans,
He talks of his work, while I do mine,
And I take a pan and I make it shine.
Though he may not see and he may not know,
It's one of the reasons he loves me so.
Love often dies when a woman fails
With pots and kettles and pans and pails.

Pails and kettles and pots and pans;
It's the well-kept house that a husband scans
That sends him out to the upset earth
To do some work that's work of worth.
For a man will toil for a home like this,
Though that's a truth that we often miss.
So a woman's work is as fine as man's,
Though it's pails and kettles and pots and pans.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE VALUE OF FORENSICS

By Dr. Frank Crane.

An earnest little book has fallen into my hands called "An Outline for Self-Education."

One of the points given most stress by the writer is the value of forensics for developing young men.

Most of America's self-made men, from Benjamin Franklin to Abraham Lincoln, have testified to the benefits they received from debating.

Ever since, and probably long before, Bacon wrote that "speaking maketh a ready man," the value of argument as a sharpener of the wits has been recognized.

Besides this, the study of debating does a number of other things.

It teaches where to find information. It drills in the important art of knowing where to seek. Its training in where to find facts you are looking for helps in ever-day life later on.

It trains students to give attention to details. It demands a challenging of every accepted and seemingly guileless point that may harbor a fallacy. It requires an exact definition of terms and a clear understanding of what is included and what is left out.

It cultivates orderliness. It requires that weeds be kept out of the garden of the mind. It demands straight rows, solid foundations, consecutive links. Facts must be marshalled one, two, three.

It inculcates the invaluable lesson of seeing the other side of an argument. The surest man in a debate is always the one who knows the other side best.

Moreover, it gives training in seeing from another's point of view. In trying to get an idea across to a listener the speaker gets training in putting himself in the other's background and seeing the problem from his viewpoint.

It also gives exercise in expressing yourself, putting your ideas into words, and making your thoughts clear to others.

In a debate you have a test of your ability under conditions where weaknesses are made apparent and results are evident.

Earnest young people who are striving for self-development can do few better things than following this writer's advice to join a class in forensics at night school, extension work, or Y.M.C.A. classes.

ARE CONDUCTING KEEN CAMPAIGNS

Political Situation in West Creates Keenest Interest in Years.

LEADERS VISIT.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 25.—(Canadian Press).—Candidates of all parties now are conducting intensive campaigns in city and rural constituencies of Manitoba, and each night sees an increase in meetings throughout the province.

The political situation, following the visit of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of Canada, and Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, has created greater public interest than for many years, and all meetings see a record crowd of electors in attendance. This is especially true of Winnipeg, and suburbs where nominating conventions and subsequent campaign gatherings all have had record attendance.

Premier Meighen will speak in Winnipeg on Thursday, following which he will again visit his own constituency—Portage La Prairie, where he is opposed by A. E. McPherson, Liberal. On Saturday he will conduct sixteen meetings in the constituency of Portage, speaking at various centres. His first meeting will be held at 9 a.m., and he will conclude the day's addresses at 9 p.m. Hon. R. J. Manion, Postmaster-General, is busy speaking in the interest of Manitoba Conservative candidates, and yesterday addressed rallies at several rural centres.

COLLEGE STUDENTS VISIT AT KINGSTON

KINGSTON, Ont., August 25. — (Canadian Press). — The eighty students who are on a tour of Canada and the United States under the auspices of the Cambridge Medical Society, arrived in Kingston yesterday afternoon, via the C.N.R., from Montreal. They transferred at once to Ban Righ Hall, Queens, where they will stay overnight. Yesterday they were shown through the University and the General Hospital. Last evening they were guests of the Kingston Medical Society at dinner, after which they were taken for a trip among the Thousand Islands. To-day they will visit historic places in and about the city, and will leave in the afternoon for Toronto.

WEDDING BELLS.

BUSHNELL—WOOD.

OMEMEE, August 25. — A quiet wedding took place in Trinity United Church on Thursday, Aug. 19, when the Rev. Dr. Armstrong married Edna Alberta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Wood, Toronto, and Ernest Leslie Bushnell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Bushnell of Omemee. The altar of the church was tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and tall standard of gladioli, while the guest pews were marked by large bows of white satin ribbon. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, rendered by Dr. Marshall. The bride was attired in a gown of cosmos georgette with cape and flounce of gold lace, and her hat was cream maline, with a large cosmos velvet flower. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses, lily of the valley and baby's breath, and was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Wood, wearing blond georgette over peach crepe, and a large black velvet picture hat. She carried a sheaf of premier roses. The groom was ably assisted by his cousin, Dr. Clifford H. M. Laidley, of Lindsay. During the signing of the register, Mr. Riley Hallman sang in fine voice, "O Promise Me."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 213 Ashworth Avenue, which was profusely decorated with summer flowers. A dainty buffet luncheon was served and catered to by Cole Bros., Toronto.

The bride's table was centred by a large wedding cake ,swathed in tulle, studded in small flowers, above which hung silver wedding bells. Shaded candles in silver candlesticks also adorned the table.

The bride's mother was dressed in brown satin, with sand trimmings, and wore a brown satin hat to match and a corsage of sunburst roses. The groom's mother wore a rose flat crepe, embroidered in sand, with sand hat and fox fur and a corsage bouquet of sweet peas.

The happy couple left on an extended motor trip to South Carolina and intermediate points, the bride travelling in a rosewood crepe with hat and coat to match and a cross fox fur, the gift of the groom.

CONGRESS WILL BE REQUESTED TO REVISE LAW

Episcopate Not Hopeful, But Attaches Significance To Official Interview.

AIRPLANES SEIZED.

Hope That Senator Saenz Will Have Influence on Congress.

MEXICO CITY, August 25. — Details of the campaign for Congressional amendment of the religious clauses of the constitution are still under consideration by the Episcopate, though the Episcopate is admittedly dubious as to results, because it believes that all the Deputies in the new Congress are pledged in advance to support President Calless religious policy.

In a statement yesterday the Episcopate expressed pleasure over the attitude taken by Aaron Saenz, the Mexican Foreign Minister, as reported from San Antonio. Senator Saenz is quoted as saying he thought that when laws or constitutional provisions were inimical to the best interests of the country they should be repealed or amended.

Hope for Solution.

The hope was voiced that Senator Saenz's declarations might have some influence on Congress, and some slight ray of hope is thrown into the situation.

The differences between the Episcopate and President Calles regarding registration of priests, it is pointed out, involves the fundamental Catholic principle that the Pope is the supreme spiritual authority of the Church and no other such authority can be recognized by Catholics.

The Episcopate believes that the President's religious regulations and the registration of priests give to the Government such intimate and detailed jurisdiction over priestly functions, Church management and religious affairs as to destroy the life of the Catholic Church and make the Mexican government, and not the Pope, the authority over Catholics and the Church in Mexico.

The Episcopate reiterates that it will agree to the registration of priests if the Government declares that such registration is "for administrative purposes," that is, that the registration will be merely a form whereby the Government will know the person responsible for the orderly conduct of each church, and that it does not mean the Government will assume authority over questions of religion.

The Episcopate considers that the registration of priests, unless the Government specifically declares that this is only for administrative purposes would mean that the Catholic Church accepts—which it refuses to do—the Government's contention of governmental ownership of all church property, the priests being merely the custodians of such property loaned by the Government to worshippers. Take 2 Congress will

Comment on Statement.

With regard to the quoted statements of Foreign Minister Saenz, the Episcopate had the following to say:

"Senor Saenz' declarations cannot be taken merely as a personal opinion, because an official cannot entirely separate himself from his official capacity; therefore, Senator Saenz's declarations must gratify all the world, as well as Mexico.

"In the course of his interview at San Antonio, the Mexican Foreign Minister was quoted as saying: 'The Mexican Chamber of Deputies possibly may amend the Constitution so that the dissatisfied faction now causing the unrest over President Calles's religious policy, will be placated'."

The Episcopate expresses pleasure over the Minister's declaration, saying: "The only regrettable aspect is that the members of the Congress are not inspired by such principles as voiced by Senator Saenz, but in advance are committed to the support of the Government, but the Episcopate prays that the Congress may see what is for the best interest of the country, and amend or repeal the religious laws."

ROBBERS STEAL $4,000 PAYROLL

Show Familiarity With Office of Detroit Firm By Their Actions.

ESCAPE IN CAR.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 25—Three girl employes saw two robbers snatch a payroll box containing nearly $4,000 from the cashier's cage of the General Baking Company, 925 Cherry street, just before 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon after raising the window wicket by operating its secret catch from the outside. The robbery was performed with great speed and that, the police say, indicates the men were thoroughly familiar with the offices.

There was no one in the cage at the time. The two robbers, said to be about 20 years old, entering from the rear, reached through the wicket after touching the spring release. One pointed a revolver through the tiny window, admonishing Charles Jarraitt, sales manager of the company, seated at the desk beyond the cage, to be quiet.

The second man reached through the window and seized the box. Jarraitt dashed through the door and followed the men, securing the number of the automobile they had parked in the alley. Two companions were waiting for them in the car,

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM DORNAN.

OMEMEE, August 25.—At the Victoria Hospital on Sunday afternoon, July 25th, there passed away one of the oldest old-timers of Central Butte district in the person of William Dornan, known to all as "Uncle Billy," at the ripe old age of ninety-two years. The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon, service being held in the United Church, conducted by Rev. MacDonald, and interment took place in the Central Butte Cemetery. The service was largely attended by people from all over the district, and many beautiful floral tributes bore testimony of the high esteem in which "Uncle Billy" was held by the people of the community. The above is a tribute of respect to the late William Dornan, formerly of Omemee, which was clipped from the Central Butte paper.

The late William Dornan, with his wife ,emigrated from Ireland in 1865, arriving in Omemee shortly afterwards. He started in business as a blacksmith, and employing other help, his shop was a hive of industry. One son, 'Jim,' was born in Omemee, and when he was a boy of sixteen his mother passed away. Later Mr. Dornan married the widow of William Fee, who predeceased him two years ago. While living in Omemee, the deceased gentleman erected four houses, three of which still remain, namely, those occupied by P. Race, J. Overholt and J. B. Hayes.

when the ceremony had been transferred to the corner of the Hall of Fame in which the memorial stands, unveiled the big white marble baslief. A military guard of honor stood at attention, two minutes of silence was observed, the Last Post sounded through the corridors, and the ceremony was ended. A score of wreaths, floral shields and bouquets were brought up and laid at the feet of the monument, conveying the tribute of people in many countries, and the great crowd which had filled the corridors filed up to see the memorial.

Yesterday's ceremony was the chief event in the convention of Canadian Nurses, now being held in Ottawa. Scores of nurses in uniform added dignity to it. A dozen British nurses in military grey-and-scarlet were conspicuous among the simple blue-and-white of the Canadians. Military and naval officers were in dress uniform and decorations.

With the Canadian Army Medical Corps Nursing Services: Miriam E. Baker, Dorothy M. Y. Baldwin, Christina Campbell, Ainslie St. C. Dagg, Lena A. Davis, Carola J. Douglas, Alexina Dussalt, Minnie A. Follette, Agnes F. Forneri, Margaret J. Fortesque, Margaret M. Fraser, Minnie H. Gallagher, Sarah E. Garbutt, Matilda E. Green, Victoria B. Hennan, Jessie B. Jaggard, Lenna M. Jenner, Ida L. Kealy, Jessie H. King, Margaret Lowe, Katherine M. Macdonald, Agnes MacPherson, Jessie M. McDiarmid, Rebecca McIntosh, Evelyn V. McKay, Mary A. McKenzie, Rena McLean, Henrietta Mellett, M. Francis E. Munro, Eden L. Pringle, Ada J. Ross, Mae B. Sampson, Gladys I. Sare, Etta Sparks, Anna I Stamers, Jean Templeman, Addie A. Tupper, Gladys M. M. Wake, Anna E. Whitley.

With the United States Army Nurse Corps: Florence G. Graham, Marion L. Overend. Kathleen E. Symmes, Anna A. Walker, Anne K. Welsh, Lydia V. Whiteside.

"Erected by the nurses of Canada in remembrance of their sisters who gave their lives in the Great War, 1914-1918, and to perpetuate a noble tradition in the relations of the Old World and the New.

"Let by the spirit of humanity across the seas, woman by her tender ministrations to those in need has given to the world the example of an heroic service, embracing three centuries of Canadian history."

The words were composed for the memorial by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, when, as Premier of Canada, he made arrangements for the erection of the monument.

Crops at Dunsford.

Owing to the heavy fall of rain and very high wind crops are quite a discouraging sight at present.

Every field of grain and also the corn is lying flat on the ground. One would almost think a roller had gone over it all.

Most farmers in this section were lucky enough to have their fall wheat cut before the storm. The oats are getting pretty ripe and will be very difficult to cut while the latter grain may have more chance to straighten up before they become ready for the binder.

Town Clock Is "Sick" Repairs To Take Week

Peterborough citizens who have been making the town clock their authority for the time will have to depend upon their own watches for at least a week. The big clock that has ruled the city is at present on the sick list and the jeweller in charge of the case is of the opinion that it will take at least the time above mentioned before the necessary repairs can be effected.

The United States has an option or lease on the Nicaragua canal route which will not expire for nearly a century.

"THE DEVIL'S HIGHWAY."

In almost any other country the little English town which I saw yesterday would be a show resort with entrance fees. "The best example of a Roman city" in England, Silchester or Calleva Atrebatum, is a retiring village easily missed along the leafy roads of the Berkshire-Hampshire border country. Here are ancient Roman roads as straight as a needle. Over one of them I wandered, the one from Calleva toward London. It is a road no longer, but a broad green lane, grass-grown and choked with nettles between high hedges where honey-suckle clambers and along which great English oaks make a darkened tree-cloister. The folks hereabouts call it "the Devil's Highway," but no devil ever loved a pastoral lane as innocent as this; the fairies, or as delightful a demon as Robin Hood, perhaps, for Sherwood or the Forest of Arden alone could offer a friendlier retreat, flower-bestrewn and scented. Perhaps the fancy of 60 generations may have seen some ghostly Roman centurion here drilling his men.

MANIAC BOMBS PITTSBURG BANK

Angered When Teller Refuses To Honor Note For $2,000.

TWO LIVES LOST.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 25—Enraged because is demand that a note for $2,000 which he presented at the teller's window was not discounted immediately, Collins Barley of Sewickley exploded a bomb in the Farmers' Deposit Bank here at 3.10 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The blast, which was felt in every corner of the downtown business section, snuffed out the life of George Ortman, one of the bank's special policemen, and ended the career of Barley, who, it has been learned, was an escaped patient from the Mayview County Home for the Insane.

Twenty persons were seriously injured and more than a hundred more or less seriously hurt by the blast.

Carries Black Hand Bag

The explosion resulted from a crudely conceived scheme to mulct the Farmers' Savings Deposit Bank of $2,000. Shortly after 3 o'clock Barley, carrying a small black hand bag, entered the checking department of the bank and walked up to the window behind which stood Everett Jones, receiving teller.

Without an audible word, the stranger offered Jones a slip of paper bearing some unintelligible marks and a notation of $2,000. Failing to understand just what was wanted, Jones inquired of the man what he desired. Barley jerkily demanded $2,000.

Suspicious of the stranger's demands, Jones showed the note to the assistant cashiers of the bank. Officer Ortman, who was pacing the corridors, was notified, and, as the four men approached a window where Barley stood, Ortman stepped up beside him.

When it was explained to Barley that the paper he had presented was worthless, he angrily retorted, while backing away from the window: "Give me $2,000, or I'll put you out of business."

Sensing the danger in the stranger's threat, the tellers dropped to the floor. Barley dropped the black bag on the floor, and a deafening roar followed. Ortman was riddled with shrapnel and broken metal. He died ten minutes after reaching the hospital.

MEIGHEN TALKS ABOUT WARTIME ELECTION ACT

Says Aliens' Petition Stated Willingness To Lose Their Votes.

COULD NOT FIGHT.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.) — Premier Meighen addressed a meeting here last night following speeches at Melville, at Balcarres, at Lebret, and at Fort Qu'Appelle. It was a strenuous day, the effect of which was apparent in the hoarseness of his voice.

Mr. Meighen spoke in passing of the war time election act. He turned particularly to statements made in this connection by Hon. Charles Dunning. "I was a member of the government which passed the act," Mr. Meighen said. "I always took my full share of responsibility, have done so before audiences in this city and do so again.

"At the time of the Great War, it came to be a question of deciding upon what principle our men should be enlisted, whether we would continue a system of compulsory enlistment or whether we would desist.

"A large section of our population, not large comparatively, lately arrived from the lands of our then enemies, petitioned the government that, as they had lately come from those countries and felt a natural bond of affection for the land they had recently left, they ought not to be called upon in any event to enlist to fight their brothers from whom they had lately departed and they said: 'If we are to be saved from that obligation, we quite recognize that we ought not to claim the right to vote in an election which decides whether others enlist or not.'

"That seemed a reasonable appeal. It seemed common sense. It was natural. They were not in a position to assume all the obligations of British citizenship and it was unnatural to ask them to do it. We did not ask them to do it and we took the other suggestion, perfectly right and logical, that, as they could not assume all the obligations, they would not have the right in our country to determine what the obligations of the rest of us were.

"This was on the petition of those people themselves organized for that purpose. And on the basis of that, Liberal speakers by the dozen, but especially Mr. Motherwell and Mr. Dunning, have sought persistently to arouse prejudice among our foreign born citizens in order to reap political capital."

UNCLE WIGGILY
Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE TURKEY'S TENT

"Have you seen anything of my rubber rain coat, my dear?" asked Uncle Wiggily of his wife one afternoon, when the sky was dripping water.

"Your rain coat? Why, no," answered Mrs. Longears. "What did you want of it?"

"Well," said the rabbit gentleman with a sly little wink at Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, "to speak sarcastic like, and as I shouldn't, I might say I wanted to make a strawberry longcake of it. But, to tell you the truth, I want to wear my rain coat."

"What? Out in the rain!" cried the lady rabbit. "Why, it will get all wet!"

"That's what rain coats are for!" laughed the bunny uncle. "I can imagine nothing worse," he went on in what might be called a judicial tone, "than a rain coat in a country where it never rains. Think how the poor coat must long and hope for a good storm, all the while singing softly 'How dry I am!' Eh, what, my dear?"

"You are teasing me, I suppose," said Mrs. Longears who, however, didn't in the least mind it. "But I haven't seen your rubber rain coat."

"Then I must ask the umbrella," said the rabbit uncle, as he looked at the storm outside and thought how jolly it would be sloshing through it. So he inquired of the umbrella:

"Have you seen my rain coat?"

"No," answered the umbrella, tickling itself under one rib, "I have not seen your rain coat."

"Then I must ask the rubber boots," said Mr. Longears. So he appealed to the boots:

"Have you seen my rain coat?"

"No," answered the rubber boots as they scratched each other's soles so they wouldn't be slippery, "we haven't seen your coat."

"Then I must go look for it," decided Uncle Wiggily, "and you three shall help me." So he put on the two rubber boots and, holding the one umbrella over his head, out into the storm hopped the bunny gentleman to look for his coat which was yellow in color, just like those worn by the Princeton sophomores.

But though he looked here, there and everywhere, Uncle Wiggily could not find his yellow rubber rain coat, and the rubber boots and the umbrella, though they did their best, could not help him. However, to be sure, they kept most of the rain off the rabbit gentleman.

"I see it!"

"What? My rain coat?" asked the rabbit.

"Yes," added the rubber boots, "I see it also," and the two friends pointed to something yellow spread out on a bush in the middle of the field.

"Surely enough, that's it!" said Uncle Wiggily. "Somebody is using my rain coat for a tent," he went on. "It is spread out over that bush and someone is beneath it."

"How do you know?" asked the umbrella.

"I can see something moving," was the reply.

"So can I," agreed the boots. "Let's go see what it is."

"Maybe it's one of the bad chaps—the Wolf or Fox—who took your rain coat, hoping you would come after it, and they intend to jump out and grab you when you get close enough," suggested the umbrella.

"That's my rain coat, and, bad chap or no bad chap, I'm going to have it!" cried Uncle Wiggily firmly. Across the field he hopped and as he drew near the yellow coat he heard a voice cry:

"Gobble, obble, obble! Obble, gobble!"

"Why it's Mr. and Mrs. Turkey Gobbler and a lot of little turkey chicks under my rain coat!" cried the bunny.

"Yes," gobbled Mr. Turkey. "We borrowed your rain coat to make a tent for our little ones, Uncle Wiggily, for if they get wet they catch cold very easily. I saw your coat hanging out on the line yesterday, to dry, and I thought you wouldn't need it so I took it and my wife and I made a tent of it. I was going to telephone you that I had it, but I forgot."

"You are quite welcome to it," said the bunny kindly. "With boots and an umbrella I hardly need a rain coat." So he let the turkeys have it for a tent and whenever it rained the little gobblers stayed under the bunny's yellow coat. So they grew up without catching cold. And if the clock doesn't try to stand on its head and wave the pendulum in the air like a flag, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's soda pop.

ONTARIO DEFICIT IS NOT SO LARGE

Was Expected To Be Million and a Half During 1926.

DOING BETTER.

OTTAWA, August 25 (Canadian Press).—The Citizen publishes the following story to-day:

"Ontario's deficit this year will be less than budgeted for, according to Premier G. Howard Ferguson's anticipations. Asked last night as to the effect of recent big windfalls which have come to the Ontario Government in succession duties on such big estates as those of the late J. R. Booth, Lady Egan and others, the Premier said that it all depends on the amounts actually collected during the fiscal year. The Ontario Government budgeted for a deficit of one and a half million dollars. But I don't think it will be that," said the Premier, adding that the Government expects to do better than that."

KILLS PREACHER HOME "WRECKER"

Springfield Man Pleads "Unwritten Law" As His Defence.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press) — Rev. Edward Gillum, 50, who has been conducting evangelistic services at Sheridan, Mo., was killed last night by his brother-in-law, W. R. Leaffler, a local contractor.

Leaffler used an Indian club to kill Rev. Mr. Gillum. The "unwritten law" will be Leaffler's defense.

According to Leaffer's statement to the police, he returned home and found Rev. Gillum in the front room. According to his version, the Rev. Mr. Gillum has been trying to "wreck" his home during recent weeks. As he entered the room, he said, Rev. Mr. Gillum reached for his hip pocket. As he did Leaffler seized an Indian club and crushed his skull.

Mrs. Leaffler cororborated her husband's story.

The Customs Scandal

With the customs investigation still far from finished, the King Government already stands convicted of having co-operated with smugglers, bootleggers, dopesters and thieves, and of having thus been a party to defrauding the National Treasury, strangling legitimate business, debauching officials, high and low, thwarting the administration of justice, and bribing the electorate!

To cite but a few instances--already proven--from its appalling record of malfeasance:

1 Stolen automobiles, smuggled into Canada with the connivance of Customs officials, were sold for a pittance to friends of the King Government, and those found guilty were allowed not only to go unpunished, but to continue their nefarious trade.

2 Smuggled liquor selling was engaged in on a large scale by Customs officials whose duty it was to protect the Treasury.

3 Corrupt officials were unpunished and promoted; honest officials were punished and demoted.

4 Prison-made goods are on the prohibited list, yet tons and tons of such goods, produced in prisons where contagious diseases were prevalent among the inmates, were smuggled into Canada for sale to innocent Canadian consumers, with the direct knowledge and co-operation of Government officials.

5 Police officers—members of the incorruptible Royal Canadian Mounted—were withdrawn from the Quebec boundary line at the request of the smuggling ring. Honest traders had asked for increased police protection, but the King Government preferred to grant the request of those who were defrauding the public revenue.

6 Guilty knowledge even in 1923 of the frauds that were being practised has been proven against the King Government beyond the shadow of a doubt. Time and again, in 1924 and 1925, the Commercial Protective Association—an organization of business men—placed before Mr. King irrefutable evidences of it, that they had succeeded in tracing down at their own expense. With his Government hopelessly entangled with Canada's criminal element, Mr. King did not—dared not—take any action to remedy the appalling conditions.

7 A total revenue loss estimated at $35,000,000 per year was the result of the smuggling thus condoned by the King Government.

8 A $54,800 loss was sustained in one case alone when Mr. Cardin, Acting Minister of Customs and Excise, settled for $3,200 with a dishonest importer, who, according to Mr. Cardin's own officials, had cheated the Treasury out of duties amounting to $58,000. This deal was consummated just previous to the last election.

9 Free liquor, from Government warehouses in Montreal, was supplied in generous quantities to members of the King Government and to Government officials in Ottawa, in contravention both of the Federal Law and the Prohibition Law of Ontario.

11 The peak of this corruption, and of this interference with the Customs collection and the administration of justice, is proven by the evidence to have been reached just prior to the general election of October, 1925, when, at the written request of Liberal candidates, Ministers of the Crown called off the Royal Canadian Mounted Police because they were enforcing the law, kept convicted crooks out of jail, and sanctioned Treasury frauds as a means of securing the return of the King Government to power.

Despite the fact that with Mr. Kennedy supporting them, the Liberals had a majority on the Investigation Committee, that the Chairman Mr. Mercier was a Liberal, and that the Prosecuting Counsel Mr. Calder was a Liberal candidate in the last election, and despite the further fact that the committee sat almost daily for five months, thus affording Liberal members ample opportunity to uncover malfeasance on the part of previous ministries, not one word of proof, not one breath of suspicion, was brought against the administration of the Customs Department under the Laurier, Borden and Meighen Governments, but only against its administration under Mr. William Lyon MacKenzie King!

Has anything more disgraceful ever besmirched the pages of Canadian history? Can a proud and honourable nation, whose people fear God and eschew evil, afford to condone such dishonesty, such corruption, on the part of its leaders and public servants?

CONSERVATIVES AT INDIAN RIVER

J. F. Strickland and V. J. McElderry Support Mr. Peck.

CUSTOMS SCANDAL

E. A. Peck, the Conservative candidate, explained the issues of the day to electors at Indian River last night. He was supported by J. F. Strickland and V. J. McElderry. W. H. Borland was unanimously elected chairman for the meeting.

E. A. Peck

"The blame for this election must be attached to the people for not giving a working majority to either of the two parties," declared Mr. Peck. He expresesd the opinion that the speech from the throne made by Mackenzie King was cleverly worded in order that he might get the votes of the Progressives. He denounced the Robb budget which the Liberals claimed was a benefit to the masses of the people and which really was in his opinion a budget calculated to benefit the rich man and not the artisan or the farmer. "If they had really wanted to benefit the people they would have knocked off the sales tax which is paid by everyone irrespective of his position," he declared.

The fact that the Progressives voted with the Conservatives during the closing days of the session indicated, said Mr. Peck, that they were of the opinion that Mackenzie King knew about the mater long before any action was taken. When Mr. Meighen took over the reins of government he had the assurance of the majority of the Progressives that they would assist him in the task, said Mr. Peck, and naturally he had every reason to expect their support.

In conclusion Mr. Peck said: "The people are highest court of this country; they have an opportunity of dealing with the matter now." While he was in favor of old age pensions he felt that this matter was a matter for the provinces and not for the Dominion. If the provinces would help, he said, the Dominion Parliament would undoubtedly give its assistance.

J. F. Strickland

"There is really only one issue before the people and that is the record of the Mackenzie King Government and that record is the customs scandal," declared Mr. Strickland. Mr. King, he said, was attempting to cloud the issue by talking about the constitutional issue. "There is no constitutional issue," declared Mr. Strickland, "When Mackenzie King went to Lord Byng ... if his Government faced ... there was no escape from ... vote of censure."

The speaker outlined at some length the customs scandal, asserting that the Progressives deserted Mackenzie King as soon as the revelations were made known. "We have been fortunate in having Mr. Peck as a member and are fortunate in having him again; we are fortunate in having Mr. Duffus as the Liberal candidate, but it is not a question of Mr. Peck or Mr. Duffus—it is a question of a clean country and a clean administration to rule this country," declared the speaker.

V. J. McElderry

"It is regrettable that an election should be forced upon the people so soon after the last," said Mr. McElderry. The people were, he said, entitled to a stable government which would produce the necesasry legislation for their material well being.

The other side, he said, tell the people about the constitutional issue and the Robb budget. There was no such thing as a constitutional issue and the Robb budget. There was no such thing as a constitutional issue, he declared, the real issue being the customs scandal. "Millions of dollars had been lost to the people of this country by that department and the unfortunate thing about it was that the Mackenzie King government knew about it a long time before it acted", he declared. Decency and uprightness should be the requirements of every public man in Canada, he declared, and if the Liberals would depredate the things that have happened they might be talking sense. The speaker quoted from several editorials taken from the Globe supporting his contention that the customs scandal was one of the most bitter scandals in the history of the Dominion. It would be difficult for Mackenzie King to convince the man in the street that Canada was in danger of becoming a crown colony, said the speaker. In conclusion, said Mr. McElderry, "Mr. Peck is well known to you all; send him back to Ottawa with the Conservative party, a party that will put good steady sane legislation on the statute books."

C.K.C. RULES.

The Show Secretary shall collect listing fees of twenty-five cents (25c) from exhibitors for every dog entered at the show, unless the dog is registered in the Canadian Kennel Club Stud Book and the registered number given on the entry form. All such fees must be forwarded to the Secretary of the Canadian Kennel Club within ten days from date of closing the show. Penalty for non-compliance shall be one dollar per day.

3.—The cost of listing a dog is twenty-five cents for each show. The fee for registering a dog which is good for life is one dollar to members of the Canadian Kennel Club, and two dollars to non-members. RENEWS PLEDGE THAT HE WILL FINISH RAILROAD

Always Believed That Hudson Bay Railroad Should Be Completed.

MEIGHEN'S SPEECH.

Says Work Would Cost Somewhere Around Three Million Mark.

MELVILLE, Sask., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Premier Arthur Meighen here yesterday reviewed his pledge to complete the Hudson Bay Railway.

"I have always," he said, "in parliament and out, in the last election and in this election, taken the ground that this country should not leave that road in its present incomplete form, that we owed it to the settlers interested, to the portion of our country interested, having spent the millions we have on it, to go on and finish it and give it a fair test."

Mr. Meighen sketched the history of Hudson Bay railway construction. He referred to Mr. Mackenzie King's promise, in the last election, to complete the road if a sufficient number of Liberals were returned from Saskatchewan as being as "brazen bribery as was ever addressed to a particular section of the country."

Mr. Meighen added that completion of the road depended on how much it would cost. Various figures had been submitted, varying from three million to fifty million. He did not think either figure was correct. But if it was within the territory of three million at all, the work would be done. "If," Mr. Meighen added, "we find that it is going to take a colossal sum in the neighborhood of fifty millions, this country in its present shape just has to be patient because this country cannot afford that money at the present time. I don't care how many Liberals tell you they will spend it, they will never do it. They showed you last session they won't do it. They are only deceiving the Western people."

His object, Mr. Meighen went on, was to build the Hudson Bay Railway as economically as possible, and to give it a fair test as a new route.

Mr. Meighen declared that everywhere along the Canadian National Railway he found the "old falsehood revamped, warmed up again," that he intended to amalgamate the Canadian National Railway with the Canadian Pacific Railway. The whole idea of this fabrication, he said, was to alienate the votes of Canadian National employees by making them afraid of their positions of their seniority. "The only members of the House I ever heard speak in favor of selling the Canadian National Railways are Liberals, Mr. Meighen added.

The Prime Minister charged that the Liberal party had adopted its Ottawa tariff platform only for the purpose of fooling the three Western provinces. At the end of four years of Liberal rule, only about ten per cent of that platform had been given effect. "Why," Mr. Meighen asked. "Because," he replied to his own question, "they didn't believe in it themselves."

He predicted that if tariff instability continued and Canadian raw products continued to be shipped abroad, "This country will become nothing but a pasture ground of the United States."

TONS OF COINS.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 25.—Eighty tons of wartime coins have been sold to a Gothenburg junk dealer. The war blockade brought a shortage in copper, causing the government to mint $103,180 in small iron coins.

CAR ACCIDENT.

OMEMEE, Aug. 25.—A Chevrolet touring car driven by Mr. Ryan, of Omemee and a Ford truck owned and driven by Mr. Bert McCarroll of East Emily, came together on King street opposite Mr. Irwin's garage on Monday evening. Mr. Ryan was proceeding east and turned out to pass a standing car when Mr. McCarroll was about to enter the garage. The Chevrolet was knocked against one of the gasoline pumps and received a broken bumper and other minor injuries, while the smaller car also suffered but both were able to operate under their own power.

On Monday morning a large truck was somewhat damaged when it struck a hydro pole and proceeded to T. E. MacPherson's lawn, while trying to avoid striking a horse buggy.

Omemee and vicinity has been visited by a series of serious accident within the past two months. One of the most unfortunate of all accidents occurred on Saturday evening when Mrs. T. C. Ivory had the great misfortune to fall breaking her hip at the joint. Mrs. Ivory was helping to prepare the evening meal when in some unknown manner, she slipped on the linoleum in her kitchen with the above mentioned result. The accident is doubly distressing in view of the fact, that Mrs. Ivory has just recently recovered from a long and serious illness. The limb has been placed in a plaster of paris cut, and although suffering great pain, Mrs. Ivory's condition is more favorable today. Nurse M. Kelly is doing everything possible to alleviate the suffering of the unfortunate lady.

CHAMPIONS WIN SECOND VICTORY FROM NEW YORK

Ulster United Team Victorious in Their Only Two Games.

SOCCER MATCH.

Giants Scored in First Period But Failed in the Second.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press)—The clever Ulster United soccer team of Toronto, champions of Canada, scored their second victory in their only two starts in this country when they easily defeated the New York Giants 5 to 2 in a twilight game here last night. The Canadians beat the Brooklyn Wanderers last Sunday.

The Giants were the first to score when 15 minutes after the start Brown passed to O'Brien who easily beat Smith in goal. Ulster then brought the ball down to their opponents' territory, but both Graham and Forest shot wide of the mark. A second goal was scored by the Giants when Brown passed to Duggan who hit the upright, but on the rebound he jumped in and put the ball in the net.

Ulster started their short passing at this stage of the game and were soon rewarded when Forest, from 20 yards out, shot a beautiful goal. The half then ended.

After ends were changed, the Ulsters, known as the Redhanders, put more speed in their playing and had the Giants bewildered at times with their clever passing. Faulkner centered the ball to Turner, who headed it in, tying the score. This spurred the visitors on further and Graham, who again starred, dribbled the ball down the centre of the field, and beat both New York backs, to score his second goal, putting his team in the lead.

The Giants started a long passing game and the ball was brought up to the visitors' goal post but Brown hit the upright and Duggan shot wide.

A fourth goal was made by Ulster when Turner crossed the ball to Reynolds, the Giant full back, handladians here had all the play and Reynolds, teh Giant full back, handled the ball in the penalty area, for which a free kick was given. Graham took the kick and easily beat Geudert with a well placed shot, scoring his third goal, and the last of the game.

The visitors will play their third game in this country when they face the New Bedford team at New Bedford this evening.

AYRSHIRE MEN HOLD FIELD DAY

Many Fine Cattle Are Exhibited at H. M. Woods' Farm.

JUDGING CLASSES

Menie District Ayrshire Breeders' field day held at H. M. Woods' Ivanhoe farm, Crookston, Ont., on Tuesday, August 17, was a great success. Breeders of the red and whites and visitors gathered to the number of about 175.

The Ladies' Aid of Ivanhoe served a most splendid dinner and tea which netted them nearly $50. Mr. Woods' fine large drive house, with cement floors was cleared and three rows of tables set by the ladies.

After everybody had enjoyed a splendid dinner the president of the club, R. H. Little, Campbellford, gave a short address, commenting on the splendid success the club was experiencing and the steady, unusual demand for both pure bred and grade Ayrshires.

Mr. Caskey of Madoc represented the black and whites in a friendly and humorous way. Other speakers were Kenneth Hay, B.S.A., Ayrshire Field man, Lachute, Que.; Walter Smith, B.S.A., Brighton; Alex Hume, William Stewart, Campbellford ;F. M. Rutherford, club secretary, Bonar Law; and H. M. Wood of Ivanhoe farm, as host to breeders and visitors.

Everyone then adjourned to the large lawn where the boys and girls enjoyed various kinds of races. The judging class commenced at 2.30 and were conducted by K. Hay, Ayrshire field man, assisted by Walter Smith and Roy Atkin, Ayrshire representatives for Northumberland and Hasting counties.

The first class was a class of mature cows in milk. A rather heated discussion took place as to the placing of the first two cows, but was finally placed by Mr. Hay to the satisfaction of nearly all the Ayrshire breeders. Golden Sprightly, a fine young cow of real good type and well balanced udder, combining the bloods of Springburn Golden Beauty by Lessnissock Golden Love and the well known old Sprightly strain headed the class, second placing being Drumsue Sprightly 19th.

The two-year-old class was an exceptionally strong class of four heifers, a credit to any breeder and all sired by Springburn Golden Beauty the first and second placings being heifers fit for any show. Ivanhoe Ideal in first place is a splendid type throughout and will develop into a fine large cow. The other placings were as follows: Drumsue Beauty, Lady Jane, Ivanhoe Lady.

The senior calf classes consisted of three choice heifers, all sired by Bonnie Doon of Menie, formerly owned by F. M. Rutherford, Bonar Law, and sire of Carisbrooke. Primrose, winner of a silver cup in the two-year-old honor roll class 1925.

Mr. Wood was repeatedly commended on the splendid line up of seven heifer calves. Expert judges stated they were fit for to go to any show.

Judging from the splendid line up of young stock on Mr. Woods' farm from four-year-olds to calves. One would be safe in saying that he is in a favorable way building up one of the strongest herds in the district.

EFFORT IN LAST WINS FIFTH RACE

SIX FURLONG DASH.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press) — T. H. Burnhardt's Escarra, piloted by Jockey Hutton, made a gallant effort in the last 70 yards of the fifth race at Kenilworth track yesterday afternoon to win handily from Star Dust and Leo Lampe. The race was a six furlong dash for three-year-olds with a purse of $1,200 and was the feature of the afternoon's card. Ella M., the favorite, broke slowly and showed none of the speed she has displayed in the last two races, finishing fourth.

Two close finishes featured the day's racing, Tamea winning by a head from Colored Gal in the first and Mexican Pete nosing out Heretrix in the second, a Canadian bred event.

Two jockeys were unseated in the third when Nell Jo stumbled, throwing Jockey Crees and Jockey Brown fell when Meister bumped Nell Jo, Brown was stunned for a while and cancelled his mount in the fourth but was able to fill his engagement in the fifth.

Seventh race — Purse, $1,200, claiming, for three-year-olds and up. 1 mile and a sixteenth.

NORTH DOURO LEADS LEAGUE

SCORE IS 13-5

In one of the hardest games of softball played in the League, North Douro won the second half of the North Peterborough softball schedule by beating Warsaw 13-5. A win for either team meant the second half, and the largest crowd of the season saw the game. Both pitchers pitched a hard game. Douro's fielders supported their pitcher better. O'Brien at second handled some hot grounders. Condon, Douro's fleet-footed centre fielder, made nice catches in the field. Jory, Warsaw's snappy first baseman, hit a homer.

SEE THE VIKING SHIPS.

I suppose it is natural, but every time I bring friends to Norway, they ask, "Where can we see the Viking ships?" They seem to be as important a lure as the little Edelweis flower in Switzerland, or the room in which the little princes were murdered in the Tower of London. And why not? You cannot see Vikings or their ships today and they are as full of interest as anything else in this northern kingdom. Prof. Gustafson says, "The most noteworthy objects in Oslo are beyond all question the venerable relics from the days of the Vikings. Neither within nor beyond the frontiers of Norway can we find other vessels preserved from the period when the Norwegian Vikings set forth with their fleets and visited the coasts of Europe, Iceland, Greenland and even reached the shores of North America, which continent they were the first to discover." The vessels today are cared for by the University, the Gokstad and the Oseberg ships being the most interesting.

YOUTH DEFEATS FORMER WIELDER

FROM NEW YORK.

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press) — Julius Seligson, a youthful racquet wielder from New York created a sensation here yesterday when he eliminated Watson M. Washburn, a fromer Davis Cup star, in three bristling sets, 10-8, 3-6, 6-4.

Brian I. C. Norton of San Antonio, who gained a lap on the pack Monday, yesterday pushed on ahead with a victory over Lionel Ogden of Leland Stanford, while Manuel Alonzo of Spain joined him in the quarter finals by completing two matches, the last of a vigorous duel in which he accomplished the elimination of Malcolm T. Hill.

A number of cases of tire trouble so delayed the Firemen, champions of the Peterborough Softball League, on their way to Kingston yesterday that they did not arrive in the Limestone City until after 7.00 o'clock. CARDINALS TIED WITH CINCINNATI IN LEAGUE CHASE

SPLITS DOUBLE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press)—Pittsburgh returned to the top of the National League yesterday by subduing Brooklyn, 10 to 1, while St. Louis was splitting a doubleheader with Boston, 1 to 2 and 6 to 5. The Cardinals are now tied for second place with the Cincinnati Reds.

Cincinnati beat the New York Giants, 4 to 3, principally through timely hitting. Luque allowed nine hits while Scott gave only six.

Heavy hitting by the Chicago Cubs enabled them to take Philadelphia into camp twice by the scores of 9 to 4 and 9 to 0, respectively. The Cub pitchers were in fine form Root allowing six hits in the initial contest and Blake allowing but seven in the second game. Hack Wilson bagged his 19th home run of the season in the second game. Hartnett knocked the ball over the wall twice in the last game.

RURAL VOTERS HEAR LIBERALS

J. J. Duffus and J. A. Dewart Speak at Nogies' Creek.

ISSUES DISCUSSED

The electors living in and around Nogie's Creek who were visited by Conservative speakers last week, heard the case for the Liberals presented last night in the School house by the Liberal candidate, Joseph J. Duffus, assisted by Captain Jack Dewart, M.C.

The Schoolhouse was well filled when Cecil Crowe, elected by the audience, took the chair, and called on Mr. Dewart to address the meeting.

Referring to the campaign preceding the election of last year, Mr. Dewart declared a group of Montreal capitalists, working through some of the newspapers, raised a whisper of death, proclaiming to the world that Canada was dying a natural death, that factories were closing and people were leaving the country.

Mr. Dewart admitted that an exodus to the States set in during the depression of 1921, but he claimed numerous Canadians were returning, attracted by the fact that their own country was prospering and forging ahead. In 1921 after Sir Robert Borden had resigned and Mr. Meighen had become Premier, trade in Canada languished, prices dropped and things were in as bad a state as they had ever been. No one blamed Mr. Meighen for this. The point was, however, that Mr. Meighen, who was now proclaiming that all Canada's ills could be rectified by a tariff and protection of industries did absolutely nothing when he was Premier in a time of depression to alter the tariff and bring about the changes which, he said, would follow this step.

Basic Industries

Mr. King, on taking office in 1921, stated his intention of aiding the great basic industries: farming, mining, lumbering and fishing, on which the whole national life and prosperity rested. By lowering the duties and reducing the cost of implements and equipment needed in these industries, a lessening of the costs of their products was effected; and the beneficial results permeated the whole fabric of the nation. Mr. Dewart concluded his speech by paying a fine tribute to the candidate, Mr. Duffus.

J. J. Duffus

Mr. Duffus, in a speech that dealt with all the outstanding political questions of the day, lauded Mackenzie King for the passing of the Robb Budget and other legislation which, Mr. Duffus claimed, was of great value to the country and was passed in the face of strenuous opposition by Mr. Meighen and his Conservative friends.

When the C.P.R. line was built across the country from ocean to ocean, the people of Canada assisted the project by guaranteeing the railway bonds. Before this was done, the matter was discussed in Parliament, and the government of the day went to the country on the issue. Similarly, when the Grand Trunk line was built, the Liberals asked the people to assist, and the voters were consulted.

Who took over the C.N.R.? asked Mr. Duffus. Were the people consulted about this undertaking? The lines were taken over by Sir Robert Borden and Mr. Meighen, who did not consult the people. He was not blaming them for doing so. It might have been good business. It had proved to be good business since the Liberals assumed the responsibility for the administration of the railways. But, under the Tories, the C.N.R. had been the means of losing between sixty and seventy millions of dollars per year of the people's money. When Mr. King came into power, he scoured North America and Great Britain for a capable railway executive and eventually secured Sir Henry Thornton from England, in the face of bitter opposition from the Conservatives, who objected to bringing a man from outside the Dominion to manage the railways. By careful, steady management and economy from year to year, the railways had gradually forged ahead. Last year, there was an operating surplus and the prospects for the present year were that the railways would not only pay operating expenses, but also the interest on the investment, this ceasing to become a liability on the people of Canada.

Two Old Men

Considerable Conservative criticism followed the appointment by the Liberal of a man of seventy years of age to the Railway Board. Mr. Meighen waxed very indignant over this appointment. "The man was too old to learn anything," he said, in one of his speeches, 'so they put him to learn railroading at 75 years of age." This same Mr. Meighen had filled most of his Cabinet posts, and had appointed as his Minister of Railways and Canals a man who would be eighty-one years young on his next birthday!

Mr. Duffus closed his address with an appeal for the return of the Liberals who would give stable government.

Cheers for the King and for the candidate closed the meeting.

TOURISTS WIN FROM SOMERSET BY SCORE OF 56

Losers Advance Within Sight of Goal in Second Inning Rally.

NARROW ESCAPE.

TAUNTON, Eng., August 25. — (Canadian Press). — The touring Australian cricketers had a narrow escape yesterday when, in a magnificent second innings rally, Somerset carried their score to a point where victory was in sight, but over-eagerness on the part of their batsmen defeated their hopes and the game resulted in a win for the Antipodeans by a score of 56 runs.

The encounter was attended by considerable excitement, particularly in the closing stages, and the batsmanship of M. D. Lyon, Somerset's wicket-keeper, was one of its outstanding features. To Lyon went the credit of driving out the second century registered against the Australians in their county games. The first time this feat was accomplished was in the first week of June at Lord's, when G. T. S. Stevens scored 149 for Middlesex. Lyon's figure yesterday was 136.

Second innings—Australians, 197 for three wickets.

H. L. Collins, the Australian captain, and J. S. Ryder were at bat. The visitors declared their innings closed when Collins had been caught by Longrigg off Bridges at 60, the total standing at 229 with four wickets down. Faced with the task of securing 302 runs and with three hours and forty minutes of playing time left, Somerset settled down to the game. Their start was disastrous, for Young was caught in the slips when he had just broken his duck-egg. However, J. W. C. MacBryan and Lyon staged a profitable partnership until MacBryan was retired by Ellis behind the wicket, and J. C. White having sojourned briefly, Lyon and J. Daniell, Somerset's captain, paired well. Longrigg succeeded Daniell and Leach followed Longrigg, bringing F. G. Earle in to play with Lyon. The score mounted slowly but surely, with Lyon hitting all-comers. At one time he drove one into the pavilion for a six.

Fifty minutes to go, Somerset required 100 to win, and this fact imbued the batsmen with a spirit of over-eagerness. They forced the play, but the result eventually brought disaster, and their high hopes were shattered when Lyon was caught at the boundary after driving out 21 fours.

Rochester and Baltimore split a double header, the Orioles winning the first 6 to 3 and losing the nightcap 3 to 0. Lefty Thomas held the Bird to three hits in this contest.

OSHAWA WINS SOFTBALL GAME

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25. — Oshawa General Motors defeated Campbellford Cloth Company here yesterday in a first round Ontario Softball Association Game 14 to 0.

Bigger pitching for Oshawa, was master of the situation at all times, and his team mates gave him good support. Palmer Fair and Cooper, playing brilliantly in the infield, and Timmins pulling off sensational catches in the centrefield. The mill boys were able to connect safely only three times. Cowell tripled over Timmins' head to start the fifth, but he got no farther when Gay and Parsons whiffed and McArthur fouled to the catcher.

Blakely singled with two down in the sixth and Ayrhart popped to the pitcher. They reached second on his looper over first in the eighth. Again with two down, and Storie fouled to the catcher, Ayrhart and Cowell both walked in the ninth, but Guy's best effort was right at Bigger, and the game was over.

Campbellford fans were disappointed in the showing of the Mill Team. They appeared nervous, both in the field and at bat, and Storie didn't pitch half as good a game as he has turned in on other occasions. He seemed to lack his usual steam, and the Oshawa gang slammed his offerings all over the lot.

While the local fans were expecting a victory for the Motor city, they turned out in large numbers, and gave the Mill boys every encouragement in their efforts to turn back the invaders.

The return game will be played in Oshawa on Thursday.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By BILLY EVANS

Does the pitcher receive credit for a strikeout if the batsman reaches first base on a third strike that is a wild pitch?

* * *

Despite the fact that the batsman runs on what is a third strike, the pitcher does not receive credit for a strikeout.

Instead, the pitcher is charged with an error for having made a wild pitch for the third strike. The wild pitch is considered responsible for the batsman reaching first.

Therefore, the pitcher should be penalized instead of rewarded, so he is charged with an error and not given credit for a strikeout.

On the other hand, if the catcher drops the third strike or has a passed ball that enables the batsman to reach first, the catcher gets an error and the pitcher is credited with a strikeout.

KING PROMISES MANY REFORMS TO MARITIMES

Says Two Commissions Will Report, Giving Expert Advice.

RECIPROCITY LOSS.

Great Natural Market Closed To East, He Tells Woodstock Audience.

WOODSTOCK, N.B., Aug. 25 Far reaching measures of reform, affecting those provinces, backed by expert opinion, were predicted by the Hon. Mackenzie King at the first meeting in the Maritimes here last night. The Liberal leader was referring to the two commissions now considering Maritime problems. To the railway commission, the last government has assigned the task of revising freight rates, and special instructions had been given to consider the claims of the Maritime Provinces in respect to the Intercolonial Railway. The commission on Maritime rights had also been appointed by the Liberals. When these two concluded their work, measures of reform might be expected.

"Had reciprocity carried, I venture to say that you would not have any Maritime rights problem at the present time," said Mr. King. "There is a great natural market at your own door which you would have today but for the old false Tory cry of disloyalty and annexation." This had worked to the great detriment of the country at large, but no part had suffered more than the Maritime Provinces.

A great deputation had come to Ottawa from the Maritime Provinces asking that only imported goods entering by Canadian ports be given the advantage of British preference. The government had made this resolution in the last Budget brought down. The Railway Commission had been instructed to give its consideration to the problem of the shipment of Canadian goods over Canadian lines and through Canadian ports. The last government also wanted the commission to take full cognizance of the obligations undertaken by the provinces which entered upon Confederation.

LADY LIBERALS HOLD MEETING

Organization For Election Campaign Is Now Almost Complete.

SOME ADDRESSES.

Last night at Duffus' garage an organization meeting of the Liberal Women's Organization was held, which was a large and enthusiastic gathering, and was addressed by the Hon. G. N. Gordon and Joseph Wearing.

Nearly all the convenors of the committees in the last election were present, and a large number of new workers were on hand.

A meeting of the sub-division committees will take place at once, and a thorough and complete organization is established.

From the large number of new workers present, Mr. Duffus' organization looks as if it would be completed at a very early date.

RUGBY MEETING TO-NIGHT

Organization Meeting For Coming Season To Be Held at Y.M.C.A.

When the Rugby meeting gets under way to-night, there will be a great many suggestions offered with regard to a city league and intermediate and junior entries in the O.R.F.U. Though all this may sound ambitious for Rugby in Peterboro, yet all these things are possible if only a large and enthusiastic crowd of boosters of the fall game will only come to the meeting determined to put the game over.

They will be called upon to elect officers for the season, and in this it might be remembered that it isn't always the "best fellows" that are the best workers. A good working group of officers last year consisted of the following:

Hon. President—Dr. E. H. Wood.
Hon. Vice-President—Dr. A. W. McPherson.
President—F. Hills.
Secretary-Treasurer—R. D. Mulholland.
Executive—R. L. Dobbin, J. Dainard, M. R. Sloan, D. A. Loomis and C. G. Graham.
Coach—M. R. Sloan.

So don't forget you are expected to come along to-night and show your love for the game by boosting. Be there with your suggestions and your support, elect a good working slate of officers, and then go out and boost the game.

FRANK WHITEHOUSE SHUT OUT LEADERS

Peterboro' Boy Blanks Bay City and Gets Three Hits.

Frank Whitehouse is still pitching great ball for Grand Rapids. In a game at Bay City the other day, Frankie shut out the league leaders, 4 to 0, and in addition checked in with three useful hits himself. A Bay City paper, in its report of the game, says:

"Yesterday afternoon, 'Lefty' Whitehouse held the Wolves in complete submission through his ability to reduce the potency of their batting. He allowed eight singles, some of which were scratchy and kept scoring chance at a minimum. Whitehouse enjoyed a faculty of making the homesters hit into the air. Fourteen were retired in that manner."

WOMAN IN DOUBT SHOOTS HERSELF

Leaves Note For Mother Explaining Her Weariness With Life.

NEW YORK, N. Y., August 25. — United Press. — Her soul torn by disbelief in the Bible and lack of faith in God, her mind a temporary tempest of doubt, Mrs. Ethel Sweet, 23, mother of a two year old daughter, deliberately killed herself Tuesday, after writing a note to her mother, believed to be in Pawtucket, R.I., in which she explained her weariness with life, the woman pressed the muzzle of a revolver to her right temple and pulled the trigger.

Death was instantaneous, the doctors said. The police, as a matter of duty, are trying to get in touch with Mrs. Sweet's parents. They are also endeavoring to ascertain where she got the revolver.

THOUSANDS VIEW VALENTINO'S BODY

Corpse of Screen Star Will Lie in State Till Sunday Night.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The amazing interest which uncounted thousands have shown in Rudolph Valentino led his manager, S. George Ullman, to extend today the time in which the screen actor's body will lie in state to midnight on Sunday.

Today nearly 200 policemen were generalling the seemingly endless line of mourners and were hurrying them at a rate of 80 a minute through the gold room of the funeral church where the body reposes. There was no disorder, the crowds moving in orderly fashion.

Tentative plans for the funeral, set for Monday morning, were announced. Following the hearse 500 automobiles will form a cortege bearing theatrical people and friends of the screen star. The procession will go to St. Malachi's Church, where high requiem mass wil be celebrated.

PRAYER IN DISPUTES.

Trade Union Official Urges Use of Prayer During Industrial Troubles.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—An appeal to workers to have recourse to prayer in the matter of industrial conflicts, was made in an address here by William E. Card, a trade union official from England.

Mr. Card is visiting all the large centres of industry in the Dominion and addressing gatherings on the necessity of prayer in all industrial disputes. The workers, he maintains, must take their place in the train of Jesus Christ, as captives, before He can do anything with them.

FRUITLESS TRIP.

Yesterday the Firemen's softball team travelled to Kingston to play their return game with the Frontenacs, the winners of that section, but after twelve hours on the road, being held up with punctures, the team arrived too late to play the game outside and the armories was not available for the game to be played inside. The game is expected to be played next Monday in Kingston, and if not played it will go to Kingston by default, making necessary a third game.

After an all night's trip over the rough roads from Stirling here, the team arrived in this city about 5.30 this morning, having spent over 22 hours on the trip.

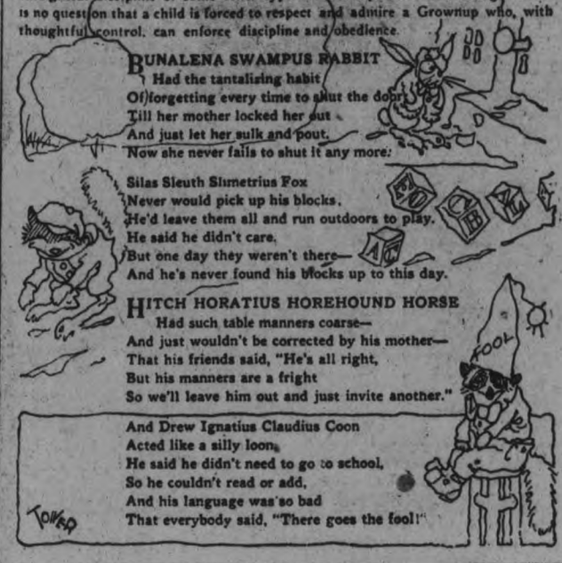
Four-Footed Foibles

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

WHEN a child has been naughty or irritating, the path of least resistance is to spank him. A dear woman I know says that there isn't one spanking in a hundred but is given when the Grownup is angry or out of patience. It's a great relief to the Grownup, but has a questionable effect upon the child. I haven't reached the stage of education myself when I'm convinced that a spanking is never necessary. In fact I've seen cases when I've felt that a good old-fashioned spanking would be a downright blessing to the neighborhood—but I do know that thoughtful discipline of some other type is more impressive and lasting. There is no question that a child is forced to respect and admire a Grownup who, with thoughtful control, can enforce discipline and obedience.



EUNALENA SWAMPUS RABBIT
Had the tantalising habit
Of forgetting every time to shut the door
Till her mother locked her out
And just let her sulk and pout.
Now she never fails to shut it any more.

Silas Sleuth Simetrius Fox
Never would pick up his blocks.
He'd leave them all and run outdoors to play.
He said he didn't care.
But one day they weren't there—
And he's never found his blocks up to this day.

HITCH HORATIUS HOREHOUND HORSE
Had such table manners coarse—
And just wouldn't be corrected by his mother—
That his friends said, "He's all right,
But his manners are a fright
So we'll leave him out and just invite another."

And Drew Ignatius Claudius Coon
Acted like a silly loon.
He said he didn't need to go to school,
So he couldn't read or add,
And his language was so bad
That everybody said, "There goes the fool!"

TOWER

FISH AND NETS LOST IN STORM

Great Loss Sustained By Fishermen of Great Lakes.

CATCH DROPS.

TORONTO, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Fishermen along the shore of Lake Ontario suffered a serious loss, both in fish and nets, during the recent storm. In three days fishermen were unable to save a single good fish out of all the nets they brought up as the storm had pounded them about. Half of the nets, valued at $300 to the mile, have not been recovered along shore.

Torn nets and lost fish are also reported from the Georgian Bay fishing grounds, and from other points in the province. It is stated that at Killarney opposite Manitoulin Island, a considerable loss was sustained in the loss of the large pond nets of the fishermen. Dealers here report that the supply of fish reaching here had dropped by 60 per cent since the first of the big storms of the week-end.

MURDERER HANGED.

Dan Prociev Pays Penalty For Slaying Common Law Wife.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Attended by a priest of the Ukrainian Church, Dan Prociev, who murdered his common law wife, Annie Cardno, in their little cottage in the north end of the city early last spring, today walked quietly to the gallows and paid the penalty for the crime.

In thep resent of court officials, police, newspapermen, and witnesses the condemned man was hanged by Arthur Ellis, and at 7.45 a.m. was pronounced dead by the coroner's physician.

INSINCERITY HINDERS.

Is Great Drawback To Success of Missionary Work in China.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., August 25 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Dr. Kilborn, a medical missionary from Shentu, China, said in an address here that the great hindrance to successful mission work in China is insincerity. The natives are quick to criticize. They are unwilling to listen to those who fail to live up to their religious professions or who try to make their views of religion subservient to commercialism. In opening her address Dr. Kilborn said few people had any distinct idea of the conditions under which Christian mission work is carried on in China. She described it as a country larger than Canada or the United States, with inferior railway and steamboat service and supporting a population of 400,000,000.

ONE DAY AT AARHUS.

Having ordered a carriage the day before by telephone I proceeded to Agri and thence over Mols Bjerge, enjoying every moment the landscapes where the numerous heather covered hills are crowned by scores and scores of barrows, the last resting place of the Vikings. Soon we arrived at Femmoller, the Five Watermills, with its good hotel. Thence to Kalo and a visit to the old castle on the peninsula. In this old royal castle Gustavus Vasa of Sweden was once a prisoner. From Vissenbjerg we drove to the famous castle of Rosenholm, the ancient home of the Rosenkrantz family, and after asking permission, were allowed to see some of its fine interiors. From Hornslet station near by, I got the evening train back to Aarhus, quietly brimming over with the calm of the passing countryside and the thoughts of the past which ruined castles and ancient burial mounds, wash as evening tides into the mind.

PROTECTION FOR MINE WORKERS

Police Only Will Be Used, However, Where Men Are Working.

NO OTHER FORCES.

LONDON, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—Discussing the drafting of police into the coal areas in the Midlands in order to give protection to the men returning to work, officials of the Home Office stated today that it is the determination of the Home Secretary to give the utmost protection to those willing to resume operations in the pits. There is no question, however, of employment of any other forces than police.

PRIESTS OPPOSED TO LAWS BARRED

Will Not Be Permitted To Resume Services in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 25 (Canadian Press).—The newspapers today publish statements attributed to official circles to the effect that the Government has decided that whenever Roman Catholic priests attempt to resume church services the Government will refuse permission to do so to each priest who is known to be opposed to the government and the religious laws.

The gloom in business circles is increasing. Reports from some sections of the country indicate that the slump in business, allegedly due to the economic boycott, is acute. Even in Mexico City decreases in the sales of commodities, except those considered absolute necessities, are being noticed more and more in many lines of business.

Meanwhile the episcopate, with the assistance of some of the best legal minds, is working upon a memorial to be presented to the new Congress which convenes September 1st.

HUGE PARACHUTE SUPPORTS PLANE

Pilot Shuts Off Engine and Floats Down 2,500 Feet in Safety.

ENGLEWOOD, Calif., Aug. 25.—(United News.)— A new era for safety for airplanes was hailed by aviation experts following a successful experiment here Tuesday with a parachute device invented by Harry D. Doucett of the United States' Navy.

A navy plane and its pilot, R. C. Oelse, were landed gracefully after Oelse had shut off his motor and abandoned all controls while flying at a height of 2,500 feet.

The pilot merely pulled an emergency lever which released a large parachute folded carefully on the top of the plane. As the plane fell the parachute opened, checking the plane's descent and allowing it to settle to earth so gently that the only part damaged was the propeller.

Previous tests had been made with weights of 1,500 pounds but this was the first time the device had been used on a regularly manned airplane.

Daily Short Story

LAID IN LAVENDER

By MARTHA McCULLOCH-WILLIAMS

Marina Woolet was climbing, not to seek her fortune, but to see it, her head high held, her heels tapping defiance upon the rather craggy stairs. Three broad flights, weaving back and forth the long hall which, despite its plundering, attested that in the happy Long Ago, Wooleton had ranked with the best houses of the countryside.

The third stair-head opened into what had been the ball-room, now known contemptuously as the garret. Windowed at each end, it was too airy to be musty, though dust grated under foot, lying thick upon a fine oaken floor which had oddly escaped the general despoiling. The current Woolet, a mild, guileless person, had been tempted by oil stock into mortgage ruin—and had escaped it solely through virtue of the antique craze, which had made walnut wainscoat, richly carved doors and mantels, marvellous walnut floors, and hand-rails cut from single trunks a hundred years back, worth money enough to pay the debt, provide substitutes of machine-wrought deals, and even mend the roof.

So Marina should have been grateful to the enterprising contractor, instead of loathing him wholeheartedly. She had excuse enough—in four mighty unhappy years, because of a step-mother so deadly pious she was quite insufferable. Worse yet—she had given her meek husband twin sons—to inherit the land, under entail, should it remain heritable. Hence Marina's portion was her legacy from Granny—her father's grandmother, who, at rising ninety, had died of heartbreak over the old house's despoiling.

She had willed to Marina, her namesake, sundry wooden chests, a cowhide trunk, a handbox, along with a wooden box, stoutly nailed, yet giving forth fragrance, faint, subtle, tantalizing. Step-mother had been wild to see inside everything—Marina wouldn't have it—not a key should turn, not a lid lift, until she was good and ready. That happened to be this bright June morning, when she knew the family was headed for Aunt Sooky-Car'lines to stay until moon-up.

Flinging back the dust-cover from the huddle of cubes beneath, she fell upon the bandbox with trembling fingers—and shortly drew from it a bonnet of rich pink velvet, its flaring scoop-brim wreathed with a magnificent white plume.

Merely the beginning this. The smaller chest, the cowhide trunk most of all the nailed-up casket gave out such marvels Marina stood dazed. Frocks, of satin, velvet, lace, true Canton crepe, India muslin, linen cambric, genuine chintz, their shaping running the gamut from Colonial days to the florid lavishness of the fifties—hereafter war brought the cruel end. A big double scarlet crape shawl with roses all around it and half yard fringe, a cloth pelisse, lined with swan's down, and at the bottom a jewel case filled not with pearls and diamonds, but corals, red, pink and white, yards on yards of heavy gold chain, filigree necklaces and bandeaux, cameos, set and unset.

Stockings—a bagful, many home-knit, even in silk, shoes as various, undergarments miracles of fine sewing, yet so simple they made Marina smile. But she fell for the stays of white satin brocade. Impetuously she tried them—next she endued herself with a frilly petticoat, a sweeping velvet frock, put her feet in scarlet slippers, flung the scarlet shawl over her shoulders, and crowned herself with the plumed pink bonnet.

Then—to see herself was imperative—there was still a pier glass that had cracked in the effort to move it—she raced downstairs to it, had just surveyed herself fully in it, when, without knocking, the door opened, and a man's voice cried: "Good Lord! Are your flesh and blood—or just a vision?"

It was Clem Dabney's voice—he had supervised all those heart-breaking removals—wherefore unreasonably Marina had so hated him, she hardly looked at him as she asked loftily: "Are you on another plunder-hunt? If you are—run along."

"Shan't! That's just my business," Clem said. "Listen, Maina!"

"Miss Woolet, please!"

He shook his head at her violently, running on: 'I came for pleasure, profit, and to ease my conscience—ever since that cruel stripping, I've been haunted by—you—and Granny. I've wanted so to make up for it—a little. Now I've got a chance. Here's the case—a manager who knows my firm, is risking thousands on a period play—he has given me carte blanche—so I came on the chance of finding here some things you'd spare us. Tell me, truly—are there any more where these came from?"

"Part of a car-load—come and see them," Marian said, shrugging as she led him up the stairs. Her knees trembled—she was nearly voiceless. Not a thread would she sell him—if only she didn't so yearn to get away. It was Clem who drove the hard bargains that gave her five thousand dollars, for less than half her heritage.

But oddly enough some months later when wedding presents were in order, one of the costliest received by Mrs. Clem Dabney, born Woolet, came from Hilliard, the theatre man. It was a string of pearls—not long but perfect—and with them a note said: "We owe you much more than this, for your splendid help to us in showing these new times the real splendor of Olden Days."

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

DENNY AS PENNILESS MILLIONAIRE BRINGS LAUGHS AT CAPITOL

What young man has never dreamed of returning to the old home town in a limousine and a fortune at his command, to be welcomed by the cheering villagers?

It is doubtful if any enthusiastic youth ever set forth to wrest wealth and fame from the universe without the mental reservation that he would return and show the home folks they had not appreciated his exceptional talents.

This distinctly human trait provides the basis for the plot of "Rolling Home," William A. Seiter's latest Universal production starring Reginald Denny, which comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow.

Denny plays the role of the ambitious wanderer who strays from "Lower Falls" to conquer the world and shame the Rockefellers and Morgans with his business sagacity and financial wizardry.

Like most young men who had hopes but few plans, he discovers that the world is somewhat reluctant to turn over its riches to him without something in return, and the events which follow his departure from home, with his subsequent return, provides excellent comedy of the usual Denny-Seiter quality.

Supporting the star in "Rolling Home" is an unusually large cast, including Marion Nixon, E. J. Ratcliffe, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Margaret Seddon, George Nicholls, George Marion, Anton Vaverka and others.

Rex Taylor adapted "Rolling Home" to the screen from the play by John Hunter Booth, and the continuity was written by William A. Seiter and John McDermott.

BABY ACROBAT GETS APPLAUSE BUT NO HELP

When Mr. and Mrs. H. Ogata of Seattle parked their flivver sedan downtown they left their baby inside and locked the doors.

Another car nudged the flivver. The baby, who had been climbing over the seats, slipped and fell, hanging by its heels, head downward. With true Oriental stoicism, the bay said nothing with great rapidity.

Persons looked in, figured it was a Japaneses custom to hang babies that way and passed along. Finally a policeman from the Oriental beat said he'd never seen 'em do that down in his territory. Then everybody had a council of war. Finally the cop broke the glass and rescued the baby.

The policeman wound it up by accusing the baby of parking too close to a fire hydrant.

SEEK REINDEER.

United States' Firm Wishes To Buy Twelve in Canada.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 25.—(Canadian Press). — The United States is ready to absorb another Canadian product—if it can be obtained.

The United Santa Claus is responsible, presumably.

The demand is for Canadian reindeer—thoroughly domesticated.

The Thatcher Cook Enterprises of Chicago have written to the Winnipeg Board of Trade, asking if they can be "put in touch" with some source from which they may obtain twelve Canadian reindeer.

"Who said Stefansson didn't know what he was talking about?" said the Board of Trade official as he tabled the correspondence and marked it: "Refer to H.B.C." (Hudson Bay Company).

WOMEN PAY TRIBUTE.

Bring Gifts of Jewelry To Wife of Lieutenant-Governor.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 25. — (Canadian Press)—Manitoba women in tribute to Lady Aikins, for eight years hostess at Government House, recently presented her with a diamond string, a platinum watch and an appropriate address, bearing the names of the donors. The presentation was an informal affair.

The gifts came not only from Winnipeg women, but from the women of the province generally. The thousands of names in the volume testify to the universality and spontaneity of the gifts.

"Dear Lady Aikins.—The women whose names are on these pages wish you to know the appreciation of your service in Government House and their affection for you in your own life, lived there is so high a dignity and beauty.

"Your active sympathy, your habit of equal graciousness and kindness, have touched many a woman to the finer and nobler issues of life.

"As your influence has ever been for what is true and lovely and of good report, we ask your acceptance of our gifts in remembrance of your loving service and our most sincere appreciation."

CANADA TO KEEP ANCIENT VOLUME

Will Give Photostatic Copies To United States For Archives.

TAKEN FROM DETROIT.

DETROIT, Aug. 25.—The Canadian Government, through Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washington, has informed officials of Wayne County, Michigan, that photostatic copies of a certain volume of land records required to make Wayne County records complete have been prepared and are now en route to this city. The original book now reposes in the archives at Ottawa.

The volume in question is known as Book D. With Books A, B and C, it constituted the colonial records at the time Fort Detroit was captured by the Americans under Gen. Anthony Wayne. The first three books were taken by the British to Quebec, whence they were returned at request of Congress. Book D was carried away by one Monforton and in recent years it turned up in the collection of Charles Labadie of Windsor. Labadie bequeathed it to the Canadian Government, with which it will remain.

The matter was first laid before the State Department, which appealed to the British Embassy. A copy of the reply of Sir Esme Howard was attached to the letter received yesterday. It reads in part as follows: "The volume to which reference is doubtless made is not a volume of the Registry of Deeds for Wayne County, but the repertoire of a Canadian notary public, N. P. Monforton. A large part of the volume refers to transactions in what is now Canadian territory. Many of the families mentioned in the volume have descendants at present living in Canada. It is believed in the light of these facts that the Registrar of Deeds of Wayne County will agree that the volume should remain in the possession of the Dominion archives, but the archivist has had pleasure in preparing a photostatic copy in two volumes, which are enclosed herewith, for presentation, through your kind intermediary, to the Registrar of Deeds."

WHERE GLADIATORS FOUGHT IN ENGLAND.

While at Newport in the west of England recently, I took occasion to run out the three miles to the site of ancient Caerlon, one of the most intersting Roman sites in Great Britain. Here is the largest amphitheatre in the kingdom, where in Caesar's days gladiators fought and according to tradition, Christian martyrs were put to death. I remembered that Tennyson once wandered here before he wrote "The Marriage of Geraint," and gave the place fresh fame as the seat of the Court of King Arthur.

Modern England has almost begun to encroach on the old site, but arrangements are now made to further excavate and preserve the place for all time and it looks as though England will have in Caerlon, a Roman citadel to look at and not imagine as at York and Chester, where the past is almost all buried beneath houses and street-car lines. Except for the sight of a few ancient buttresses, Caerlon is but a hilly meadow, but I hope to live to walk within or seat myself in its amphitheatre, when tourists will seek it out as they do Stonehenge to-day.

MISSES OLD HOME.

CHEYENNE, Aug. 25.—Governor Nellie Ross has lived in the executive mansion for three years, two while her husband was governor, one as his elected successor, but she says "it's not like home." Her own little home where she raised her children she misses most, she says.

Brazilian Traction Active Smelters Eased Few Points

TORONTO, August 25 (Canadian Press).—After a weak and dragg) opening, Brazilian Traction strength ened in later trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day and closed one-quarter higher at 118 1-8, its turnover being in excess of 3,000 shares. It was an active leader in a market which was confined to a rather narrow list, and in which prices were irregular.

Consolidated Smelters, in light trading, eased 2½ points to 236¼, while International Nickel weakened one point to 36. Canners Preferred lost ½ to 68, but F. N. Burt Common gained the same amount to 58. British American Oil declined three-quarters to 57½. Imperial was unchanged at 36½, and International Petrol firmed one-eighth to 34. The papers were weaker, Abitibi easing one-half to 87¼, and Brompton three-quarters to 33 3-4. Nipissing gained 15 cents to 5.85, and Bank of Commerce two points to 223.

Nipissing Makes Advance Gold Stocks Decline

TORONTO, August 25 (Canadian Press).—Nipissing's advance of 45 cents per share to 6.10 featured a very active session of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day.

Slight declines were registered on a number of gold stocks, including Dome ten cents to 11.15, Gold Hill three to 61, Hollinger ten to 12.40, Teck Hughes six to 4.64, Tough Oakes 3½ to 50, Vipond four to 1.92, Barry Holly one to 67, Premier five to 2.30, and Wright Hargreaves one to 8.69. Gains were made by Argo 2½ to 30, West Dome one-half to 22½, Gold Allon ½ to 34½, Kirkland Hunt 1½ to 15; McIntyre was unchanged at 26.50, and Lake Shore was up one to 14.50. In the silvers, Mining Corporation was off nine cents to 3.85, Keeley three to 1.72; while Coniagas scored an advance of 25 cents to 4.50, and Capitol 2 3-4 to 39 3-4. Noranda eased 15 cents to 19.30, and Coniaurum firmed ten to 3.60.

Speculators For Decline Control Price Movement

NEW WORK, Aug. 25. Canadian Press. — Speculators for decline continued in control of price movement in to-day's stock market, despite occasional attempts to rally list by biding up selected rails and specialties.

Marking up of the call money rate to five point following the calling of about $20,000,000,000 in loans, and fears of an early increase in the rediscounts rates of the Boston and Philadelphia reserve banks, influeced the selling movement. U. S. Common broke below 147 to a new low on the current movement.

Rails offered stubborn resistance to pressure. Buying centred largely in the northwestern issues, some of which give promise of special dividend developments before the end of the year.

Selling pressure against the industrials converged largely on such issues as American Smelting, Case threshing, Dupont, U. S. cast iron pipe, and Woolworth ,all of which had shown substantial recovery from the low levels established last March. Cuba company broke three points to a new low level for the year. On the other hand, bullish demonstrations were resumed in Warner Bros. Pictures A., which jumped over 5 points to a new record high price. U. S. Rubber also received strong buying support.

Wheat Price Stronger Europe Continues To Buy

CHICAGO, Ills., Aug. 25. Canadian Press. — Wheat prices developed considerable firmness to-day. After a hesitating start reports that continental European countries were buying at Liverpool tended to encourage a speculative demand for wheat here. Opening unchanged to 3-8 off. The Chicago wheat market sagged a trifle more and then rose all around to above yesterday's finish. Corn and oats were easy, corn starting at 1-4 lower to 1-4 up and subsequently showing a moderate set back. Provisions had an upward slant.

"Hungry mouths in Europe must be fed," was slogan today of bull leaders in the wheat pit. Trade was invited to recognize that world conditions indicated the course to pursue would be to absorb the prospective hedging pressure in the wheat market and then rely on a likelihood of satisfactory future profits as a result of 200,000,000 bushels estimated crop shortage in Europe compared with last year.

On the other hand, better weather in the Northwest was reported today as having improved the harvest outlook.

The Y.W.C.A. Outdoor Club enjoyed a jolly hike and corn roast last evening. The club is very popular and the girls thoroughly enjoy the weekly outdoor supper. The prize for the best original camp fire song was won by Miss Rose LaRoque.

MOTORIST HOBO

Bricklayer By Trade, He Works Only When Dead Broke.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 25. — (Canadian Press).—"I call myself the trans-continental hobo; there's just me, my dog and the car, and I have been travelling over the continent for the past twenty years," said C. K. Crawford, who stopped at one of Winnipeg's tourist camps recently, on one of his periodic visits to Manitoba. Mr. Crawford's car carries a Louisiana license plate.

The peripatetic southerner, who is a bricklayer by trade, claims to have worked on building construction in every state of the union. He declared that work did not interest him, however, until he was nearly "broke." He said he preferred travelling.

His last jaunt began in New Orleans. From there he went to Quebec City, then back to Jacksonville, Fla., along the old Spanish Trail to Hughson, Texas, across the state to Shreveport, La., up to Yellowstone National Park, then to Billings, Mont., and along the Custer Battlefield Highway to Newton, Ia., and from there to Winnipeg.

Mr. Crawford had a good word for the Canadian police forces. In the cities of the Dominion he had visited, he had been treated with the utmost courtesy.

"You get a civil answer up here, not a grunt and a motion to move on," he said.

SOME ODD NAMES.

EDMONTON, Alta., August 25.—(Canadian Press).—"What's in a name?" asked Walter Ronahan, an official of the local forestry office, after perusing the pay roll of the men who have been engaged in fighting the forest fires in this district.

How would you like to go through life staggering under the weight of a name like Peter Big Legs?" he asked one of the reporters. This was the name by which one of the popular Cree braves was known, he explained.

The tribe, it was shown, favored "Peters" for Christian names, but displays a great deal more originality when it comes to surnames, for another on the list was Peter Two Trees. There were also such names as Bluesky, Roll-in-the-Mud, and Mary-Many-Young-Men.

The officials confessed that it took a long time to pay off these tribesmen for they insist on being correctly addressed by their flourishing surnames.

IN POLICE COURT.

A local man was fined $5 and costs this morning for selling false and unjust scales contrary to the Weights and Measures Act.

The scales in question were sold by public auction and the seller had omitted to have them inspected prior to disposing of them.

Senior Inspector F. N. Hart told The Examiner that all scales must be submitted to his department for inspection before they can be sold otherwise prosecutions would follow.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Bert, the beloved son of Jessie Allen, of Rockcroft, who was drowned in Little Lake at Peterborough, August 28th, 1925, aged 25 years, 8 months:

A sudden call at God's command
he fell,
He had no time to bid his friends
farewell,
Death came to him without a warning given
And bade him haste to meet his God in Heaven.

We do not forget him, we loved him too dearly,
For your memory to fade from our minds like a dream,
The lips need not speak when the heart mourns sincerely,
And thoughts often dwell where they seldom are seen.
Gone but not forgotten by his loving mother and family at Rockcroft.

PAVEMENTS, FIRE PROTECTION AND POLLUTED BATHING BEACH ARE DISCUSSED BY CITY COUNCIL

Simcoe Street Will Be Paved To Connect Up Work Already Done.

BILLING TOWNSHIP.

Simcoe street will be paved from Aylmer street to Rubidge street to join up the work already done, and George street will be resurfaced from Charlotte street to the C.P.R. crossing. This was decided last night at a special meeting of the City Council, and work on the Simcoe street pavement will be commenced immediately, as the construction by-law and agreement were passed. It is necessary to advertise the work on George street, which will be done under the local improvement act, and it will be impossible to pass this by-law for several weeks.

Two petitions were presented relating to pavements. One was from the ratepayers on George street, asking that the street be resurfaced and paid out of the general fund, and the other was from the residents of Rubidge street, protesting against the paving of that street south of Charlotte. In the case of George street it was decided to do the work as a local improvement, while work has already been started in preparation for the Rubidge street pavement.

Alderman Hancock was the only member to dissent from the Simcoe street programme. He said that at the first of the year the Alderman had sought office on an economy platform and now they were going to pave a street that the residents didn't want paved. It was said in answer that many people on Simcoe street had changed their minds since the cross streets had been paved. When the by-law to execute the agreement was going through Alderman MacDonald said that the price should be less than that paid for the streets recently completed, as the company had its plant on the spot.

Resurfacing George Street.

When George street was under discussion the aldermen divided on the question of how paving should be paid for. Aldermen Phelan and Denne said that it should be paid for out of the general funds, and expressed the opinion that enough money could be secured to do it this year. They suggested the use of some of the appropriation for storm drains, but Mayor Holloway and Aldermen Fife and MacDonald opposed this plan, saying that the drainage money had been put in the estimates because the urgency of the project had been so strongly urged. Three thousand dollars spent in repairing the pavement recently was also taken in to consideration and work may not be started until next year.

Smith township will be sent an account for the firemen's trip to Chemong park on the occasion of the fire in the pavilion. Alderman Phelan, who had been acting Mayor, said that he had phoned Reeve Middleton when the call was sent in, and after some delay the Reeve had told him to send the brigade. Alderman Fife said that he had understood that only those who signed an agreement to pay for fire protection would get it, but it was explained that for those who didn't sign the bond the old system of asking the mayor and reeve was still in vogue. Several aldermen expressed themselves strongly against permitting the brigade to go out of the city at all.

Lake Street Beach.

Pollution of the water at the bathing beach at the end of Lake street was described by Alderman Greene, chairman of the Parks committee, who ordered the beach closed tonight. Pollution from the shore and also from the current which washes material into the bay have put the place in very bad condition and Alderman Greene was instructed to consider securing a new site. The Board of Health will be asked to look into pollution of the river and creek all through the city.

The by-law making George, Charlotte, Water and Aylmer through streets through streets for portions of their length was passed last night and becomes effective as soon as its is approved by the Provincial Department of Highways. Chief of Police Samuel Newhall was present and advised against including any more streets until these four had been tried out.

An application was brought up for a license for a fish and chip shop which it is said was opened for business last week. Alderman Phelan was asked to report on the matter. The sewage disposal plant will be in operation in about two weeks, if the work of changing the connection on the outfall sewers goes through without trouble. The Suburban Road Commission will be asked to clean out the drain on Park street below Lansdowne, as the city intends putting a tile in the ditch above that street.

A letter was received from F. H. Taylor of Niagara Falls complimenting the city on the tourist camp and extolling caretaker Jack Gillespie as 'a' real host." A letter of thanks was received from Mrs. E. Allen thanking the Council for sympathy shown and the wreath sent on the occasion of the tragic death of her son Raymond.

Last night was something of a reunion night for the Aldermen. Mayor Holloway and Alderman Fife, both of whom had been absent through illness since the June meeting, were back in their accustomed seats and were welcomed on behalf of the colleagues by Alderman Phelan. The mayor said that during his holiday of the past few weeks he had visited several other cities in Ontario and was convinced that Peterborough was the best of all. The citizens, he said, were inclined to expect too much, and to knock, but conditions in other cities were not as good as here. He thanked the aldermen for the flowers sent him while he was confined to his bed. Alderman Fife also expressed his thanks and was reminded that during his absence a new road roller, which he had often advocated, had been purchased for the Board of Works.

Dr. Thomas Wearing, Dean of Colgate University, and a brother of City Solicitor Joseph Wearing, was a visitor at the meeting.

Ex-Kaiser Heads List All His Titles Named

BERLIN, August 26. — The new list of members of the Gothe Society of Germany, which is just published, is headed by "His Imperial and Royal Majesty, William the Second, Emperor and King of Prussia."

Commenting on this implied restoration of the ex-Kaiser, the Berliner Tageblatt says that for Dr. Gustave Goethe, president of the society and former president of Berlin University, history seems to stand still.

"For him," the paper continues, "there still exists a German Empire with William the Second as its leader. To Goethe and the rest of his committee it is apparently entirely unknown that William the Second abdicated.

After the name of the Kaiser on the list are twenty-six other princes and nobles separated from the rest of the membership of plebians.

EIGHT BANDITS LOOT TWO BANKS

Leave Man To Guard One Bank While They Rob Other.

CLEAR GETAWAY.

ENID, Okla., August 26 (Canadian Press).—Eight men in two automobiles swooped down on the oil town of Covington, 22 miles south-east of here, late yesterday and looted both the banks in the town.

The amount of the loot is not known exactly, but unverified reports at the Sheriff's office here said the robbers got at least $5,000 from one bank and a large sum from the other.

Several cars of officers and citizens pursued the robbers.

The robber band first looted the American State Bank, where the leader told the assistant cashier, "We're taking charge of this bank." Customers who drifted in were ordered to the rear.

Leaving one man to guard the 24 persons grouped in the American State Bank, the robbers went to the Covington National Bank a short distance away and repeated the process. They returned to the American Bank, locked all those in sight in a vault and left town in two automobiles.

London Girl Suicides Grieving Over Valentino

LONDON, Aug. 26 (United Press).—Miss Peggy Scott, a 26-year-old girl, committed suiside here to-day, apparently because of grief over the death of Rudolph Valentino, whom she had met frequently at Biarritz. There were letters from Valentino in her bedroom and she left a letter to a friend in which she gave evidence of grief over the actor's death. Miss Scott had told friends that she "simply worshipped" Rudolph, and that she spent hours watching films in which he appeared.

BELGIUM WILL SEEK PLACE IN LEAGUE COUNCIL

Will Not Supportt Proposal To Increase the Permanent Members.

SEND DELEGATION.

Will Assist in Solving Difficulties That Confront the League.

BRUSSELS, August 26 (Canadian Press). — M. Vandervelde, the Foreign Minister, yesterday officially announced that Belgium intended to seek re-election to the Council of the League of Nations but will not support the proposal to increase the number of permanent members.

The Belgian delegates are going to Geneva, M. Vandervelde said, first to assist in solving the difficulties that confront the League, according to the spirit of the covenant and, secondly, to insure by Germany's entrance into the League the full application of the Locarno treaty.

"Every one will agree that Belgium leaving the council at the moment that Germany enters it would be hardly an acceptable situation," said M. Vandervelde. "Both Gustave Stresseman and Dr. Hans Luther, with whom I spoke last March at Geneva on the subject, agree that Belgium must remain in the Council of the League. Dr. Luther said that he considered Belgium one of the foundation stones of the League."

On the question of the increase in the number of permanent members of the Council of the League, Belgium must maintain her present attitude regardless of compromise or sympathy. The ideal solution, according to M. Vandervelde, and his opinion reflects that of the Belgian delegation, would be to have no permanent members but to have the whole Council elected every year by the Assembly. That, however, would entail a revision of the covenant which Belgium is not prepared to propose but would support.

M. Vandervelde intends to support Lord Cecil's resolution at the June sitting of the special commission against any increase of the number of permanent members of the League, and maintaining all the elective rights of the Assembly.

The Belgian Foreign Minister concluded by expressing the conviction that with the goodwill of all concerned, the existing difficulties can and must be smoothed out. "The peace of Europe is at stake," he said.

Plane Drops 2,500 Feet With Parachute Slightly Damaged But Flier Is Unhurt

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 26—Falling from a height of 2,500 feet yesterday an airplane with power off and with no attempt at gliding, but buoyed up by a parachute, settled to earth in a slight hollow near El Segundo, about five miles from the starting point, suffering only slight damage.

The test was made at the Inglewood airport. The pilot, R. Carl Oelze of the Naval Reserve, was not even jarred.

The plane was the first and the pilot was the first to descend in a plane with a parachute. Pilot, plane and equipment weighed about 1,800 pounds. The parachute weighed about forty-five pounds and was fifty feet in diameter. It was packed in the fuselage of the plane.

"The experiment was an unqualified success," said Oelze, "and I would make another ship descent today had the plane landed on level ground where the landing gear could have rolled. I am confident it would have been ready to fly off again at once. But I want a slightly larger parachute next time."

The experiment was scheduled for 10 a.m. by the inventor of the safety device, Harry D. Doucett, but various delays and tests and the necessary policing to keep the crowd back delayed the start until fifteen minutes after noon.

At 12.40 Oelze shut of fhis power. The plane landed in one minute and six seconds after falling approximately thirty-eight feet a second.

The descent appeared rapid, but was checked as the parachute opened and the plane then swung from side to side. This swinging motion was also checked. As the plane neared the earth its descent became as steady as that of an aviator who a few minutes before had descended in similar fashion.

When the parachute broke open the crowd began to cheer, and did not cease until the descending plane was lost to sight behind the hills.

The descent was timed by the official naval observer, Lieutenant Donnelly, "and have obtained data which we believe Diego, who also declared the experiment a success.

"We are all very much pleased with the result," said Lieutenant Donnelly, 'a'nd have obtained data which we believe will be of immense value. The device seems to give promise that the complete safety of airplane travel is almost within sight."

FINNS DRINKING MORE ALCOHOL

Nation Formerly Most Sober In Europe Now Has Prohibition.

COMMISSION REPORT.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Aug. 26 (United News).—Drunkenness and the use of hard liquor have increased in Finland during prohibition, a special commission has has found after investigation of the national dry law's effects.

The commission was appointed by the government. It finds that while Finland was the most sober country in Europe before prohibition, the consumption of alcohol has increased steadily under the new law. Today, the commission says, the amount of alcohol used is substantially higher than before the war, and much of it is the severe type of liquor which is proving injurious to the health of the people.

Two of the members of the commission disagree with the majority report, holding that it is worthless and conveys the wrong impression to the public as to the actual results of prohibition.

Century Plant Blooms Once In 45 Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (United News).—It's a long time between blossoms. The Century plant in the New York Botanical Gardens was in bloom today with light greenish cup-like flowers.

It probably has been 45 years since the plant bloomed last, attaches said, explaining that the term Century plant is not to be taken too literally. However, it may be nearly 100 years before the plant blooms again, if it skips one flowering period, as they sometimes do.

Suspected of Many Depredations in Fashionable Suburbs.

BOLD CRIMINALS.

LONDON, Aug. 26 (United News).—"The Forty Elephants," a band of female robbers which the police thought they had broken up several months ago, may be furnishing the participants in a new series of depredations in the fashionable suburbs, it is feared. Gangs in automobiles are responsible for most of the robberies and they have been assisted by bobbed haired girls. It is thought that these young recruits to England's criminal ranks are carrying out their robberies as they were taught by the notorious "Limehouse Lizzie" identified with the "Forty Elephants."

"The Forty Elephants" took their name from the fact that all of them were of unusual stature and robust build. Their robberies were boldly executed.

COBOURG, Aug. 26. — Messrs Fisher and Moore of Peterboro, have purchased from the Lightburne estate Balmoral Hotel property in this town, and will personally conduct it. The barns on this property were partially destroyed by fire last Wednesday morning, and it is the intention of the new proprietors to reconstruct them into an up-to-date garage, and open a service station.

Mr. Fisher was with the Munro Hotel, Peterboro, for some six years, and is well known to the travelling public.

More Milk; Less Meat To Add Eight Years

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., August 26 (Associated Press).—By drinking more milk and eating less meat, man could add eight years to the "part of his life worth most to himself and to the world," H. C. Serman, professor of chemistry at Columbia University, told the Institute of Politics yesterday.

The adequate diet determined by recent research work in nutrition, he said, prescribes more milk and less meat to increase individual efficiency and vitality. The public health movement promises to augment the life span by eight years, and this increase could be doubled, Prof. Sherman thinks, by a universal shift in diet.

Bridal Party Wears Red To Show Communist Belief

WALDENBURG, Silesia, Aug. 26 (United Press).—A red bridal gown and a red shirt and tie were worn by a bride and groom here at their wedding in order that they could make sure the world would recognize them as Communists.

After the ceremony at the registrar's office, the couple paraded in their unusual wedding garb through the streets of the city and told their friends that they desired to defy antiquated Burgeois tradition regulating wedding clothing.

MARGARET TOOK MEIGHEN PARTY FOR A CRUISE

ELECTION TRIP.

Declares a Cabinet Minister Took Three Friends For a Sail.

HALIFAX, August 26 (Canadian Press). — Trips of the Customs steamer Margaret were again the subject of inquiry when the Customs Commission resumed to-day.

Captain Lecouvee, master of the vessel, told of taking the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen and party, which included Mrs. Meighen, Hon. F. B. McCurdy, then Minister of Public Works, and Hon. Andre Fauteux, Solicitor-General, from Pictou, N.S., to Georgetown, P.E.I., and then back from Summerside to Shediac during the election campaign of 1921. In addition to those named, Captain Lecouvee said that there was a lady friend of Mrs. Meighen's on board, and some newspapermen. Then, under directions from Mr. McCurdy, she had proceeded to Summerside, where she took on the same party on October 11, bringing them to Shediac. Later she returned to Summerside with Mr. Fauteux.

Captain Lecouvee told of another trip which Hon. J. D. Reid, former Minister of Customs, took on the Margaret in the summer of 1914.

Mr. Reid had on board "three gentlemen friends." He had cruised to Saguenay, Tadousac and down to Gaspe, the cruise taking several days. The captain explained that accounts for food required by both parties were rendered in the usual way by the steward. It was customary for these account to be paid by the Ministers when they used the steamer.

In answer to R. L. Calder, K.C., Commission counsel, the captain said that he had no information that he was required elsewhere when ordered to take the Meighen party on board. He had been cruising in the Straits of Canso, sixty-five miles from Pictou, when he got the order.

Replying to Commissioner Lemieux, R. L. Calder, K.C., said in fairness to Hon. Jacques Bureau, it should be shown that the vessel was diverted from her regular duties when she was under control of the different Ministers. Earlier in the sitting, Sergeant K. P. Blakeney of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, gave evidence in regard to the case of Harry Rabinovich and the Franco Canaial Import Company. Rabinovich was smuggling liquor by the use of motor trucks, he said, but an informer had given him away to the police. A case was built up against him but he left Halifax before a summons could be served on him, and went to Ottawa. Then came instructions from Ottawa to proceed no further with the case. It was still open.

SAYS COMMISSION GIVES ATTENTION

Is Proceeding as Rapidly as Possible On St. Lawrence Plan.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—State Senator John K. Knight, member of the State Water Power Commission, issued a statement last night declaring that the St. Lawrence power development project had received adequate attention from the commission.

"The commission has proceeded as rapidly as any organization should in a matter of importance," Mr. Knight said. "It involves the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars, and since boundary waters are involved there are international questions to be settled. Only a few weeks ago a joint meeting of the Ontario authorities and the State Commission was held. While nothing was, or could have been, concluded, a better understanding of the viewpoints of both commissions was had."

TRAFFIC BY-LAW IS IN EFFECT; AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS REQUIRED TO HALT AT THROUGH STREETS

Chief Newhall Warns That It Must Be Observed By All.

ASKS CO-OPERATION.

Suggests That Motorists Can Help Themselves By Helping Police.

The traffic by-law passed the Council last night and is now law, declared Chief of Police Samuel Newhall to The Examiner this morning. He said that he hoped all motorists and other drivers would do their part and assist in making the by-law a success. "It must be carried out exactly as it is laid down," he said. George Street from Romaine to Smith Street is named as a through street and traffic on all streets running east and west across this thoroughfare between these points must come to a stop before crossing it.

Aylmer Street from Charlotte to McDonnel Streets is also named as a through street. All traffic crossing east and west between these points must come to a step before doing so.

Water Street from Charlotte to McDonnel Streets is also declared a through street and all traffic crossing east and west between these points must stop.

Charlotte Street from Water Street to the boundary on Monaghan Road is also declared a through street, and all crossing north and south between these points must stop. George Street is the exception as traffic on this street has the right of way over that on Charlotte.

All vehicles coming from stop streets and making a left hand turn must stop before doing so, but vehicles making right hand turns need not as they join the flow of traffic.

Referring to the new by-law, Chief Newhall stated that one particular he had noticed was that motorists using through streets were inclined to think they were set apart for speedways. "That idea must cease at once," he declared. "The through streets are set apart for the safety of all concerned, and any person found crossing an intersection at a greater speed than ten miles per hour will be liable to the penalties provided under the Highways Traffic Act."

During the last few days, he said, a large number of motorists had been checked up between Smith and Murray Streets on George. "If any of them repeat this offence they will be brought before the Magistrate and charged with a breach of the new ordinance," he declared.

He said that if the public would fully observe the new traffic law it would make the work of the police much easier, besides giving himself a great deal of pleasure in being able to show a clean sheet at police court instead of a long list of breaches of the Highway Traffic Act as in many other cities.

In conclusion, Chief Newhall said, "No motorist need worry about police court if he tries to assist the police in carrying out the new law."

One Hundred Banks Built To One Church In Britain

LONDON, August 26 (Associated Press).—The "Big Five" banks are extending so fast throughout the country that for every church erected in a year it is estimated that 100 banks are built. Ten times as many banks as cinemas are built yearly.

Since the war these five banks have entered into competition in every town in the country and have spent millions of pounds on the campaign. Among them they own premises worth between £50,000,000 and £60,000,000, and this is being added to nearly every week.

Each of the banks has opened on an average one new branch every week during the past twelve months. They buy famous old inns and shops in market squares of country towns and pull them down to make way for branch banks.

CAR DESTROYED ON RIVER ROAD

Fire Department From Lakefield Use Chemicals To Extinguish Flames.

FEED PIPE BROKE.

Two fires on two successive nights in proximity to where his meetings had been held is a coincidence noted in connection with E. A. Peck's election campaign. The cheese factory at Indian River was burned to the ground some hours after the meeting held in that village. Last night while returning from Young's Point a coupe was almost completely destroyed by fire on the road between there and Lakefield. The coupe was owned by George Heffernan who told The Examiner that his feed pipe had broken and had apparently been spraying gasoline around for when his friend lighted a match to enable him to repair the break, the car burst into flames. After battling with the fire for some time a call was sent into Lakefield for some chemicals. Two men arrived with chemical extinguishers and apparently had put the fire out when in a few seconds the blaze burst out again. The chemicals by this time had been completely used up with the result that another call was sent for the fire truck.

The fire truck was quickly on the scene but were able only to save the chassis the remainder of the body having been destroyed.

BOY DROWNED.

WELLAND, August 26 (Canadian Press).—Herbert Harris, aged 13, was drowned in the Welland Canal when trying to swim across the channel near the Union Carbide Works with three others. Harris tired when he had nearly reached midstream, and turned back. When his companions landed on the far side, Harris had sunk from sight without making any outcry.

A truck driver passing on the bank, noticing Harris in difficulty, jumped in without divesting himself of any clothing, but was unable to reach him in time, and incidentally lost $60 from his pocket. The body was recovered four hours later.

ONTARIO AGENT WILL OVERSEE SALE OF APPLES

W. B. Somerset Will Likely Be Representative in British Market.

MEETING HELD.

Approval of the principle of having a personal representative in the British market was given by the apple industry of Ontario at a conference, which representative growers, agents, brokers and marketing association heads held yesterday at the Parliament Buildings under the Ontario Government auspices. No definite appointment to the position was made at the gathering, but it was generally understood that choice as representative would fall upon W. B. Somerset, a prominent fruit grower of Grimsby. Mr. Somerset is volunteering his services for the handling of the coming season's crop without remuneration, in order that the industry may experiment and determine the value of having a personal representative abroad.

Yesterday's gathering of representatives of the apple industry was one of the most important conferences upon marketing problems which the Government has convened. It was largely attended, and received the views upon the apple marketing problem of Forsythe Smith, Dominion Government Trade Commissioner in Great Britain, and of Dominion Fruit Commissioner McIntosh, as well as many suggestions from growers, brokers and co-operative heads in the Province. Before the gathering adjourned, it passed a resolution declaring against the exportation of any grade three apples, the opinion being that the aim of the Province should be to maintain a high export quality.

The Ontario Government was prompted to call yesterday's conference by an interview which Mr. Somerset held a few days ago with Premier Ferguson and Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture. Mr. Somerset, who is a successful business man, who retired to the Grimsby district some years ago, and purchased a fruit farm there, told of having been in England last year at a time, when by coincidence, a consignment of his own fruit arrived upon the London market. He found that by giving personal attention to its sale, he was able to realize $100 more for it, than he would otherwise have received, and he urged upon the Premier and the Minister of Agriculture, accordingly, that some personal representative of the apple growers should be appointed in the British market. In order that the project might be tried, he volunteered to himself serve during the coming winter without remuneration, in order that the value of the plan might be determined.

No Change in Sales Plan.

When the Government submitted the proposition to the representatives of the industry yesterday it met with general approval. Trade Commissioner Forsythe recalled that he had advised the plan in his last annual report and detailed as well some of the difficulties and conditions in the English market which personal representation would help to solve. Mr. Somerset emphasized that there was no intention of interfering with established marketing channels and that the exnort business would be continued to be handled through agents and brokers. The value and function of the representative would be to assist by keeping in touch with market conditions and by advising upon them, and also to assist by routing consignments to the markets in which they could be sold to the best advantage. He would also, Mr. Somerset believed, justify himself in checking up the shipments and seeing that the shippers secured the full returns and the proper market grading to which they were entitled.

Considerable discussion of the scheme ensued from the growers and others interested in the industry. Eben James of Trenton averred that the need of the industry was for protection against the apples of the south, which glutted the early market. A. S. Chapin, a Toronto broker, believed that the plan would hardly prove feasible in view of the fact that 90 per cent. of the export crop was financed by agents. David Dick, the representative of one of the largest American brokerage firms, did not see any insuperable obstacle in the feature mentioned by Mr. Chapin, and was sure that his firm would welcome the appointment of a representative.

General approval of the scheme was voiced by Sir William Mulock, who is a large apple grower on his farm at Newmarket; Max Smith of Burlington, Harry Sirrett, president of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association; James E. Johnston, manager of the Norfolk Fruit Growers' Association; Mr. Mitchell, manager of the Georgian Bay Fruit Growers' Association; W. H. Gibson of Newcastle, Hugh Montgomery, manager of the Northumberland Growers' Association; John Joynt, M.P.P.; Paul Fisher of Burlington and Mr. Mills of Sparta.

Following the discussion, it was moved by Mr. Boyd, representing several growers' associations in Middlesex, and seconded by C. W. Baxter, manager of the Niagara Packers of Grimsby, that a committee composed of the president and secretary of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, Messrs. Paul Fisher, W. H. Gibson, James E. Johnston and the mover and seconder be appointed to work out the details with a view to adopting a plan of having a direct representative in Great Britain to handle the surplus crop for the approaching season. It will be the duty of this committee to get into touch with those in the industry and find out what quantity of apples will be consigned in this way, and also work out the conditions under which they will be handled.

In a brief address to the meeting following the passage of the resolution, Dominion Fruit Commissioner McIntosh emphasized that fully 75 per cent. of the Nova Scotia crop would be handled this year under Federal Government certificate as to grade. He pointed out that this certificate was available to the growers of Ontario, and urged them to adopt it in order that they might realize the advantages incidental to it in safeguarding export trade and in having their apples stamped as a quality product.

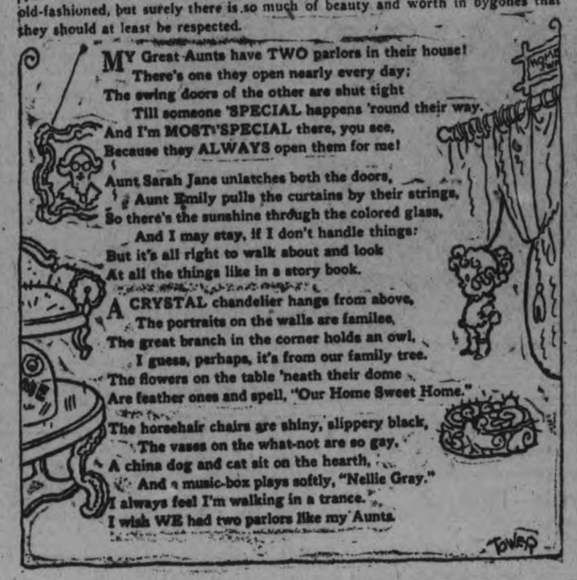
The Best Parlor

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

NOT so long ago when we spoke of old-fashioned things, we felt the term well defined. We smiled a little in tolerance of pretty sentiments, and turned smugly to our modern furnishings. Now we're not so sure about old-fashioned things being of the past. What with our treasured hooked rugs, our shawls, what-nots and vases, we're coming to realize that "Old-fashioned" is only an approximate word designating some fashion of the past, but not necessarily any less desirable than a prevailing mode. It is deplorable to find a child with no respect but for his own prevailing fancies. We do not wish him always to copy the old-fashioned, but surely there is so much of beauty and worth in bygones that they should at least be respected.



YOUNG CLERK FOOLS BANDITS

Outwits Five Men Who Try To Rob Drug Store.

ESCAPES BULLETS.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Aug. 26 (Canadian Press). — Five bandits who atetmpted to rob the drug store at Mossbank, Sask., on Tuesday night were outwitted by the presence of mind and daring of Verne Winter, 18-year-old clerk of the store.

Held Up at Revolver Point

The boy had been guarding the store for several nights, and left about 3 a.m. for his home, driving his father's car. When he reached the garage at the house a member of the robber gang held him up with a revolver and made him drive back to the drug store. Arriving at the store, the bandit made Winter get out of the car and then tried to take keys out of the boy's pocket.

The lad awaited the opportunity and drove his knee into the pit of the bandit's stomach, jumped back into the car and raced down the street. It was then that he discovered that there were four other members of the robber gang.

From various hiding places near the drug store three revolvers spat. One bullet entered the door on the driver's side of the sedan Winter was driving, another smashed the glass in the same door, and the third, fired from behind, broke the blass in the back of the car and passed through the windshield.

The Bandits Sped Past Him

Winter drove toward Ardill, and the bandits followed in another car. He outdistanced them, and turned off the road into a field, where he turned out his lights and waited until the bandits' car sped past, when he turned back to Mossbank, notifying the police of the direction the bandits had taken, and they at once gave chase.

So far no arrests have been made.

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food; but not until we perfected "ironized yeast"—which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

WOMAN HURT BY MOTOR CAR

MAN ARRESTED.

TORONTO, Aug. 26. — Struck down while crossing the Weston Road near Black Creek, Mount Dennis, last evening, Mrs. Dora Callender, age 29, of Heyd Avenue, Mount Dennis, sustained serious injuries and fractures of the legs. She was removed to the Western Hospital. The motor car which struck Mrs. Callender was driven by E. Hartwick, Old Weston Road. Hartwick was taken into custody by P. C. Carson, of York Township police, on a charge of criminal negligence.

Mrs. Callender was crossing Weston Road on her way to the grocery store when she was knocked down by the motor car, which was traveling north on that thoroughfare. Hartwick stopped, and having inquired as to the victim's injuries, called Dr. Vernon Carlisle of Mount Dennis. After rendering first aid, Dr. Carlisle called Speers' ambulance, which conveyed the injured woman to the hospital. P. C. Carson was sent out to investigate, and, deciding that Hartwick was to blame, he placed him under arrest.

Mrs. Callender was within reach of the store almost when struck. At that point the road is fairly steep and narrow. Hartwick was driving downhill at the time of the mishap.

DENIES HE VOTED AGAINST BUDGET

Peck Produces Letter From Clerk at Young's Point Meeting.

E. A. Peck, the Conservative candidate, in addressing a meeting in Young's Point last night, again denied emphatically that he had voted against the budget, penny postage, the reduction in income tax and the reduction in automobiles. The speaker produced the following letter from the clerk of the House in support of his contention:

Kamouraska, Que., August 21, 1926
E. A. Peck, Esq., Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Mr. Peck,—I regret that my absence both from the office and my summer residence has prevented me from replying sooner to your letter.

The facts set forth in your letter with respect to your vote in the House of Commons on May 18th last are absolutely correct. When I stated in my letter to Mr. Gordon, on August 5th inst., that you voted against the budget, I merely used a Parliamentary phrase in order to say that you had voted against the usual motion "That the Speaker leave the chair" for the purpose of considering the tariff resolutions. These resolutions were not then submitted to the House by the Speaker and were not the questions upon which you then actually voted. As a matter of fact, Mr. Robb, following the usual course, gave notice that they would be taken up later in committee. No further division was taken in the House on these resolutions.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) Arthur Beauchesne.

Mr. Peck was assisted by W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., V. J. McElderry and J. H. Corkery.

R. A. Charlton was unanimously appointed chairman for the occasion.

J. H. Corkery.

"You cannot get away from the main issue in this campaign," said Mr. Corkery. "It is the Customs investigation, and that is the real reason why the Parliament dissolved." A stable government, he said, was a real necessity. Mackenzie King had it as his slogan during the last campaign, but he came back with a lesser representation, but in spite of that he still continued to hold the reins of power. The people of this Dominion, he said, want to return a party that carry on independent of any other. In view of the number of seats taken by Meighen during the last campaign it would be much easier to return him than to return Mackenzie King. In view of what had occurred, the Conservative party was the only party that could be depended upon to be upright and honest, he declared. In conclusion, Mr. Corkery declared that the main issue was stability of government and a vote for Mr. Peck would ensure that.

V. J. McElderry.

Mr. McElderry expressed the opinion that the blame for the present election lay entirely with Mackenzie King. Due to the Progressive support, he said, Mr. King was enabled to carry on and would no doubt have finished the session if it had not been for the Customs investigation. He charged the Liberal party with attempting to cloud the issue by talking about the constitutional issue, while in their hearts they knew it was not declaring that "the government was so rotten that even the Progressives refused to support it any longer and deserted them." The country had been defrauded out of millions of dollars through deliberate and organized robbery by a man employed as a preventive officer in the Customs service, he declared. He did not blame the government entirely for this, he said, but he did blame Mackenzie King for not acting in the matter when it was called to his attention. In conclusion, the speaker declared, "What we need is stability, a government that can carry out the will of the people, and not be influenced by a minority."

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Mr. Bradburn stated that he was pleased to be at the meeting and to be able to speak in the interests of Mr. Peck. Every citizen in the riding, he said, knew Mr. Peck and his record. Big issues were at stake and it was quite evident that the Conservatives would be the next party to govern the country, he declared. Mr. Meighen appeals to you for your vote in order that the country may make progress and have a stable government, he said in conclusion.

The meeting closed with three cheers for the King and Mr. Peck.

Only One Beautiful Girl In 4,000, Says Professor

TORONTO, Aug. 26 (Canadian Press). — "Beautiful girls make the best wives," says Professor Albert Edward Wiggam, author of the "New Decalogue of Science." But then he goes on to say that there is only one true beauty in every 4,000 girls, so that leaves a pretty good chance in the marriage market, after all, for the lass of lesser charms. He says: "We need to educate our boys to know real beauty, to go beneath the paint and powder and look at features, the shape of the face, the poise of the head. We ought to teach them to know real beauty like a horseman knows a thoroughbred. When a woman has a beautiful face and figure, she is sure to be healthy and intelligent. Beautiful figures are becoming obsolete today and a real beauty is as rare as genius. There is only one truly beautiful woman in every four thousand."

TRAPPER CHASED BY COW MOOSE

Had Just Released Calf From Bear Trap When Charged.

NARROW ESCAPE

EDMONTON, Alta., August 26.—(Canadian Press).—An infuriated cow moose, in attacking a trapper of the Entrance district near here recently, proved that the animal fear of man is superficial and disappears when its young are endangered.

Mr. Elliott had set out from his cabin on a trip of inspection along his trap lines. He was proceeding along the banks of the Athabasca River when he was attracted by the plaintive bawling of a moose calf. Investigation revealed the fact that the calf had been caught in a bear trap.

The trapper had just released the calf, whose front leg was broken, when he heard a menacing bellow behind him. He wheeled to face the infuriated mother, rushing toward him through the bushes.

Mr. Elliott took to his heels, closely pursued by the cow moose. He succeded in reaching his horse, and mounting just as the animal reached him. The mother followed the racing trapper for some distance but eventually gave up the chase and returned to its offspring.

The calf had disappeared when Mr. Elliott returned to the scene on the following day.

WEDDING BELLS.

CAMPBELL—ELLIOTT.

A very charming wedding took place on Saturday, August 21st, at high noon, in St. Andrew's United church, Pakenham, Ont., when Mary Marguerite, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott became the bride of Mr. Charles A. Campbell, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Campbell of Smiths' Falls. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was becomingly gowned in a French hand-made model of white crepe romaine and Spanish lace. Her veil was caught with orange blossoms and pearl ornaments, which were worn by her mother at her marriage. Shoes of silver brocade and an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses completed her costume. The bride's attendant, Miss Mabel Campbell, sister of the groom, wore a pretty gown of rose and silver shot taffeta veiled in rose georgette and carried a bouquet of Premier roses. The groom was ably assisted by his cousin, Mr. Ted Orr of Ottawa and Mr. Fred Jamieson of Ottawa and Mr. R. H. McCreary of Pakenham acted as ushers. The bride entered the church to the strains of Lohengrim's wedding march played by a trio, Mrs. G. H. Soett of Pankenham at the organ, Miss Jean Walker of Pembroke on the piano, and Mr. Owen Levans of Pembroke on the violin. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. H. Hillis, pastor of the church. During the signing of the register Miss Helen Lytle of Peterborough sang beautifully "All Joy Be Thine." The church was effectively decorated by friends of the bride, with fern and gladioli.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's father. Sweet peas, gladioli and ferns adorned the rooms. During the afternoon friends of the bride entertained with an informally arranged program of music. The bride and groom left by motor for the honeymoon, the bride travelling in a navy blue georgette dress and navy blue cape model coat with which she wore grey hat, shoes, gloves and purse.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Bretherton.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in honey dew shaded georgette crepe and wore a large black velvet picture hat. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Little Miss Marion McCrae of Norwood dressed in pale pink georgette was bridal attendant, having charge of the bride's flowers during the ceremony and nuptial mass.

The ushers were Messrs. Fred Barry and John Howard.

Lohengrin's Wedding March was played by Miss Francis Jones, and during the service solos were sung by Miss Mary Jones and Mr. Leo Rivard.

The groom's gift to the bride was a bar pin set with diamonds and rubies, to the bridesmaid a hope sapphire ring, to the little bridal attendant a topaz ring, to the groomsman, white gold cuff links, the ushers gold pens, and the organist a bar pin.

THE PLAYGROUNDS.

If there were any doubt as to the popularity of the local supervised playgrounds, the fact that during the season which has recently closed an attendance of over 11,000 children was registered at the three grounds would dispel it.

In addition, it is stated, the number of children who visited the civic bathing beaches under the direction of the playground supervisors numbered well over 600.

General Supervisor James Abraham and his staff are to be congratulated upon the popularity of the playgrounds, and especially upon the fact that during the past four years the grounds have been operated without an accident being reported.

The playgrounds fill a long felt want in Peterboro, and it is to be hoped that it will be possible before long to increase the number of such recreation areas and to add to the equipment.

When it is considered that the attendance at the Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra and Central grounds this summer was over 11,000, the usefulness of the supervised system can readily be appreciated.

Next summer should see, at least, another recreation grounds opened, while there is need of additional equipment at some of the schools already in use.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

At least four former residents of this county—three of them ex-Peterboro citizens—are candidates in the present Federal election campaign, and by a strange twist each is a standard-bearer of a different party.

Out on the Pacific Coast Hon. H. H. Stevens, a former local resident and the present Minister of Customs, is carrying the Conservative Government flag in Vancouver Centre, the riding he has represented in Parliament for several terms.

Coming further East, W. T. Lucas is seen as candidate of the United Farmers of Alberta in Camrose, Alta. Mr. Lucas is a Peterboro County boy, born in South Monaghan, and was a member of the Progressive group in the last House, being one of the quota from that group whose support of the Conservatives resulted in the downfall of the King administration.

The fourth former Peterboro resident to appear as a candidate is Cecil Armstrong, who is running in Toronto East Centre as an Independent.

On the night of September 14th the people of Peterboro will doubtless take a special interest in the ridings from Vancouver Centre, Camrose, Waterloo South and Toronto East Centre.

WHERE PARTY PAPERS FLOURISH.

Cities and towns with one newspaper—and most of Ontario's centres are in that category—are missing some of the real humour of the election campaign.

You have got to turn to the old-time partisan journal if you want to get the genuine political flavour.

Take Kingston, for instance, where The Whig upholds the Liberal cause and The Standard fights tooth and nail for the Conservative party.

On Tuesday The Whig, under the heading, "Canvasser Says That Dr. Ross is Losing Hold on Local Voters," declared: "Canvassers who have been at work for several days are bringing in news every night that indicates very clearly that Dr. Ross' hold on the voters of the city is by no means as strong as it was last fall. Asked as to the reason for this change, the canvasser stated that it seemed to be caused largely by two reasons—first, the Robb budget, and second, the feeling everywhere that the King Government is going back to power."

On the same day The Standard, under the heading, "Strong Swing to General Ross is Reported in the City," declared: "Conservative workers throughout the city report a strong swing to General Ross and a decided and growing sentiment in his favour. In addition to Dr. Ross' decided popularity, which is winning so many people to him, there is the feeling that the Meighen Government will be returned to power."

MAKE SURE NOW.

So far registrations before His Honour Judge Huycke have been fairly brisk, although not ahead of last year, and in view of the fact that a large number of names is reported off the lists, there will have to be an increase in the number of successful applications in the next few days or there will be some disappointed voters upon election day.

His Honour, to facilitate the work of registration, has decided to hold night sittings on Saturday and Monday, an arrangement that will be of great convenience to electors who find it difficult to attend during the day.

It is to be hoped that those who are able to be registered at the regular sessions will do so, thus avoiding congestion at the evening sittings of the revising court.

To those electors who have not yet satisfied themselves that their names are on the list and that they will be sure of a ballot on September 14th, The Examiner would point out once more that after the present registration is concluded there will be no opportunity for an urban voter to get his name added to the voters' lists.

The time to make sure is now when the remedy is at hand.

YIELD IS EQUAL TO THAT OF 1925.

Out of the West comes the greatest news of the day. The yield of grain this year, despite stories of local and sectional damage, will be equal to that of last year. All the Western farmer wanted this year was normal production. He is getting something more. All he demanded was a normal price. It will be above normal. These two results add many millions of dollars to the wealth of the country.

It is almost impossible to realize what the wheat crop means. It affects every channel of business in this country. After the distressful times of 1921, Western farmers were hoping for better conditions whereby they could liquidate debt. The money which will be secured this year will be so much spending power. The farmers have gotten over the crest of the hill. They are now comfortably fixed, able to plan improvements, buy necessities and even luxuries.

All parts of Canada are affected. Ontario stands to gain very greatly. The agricultural implement factories are enjoying great activity. The automobile business never was better. New wealth always creates new demands; these demands are taken up in the industrial marts of the country and supplied.

Canada is coming through. A great crop means big business for the railways and the steamship lines. There are problems for Canada to settle to be sure. This Dominion could well take a direct road and keep to it in fiscal matters, thereby giving reasonable certainty as to the future. Canadians cannot afford to be recreant to their opportunities. But it would seem that the corner has been turned, and prosperity is with Canada in a very large measure, affecting everyone throughout the country.—St. Catharines Standard.

INDEPENDENCE.

It is a well-known fact that elections here and elsewhere are in practically all cases controlled by the great mass of independent voters who throw their support in one direction this year and in another next time. They are not tied to any one party. They vote as they see fit without regard to party affiliations. In many cases their interest is centred on the local candidate; in others the policy of one party or the other makes the chief appeal. Among this large body of independent-thinking voters one usually finds a conviction that, after all, there are not many essential differences between the two parties. The tariff is an argumentative issue, but in actual practice the tariff is subject to little change whether Conservatives be in power or Liberals hold the reins. These voters often give expression to the opinion, also, that a great deal of valuable time is wasted in discussing the tariff and other points purely for political rather than national purposes. Indeed this opinion frequently resolves itself into a conviction that the old battle of the "ins" and "outs" going on in Canada for many years, is decidedly detrimental to the best interests of the country and should, if possible, be put an end to.

But how can it be stopped? How is it possible to get away from the party system in government and, therefore, form all the discussion and arguments and selfishness and hypocrisy that the party system is certain to produce? Perhaps it is not possible, but if there is a way out it will be found through the election of Independent candidates, men who are not particularly concerned with the fortunes of either party, but who have the single purpose of trying to do something for the good of Canada.

This, of course, is where the Independent member comes in. In most cases it will be found that he has party leanings one way or the other. By virtue of his Independent classification, however, he is not bound to preserve a slavish allegiance to any one party, often, perhaps, in opposition to his own best judgment. There can be no doubt that members of Parliament on many occasions vote for projects over which they are not enthusiastic, but which, for party reasons and for party reasons alone, they feel bound to support. This may be good—from a party standpoint—but it may be very bad for the nation.

It will be argued, of course, that party discipline is necessary, that party members must give unswerving support to their party on all occasions. This is strictly true—from the party man's point of view—but there are a great many people in the country who do not agree with it. If they did they would always support one party through thick and thin. It may be difficult, in hide-bound constituencies, to secure the election of Independent candidates, but it cannot be denied that the number of Independent voters is continually on the increase and that their influence is greater every year. The independent trend, of course, is anathema to exponents of cut-and-dried partyism.

Independent political thinking is frightfully disturbing to some persons, but it is well to keep in mind that this is a changing world. International boundaries have been changed, methods of transportation have been revolutionized, thrones have toppled, a thousand and one new inventions have come into daily use. What good reason is there, then, for thinking that Canadian political affairs must forever be conducted on the lines that were fashionable fifty or even ten years ago?

The existing situation at Ottawa, with all its seeming drawbacks, may be but the first or second stage of a metamorphosis that will bring Canada an entirely new political deal, an entirely new political outlook, even, perhaps, the NATIONAL Government that would mean so much to our future development and success.—Border Cities Star.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.84.
Sterling cables $4.84 1-2.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 26 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was confined to the sale of an odd load of Canadian Western oats and barley. A little business was also transacted in American red winter wheat.

The local cash grain situation was quiet, but prices were well maintained.

The demand for spring wheat flour was confined to odd lots but prices ruled steady. A fair amount of business was done in winter wheat grades and the undertone to the market was steady. Sales of new crop were made at $6.30 to $6.40 per barrel.

Considerable business was done in the millfeed market and the feeling was firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was again extremely dull.

Indications in the egg market point to another upward revision in prices in the near future owing to the increased demand of late. The receipts were 1,731 cases.

The butter market was without any new feature to note, business being quiet and prices firm. The receipts were 1,250 packages.

Owing to the falling off in the demand from local and foreign sources, an easier feeling developed in the cheese market and prices suffered a fractional decline. The receipts were 8,198 boxes.

The tone of the market for beans was steady with a moderate amount of business passing. Car lots of choice white hand-picked sold at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 26 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 16,000; trade spotty but demand broad both on local and shipping account; yearlings $11.00; highest since March; mixed steers and heifers $10.60; bulk fed steers $8.75 to $10.05; other classes steady; general clearance good.

Hogs 15,000; market very uneven, higher in instances; market generally 10 to 25c lower; heavy butchers showing more decline in spots, with extreme weight packing sows as much as 50c lower, top $13.80; most 240 to 280 pound butchers $12 to $13; bulk packing sows $9.50 to $10.25; bulk strong weight slaughter pigs $12.50 to $13.

Sheep 14,000; fat lambs strong to 25c higher; bulk sales at full advance; top natives $15.25; bulk $14.50 to $15; shep steady; bulk fat ewes $5.50 to $6.50; feeding lambs strong, bulk $13.75.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 26 (Canadian Press).—With new export business totalling 700,000 bushels, wheat values gave evidence of a good deal of underlying strength yesterday. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1-8 to 7-8c net higher; corn 1-8 to 5-8c up; oats a shade to 1-4 to 3-8c down, and provisions unchanged to 30c lower.

In connection with other indications of improved export demand for wheat, active inquiry for ocean freight room appeared significant. Besides, higher cash premiums were being paid here and in the southwest for wheat to be delivered at once and vessels space was chartered here for 100,000 bushels of wheat to go to Buffalo, as well as 235,000 bushels to Montreal. Reports were also current that continental European countries were buying at Liverpool. Exports of domestic wheat and flour for July were officialy given at 19,784,000 bushels, compared with 8,905,000 bushels a year ago.

Friends of higher prices for wheat put stress on assertions that hungry mouths in Europe must be fed and that prospective pressure in the leading markets was likely to be absorbed at a profit on account of 200,000,000 bushels estimated crop shortage in Europe, as compared with last year. Favorable weather in the American nothwest, however, tended to brighten the domestic harvest outlook, and advices were at hand that throughout North and South Dakota and Western Minnesota, the yields of wheat are proving much larger than expected.

Corn rallied with wheat. The fact that skies were clear and temperatures normal in the corn belt was partly offset by signs that commercial demand for corn is making steady inroads on visible supplies. Arrivals of new oats tended to ease down the oats market.

Provisions, especially meats, lacked adequate support.

WORDS THAT TELL ON THE SPEAKER

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

"There are certain words and expressions to use which would be just as much of a 'give away' as to eat with the knife or to commit any other solecism in manners," said a writer in the Sun of New York. "Some young men and women eager to succeed in society and business master all their bad manners—due sometimes to careless bringing up—and forget that it is important to study the words they use.

"Their grammar may be perfect, but they cling to certain words and phrases that immediately stamp them as, if not exactly ill bred, at least lacking in a knowledge of the world and its ways.

"Whether or not you like the idea of modifying your vocabulary to suit the demands of society, the cold fact remains that certain words and phrases, as long as you use them, will work against you." The writer cites such expressions as the frequent repetition of "says" "I says," "he says," etc.).

FROM MR. WEBSTER.

Editor Examiner:
Sir:

Mr. Lillicrap, our esteemed citizen, has made many more friends by coming out boldly and strongly in favor of those who support Prohibition like Mr. Duffus, our Liberal candidate. He blames Mr. Burnham and Mr. Peck, who is a an anti-wet, and says they can't be loyal who are not loyal to our homes. I hope to see Mr. Lillicrap able to get out and sit on Mr. Duffus' platform.

E. J. WEBSTER,
Lakefield.

ANSWERS MR. LILLICRAP.

The Editor, The Examiner:
Dear sir:

Mr. Lillicrap, of Lakefield, criticizes Mr. J. H. Burnham because Mr. Burnham is not a supporter of the Ontario Temperance Act. Is Mr. Lillicrap such an ardent supporter of Mr. Peck, because of Mr. Peck's support of the Ontario Temperance Act? and does Mr. Lillicrap say that he is personally and publicly a prohibitionist?

Yours faithfully,
JAS. KINGLEY.

This space occupied by Mr. Burnham's letters is paid for by him.

WHAT BEAT MR. KING.

Sir:

It will be remembered that the King government was able to govern only by grace of the Progressives. Its majority was made up of Progressives and not until a sufficient number of Progressives deserted the King Government did it suffer the reverse which ended in its fall. The deserting Progressives were made up chiefly from Alberta and when friends of the King Government demanded to know why they defeated a government which they had supported from the very beginning of the session and thus brought to the fore the Conservative opposition which professed so few principles championed by the Progressives the latter issued a statement in explanation.

The desertion of Alberta Progressives they said was due to the fact that Mr. King had promised to give Alberta its Crown Lands and had signed an agreement in January to that effect, but when the bill to carry out the agreement was laid before parliament in March it contained a clause with respect to Separate schools which it was alleged was a violation of the autonomy of Alberta, as laid down by the Autonomy Bill upon which Alberta's provincial status was founded The King Government then withdrew the bill and referred the matter to the courts declaring that if the courts found that the King Government was in error, as alleged, the wishes of Alberta would be respected accordingly. If, however, the courts found that the contention of the King Government was well founded and its action legal and proper the bill would be brought down again. The matter is therefore before the courts and the decision is expected soon. The course pursued by the King Government is exactly that of the Ferguson Government in Ontario on a similar point. Mr. Meighen joined with the Alberta Progressives in their contention and as a consequence the King Government was defeated. Following this the vote of censure resulting from the Customs probe brought the King Government down altogether and put Mr. Meighen in power. But the Alberta Progressives returned to their allegiance immediately afterwards and Mr. Meighen's Government was defeated, with the result that the Governor-General granted Mr. Meighen a dissolution and the present general election followed. If the popular vote of the people of Canada returns the King Government to power as the most numerous group it will carry out the judgment of the courts. If Mr. Meighen is returned he will be in the very extraordinary position if the courts decided against him, of having to declare that Mr. King's claim that he had power to do what he did is admited but it will be open to Mr. Meighen to refrain from putting in the disputed clause. If, however, the courts go further and find that Mr. King's clause was just and proper then Mr. Meighen will have to incorporate it in his bill also.

Alberta should have had her Crown Lands long ago. When she became a province she was entitled to receive them from the Federal Government but both parties refrained from giving her the Crown Lands from motives of political expediency hoping that the bait would result in the catch of a few members from Alberta. The province, however, went Progressive and neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives felt disposed to reward its "obstinacy" by hurrying to do it justice. The Albetra Crown Lands have been a federal political football but it is to be hoped that this unhappy and improper state of affairs will be remedied by the judgment of the courts, or to speak acurately, the judgment of the Privy Council of the Empire. If that court decides, however, that the transfer of the Crown Lands must be made without qualification and that Mr. King has no right and no other government has any right to do other than simply transfer these lands it is to be hoped that these lands will be, as no doubt they will be, transferred to Alberta without further delay.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

JUST THE SAME

Someone said some word unkind,
Made the world a world of woe,
But, I wonder, are we blind,
Has creation altered so?
There's the tree upon the hill,
There's the grass along the way,
There's the old sun shining still,
Just the same as yesterday.

Hurt and loss and tale untrue,
So we fill our lives with cares;
What has altered, though, but you?
What is wrong but your affairs?
There's the music of the street,
On the walks the children play,
There's a busy world to greet,
Just the same as yesterday.

Though some hand may do you wrong,
Something fade you tried to clutch,
Do not think of loss too long,
Do not think of self too much.
Find your heart another dream,
Try again, some other way,
And the world again will seem
Just the same as yesterday.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE SEVENTH SENSE

Sir Frederick Motto, one of the greatest living authorities upon the human brain, describes it as containing something like nine thousand million tiny cells.

Referring to this statement a young man writes in with an idea which is interesting to contemplate even if it is highly fanciful.

In this busy beehive of the brain, he suggests; we know that some of these cells record the sensations of sight as brought from the organs of vision. Others have to do with the sensations of hearing as brought from the auditory organs. And so on down the list of senses.

Now, some children are born deaf. Never in their lives have they heard a sound. It is impossible for them to understand what a sound is like. Other children, born blind, have never seen color. It is impossible for them to realize what the different shades of color are like.

They would never realize that such things exist were it not for those around them who have the ability to see and to hear.

In those who are born without certain faculties the portion of the brain dealing with that faculty is unused.

Then, he asks, isn't it possible that somewhere among these millions upon millions of cells there are sleeping senses of which we know nothing?

Isn't it possible that just as individuals born deaf or blind would, if left alone, never comprehend or understand what they are missing, so the whole race is being born without some unknown and unsuspected sense or senses because none appear with those cells awakened never suspicious that such senses are possible?

And, if it is possible that some undeveloped, unawakened sense lies slumbering unsuspected among the countless cells of the human brain, isn't it possible that in time the whole race may develop other senses besides the five we now possess?

This reminds us of a bishop who was addressing a Sunday School. "Now, little children," he said, "perhaps you have never had a bishop speak to you before. I would like to know if there is any little boy or girl that would like to ask a question."

One little boy held up his hand and asked, "Where did Cain get his wife?"

Whereupon the bishop replied, "Ah, that is a very nice question. Now, has any other little girl or boy a question they would like to ask?"

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL FAVORS VIEWS OF EPISCOPATE ASKING FOR REPEAL OF RELIGIOUS LAWS

SEE LITTLE HOPE.

Congress Members Are Pledged To Policy That Provoked Clash.

MEXICO CITY, August 26.—The relief in the repeal or amendment of laws found inimical to the best interests of a country expressed recently by Aaron Saenz, Minister of Foreign Relations in the Calles Government, is used as an argument in a statement issued by the Catholic Episcopate yesterday calling for the repeal or modification of the laws and constitutional provisions which provoked the present conflict between the Church and State in Mexico.

"Senor Saenz has shown the road; will the Government take it; will it respect the wishes of a large majority of the citizens?" asks the statement, which was issued by Bishop Pascual Diaz, official spokesman of the Church in Mexico.

The views attributed to Senor Saenz were reported to have been expressed by him in an interview in San Antonio, Texas.

Little Hope Put in Congress.

Bishop Diaz expresses the opinion that there could be a solution of the conflict along the lines indicated by Senor Saenz, but he says that the new Congress, before which the petition for amendment of the constitution would be presented, is already pledged to stand behind President Calles' religious policy and that only a miracle is likely to make it modify the religious laws and constitutional articles to suit the Church.

Bishop Diaz states that Senor Saenz has admitted the existing of a large group opposed to the religious laws which has spread over the entire republic, but goes on to inquire whether the Saenz statement was not made merely for the purpose of quieting agitation in the United States and the rest of the world.

Bishop Diaz points out that Senor Saenz stated that the new Chamber of Deputies, which meets next month, might possibly change the Constitution so as to placate "the discontented faction now causing the unrest over President Calles' religious policy."

The Bishop goes on to say that while the Foreign Minister declared he believed in the enforcement of existing laws and Constitutional provisions, he also believed in the principle that when a legal mandate or a Constitutional provision is against the best interests of the country it should be removed or amended.

CONDYLIS WILL FORM CABINET FOR SHORT TIME

On Failure of Party Leaders To Choose Coalition Cabinet.

ISSUES STATEMENT.

No Trial Date Set For Deposed Dictator Has Been Set.

ATHENS, August 26 (Canadian Press).—The party leaders failed yesterday to reach an agreement for the formation of a coalition cabinet, and General Condylis, who carried out the recent coup ousting the Pangalos Government, will form a temporary cabinet on the understanding that elections shall be held not later than October.

Admiral Coundouriotis has issued a statement to the people of Greece accepting the post of President, thus resuming the Presidential duties to which he was called by the vote of the fourth National Assembly.

...ding has been definitely decided upon as to his trial, but General Condylis has repeatedly told those demanding the death penalty that the former dictator would be tried according to law.

The new government will probably set up a special court for this purpose. The charges against him will be based on his alleged abolition of the constitution and liberties, the issuance of unlawful decrees, fraudulent traffic with financial concerns, illegal death sentences and subscribing to numerous illicit acts by the members of his entourage and Mme. Pangalos.

SUGAR FROM SAWDUST.

London Chemist Believes Development Is Commercially Possible.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(Associated Press.)—Sawdust sugar may soon be sweetening Britain's afternoon tea.

Dr. W. R. Ormandy told the Congress of Chemists in London that a process of winning sugar from sawdust has now been developed to a stage where he believes it has commercial possibilities.

In one experiment sixty-five pounds of sugar was obtained from 100 pounds of dry saydust. At present, twenty-five per cent. of the timber cut in the world is wasted in sawdust, Dr. Ormandy said.

MAYBEE AND FRASER MEET AT WARKWORTH PARISH PICNIC

Politics Eschewed By Both Northumberland Candidates at Garden Party.

WELL ATTENDED.

Planned as Surprise For Rev. Father Ferguson.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, Aug. 26.—Northumberland Federal candidates met and shook hands on the platform at the garden party held at the fair ground. Wednesday afternoon and evening under the auspices of the congregation of the local Catholic Church, and as a mark of respect for their pastor, Rev. Father Ferguson, who is returning home after an illness of two months.

Milton E. Maybee, Conservative standard bearer, and Mayor W. A. Fraser of Trenton, the Liberal protagonist, both accepted an invitation to attend, and studiously avoided reference to the political fray which is warming up with increasing drumfire on the hustings. The speakers said they were glad to know Father Ferguson has improved sufficiently to permit his return, and expressed the hope that his recovery would be complete.

Mr. Maybee dwelt ... some of the historical episodes in Northumberland's early days, including the event and the French officer from whom the name of the Bay of Quinte derived its name, and of his plans to interest the Canadia Historical Association in suitably marking for posterity one of the memorable events in the history of the county.

Mr. Fraser's remarks included an emphasis on his Northumberland connections through agriculture and other industries, and both Mr. Fraser and Mr. Maybee said they hoped to address W...worth people on political questions in the near future.

Mr. P. S. Ewing in response to the request of Rev. Father Cleary, who has been in charge of the parish, fulfilled the duties of chairman very acceptably.

Supper was served in the Exhibition building on the Fair grounds to hundreds of persons from the village and country, and from Hastings, Norwood, Campbellford and other towns in the district. Among those who helped in the details of work were Mrs. P. Moran, Miss Minnie Gallagher, Miss St. George, Miss Morrison, Miss Bain, John O'Reilly, Edward Duff, William Drain, John Shea and John Gorman.

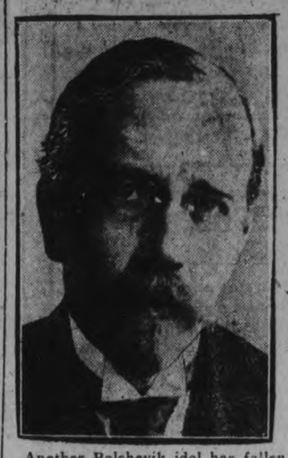
IDOL IS REPLACED.



Another Bolshevik idol has fallen. Leon Kamoneff, above, commissar of trade, once member of the so-called triumvirate which rules Russia and one of the principals of the communist world, who has been replaced by a mere youth, M. Mikoran of Tiflis, a friend of the head of the communist party.

That "Kruschen" Feeling!

Show us the man or woman that's never fallen victim to the glamour of the circus, and we'll show you somebody that's never been young.

Now the circus is the pulpit of the gospel of physical fitness. You know that feeling of unreasonable envy that grows on you as you watch the performers' breathless feats? Isn't the explanation of it the dreary fact that you're not so fit yourself as you'd like to be — that a sedentary life has lowered your vitality and sapped your energy?

Isn't it time to put an end to this sorry state of affairs? Isn't it high time you enlisted the help of the "little daily dose" of Kruschen Salts?

As much as will lie on a 10-cent piece every morning, tasteless in your first cup of coffee or tea, provides your eliminating organs with the reminder and the daily aid that nature prescribes; but, in the stuffy indoor inactive life you're forced to lead, fails to supply from your food in the natural way.

Each little pinch is a blend in nature's own proportions of nature's six essential mineral salts. Every scrap of the poisonous waste-matter that results in constipation, and all the attendant evils of constipation, is gently but surely driven out of your inside. Clear, refreshed blood is sent coursing gloriously through your every vein, to set you tingling from top to toe with "that Kruschen feeling!"

Buy a bottle of Kruschen Salts now — and start the "little daily dimeful" at once. You'll grow steadily fitter every day, and your spirits will reflect the change. It's the little daily dimeful that does it!

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

The dose of a dimeful taken every morning is found in practice just the right amount of a most invigorating daily tonic. The medicinal dose for persons suffering from pains of rheumatism, gout, lumbago or sciatica, or habitual constipation, with inactive liver, etc., is half to one teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water before breakfast. Every druggist sells Kruschen. A 75c bottle lasts three months. This works out at half-a-cent a day for health and happiness. Get a bottle at your druggist's to-day and start to-morrow. It's the little daily dimeful that does it!

Make Presentation.

On Friday evening the members of St. James' Anglican Church gathered at the home of Mr. W. J. Clark to spend a social evening and make a small presentation to Miss Mildred before she enters a new life.

Mr. Lloyd Boate read the address and Mr. Herman Franks made the presentation such as follows:

Omemee, Ont., August 19, 1926.

Miss Mildred Clark.

Dear Mildred,—It is with mingled feelings we, the members of St. James' Church, are gathered here to-night. We feel sorrow when we think of losing one of our bright young people, and especially as you have been so beneficial in our church as organist for a number of years.

We realize that this meant a great effort on your part. You were always willing to give your best to the church under any circumstances. We feel glad when we think of the new and happy life you are entering into; and glad to know you are not going away from our midst.

Our earnest hope is that we have not lost a member but gained one. As a slight token of our appreciation of your services as organist, we ask you to accept this purse, with best wishes for a happy and prosperous future.

Signed on behalf of the Congregation,

Herman Franks.
Lloyd Boate.

A very pleasant evening was spent in games and music. The evening broke up about midnight, every one wishing Mildred much success and happiness when she enters her new home.

REV. J. WILKS RELIEF PASTOR

Has Acted in Millbrook United Church During Holiday Season.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 26.—Rev. Joseph Wilks, who has been occupying the pulpit of the United Church for the past three Sundays during the absence of the pastor, who is on holidays, interested his hearers, particularly at the Sunday morning service, by the statement that within a week's time it would be ten years since his coming to Millbrook from California to make his home.

During that time Mr. Wilks had made a host of warm friends in the community and beyond its bounds and among the membership and adherents of all denominations.

Expressing his appreciation of the many courtesies which have been extended to him during his residence here, Mr. Wilks said that the privilege he prized above all others was that of preaching during the period of the pastor's holidays each summer—a privilege which the Quarterly Board has asked him to accept during the entire ten years, and to which he has considered it a pleasure and a means of grace to respond. There was no doubt in the minds of his listeners that to the congregation his ministry has been both acceptable and profitable.

Strongly evangelistic in his preaching and bringing the subject of personal responsibility forcefully home to his hearers, Rev. Mr. Wilks' subjects during the three Sundays he has occupied the pulpit this summer included: "The Place of Our Sanctuary," "Men and Trees—a Comparison," "Losing the Sense of God's Presence," "An Urgent Call, Be Strong," "God's Advice for Men Today" and "Returning to God."

Entertained Friends.

Miss Jean Stinson recently entertained a number of her young friends in honor of her visitor, Miss Hope Thompson, of Belleville, the gathering being on the occasion of the hostess' fourteenth birthday. Fine weather favored the event, which was held on the lawn, when tennis and other games were enjoyed, Councillor and Mrs. P. Stinson doing all in their power to give their young guests the happiest possible time.

Among those present were: Mary and Marjorie Vance, Dorothy Gilmour, Eva Howson, Nellie Miller, Robina Challice, Miriam Lord, Toy Nattrass, Hazel Morton, Marguerite Hawken, Geraldine McKpight, Helen Campbell, Kate Donnelly, Marian and Martha Earle, Ruth Thorndyke, Margaret Russell, Nancy Whyte, Charlotte and Annie Mc. Mahon, Dorothy McDowell, Elma Davis, Mary Nattrass, Myrtle Reeves (Toronto), Margaret Fallis, Vanita Ingram, J. Stinson and J. McKnight.

Many Friends Here.

Miss E. C. Hawken, missionary-teacher at the United Church Home and Boarding School for Ruthenian children, Wahstao, Alberta, has many warm friends in Millbrook and vicinity who will be interested to learn that she spent her annual month's holiday in the East this summer owing to her father's ill-health, leaving Toronto for return to her Western field of labor on Monday, August 23.

Mr. Hawken will probably spend the coming winter with his son in Vancouver, and it is possible that it will be necessary for Miss Hawken to resign her position another year and devote her time to the care of her father altogether. A family reunion at Markdale, where the homestead is located, in honor of her father's 79th birthday, was a pleasing feature of Miss Hawken's holiday stay.

Speaking of the work in the West, Miss Hawken, who has now had eight years' experience of labor among the Ruthenians, particularly the children, states that the West is very hot and dry this year in Alberta, and that nineteen children who are orphans, have been kept in the home all through the holidays. The broken homes in the colony, the result of separation of husband and wife, one or other deserting home and family, leave heart-breaking conditions with which the missionaries have to deal. "Every child has a right to be well-born and taken care of by both parents. It makes our hearts ache to see some of our boys and girls shedding bitter tears because mother ran away and left them. One of our boys had a good home in Edmonton. His mother left three years ago and took the baby girl with her, leaving him with his father. The latter was fairly good to him until he fell in love with another woman when he sold everything, found a boarding house for his boy, slipped out under cover of darkness, and has not been heard of since. No money was sent for board, so the boy was reported to the Children's Department in Edmonton, and the authorities placed him in our home. He is a merry, healthy, noisy boy of twelve years, but sometimes the loneliness weighs on him and he cries and cries—not a friend in the world but us. But he loves the mission and says he knows the Lord was good to him when He had him placed there."

The Wahstao Home is larger and nicer than the one at Kolokreeka where Miss Hawken spent six years, the present building having been put up in 1916. "A picture is always interesting to a Ukrainian. They keep the Sunday School cards, tickets, picture rolls, etc., and their walls are just lined with them; an artistic arrangement, too, but the color schemes are not always pleasing. They love all colors massed together, even in their clothes. We often see women with yellow head shawls, purple sweaters and orange or green skirts."

It is probable that the Nile has a greater variety of fish than any river in the world. An expedition sent recently by the British Museum brought back 9,000 specimens.

PRESENT STRUGGLE IN MEXICO DATES BACK TO REVOLUTION

Differences Began When the Church Stayed Neutral During Struggle.

SUPPORTED DICTATOR

Reform Laws Were Passed When Nationalists Gained Control.

The following brief history of the struggle between the government and the church in Mexico sketches in the outstanding incidents in the century-long conflict and presents a summary of the present chief legislative differences between the two. It was prepared by a United Press correspondent after a consultation with a spokesman for the Mexican Government and a representative of the Catholic church and is believed to be as impartial a statement of historical facts as is possible in the presentation of a situation every element in which is controversial to a greater or less degree.

The roots of the present religious struggle in Mexico reach back more than a century to the period when Mexico freed herself from the rule of Spain.

The Catholic church then was the state church in Mexico just as it was in Spain. With its traditional respect for established authority, the church refrained from assisting the revolution and there and then began the series of differences between the church and the civil government which has persisted intermittently to the present day.

Nevertheless, in that first of Mexico's many revolutions the two most revered figures in the early struggles for Mexican nationality were two Catholic priests, Fathers Hidalgo and Morelos, who raised the "cry of independence" from Spanish domination. Both were excommunicated by the church authorities, seized by the representatives of Spanish monarchy and put to death for their part in the uprising against the crown.

After the separation of Mexico from Spain was accomplished the church readjusted itself to the situation. It supported the efforts of Iturbide to make himself emperor, but his power waned and he finally fell. Through the long administration of the dictator, Santa Anna, who was in control when the war between Mexico and the United States was fought, the influence of the church supported his government.

When Mexico's first nationalist leader, Benito Jaures, emerged from the struggle that had been waged from the fall of Iturbide to that of Santa Anna, he took steps to dissolve all connection between church and government. In the constitution of 1857, modeled largely on that of the United tSates, Jaurez and his followers placed provisions which they thought, when articulated into specific law, would curtail the secular power of the church in Mexico. Soon afterward they decided them not sufficiently drastic to accomplish this purpose and passed the famous reform laws of 1859. These imposed restrictions on the activities of the church similar to those at issue in the present situation.

Meanwhile political conditions in Europe were such that it was possible, owing to the civil war in the United States, to interest some of the great powers in setting up a state in Mexico. Unpaid foreign claims, offenses against foreigners due to Mexican revolutionary unrest, an acquaintance with the potential wealth of the country, territorial and dynastic ambition, as well as sympathy in some quarters with the church's protests against the reform laws, were among motives ascribed to the interference with culminated in placing a European prince on a Mexican throne. The principal backers of this movement, among whom were many leaders of the Mexican church, believed that the Mexican people were unfitted for a democratic form of government and that only a monarchy could establish the life of the country on a sound basis.

Napoleon III of France was willing to support the attempt to establish a monarchy and lent the aid of French troops. When the extent of the French monarchial aims became evident, Great Britain and Spain, originally parties to a joint expedition to enforce the collection of claims, withdrew their forces. Maximilian, an archduke of the Hapsburg ruling house of Austria, was accompanied to Mexico by a French army and placed on the throne as emperor. His rule lasted but a few years. Shortly after the French soldiers withdrew, Maximilian was captured and shot.

During the administration of Maximilian the church in the main supported his government and the reform laws were not in effect. But when a republic again replaced the monarchy the reform laws under the administration of Tejada were reiterated and slightly amplified, again opening a wide breach between the church and the government.

Then Porfirio Diaz, called "the strong man of Mexico," took power He at first was inclined to enforce the religious provisions of the constitution and the reform laws which the church has always asserted were in violation of its right. But as his long rule lengthened, his policy toward the church changed. The laws were not abrogated but many of them practically lapsed through non-enforcement. In the latter portion of Diaz' regime, which lasted from 1884 to 1910, the ecclesiastical authorities gave their support to his administration.

Then came the great revolution. Diaz fled to France and Francesco Madero came to the presidency back by the growing agrarian movement. Fearing a return of the attitude of Jaurez and Tejeda, the church was inclined to favor the rise of Victoriano Huerta, who displaced Madero. Huerta's rule was short.

Carranza then emerged as the leading political figure and he not only attempted to have the reform laws enforced but to the constitution, adopted in 1917, during his administration, new provisions dealing with the church were added to those contained in the constitution of 1857.

Carranza fell and with his fall came the ascendancy of Alvaro Obregon as president. Ten years of civil war had made havoc of Mexico and Obregon devoted all his energy to the work of physical reconstruction. He evaded the church question except he when attacked the problem of primary education, declaring his intention to reduce the widespread illiteracy of the Mexican people. The religious problem did not come to an acute crisis during his administration. Only once did it approach such a point when Obregon compelled the papal legate to leave the country, claiming that the church authorities had violated the provisions of the constitution. The former president announced a few days ago, however, that the attitude of President Calles, his succesor, has his approval and support.

President Calles, a year after his inaguration, turned his attention to enforcing legislation which had come into being as the result of the long revolutionary struggle, including the religious laws. This action of the president led to the crisis now existing in the internal affairs of Mexico.

The religious laws are based on the 1857 constitution. Their genesis is in the statement in that document that:

"The federal authorities shall have exclusive power to exercise in matters of religious worship and outward ecclesiastic forms such intervention as by law authorized."

The church says that once admit this right on the part of the government and all rights which it claims to belong to the church are abrogated. The civil authorities hold that because of peculiar conditions in Mexico and the power that through the centuries had come to the church it is necessary to place this counter-power in the hands of the government.

The constitution of 1857 followed the statement just quoted with this:

"The church and state are independent of each other. Congress shall not enact laws establishing or forbiding any religion."

The constiution refuses to recognize or consent to the establishment of monastic orders. It forbids religious corporations to acquire title to or administer real property other than the buildings immediately destined to the purposes of such corporations. It forbids ecclesiastics to be legislators and this applies also to the office of president and vice-president.

The constitution makes marriage promise to tell the truth and to comply with obligations.

The reform laws of 1859 provided that all church property "comes under the dominion of the nation." Church authorities were forbidden to accept gifts or indemnifications in the shape of real estate. Convents of nuns were regulated and provision was made for the repayment to nuns who wished to leave convents of the dowry paid on their entrance.

Transfers of wealth of the church covered by the reform laws to any individual or person who has not received authority from the government to receive the same were declared null and void.

The reform laws of 1873 were largely a reiteration of those of 1859. Those of 1874 made several additions in respect to the church. A guarantee of the exercise of all religions was proclaimed; authorized holidays were only those which had as their object the celebration of civil events and Sundays were designated as days of rest.

Religious instruction or the official practice of any religion was forbidden in any public institutions Religious acts or ceremonies were prohibited outside the church. All legacies given to ministers who may have given spiritual assistance to a testator during a sickness from which he died were declared null and void. Ministers of religion were denied privileges not enjoyed by other citizens. The right to receive alms was confined to the interior of churches.

The constitution of 1917 amplifies the law regarding primary education. Primary instruction both in public and private institutions is required to be secular. Religious institutions or ministers of any creed are forbidden to establish or direct schools of primary instruction. Private primary schools are permitted only if subject to official supervision. Citizenship is withdrawn from any one compromising himself in any way before any minister of any religious creed not to observe the present constitution or the laws arising thereunder.

Ministers are considered as persons exercising a profession and their activities governed by laws covering the profession.

State legislatures are empowered to designate the maximum of ministers of religious creeds according to the need of localities and only Mexicans by birth were permitted to be ministers.

Ministers are forbidden in meetings or in acts of worship or in propaganda to criticize the fundamental laws of the country, the authorities in particular or the government in general. They have no vote and are not eligible for office or entitled to assemble for political purposes.

Religious publications are forbidden to comment on poltical affairs. Political associations bearing any word or any indication as to religious belief are forbidden as are assemblies of a political character held in place of public worship.

The church maintains that these laws as a whole are a denial of religious liberty and ecclesiastical authorities deny that they are the real voice of the Mexican people.

The civil authorities claim that the regulations from 1857 on were made necessary by the attitude of those in control of the church and that if that institution confines itself within spiritual channels the laws touching the religious establishment will in no way hamper its activities.

WANTS WIFE, TOO

WINNIPEG, Man., August 25.—(Canadian Press).—Ivar Autunen, proud wearer of the longest moustache grown in modern times, and who has already ridden the rails and tramped a distance of 13,643 miles on the American continent in quest of an employer who doesn't smoke, drink nor chew tobacco, stopped recently in Winnipeg. His prize moustache measures twenty-two inches from tip to tip.

In winter time Autunen says he uses the curly growth as ear-muffs, during his long hikes across country. It is long enough to draw around and tie the ends together at the back of the head.

Being intrvieewed by reporters is not in Ivar's line, as he is deaf and speaks very broken English. He carries a letter explaining all about himself.

In addition to seeking an employer having all the virtues of abstinence in regard to alcoholic beverages and tobacco, he wants to find a wife. He admits, however, that it would be necessary for him to obtain steady employment before taking the matrimonial plunge.

When jobs are scarce Autunen makes the odd dollar exhibiting the "largest crop of moustachios in the world" as his letter of introduction claims. He also gets a small income from utilizing the growth for producing weird music, similar to that of an organ.

In his broken English the Finlander declared:

"Smoker is many times more dangerous than drunkard. He burn forest and houses; he make mine explosion, kill too much men and poison body."

WOULD PROHIBIT EATING TOO MUCH

PHILADELPHIA, August 26. — Canadian Press. — The prohibition of unrestricted eating is more important than the prohibition of drinking intoxicants, the International Dental Congress in session here, was told yesterday by Dr. John T. Buckley of the University of Southern California.

"People to-day are living artificial lives," the Californian declared, "and are expecting natural results. It simply cannot be done. When people have the moral courage to admit to a physician that their ailments are caused by vicious habits, such as over-indulgence in food or drink, anger, worry and lack of personal hygiene, then only will the physician be able to diagnose with accuracy.

A New Frock With Plaited Tiers

The straight-line silhouette is smartly treated in this simple frock with its frills finely plaited in the Paris manner. Note, also, the unusual treatment of the tie collar, the ends of which are crossed over forming a becoming V, and fastened to the front with buttons. YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Jet is the talismanic gem for this day. Worn against the flesh, it protects its wearer from sorrow and bad luck, unless it is broken or chipped; then it should be thrown away at once, for it loses all its power for good.

The Romans believed that those born on an anniversary of this date should wear an emerald, the stone sacred to Venus, goddess of Love. Those who wore it were thought to have unusually clear vision.

Deep green is the lucky hue for today. It is potent for those who refuse to welcome old age, since it is symbolic of spring and new growth.

Magnonette is the flower chosen for this date.

JOAN'S ESCAPE

John Meredith slumped down in his chair, as though I had struck him.

"What can I do, what can I do? Surely Joan's stepfather should have taken some care of her."

"Was there any more reason why he should have, than you," I replied. "He knows no more about it than you do. He thinks just as you do that long as she had all the money she wanted to spend, she needed nothing else. It is no credit to him or you that because of a clause in your mother's will—saying that if scandal touched Joan before she was 21 Mr. Robinson could keep all her money, giving her a small income until she married—she did not overstep all social traces."

"What are you telling me?" he exclaimed.

"I am telling you the truth," I answered, as I, too, arose to my feet, and looked him straight in the eye, for I was nearly as tall as he. I continued, "Truth, you know, is usually unpalatable."

"But how did she get out of this terrible predicament?"

"Beneficent fate stepped in. The man was killed in an automobile accident day before yesterday. Otherwise she would probably have been trapped into a mock marriage and been made to pay a check of 20,000 which he had forged."

At John Meredith's startled gasp, I went on.

"You will probably find Joan this minute at the hospital, where Barry Cornwall's wife is awaiting a babe, while the father is lying in the morgue."

"Do you mean to tell me the scoundrel was married?"

"Yes."

"How did Joan find it out?"

"The man told her, himself. She insisted on having me as a witness to their marriage. He saw that he could not get away with what he was trying to do and had to tell her. He also told her that he needed twenty thousand dollars immediately and that when they were married he was going to tell her stepfather what he had done and get the twenty thousand dollars for hushing the matter up."

"The dirty dog. My poor sister."

"Yes, John Meredith, your poor sister. Poor because she had no man to protect her."

"How can I ever thank you, Miss Dean, for what you have done for my sister?"

"Why—why," I stopped, then a thought struck me.

"You can come back here for dinner with me tonight, and then take me to a theater and afterward a cabaret and supper," I answered.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

THE DUKE OF SUSSEX AND LADY AUGUSTA MURRAY

In the days of romantic chivalry and fighting knighthood, it seemed quite fitting for a prince to express his love in frank and passionate phrases. Not so, however, in modern or semi-modern times. Kings and princes keep a stiff upper lip and compress their love letters into formal phrases. The love letter printed below is, therefore, the more interesting because it was written by a Prince of England and out-does in romantic extravagance of expression many an amatory epistle of a less ennobled individual.

The Duke of Sussex was the son of George III. and an uncle of Queen Victoria. At twenty he went to Italy for his health and in Rome met the Lady Augusta Murray, six years his senior, with whom he fell passionately in love. They were married by an English minister in Rome named Gunn and later remarried in London by banns. But because the Duke's marriage violated the Royal Marriage Act, his son, at the Duke's death, was deniedhis father's title.

"Will you allow me to come this evening? It is my only hope. Oh, let me come and we will send for Mr. Gunn. Everything but this is hateful to me. More than forty-eight hours have I passed without the smallest nourishment. Oh, let me not live so. Death is certainly better than this; which, if in forty-eight hours more it has not taken place, must follow; for by all that is holy, till I am married, I will eat nothing; and if I am not to be married the promise shall die with me! I am resolute. Nothing in the world shall alter my determination. If Gunn will not marry me I will die. . . . I will be conducted in everything by you but I must be married or I die. I would rather see none of my family than be deprived of you. You alone can make me; you alone shall this evening. I will sooner drop than give you up. Good God! How I feel! And my love to be doubted sincere and warm! The Lord knows the truth of it; and as I say, if in forty-eight hours I am not married I am no more. Oh, Augusta, my soul, let us try; let me come. I am capable of everything; I fear nothing, and Mr. Gunn, seeing our resolution, will agree. I am half dead. Good God! what will become of me? I shall go mad most undoubtedly."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.)

Woodson Dixon, advertising director of the Long Beach (California) Morning Sun, says:

That even in this age of radios, newspapers are more essential than ever before, as the public demands the news of today in print, not only for their own community but the entire world as well, and no other source of information will ever be able to supplant their newspapers.

In every walk of life, daily happenings are discussed by old and young alike and the arrival of the newspaper is the most important event in the majority of homes. A newspaper can make or break an individual and while it is impossible for any one paper to wreck a city, they either build or retard the progress of the community they represent.

They mold public opinion and the prime motive of every newspaper should be to serve the community it represents.

SCOW DAMAGES CORN STEAMER

"Simon Langell" Struck at Waterline and Lists Badly.

MAY LOSE CARGO.

ST. CATHARINES, August 26.—(Canadian Press). — The steamer Simon Langell, bound from Port Colborne to Montreal, laden with corn, was struck at the water-line yesterday afternoon by the corner of a steel scow loaded with mud in connection with the deepening of the channel for the ship canal. Water rapidly entered the hold of the steamer, and although listing badly, the captain managed to pilot her to Welland, where she is now resting on the bottom of the canal in 18 feet of water. It is believed that her cargo will be ruined.

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1926

(Copyright, 1926, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The sun in benefic sapect dominates this day according to astrology, which finds Mars adverse.

It is a day for pushing all important business and for making the most of every opportunity as it comes.

Big enterprises are to be launched and new millions piled up, the seers prophesy, through conditions arising from foreign events.

Under this direction of the stars political activity is supposed to be stimulated and there is good luck presaged for work started today.

This is a favorable sway under which to seek employment of any sort and promotions or increases in salaries may be possible while this configuration prevails.

Much bitter competition may be expected in any sort of effort under this rule of the stars which presages hard fought autumn political campaigns.

It is well for husbands and wives to practice patience today, which is menacing, is to be seen in falling buildings, broken bridges, and other uncommon accidents.

Again the seers make depressing prognostications concerning the labor situation in England.

Russia is seen by occultists as likely to involve the United States in an embarrassing situation.

Expansion of the steel and armament trades in Great Britain is foretold as a probability in the early autumn.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect much of romance in the coming year when there may be many pleasant plans realized.

Children born on this day have the augury of success and prosperity all through their lives. They may be too sentimental for peace of mind.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

JUANITA

The lovely Spanish favorite Juanita has come to be a "name without a country." The music of its syllables proved irresistible to many countries and in modern times it lost its Spanish heritage and came to be as American as Anne or Edith.

Juanita means "grace of the Lord." It comes originally from the same source as John. It was probably in honor of St. John the Evangelist's guardianship of the Blessed Virgin that her name became joined with his. In the fifth century a Giovanni (John) Maria Visconti of Milan appears and straightway Juan Maria became a popular name in Spain.

By adding a final "a," the feminine Juana was formed, a name which proved more acceptable than the masculine Juan as a preface to Maria, and soon Maria was dropped entirely and Juana became a separate name. Spain is fond of endearments and diminutives, as Rosita and Carmencita and scores of other names prove, so presently the ever-popular Juanita was evolved. Many famous women of Spain bore the name, among them a queen, who was known as Juana la Loca. Her reign in Castille was an unfortunate and distressing period.

It may be that the Spanish influence in the Southwestern states brought Juanita into vogue in this country, or her fame, according to some, may have been established by the country-wide vogue of the old song with which even the present generation is familiar. Who does not remember:

"Juanita, ask thy soul if we should part"?

Juanita's talismanic-gem is the fire-opal. That gem of Sunny Spain promises her protection from evil spirits, good health and happiness. Tuesday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(United Press).—Among the hats which will be prominent this Fall are wide-brimmed models of black velvet, simply trimmed. While small hats with highly draped crws are among the new imports from Paris American women, especially those in the Misses class, will undoubtedly cling to large hats for dress wear for early Fall. Boyish felt shapes continue to rule for sports wear.

Blouse and bolero treatments are found on most of the early Fall dresses designed for day and formal wear. Where the blouse adds width to the upper portion of the dress the skirt is almost invariably slender. Full, flaring skirts on the ontrary often accompany the bolero. The sleeveless bolero designed for formal occasions is posed over a form-fiting bodice. The bolero extends above the normal waist line. A sash is worn about the normal waist tying at one side and the full skirt flares at the hem line.

Beaded taffeta evening gowns are among the unusual Fall models which follow the bouffant lines of period frocks. One particularly beautiful model is fashioned of gold and bronze changeable taffeta beaded in gold and bronze beads. The bodice is slender following the lines of bust and narrowing at the waist line with horizontal rows of beadwork forming a girdle effect just below the normal waist line. The skirt which gathers on at the waist is widened at the hem where horizontal and alternate rows of gold and bronze beadwork extend to the knees. Black taffeta frocks beaded in white crystals are also shown for dinner occasions.

Organdy dresses have suddenly appeared in numbers on Fifth Avenue. Each blond shades posed over black slips and worn with black satin bows with streamer ends posed at the side front are those most noted. A typical frock of this sort, made of blond or gandy, has a semi-fitted bodice of normal waist length with a full gathered skirt finished with an eight-inch hemstitched hem. Under this is worn a slender black satin slip. The sleeves may be either short or long and the neckline is made in fishu effect. A black satin bow is posed on the left hip with streamer ends extending the length of the dress.

Daily Short Story

FATE

"I shan't marry. I shall have a career," announced Doris.

With two of the girls in her graduating class she sat at the garden tea-table. They had been out of college four weeks. They were discussing Life.

"And what is marriage but a career?" asked Jane, in superior tone.

"Risky is right," said Doris with finality. "You may be the most wonderful wife in the world; you may be equipped right up to the minute for the career of marriage—and fail! No—I'm for independence spelled with a big I and then if I fail it is my own fault."

"Are you going to follow Art?" queried Betty. "You really are clever in so many artistic lines, do."

Doris bowed, in mock appreciation. "Thanks for the encouragement. Yes—I'm going to be an architect. It is a big field for women today—domestic architecture. I have always loved building and planning houses since I was a child. I think I made my first doll house out of a shoe box."

Jane sat up straight. "I'll just lay a little wager here on your mother's tea-table, Do, that you get married and live in a house some Jack builds before you ever build one of your own."

Betty offered slight protest. "Oh, Jane, she wouldn't do that. None of us will marry as soon as that. Have a heart. We're just free from one restriction—college."

"All right— I repeat my offer: A real bachelor dinner to you at the club—if you aren't married before you build your first house against—well, any sort of a wedding present to me when I do."

The girls were much amused at Jane. She seemed serious. "You laugh but I'm fed up on the girls who rave on about the careers they are going to have after they leave college and then—the first time a man puts the question to them in a clever way, they answer it with yes."

"Hear—hear!" cried the girls.

"Myself—I'm going to marry and have a family when I find the man I can't live without," added Jane, with diminishing asperity.

And so the wager stood.

Doris did take up her studies with whole-hearted intention and even the girls who had joked her about it began to believe she was in earnest. She took a prize during her second year for a house she had designed, and in many of the decorator's magazines she managed to get her work displayed.

If she had not tempted Fate by deciding to have one summer at Fontainbleu to "finish" her off in her profession, she might have gone on with her chosen career.

With several other students she sailed on a big liner for France. Betty and her husband of three months were down to see her off, but Jane being out West visiting some social settlements could do nothing but send a telegram.

"I'm hoping to stage that dinner when you get back, old dear," she wired, characteristically.

They sailed in the light of the moon. Doris had never been so lovely as she was in the simple sport clothes she had designed for herself for this, her first trip abroad.

"What a special training it must take to make a good builder of ocean liners," she was saying as she sat, lost in admiration of the comfort and beauty of the lounge, the first night out, after dinner.

Her companions were the passengers who sat at her table. With the free camaraderie of ship-board life, they had fallen easily into acquaintance and were chattering like friends.

A tall, rather quiet man, slender, pale, thoughtful and wearing intellectual-looking spectacles, smiled at her. "Does it seem such a task?" he asked her.

"Oh—yes. I can design a house and have a lot of fun with it and turn out a job that is not too bad. But—an ocean liner——"

The man still looked at her. "I happen to be a marine architect and—it seems very simple," he said, quietly.

"Oh," breathed Doris.

"And you?" the voice was asking. "I—oh, I am specializing in domestic architecture," she told him.

They ate three meals a day together at the table, sitting next to each other. They had gruel or broth together as they stood on deck watching a deck tennis game. They had afternoon tea from baskets held on their laps on deck every afternoon. They danced and walked and read and talked together for eight days.

They were both architects. They had much in common. But, had they had nothing mutual but the fact that they had fallen very much in love with each other, it would have been enough. Their fate was sealed.

Doris made Arthur Everett promise not to say anything about it to anyone. They would write to each other, meet if their paths crossed in France, come home on the same boat. And then—if they still cared—Doris would make marriage her career.

When she arrived home in America she telegraphed to Jane who was still in the Western mining camp settlement I

"I'm wondering when you will want that wedding present. I'll have to buy it."

YOUNG VIKINGS CONQUER LAND

Planned to Bring Out Some of Denmark's Unemployed Farm Workers.

SEEKING HOMES

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 26. Canadian Press. — In the old days the Vikings went out over the seas on conquest bent, but their descendants, the young Danes of to-day, have a different way of doing things. They come out to the new lands with a different spirit. So says C. Mikkelson, of Hjorring, Denmark, who is on his way across Canada studying the possibilities of settling his countrymen on the prairies. And yet, he added, they do come to conquer, in a sense. They are determined to conquer the land they take up to build homes for themselves and their families.

To-day the little country of Denmark is supporting 50,000 unemployed and Mr. Mikkelson is fostering a scheme is bring over the surplus population to Canada.

So far in his trip, Mr. Mikkelson declared he had been greatly impressed with the vastness of the Dominion and its possibilities. He had been struck with the similarity of farming coditions here. He gave it as his opinion that no country was more suitable for Danish settlement than Canada. The climate and the type of agriculture here, were eminently suitable, he said.

Denmark is at present in an extraordinary position, according to the visitor; a position which makes steady emigration necessary. Due to the situation in the currency and the inability of the Danish farmer to get as many crowns out of the pound or the dollars he used to, farming has become increasingly difficult and in industry the country found it a great task to keep up with competition. The result Mr. Mikkelson said, was increased unemployment and a further drain on the country, because of the government's generosity in relief, sick benefits and old age pensions. Big families, he added, were a characterisic of Danish life, which makes emigration even more necessary.

Mr. Mikkelson proposes to make a brief visit to the United States following his Canadian trip.

MINORITIES TALK ABOUT OBJECTS

Charge Suppression of Civil Rights—Other League Meetings.

ARMS COMMITTEE.

GENEVA, August 26 (Canadian Press).—The European Minorities Congress, which opened here yesterday, listened to an outline of its object given by President Wilfan, Slovene member of the Italian Parliament—international collaboration by the minority groups to safeguard civic, economic and political equality; the maintenance of racial schools and national traits, and the achievement of these by peaceful methods.

The Catalonian delegation charged Spain with suppression of their civic rights. The Catalonian spokesman, Dr. Mappons Anglassell, declared that Catalonia would always keep her language, literature and individuality, adding "injustice can never stifle our demands. It will engender only catastrophe and war." Germany and France joined hands at the preliminary Disarmament Conference in securing the adoption against the opposition of the British and United States delegations, of a resolution concerning the average age of fleets.

The French formula for estimating the age of a fleet was approved by a majority on Tuesday and yesterday the German project was adopted, declaring that the age thus obtained constitutes one of the factors to be taken into consideration, although it does not seem possible to apply it as an exact coefficient to the tonnage of the different countries in order to arrive at an equitable comparison of naval values.

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE FLYING SHIP—XII — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

MONEY LOANED ITALIAN INDUSTRY IS TAKEN OVER BY GOVERNMENT

Turned Over Under Decree Unknown To Outside World.

U. S. MONEY.

Borrowed Money Was To Be Used To Purchase Raw Materials.

CHIASSO, August 25. — Money which Italian industrialists have borrowed in the United States, ostensibly to build up Italian productive power, has by a decree of law unknown to the outside world, been turned over to the Italian Treasury, it is declared by a group of Italian Liberals opposed to Mussolinism, who are about to launch a fresh campaign against the Fascist Government.

This decree has not been printed in Italy, they declare, because the Government's censorship forbids, but they intend to print it as well as the decree creating a special budget in every other country in Europe.

In this campaign, which is a renewal of the Liberals' attack on the dictatorship of Mussolini, they expect American investors and financiers who consider that the Premier has straightened out Italian finances to be especially interested.

The decree, which is dated Feb. 10, was issued at the time Count Volpi made his United States debt settlement and United States credit was opened not only to the Italian state, but to Italian industry through the Italian Institute of Credit. The total amount of United States money going to Italy in this form is reported to be about $100,000,000.

The opposition Liberals declare the loans were made largely on the understanding that they were to be used for the purchase of steel, cotton, coal and rubber, but that by the February 10th decree they were turned over to the Italian Treasury, which obligated itself only to supply the borrowers with the necessary dollars to meet the interest and amortization charges.

The loans were made largely through Alberto Beneduce, head of the Italian Institute of Credit, for public utilities—an institution founded in 1919, previous to Mussolinism, to help find capital for the development of Italy.

Beneduce accompanied Count Volpi to the United States and part of the Liberals' desire to expose the real purpose of the ostensibly private loans is undoubtedly due to their bitterness against Beneduce, who formerly was as bitterly anti-Fascist as they, but went over to Mussolini last spring.

Text of Decree.

The decree by which the Italian Treasury is declared to have taken in private American loans and to have given the borrowed liras for their dollars follows. It is dated Rome, February 10, 1926, and is signed by King Victor Emmanuel, Mussolini, Count Volpi and Rocco Belluzzo. It reads:

"Proposed by the Minister of Finance in agreement with the Ministers of Justice and National Economy: It is considered opportune to control exchange in respect to loans in foreign moneys which could have been made abroad through the Institute of Credit for enterprises of public utility. We decree that the Minister of Finance is authorized to acquire from the Institute of Credit for enterprises of public utility at an agreed rate of exchange the result in foreign moneys of the borrowing operations that the institute will make abroad. The Minister of Finance is authorized at the same time to decree that the Royal Treasury should engage itself to furnish the institute at agreed rates of exchange the necessary foreign moneys to pay amortizement and interest on the loans referred to above. We order this decree to be sealed and inserted in the official list of laws, obliging all who are effected by it to respect it and make it respected."

It is held that this decree has as its single purpose the acquisition of American money for the Italian Government, but indirectly, as the American lenders have not handed the money over to the state but to private concerns under the double guarantee of the concerns' standing and the Institute of Credit. It is held that American dollars pass directly into the treasury, Italian industrialists getting liras in exchange. They will receive the necessary dollars to meet interest and amortizement in the future.

The dollars which are supposed to go into Italian industry, it is declared by the opposition, have become part of the resources of the treasury to sustain the lira.

ACTORS NOW TOUR.

Famous Stars Formerly Refused To Leave London Theatres.

Actors with established London reputations used to refuse to play in the provinces. But that was in the days when London theatres were more prosperous. Nowadays many famous actors are delighted to get engagements with companies touring the larger provincial cities, for there is more money for actors in the provinces than in the capital.

In the early autumn a single London producer will send out fifteen road companies, headed by well-known stars. Oscar Asche, Violet Vanbrugh, Eva Moore, Ethel Irving and many others are now on tour and autumn wil find Matheson Lang, Marie Lohr, Arthur Bourchier, Fred Terry, Julia Neilson, Mrs. Patrick Campbel, Viola Tree, Sybil Thorndike, Sir John Martin Harvey and Henry Ainley in the provinces with recent London successes.

Gets Week In Jail For Stealing Newspaper

HAMILTON, August 26.—A theft of a morning newspaper, valued at two cents, cost Charles Huston, 292 Victoria Avenue North, one week in jail. When he pleaded guilty to the charge in Police Court yesterday morning Magistrate Jelfs said that it was not the value of the article stolen he was considering, but the annoyance caused by the theft. Stealing a newspaper, he said, was just as much theft as stealing a purse. Huston took the paper from Stacey's Tobacco Store, James Street North.

LAST RIFF TRIBE HAS SUBMITTED

Little Taza Zone Has Been Reduced Since Krim's Surrender.

AN ULTIMATUM.

PARIS, France, Aug. 26.— "Go and tell the rebellious brothers of the Tichchouck that the time has come for them to submit. Abd-el-Krim is a prisoner in Fez and they can no longer count upon his aid. France is generous and is ready to forgive all faults. But she is strong, too! In one month, day by day, she will reduce by cannon and rifle those who have not surrendered peacefully."

Surrounded by Gen. De Chambrun, Gen. Mougin and all the officers of the region, M. Steeg, resident-general of Morocco, standing in the little outpost of Boulemane at the foot o f the steep Tichchouck range, spoke the ultimatum to the insubmissive tribes of the "little Taza zone" and to their chief, the redoubtable Said bou Mohand.

Listening to him, I thought he must be sure inceed of his means of action to use such positive language. We had just travelled all the way around the inaccessible chaos of mountains, through deep wild gorges, where even the humblest mule-trail had to be gouged out of solid rock by dynamite. We had visited outposts, which, ever since their founding, had been under fire from the dissident Air Segrouchene, and whose little garrisons could not so much as open a door without receiving a rifle shot. From the high ground of the Enjil outpost, we had scanned, to northward, the whole of the Tichchouck range, scarred with ravines, spiked with snowy peaks, and to southward, beyond the upper Moulouya, in the quivering distances of a spotless horizon, the dreary solitudes of the Sahara.

Plea For Use of Force.

Among the officers present, some had criticized the resident-general's tactics. A captain, who for two years had commanded the lonely Enjil outpost, was indignant.

"Why talk any longer with people who every day, without rime or reason, fire on us? Wasted words! Men and guns—that is all they understand!"

But M. Steeg was obstinate.

"If there is one chance—one in ten thousand—of carrying out the operation peacefully, I want to take it."

Caid Haddou Said ben Nit-Zoussi, chief of the friendly tribes of the region, heard M. Steeg in silence. He feared the obstinacy of the people of the Tichchouck, pillagers, living by raids and robberies. Of what use to ask them to give up their guns, and to leave off attacking the people of the plains?

One Month To Submit.

"I will give them your message," said the Berber chief at last. "Yesterday I had an interview with all the chiefs of the Tichchouch. They ask three months' time in which to persuade their followers."

"Thre months? To reap their harvests and go back up into the mountains? No! Peace within one month! Or else war!"

All this happened on May 25. On June 27, at 9 a.m., the French troops and their native allies had occupied the whole of the Tichchouck; and the "little Taza zone," as a centre of revolt, ceased to exist.

All during the month the Ait Segrouchene had refused to submit. They refused to believe in the surrender and captivity of Abd-el-Krim. Above all, they could not believe that the French would actually dare to invade their fierce mountains, where every stone is a rest for a warrior's rifle.

Ready For Big Drive.

But from the middle of June on troops began to gather. Aviation squadrons set up their tents south of the Enjil outpost. Cannon which a few weeks earlier had been thundering on the Riffian front were put in position along the crests. On June 25, the date fixed by M. Steeg, 8,000 French troops, with thousands of native allies, were massed at the foot of the Tichchouck ready to charge up into the mountains which the airplanes had been sprinkling with bombs ever since dawn.

At the last minute, the rebel leader, Said bou Mohand, appeared at the Boulemane outpost, which I had visited a month before. He surrendered himself, and with him, all the rebels of the western slope. Those of the eastern slope, he said, would surrender at nightfall. But nothing was heard from them, and on the morning of the 26th the first division attacked, in eleven columns.

One Blow Enough.

Next day at dawn, all was over. From the deepest ravines to the top of the highest peak, all was cleared. The surrender of Said bou Mohand had broken the resistance of the Ait Segrouchene, and the French losses were insignificant.

But the Caid Haddou Said ben Nit Zoussi, who, after trying to bring about the surrender, had led his tribesmen to the assault, had received two bullets in the head. He died a few hours later. I can still see, when I close my eyes, the old Berber's fine, intelligent face as it looked when, in the ceremonial room, all hung with native rugs, at the Boulemane outpost, he listened to France's terms, in order to transmit them to the rebels.

EGYPTIAN GIANT VERY POPULAR

One of Best Known Figures Around Channel Swimmers.

STRONG SWIMMER.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, August 26 (United Press). — Perhaps the best known figure long connected with English Channel swimming about which the least is known is Ishak Helmy, whose chief claim to fame is based upon a frame that well earns his title as "the Egyptian giant."

Helmy appeared in public print any number of times in the past three years as the subject of a cabled despatch as follows: "Ishak Helmy, the Egyptian giant, tried to swim across the English Channel again to-day and had to give up after ten hours in the water. He will try again."

More recently he has appeared in a minor role in numerous attempts of other swimmers and his part was mentioned as follows: "Helmy, the giant Egyptian swimmer, jumped in at the seventh hour and remained for an hour with Soandso."

Last year his name became more familiar to American readers when the cables ticked off: "Helmy, the Egyptian giant, jumped overboard and rescued Gertrude Ederle when she was sinking."

His name became more familiar when Miss Ederle charged on her return home that Helmy had touched her too soon and that she could have continued.

If the young American girl held any animosity toward Helmy she apparently put it aside this year because from the first day she started training Helmy's name was linked with hers as a companion in training and a member of the official party.

Helmy went along on the tug that accompanied the youngster when she made her victorious journey and he jumped in several times to swim with her.

From these accounts much is known of Helmy as "the Egyptian giant," but very little is known of Helmy as a fellow and a sportsman.

He is one of the most prominent and most popular athletes in France and Europe. He is the son of a wealthy Egyptian Pasha and is of independent means himself. Channel swimming is his hobby, his amusement and the means of getting him into companionship with the kind of people he likes.

He never has been successful in swimming the Channel but old salts around the French coast wink and say, "Ishy can swim that Channel if he wants to."

Once he swims it, they point out, he would have no excuse for his annual summer on the French coast and week-end visits to Paris when the weather is too rough for swimming.

In his present capacity he is an official sport ambassador of the Egyptian Government, sent on an official mission to swim the Channel, and as such he is a celebrity welcomed in fashionable circles in Paris.

CAR IS SEIZED FULL OF LIQUOR

Catches Fire in East Oshawa and Firemen Tip Police About Cargo.

MEN ARRESTED.

OSHAWA, Ont., Aug. 26. — Liquor of practically every known variety, over 500 bottles of it, was seized by the Oshawa police acting on a tip received from the fire department yesterday morning. A large sedan specially fitted for the transportation of the cargo, which is valued at over $6000, was also taken over by the police. The drivers of the car, Adelard Marchand and Chas. Theobadeu, appeared before Magistrate Hind charged with illegally transporting liquor in Ontario. They asked and were give na remand for eight days and were released from custody on $1500 bail each.

Surrounded by well over a hundred bottles of Scotch whiskey which were carefully packed beneath the hood of the car, the ignition caught fire on the Kingston road just inside the city limits yesterday morning. Word that a car was on fire was telephoned to the fire department, which on arrival found that the two custodians had extinguished the blaze.

But for Station Capt Cullings the big haul might have been missed. On arriving at the station he reported the matter to the police. P. C. Parson and P. C. Venton were despatched to the scene to make the arrest. The officers nearly missed taking the drivers into custody. Once the fire department had gone Theobadeu made arrangements with George Wilson (who did not know that the car contained liquor), to tow them to a garage. Some person tipped off Wilson after he had taken the car a short distance, whereupon he unhooked and drove off. The two drivers got the car on Row street, which runs off King street east, and were sitting in it when the police arrived.

MEIGHEN SAYS THORNTON WILL KEEP HIS PLACE

Would Announce It If He Were Going To Be Dismissed.

'FALSEHOOD FACTORY.'

Says He Finds Evidence of New Fabrications Wherever He Goes.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Aug. 25 (Canadian Press.—Continuing his campaign tour across the Prairies, Premier Meighen addressed a crowded hall here last night. He charged that everywhere he went he met new falsehood, evidence that the Liberal "fabrication factory" was busier than ever.

"I am asked tonight," said Mr. Meighen, "if we intend to dismiss Sir Henry Thornton. If we ever intended to do it, we would say so, but never has anything been said to indicate it. No man who does his duty will ever be dismissed by us."

Mr. Meighen proceeded that Sir Henry Thornton was not responsible for the appointment of the board of directors of the Canadian National. Mr. Mackenzie King was responsible, he said, and the board the King government appointed "looked like a Liberal campaign committee."

Mr. Meighen turned to the allegations that Dr. Paquet, new Minister of Health and Soldiers' Civil Reestablishment, had thrown mud at the Union Jack in 1911.

"That is just an ordinary, common, black falsehood," Mr. Meighen warmly declared. He added that members of Dr. Paquet's family had served as soldiers in the war.

"Dr. Paquet himself," Mr. Meighen went on, "though not a young man, at least remained in the Dominion during the conflict and did the best he could."

"There is nothing I am not prepared to forfeit," the Premier declared, "if they can get any court in Canada to declare that we are not a legally constituted government."

The Premier described the formation of his temporary Ministry and explained that this temporary formation had been carried out just to finish the session.

Mr. Mackenzie King took the ground, Mr. Meighen proceeded, that "because our Ministers were not sworn as acting Ministers, the whole Government was illegal. My first observation is this. If I were a taxpayer I would rather have a Minister not sworn who did his duty than a sworn Minister who did not do his."

Names you should know

You like to know names that everybody knows—name of the man who tied lightning to a kite; name of the man who watched a tea kettle and went out and made an engine. Just knowing such names gives you pleasure.

Yet there are names that thousands of people know that can give you much more pleasure in a much more personal way. Names that stand for the best things to eat, to wear, to sleep on, you can buy. Names that if connected with the salad dressing, hat, mattress you select—or any other desirable thing you select—mean it is most desirable. Names written large in advertisements. Advertisements tell why those are wise names for you to know. Why such names greet you in the best groceries, department and hardware stores. Why those names are in the buying vocabulary of thousands. . . . are believed in by thousands. . . . justify belief!

Read the advertisements. Don't ask vaguely in a store for "cold cream," "a skillet," "a vacuum cleaner." Ask for So-and-So's Old Cream, So-and-So's Skillet, So-and-So's Vacuum Cleaner. Use the names, you have learned through advertisements, that stand for the product that means most to you and most to most everybody.

Leafs Take Final Game of Series From Jersey City

CRESECENTS WIN LEAGUE TITLE FROM THE COGS

Take Early Lead and Win By Score of 10 To 4.

PLAY LINDSAY.

Cognawagas Fall Down in Third Inning After Good Start.

Crescents are champions of the East Peterborough Baseball League, and will meet the winners of the Lindsay Town League in a sudden-death O.B.A.A. first round semi-final game here tomorrow evening. The athletes led by Alphonse Brioux won decisively over the Cogs at Exhibition Park last evening by the score of 10 to 4. It was the third game of the series, the first contest being a 6 to 6 verdict, and the second battle, a win for Crescents by 5 to 2.

Cognawagas went to pieces in the third, after a brilliant getaway. Smith was going great guns on the mound and probably would have held Crescents in check but for some poor work by several of his assistants. Two clean singles was all the Crescent earned. They had a lead of six runs when the frame ended.

Crescents took advantage of everything the Cogs threw their way, and did some nice hitting in the fifth when Scully singled, and Ranger and Corbett tripled. The assault settled the battle. Wilson finished the game and held Crescents to a run. Cogs had the enemy on the run in the seventh, but while the uprising served to provide a lot of fun for the big crowd of fans, the Cogs got only two runs.

With Casey Masterson just a little better in the pinches, and having the help of experienced players, the better team won. It is hoped that the fans will rally to the support of Crescents in their first game in the O.B.A.A. show, on Friday evening. Considerable expense has been incurred in arranging for the contest to be played here.

Following two frames of sparkling play, Bud Weese started the Crescents away when his poor throw off LeBarr's grounder put the runner on. Rishea sacrificed neatly, and Hall singled through the infield. J. Jones walked. McCarney lined a hot one to the right of the box, Wilson just missing the ball. LeBarr and Hall scored, and J. Jones and McCarney also breeezd in when Billingsley allowed Scully's long fly to go over. Ranger was safe when Rooke dropped a peg from Crary. Ranger made second and Scully scored as Masterson lined out to Rooke. Ranger took third and a passed ball let him in. Corbett grounded out.

Cogs showed fight and came back with two. McGee doubled over Corbett, and the pitcher threw out Weese. Hall grabbed Wilson's drive, but fumbled Smith's grounded. The shortfielder also juggled Mahood's grounder and threw badly to Ranger who fell with the ball. In the melee, both McGee and Smith scored. Masterson took Rooke's pop to end it.

Crescents tallied three more in the fifth. J. Jones fanned, but McCarney was safe on Crary's fumble. Scully singled cleanly. Ranger tripled to right to score the runners. Weese took Masterson's fly, and Corbett hit for three bags to score Ranger. LeBarr walked and the catcher threw out Rishea.

J. Jones' scratch hit to Crary, the fielder's wild throw to first and Scully's double gave Crescents their tenth run in the sixth. Wilson was pitching and Smith playing short.

Cognawagas added a thrill in the seventh by counting twice. Crary's smashing drive was grabbed by Scully, but J. Jones dropped McGee's fly. Weese singled through the box, and Wilson dropped one in right to score McGee. Smith drew a pass. With Weese on third, a balk by Masterson sent over the second run. Mahood smote terrifically but in vain, and Rooke was thrown out by Ranger.

"A FAREWELL VOLUNTARY."

It was a serious and impressive occasion. The clergyman had received "a call to labor in another part of the Lord's vineyard"—at an increase of salary of course—and he was preaching his farewell sermon. Many were moved to tears, and all were more or less affected. One man alone enjoyed the prospect of the clergyman's departure. This was the organist, who for some years had endured patiently many unpleasant experiences at the hands of his unmusical and unsympathetic rector. Now at last he could take a sweet revenge. The sermon was ended. The congregation rose to depart, and the organist commenced the outgoing voluntary. Never before it seemed had he played with so much intensity of feeling. This was probably true, for the voluntary, artfully concealed amongst a wealth of contrapuntal imitation, was heard the theme of a song—popular at the time—bearing the significant title, "I don't care if you never come back."—Etude.

Son Ami took the small end of the purse, finishing four lengths behind Jack Alexander.

BIG LIBERAL RALLY HELD AT LAKEHURST

J. J. Duffus Discussed Campaign of Slander and Customs Investigation.

The electors living in and around Lakehurst who were visited by the Conservative speakers on Monday night had the opportunity last night of hearin the Liberal candidate present his case. J. J. Duffus was accompanied by Captain Jack Dewart, M.C., and John R. Marshall, the sales manager of the Canadian Nashua Company.

The hall was filled to capacity and Archie Wilson elected by the audience occupied the chair, and caleld upon Mr. Dewart to address the meeting.

In the preceding campaign huge sums of money were spent by the Conservatives in advertising and preaching blue ruin; but in this campaign those so interested have lost hope and are not wanting to put any more money into a lost cause. Mr. Meighen has never been Prime Minister by the vote of the people and I venture the opinion that he never will be. The blue ruin talk has done untold damage to Canada in the eyes of foreign countries but with all this industries are prospering. Mr. Meighen in the last house opposed everything that was brought down, one side was continually trying to obstruct legislation and the other side trying to legislate but in spite of this handicap the King government had introduced the greatest budget in the history of Canada. In conclusion Mr. Dewart spoke of the candidate and of his knowledge of the county and his former civic experience.

John R. Marshall

The reason why I support the Liberal party is that its policy is in the interest of the greatest number of people whereas the Conservative party is a manufacturers' party. The speaker went on to show how the country could not be progressive and happy unless all classes are successful. As a manufacturer he wanted a limited protection wihch would protect the weak industries. All the manufacturers needed was an adequate tariff on certain things which could not be produced as raw materials in Canada. It is an insult to Canadian manhood when there are great industries like the General Motors demanding protection. The King government did something when they took the tariff out of party politics and put it in the hands of a tariff board to study and revise.

During the last parliament the Conservative party opposed the budget. Mr. Peck voted against this and with this penny postage, reduction of income tax and lowering of the duty on cars. Mr. Peck must realize that he voted against these things but I think that he has been led in the wrong direction and has failed to grasp the situation for he could not break away from the party and tries by means of subterfuge to say that he did not vote against it. If he did not vote against the budget then he must have voted for it. Thus I think by this evidence the Liberal policy should receive the support of the electors regardless of politics. Mr. Marshall concluded his speech by paying a fine rtibute to the candidate, Mr. Duffus.

J. J. Duffus

Mr. Duffus in his speech dealt with the campaign of slander which has been carried on throughout the country—the Customs scandal and the C.N.R.

This campaign has been one of slander on practically every platform all for the purpose of political advantage. We have had the steamer Margaret slander and also the statements of George B. Nicholison. Mr. McElderry sys that the Customs scandal is the issue. Smuggling has been going on for years and years getting worse all the time because the higher the tariff the greater inducement to smuggle. Last year there was some evidence of wrong doing. Mr. Boivin is in his grave today because of long hours in connection with Customs and Excise. On taking office after the last election he asked for a customs investigation and secured Marshall Duncan of Toronto to conduct the inquiry. One day in February Hon. Mr. Stevens came into the possession of some of the evidence before the investigation was completed and gave away the evidence before the guilty could be rounded up. I am in favor of putting in jail all the guilty. Not all of these were appointees of the Liberal party but many appointed by the former Conservative government. It happened that the Liberals were in power so they get the whole blame. Since the Conservatives got into power they let a cargo of booze get across the border that killed thirteen people. I am not blaming this on the Conservative party but I am trying to show you how hard it is to control smuggling.

Mr. Duffus in closing criticized the Conservative party's attitude towards the C..N.R. and spoke highly of Sir Henry Thornton and the way in which he had made the road pay.

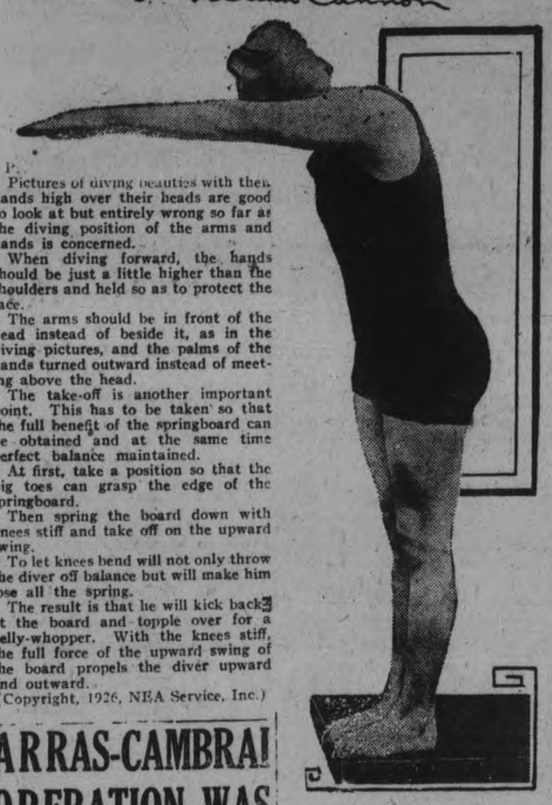
"ROLLING HOME"

Another Mountain Of Mirth

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon



Pictures of diving beauties with their hands high over their heads are good to look at but entirely wrong so far as the diving position of the arms and hands is concerned.

When diving forward, the hands should be just a little higher than the shoulders and held so as to protect the face.

The arms should be in front of the head instead of beside it, as in the diving pictures, and the palms of the hands turned outward instead of meeting above the head.

The take-off is another important point. This has to be taken so that the full benefit of the springboard can be obtained and at the same time perfect balance maintained.

At first, take a position so that the big toes can grasp the edge of the springboard.

Then spring the board down with knees stiff and take off on the upward swing.

To let knees bend will not only throw the diver off balance but will make him lose all the spring.

The result is that he will kick back at the board and topple over for a belly-whopper. With the knees stiff, the full force of the upward swing of the board propels the diver upward and outward.

ARRAS-CAMBRAI OPERATION WAS EIGHT YEARS AGO

Is Called Hardest Battle in History of Canadian Corps.

SHORT NOTICE.

Intimate Knowledge of Land Aided Victory Which Started War's End.

Eight years ago this morning the Canadian Corps began the Arras-Cambrai operation, "the hardest battle in its history." The attack was originally set for a Sunday, but was postponed until Monday, the following day, because the Canadians, it was represented, had sentimental objections to starting an offensive on the Sabbath.

The Canadians had but three days' notice for this attack. But they also had a detailed knowledge of the ground, which they had held before, and were particularly benefited by all the reconaissances and plans made for the capture of Orange Hill during the period of simulated activity at the end of July. The excellence of trench railways, rear communications, and administrative arrangements in the area were also of great value, and thus enabled the corps to under take, despite its short warning, the scrap which led to the forcing of the Drocourt-Queant line south of the Scarpe; the breaking of the hinge of the famous Hindenburg system; the prevention of possibility of the enemy rallying in the powerfully organized defensive area behind the Hindenburg line, and the constitution of a direct threat on the rear of the German armies, north and south of Cambrai.

"And," writes General Currie, in his official report, "the moral effect of the most bitter and relentless fighting which led to the capture of Cambrai was tremendous. The Germans had at last learned and understood that they were beaten."

The attack of Aug. 26, 1918, was launched at three in the morning. The original zero hour had been 4.50, but this was altered, in order to take advantage of any restricted visibility that the moonlight might produce. With the 2nd and 3rd Divisions in the "jump-off," the corps struck eastward astride the Arras-Cambrai road. The ground attacked this first day of the great operation lent itself peculiarly to defense, being composed of a sucession of ridges and streams, which formed natural lines of defense of very great strength. These natural positions were often mutually supporting and had been abundantly fortified in the shape of wire, machine guns nests and large tunnels for the protection of garrisons.

And yet the corps "went through!"

Down from that first day's scrapping have been handed such names as Monchy-le-Preux, Guemappe, Wancourt Tower and Egret Trench. Names they are that mean a lot to those wearers of the blue and the grey patches who "kicked off" in the affair and come through to tell about it.

Diamond Disputes Decided

Umpire calls "infield fly." An outfielder finally handles the ball and muffs it. What about it?

* * *

When he does so he is of the opinion that the fly ball can be handled by an infielder

Such judgment on the part of the umpire automatically retires the batsman regardless of anything that may later happen.

The fact that an outfielder insisted on making the play only to muff the ball has no bearing on the situation. The batsman is automatically out when the umpire ruled "infield fly."

ROMANCE IN WILL.

LONDON, August 26 (Canadian Press).—The romantic story of her chance meeting with a young composer lies behind the publication of the will of the Dowager Princess of Monaco. In the eighties a young man sang a song of his own composition to the fashionable company assembled at Holland House — at that time the haunt of famous figures in the musical world and the world of art. A Duchess — the Duchess de Richelieu, who was to become the Princess of Monaco — chanced to hear this song and she had this young man presented to her. She questioned him as to his ambitions and told him he was "losing time." An enduring friendship sprang up between these two.

In December last the Princess — then the Dowager Princess of Monaco—died, leaving an estate in the United Kingdom valued at approximately $181,635, and under her will the young man whose song she heard becomes her executor and receives 50,000 francs for his executorship and a "sum of a million of money."

NO ACCUSATION OF IMMORALITY ON "JOY CRUISE"

Doucet Says His Protest Was Against Taking Ship Off Beat.

AT HEARING.

HALIFAX, August 26 (Canadian Press).—A. J. Doucet, former Conservative member of Parliament for Kent, N.B., told Sir Francois Lemieux yesterday just what he had said from the public platform in regard to the cruise of the Margaret and why he had said it. He had made his reference to the cruise of the Margaret in two speeches—at St. John and Bridgewater—when accompanying Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister, on his Maritime Provinces tour, he said.

"As far as I can remember," he went on, "I said in St. John that the Margaret was taken off her course to Three Rivers, where she took Hon. Jacques Bureau and a party of eight on board; that she then called at Quebec and there took Hon. Ernest Lapointe on board.

He had said, Mr. Doucet informed the Commissioner, that the vessel had visited the Magdalen Islands and other points, being away for a period of six weeks, during which time the coasts which she should have patrolled were unprotected.

He had received his information, he said, from a person whom he thought should have been in possession of absolutely reliable information on the matter, said Mr. Doucet.

Calder In Extenuation.

At this point R. L. Calder, K.C., Commission counsel, interviewed said: "I may say in extenuation of Mr. Doucet that when I heard the name of this informant, if this same information had been given to me by the same informant, I would have considered it a proper matter for investigation, and that it is not unlikely that a lay mind, which jumps at conclusions a little more quickly than a legal mind, might be misled."

Mr. Doucet submitted the page of the log-book covering the 18th of July, 1923. It was page 57. He read from it this quotation:

"2.30 afternoon. Left with launch. Hon. J. Bureau and Hon. Ernest Lapointe and party. Took them round harbor."

"Where?" queried the Commissioner.

"At Charlottetown," replied Mr. Doucet.

He had concluded that Mr. Lapointe had come on board the vessel at Three Rivers or Quebec and this, substantiated in the information which he had received from the unnamed party, had led him to the conclusion that Mr. Lapointe had been in the Margaret during the whole voyage.

Speaking at Bridgewater later, said Mr. Doucet, he informed his hearers that Mr. Lapointe denied that he had been on the Margaret. "I said I would accept his denial, but I insisted that his name was on the log," said Mr. Doucet.

Admits Conduct Was Proper.

"Did you use the expression 'joy-ride' or 'joy-sail'?" asked Mr. Calder.

"Yes," replied Mr. Doucet.

"Did you have any intention of indicating that it was a sail with women?"

"None whatever."

"Are you satisfied, after the Quebec hearing, that there was nothing immoral in the conduct of either Mr. Lapointe or Mr. Bureau?"

Mr. Doucet replied that he was. He objected to the trip on the ground that it was bad from an administrative point of view.

Recommendations Made by Collector

The only other witness called yesterday afternoon was W. C. Acker, collector of Customs for Halifax, who continued testimony given in the morning. Mr. Acker filed a copy of a report made by him to the Department of Customs at Ottawa, in which he recommended certain methods for the suppression of smuggling along the Nova Scotia coast. He suggested that Mounted Police detachments be stationed at various points along the coast to make seizures. He was also of the opinion that there should be fast launches placed in the indentations of the coast to prevent the landing of liquor.

"The scare the Royal Canadian Mounted Police would throw into liquor smugglers would be valuable," Mr. Acker told the Department.

Mr. Acker said that prevention of liquor smuggling in Nova Scotia was not easy. The long and much-indented coastline and foggy weather made landing of liquor a simple matter. He suggested distribution of detachments of Mounted Police along the coast to watch landing places and also a material reduction in duties on liquor. This would make smuggling business much less profitable.

Mr. Acker undertook to produce a list of vessels, covering a period of three years, which had made voyages occupying suspiciously short periods. He explained that he received landing certificates to prove that cargoes had been landed. He had heard, however, of such certificates being forged.

A party of enterprising mountaineers succeeded recently in climbing the three highest peaks in Wales, England and Scotland — Snowden, Scafell and Ben Nevis—within 24 hours.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SODA POP

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis.)

"Ah, ha! I smell something good!" said Uncle Wiggily one day when he was out in the woods with Holly and Tolly, two of his little rabbit boys. "I smell something very good!"

"Is it ice-cream cones you smell, Daddicums?" asked Holly.

"No, but almost as nice," answered the rabbit gentleman.

"Is it clover pie?" asked Tolly.

"No, but it is almost as nice," answered the rabbit gentleman. Then he began to dig beneath a bush and soon he pulled out of the ground some pieces of root. "That's sassafras, my boys!" said Uncle Wiggily, taking a smell of the spicy, soft, earthy bark on the outside of the roots.

"What's it good for?" Holly wanted to know. But his father was too busy digging in another place to answer him.

"I smell something else that is most delicious," said the rabbit gentleman, and when he had dug up another root he said, "There it is—sarsasprilla!"

"What's it good for?" asked Tolly, but his father was now too busy gnawing some green and brown bark off a tree to answer. Soon Mr. Longears had a lot of bark gnawed off and he said:

"Now, I have everything I need except some sugar, water and yeast. I have birch bark, sassafras root and sarsasprilla root. Ah, there's a word for you—sar-sass-a-per il la," and he said it slowly, so as to get the full effect.

"What are you going to do with all those things, Daddicums?" asked Holly.

"I am going to make soda pop, or, as some might call it, root beer," answered the bunny gentleman, "or, as still others might designate it—ginger tonic."

"And may we have some soda pop?" asked Tolly.

"Indeed, you may," answered Mr. Longears, and when he had hopped home to his hollow stump bungalow, he mixed up the roots and bark in a kettle with sugar, water and yeast and put the soda pop into bottles which he tightly corked.

"What's the yeast for?" asked Jingle, who, with Jangle, watched Uncle Wiggily corking the bottles.

"The yeast makes the soda pop and fizz and have foam," was the answer. Nurse Jane helped Uncle Wiggily carry the bottles of soda pop, or root beer, down into the cellar. "It will be a hot day tomorrow and the cool drink will make us feel fine," went on Mr. Longears.

"No, we must wait over night for the yeast to foam up and make the pop fizzle and foamy," said Nurse Jane.

So the little rabbit children, forty 'leven of them, or more, went to bed to dream of how wonderful the soda pop would taste next day. The sun set fiery red, which meant hot weather on the morrow.

But in the middle of the night something happened. Uncle Wiggily, his wife, Nurse Jane and all the forty 'leven little bunnies were awakened by hearing banging, cracking sounds in the cellar.

"Oh! Daddicums," cried Holly. "Somebody is taking our soda pop!"

"I'll see about that!" shouted Mr. Longears. With a bottle of lightning bugs, which he used for a flash lamp, Mr. Longears went down cellar. And there, in the middle of the floor, stood the Bob Cat with one eye all black and bruised, and holding a bottle of soda pop in one paw.

"That's sassafras, my boys!" said Uncle Wiggily

"What do you want?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Nothing!" snarled the Bob Cat. "I got all I wanted and more too!"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily as the Bob Cat ran out of the cellar. "I see what happened. I put too much yeast in one of the bottles. The Bob Cat went in to take some of my soda pop and picked up this yeasty bottle. He was trying to open it, when the cork flew out and banged him in the eye. Ha! Ha! I guess he had enough soda pop!"

And so the Bob Cat had. But this was the only bottle that had too much yeast in it, all the others being just right. And the next day, which was very hot, the bunny and the forty 'leven little bunnies drank the soda pop, or root beer, and felt very cool.

So from this we learn that if the Bob Cat has a black eye that is a sign he has been taking soda pop. And if the gold fish doesn't forget to take his umbrella when he goes to the moving pictures, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the hollow log.

CLIMB HIGH PEAK.

Two Canadian Ladies First To Make Ascent of Mount Geikie.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 25. — Canadian Press. — The honor of being the first women to climb the difficult peak of Mount Geikie, 10,800 feet high, falls to Miss Esther Thompson of the staff of the Manitoba Agricultural College, and Mrs. Don Munday of Vancouver. This is Mrs. Munday's second remarkable feat in mountain climbing, for she was the first woman to reach the top of Mount Robson in 1924. The ascent of Mount Geikie by these members of the Canadian Alpine Club occupied 21 hours. They left camp at 3.30 on Friday morning and did not return until 12.30 the following morning. The top was reached about 1 p.m. on Friday. The descent of the mountain was probably more difficult than the ascent as most of it had to be done in the dark and more than three hours were occupied in laboriously cutting steps down some of the precipitous rock slopes. This mountain differs from many others in that the most difficult climbing is encountered near the base, where the slopes are very steep and where the climbers were continually menaced by rockslides from above.

MEIGHEN ISSUES CHALLENGE TO COURT DECISION

Tells King To Test Validity of Any Order-in-Council.

CROWDED DAY.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., August 26.—Canadian Press.—Premier Meighen issued a challenge to Mr. Mackenzie King to take any of the orders-in-council passed by the Meighen government to the courts, and test their validity on the point whether the government was a government or not.

The premier had another crowded day. Leaving Regina in the morning he went to Broadview where he made a brief address to the assembled school children. He motored to Kipling in the constituency of Qu'Appelle where he spoke at an open-air gathering. Back at Broadview he made a brief speech. Immediately afterwards he went through to Moose jaw, where he did not arrive until the meeting was well under way.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE TWO SISTERS.

Mother Clover Plant was a good, kind, generous plant. She never failed to share her sweets with every passing bee, and when she dropped her little seeds on the soil they went to work at once building up lovely clover plants.

One clover sister was just as sweet and kind as the mother plant had been, but the other was cross, ugly and selfish. One was always ready with a happy greeting when a stranger passed by her blossom house, and she always invited the stranger in to have a sip of honey. But the selfish clover plant would only grumble and complain about being misused.

One day a little bee came buzzing by.

"He can just buzz over to the other side of the garden as far as I'm concerned," growled Selfish Clover. "He can't have any of my honey. They think they can stop just any old time and that I have to wait on them."

"Goodness me," laughed her sister, "I have plenty of honey if he should stop at my door," and she shook out her pretty pink petals.

"I have Plenty of Honey."

The little bee stopped and rapped at Selfish Clover's blossom door, but she ordered him away. She didn't want to be bothered.

"I'm not giving my honey away," she snapped crossly.

The bee buzzed over to the sister and was greeted with a sip of honey that quenched his thirst. He flew away happy and told his friends about the lovely little clover.

The good little clover plant was busy from morning until night. She was so kind and generous to her customers they in turn told others. Every bee or butterfly that stopped covered her with pollen, taken from another clover blossom. They never failed to take a bundle of her pollen across the meadows to other clovers.

When it came time for the blossoms to close their doors and send down their seeds, both sisters did it the very same way.

But the next Spring there were no clover plants in the spot, where the selfish clover had stood, while around the nook where the happy, generous clover plant had spent her Summer were several little clover plants. Every seed she had dropped into the ground had grown and produced, while her sister's seeds had rotted in the ground.

"Why is that?" asked Mrs. Beetle of Wiggle Worm, who was busy loosening up the dirt around the new clover paints. "They were sisters and grew in the same ground. They ate and drank the same things."

"The selfish clover never gave of her honey, and, of course, no bee ever stopped to leave a bag of pollen with her," replied Wiggle Worm. "It takes pollen from other plants to make the seeds fertile. Now the mother of these clover plants was ghe generous giver. She gave of what she had and in turn received the help of the bees and butterflies. Her seeds were fertile and so they have lived." Then she added "No good ever comes from being selfish."

Famous the World Over—

REGULAR MEETING OF MISSION BAND

Centreville Presbyterian Ladies Pack Bale For Mission Field.

The monthly meeting of the Centreville Presbyterian W.M.S. was held in the S. S. Hall on Wednesday August 18, for the purpose of packing the bale of clothing.

After the opening devotional exercises a brief programme was given, consisting of an instrumental by Miss G. Hutchinson and a short and interesting address by Mrs. (Rev.) Thos. Dodds, in connection with the work that is to be done by the Auxiliary and mission band.

The Mission band, which has just recently been organized with Miss E. Tate as its leader, then served afternoon tea in the hall. The tables were daintily decorated with pretty bouquets of Nasturtiums and fancy baskets of candy.

Those assisting the president were Misses E. and G. Johnson, V. Atchison, M. Larmer, M. Earle, A. Rutherford, C. Kinsman.

An Enjoyable Picnic.

A very enjoyable time was spent on Thursday afternoon when Miss Viola White of Ballieboro, entertained a number of her girl friends to a picnic held at Rice Lake.

Almost everyone spent the earlier part of the afternoon in the water. Some of the girls put on their bathing suits and went in swimming while others went in wading. When the last ones finally came out of the water a baseball game was played, one side being called the Tigers and the others were the Lions. The latter, who apparently had more experience won out by quite a large score.

Meanwhile a bountiful supper was being prepared by Mrs. White and Miss V. White and everyone seemed to have exceedingly good appetites.

Agnes Brown and Evelyn Johnson chose sides. The first prize (a box of chocolates) was finally awarded to those on the side of the former, and a box of peanuts was given to those on the side of the latter.

These races being over the time was nearing for the homeward journey and after extending a hearty vote of thanks to Viola and her mother everyone went back in car loads after having spent a real good time.

A Baseball Game.

On Tuesday evening the Millbrook girls softball team journeyed over to Centreville and played the Centreville girls. Owing to the fact that it was somewhat late when everyone arrived there the game was short but the final score was 11-10 in favor of the visiting team.

WEDDING BELLS.

WATSON—WRIGHT.

KIRKFIELD, August 26.—A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, when Margaret Ann, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wright, Kirkfield, was united in marriage to John Watson, of Shelburne. Rev. Mr. McMullen of the Presbyterian Church officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in gown of peach georgette, with gold lace trimming. She carried a bouquet of roses and carnations. Miss Velma Wright, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, while Douglas Watson, of Shelburne, supported the groom. Miss Marjorie Armstrong of Peterboro presided at the organ, while Miss Evelyn Jones and sister, Miss Ruby, sang a duet. Following the ceremony, a dainty supper was served to about eighty guests. Out-of-town guests were from Peterborough, Fenelon Falls, Honeywood and Shelbourne.

Later in the evening a reception was given in honor of the bride. Her many beautiful gifts were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Watson left by motor for Toronto and Niagara. The bride travelled in a black satin coat, with white fur trimmings with large picture hat to match. On their return they will reside at Horning's Hill.

NAVIGATION RIGHTS MAINTAINED IN LATEST NIAGARA AGREEMENT

Dominion and Provincial Government and Hydro Are Contracting Parties.

McGRATH EXPLAINS.

Clauses All Conform To Treaties Now in Force.

TORONTO, August 26. — Canadian Press. — C. A. McGrath, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, stated to-day that the new agreement which had been reached in Oftawa between the Dominion Government, the Ontario Government, and the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, permitted extraction of water from the Niagara district, but added that this diversion would not in any way interfere with navigation.

"Under the agreement, the Province of Ontario undertakes not to interfere with navigation rights, and the agreement is drawn up in keeping with the provisions of the treaty now in force," Mr. McGrath declared.

"As a matter of fact we have been taking and using such water for a long time and this agreement makes no change in the situation," he said.

In the absence of Premier Ferguson from the city, no definite information as to the terms of the agreement were available to-day.

KING CONTINUES MARITIME TOUR, VISITS ST. JOHN

Says Government Is Providing Itself With Spending Money on Warrants.

MENTIONS LAURIER.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ST. JOHN, Aug. 26.—Proceeding on his Maritime tour, Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, declared here last night that the Meighen Government is providing itself with "spending money" at the rate of a million dollars a day through the medium of Governor-General's warrants.

He accused the Conservative Administration of "a further violation of office and power" in its alleged approval of a $3,500,000 contract for a Canadian National Railways hotel in Vancouve. awarded, he said, without the calling of tenders, and during an election.

During the past ten days Mr. King has travelled fron Vancouver to St. John, often speaking several times daily. On Thursday he starts into Nova Scotia, commencing with a series of meetings in Annapolis Royal, Yarmouth, Liverpool and Bridgewater.

Says Cases not Parallel.

"Mr. Meighen will probably contend that when Sir Wilfrid Laurier appealed to the country on reciprocity the government during part of that time was carried on under Governor-General's warrants. The cases, however, were in no way parallel. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when he appeale l to the country, enjoyed the full confidence of the House of Commons; his Administration had encountered no defeat and he was strongly supported in the House. Moreover, earlier in the year, before Sir Wilfrid had left for the Imperial Conference, Parliament had voted supplies for a considerable portion of the year, and to cover a period of adjournment to permit Sir Wilrid to be present at the coronation of King George. In the case of Mr. Meighen, Parliament has never voted his Government a dollar, but at the very time it was asking for supplies to carry on, declared it had no right to exist."

Mr. King said he understood that another Governor-General's warrant for additional millions would follow shortly.

"Another violation of all sense of right and decency of which the Government is guilty is i. approval within the past fortnight of a contract of over $3,500,000 for the construction by the Canadian National Railways of a hotel in the City of Vancouver," said the Liberal leader.

Says Appropriation not Made

The government would probably seek to take refuge with respect to this transaction behind the fact that the contract was made by the Canadian National Railways. That, however, was not a justification for the government granting permission for the awarding of a contract at this time. Appropriations for the Canadian National Railways were made by Parliament, just as were appropriations for all other public purposes.

The appropriation for the contract for the Vancouver hotel had not been made in the estimates submitted to Parliament, nor had the awarding of the contract the approval of Parliament in any form.

It was something more than a coincidence, he said, that when Mr. Meighen formed his previous Cabinet and brought Dr. Tolmie of Victoria into it as a member, a contract of over $3,000,000 was awarded for a graving dock at Victoria. Now that Mr. Stevens o Vancouver had been taken into the government a contract of $3,500.000 of which the government had approved had just been awarded in that city."

Mr. King said: "The total amount which has been taken from the treasury under Gove. or-Generals warrants up to the beginning of the present week—Aug. 22—is over $54,000,000. In other words, Mr. Meighen's government has been providing themselves with spending money at the rate of over $1,000,000 a day, though Parliament has expressly declared they are not entitled to a single dollar. There is no parallel in British history of so great usurpation of office and power," said Mr. King.

Activity In Power Issues On Light Trading Market

TORONTO, August 26 (Canadian Press).—Power issues were the centre of activity in trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Brazilian Traction eased off slightly; in market, both in price and turnover, the stock closing at noon off one-quarter at 118 3-8; Barcelona, three points to 39½ in heavier than ordinary trading, was the feature of the list. Trading was comparatively light over the remainder of the narrow list. In industrials, Shredded Wheat gained one-half to 50½, while Winnipeg Railway lost the same amount to 53. International Nickel eased one-quarter to 36, while Consolidated Smelters firmed three-quarters to 239½. Canadian Pacific was up ½. Nipissing, with a net gain of 45 cents to 6.30, featured the mining list, together with Teck Hughes, which weakened 19 cents to 4.51.

Scattered Buying Gives Wheat An Upward Trent

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Scattered buying proved sufficient to-day to give an early upward trend to wheat values. Shipments of wheat out of Chicago are large, and but few traders appeared willing to press selling side of the market. Starting unchanged to 1-4 higher, wheat quickly scored moderate general gains. Corn and oats relatively were easy, Corn opening unchanged to 1-4 cents off, but later showing something of a rally. Provisions held about steady.

Nipissing Jumps 35 Cents In Weak Price Market

TORONTO, Aug. 26.— Nipissing was the only strong spot in trading on Standard Mining Exchange today. It jumped another 35 cents per share to 6.35. Prices were inclined to weakness throughout the remainder of the list, although trading was moderately active.

Dome dropped ten cents to 11.10, Teck Hughes four to 4.58, Kirkland Lake one to 1.06, and Hollinger five to 19.35, while Lakeshore firmed five to 14.45. Gold Hill eased one-half to 58 1-2, Vipond one to 1.89 while Barry Holly firmed one-half to 67 and Tough Oakes the same to 48 1-2. In the silvers, Castle Trethaway eased one to 1.43. Capitol two to 37, and Mining Corporation five to 3.85. Noranda lost ten cents to 19.30, Hill Top two to 28, while Amulet gained one to 1.41 and Towagmac five to 3.40.

Railroad July Earnings Hoist Demand For Shares

NEW YORK, August 26 (Canadian Press).—Operations for a rise were resumed in to-day's stock market in face of a higher renewal rate for call money. The recovery which spread over practically the entire list apparently was based on the speculative belief that the re-action which had been under way for the last ten days had sufficiently corrected, at least temporarily, weakened the technical position of the market. Short covering operations stimulated buying movement but public participation continued in relatively light volume, with the result that trading slowed up on rally.

The demand for railroad shares was accelerated by the publication of another batch of excellent July earnings statements, sharp gains over the corresponding month last year being recorded by New York Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Lehigh Valley and 'Katy.' Special buying of North-Western Carriers was predicted on belief that some of the roads in that territory will be in a position to increase their dividends if the final outrun of wheat crop comes up to present expectations.

New leaders were again brought forward among the specialties, National Enamelling Common and Preferred soaring 6 and 5 points respectively by early afternoon. Merchandising shares, which have been heavy lately, showed signs of better support. Heaviness developed, however, in some of the motor accessory issues, Haves Wheel sagging to a new low level for the year. Steel shares were firm on reports that pig-iron producers in Northern Ohio were preparing for a protected run through the winter months. Atlantic Refining continued to respond to recent publication of a favorable earnings report.

WITH 32 BODIES RECOVERED MINE OFFICIALS GIVE UP HOPE OF BRINGING OUT MEN ALIVE

Toll of Explosion in Bituminous Mine Is Set at Forty-four.

FOURTEEN ESCAPE.

Black Damp Kills Many of Those Not Hurt By the Blast.

CLYMER, Pa., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—The explosion which occurred at Clymer Mines of Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation yesterday apparently crushed out the lives of forty-four men. With thirty-two bodies recovered from the blasted workings early this morning mine officials expressed the belief that the fourteen others unaccounted for were dead in the debris-swept ruins of the mine.

Figures given out early today by the general manager of the corporation and the Coroner of Indiana County reveal that fifty eight miners were trapped by the explosion., Ten miners escaped with their lives and four others are in Dixonville Hospital suffering from gas and shock.

A corps of Salvation Army lassies labored all night, without sleep, preparing the bodies so that later in the day the stricken mine villagers might be summoned to identify them.

Black damp, the deadly menace which follows mine explosion, took the lives of the first four men brought up. Their bodies were unmarked. The others, however, were burned badly, some beyond recognition.

CLYMER, Pa., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—The bodies of nine miners, badly burned and mutilated, were recovered from the Clymer Mine at noon today bringing the known death toll of yesterday's explosion to 41.

The rescurers continued their search for the thre minerse who, it was believed, were buried under heavy falls of rock and earth.

Practically all hope for the entombed men was abandoned last night after Dr. W. E. Dodd, company physician, explored the mine as far as possible. He said the blast caused widespread devastation, and that the tunnels were so heavy with gas that no human could survive. He said that within the slope, under piles of rocks, he saw the bodies of six miners. Some were badly mangled, while others, he said, bore no marks, indicating that they were victims of the gases.

The Sample Run Mine is a slope workings, electrically equipped, with an annual tonnage of more than 150,000. A normal working force is 189 men.

Veteran coal diggers, familiar with mine explosions, expressed the belief that the blast was caused by the ignition of gas. General Manager Musser refused to hazard an opinion as to the cause. He said the deadly after damp was so heavy in the working, that the rescuers had not been able to get in very far, and that therefore they did not know the condition of the mine, or the spot where the explosion occurred.

Musser said that the mine drifted back into the hills for more than a mile, and he held the hope that some of the entombed men fought their way from the scene of the blast into safe territory. He said that normally the mine employs more than 400 men, but that recently it had been working only part time, and the force was reduced to a half-hundred.

The rescue work was well organized. Experienced teams, led by the Bureau of Mines men, worked in shifts in the battle against the ever-creeping gases against which no man without a mask can live. When work of the blast spread throughout the Central Pennsylvania coal field the miners of the entire region forgot all else in their haste to render aid to their stricken fellow-workers. Every mine in the region rushed in rescue teams and safety apparatus. The Clymer No. 1 pit had long been known as a gaseous working. For some time the miners have used electric lamps as a safeguard.

Midnight Curfew Law Enough For Chicago Girls

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. (C. P.)—Chicago has imposed a midnight curfew law for unescorted girls up to sixteen years of age.

The Puritan Fathers probably would be shocked by the mildness of such a restriction. It reveals to a somewhat startled public that a great many young girls actually are roaming the street after midnight. It also indicates the restraint with which modern authorities apply legal curbs to flaming youth of the city.

The curfew restriction climaxes a city wide agitation by club women, civic leaders and the police. Chief Morgan A. Collins instituted the curfew at the request of the State's Attorney's office.

THREE TABLETS ARE UNVEILED NEAR PRESCOTT

Historical Sites Near Town Marked By Government Board.

TWO FORTS MARKED.

Battle of Windmill Point Is Also Recalled By Monument.

PRESCOTT, Aug. 27. — Appropriate ceremonies marked the unveiling of three bronze tablets at Prescott yesterday in the presence of a large gathering. The occasion was made possible through the action of the Historical Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, of which Brigadier General E. A. Cruikshank is head and the ceremonies were graced by the presence of General Cruikshank, E. A. Cook, president of the Prescott Board of Trade, officiated as chairman, and short addresses were given by Mayor W. J. Taugher, A. C. Casselman, ex-M.P., W. P. McCarthy, honorary president of the Prescott Board of Trade, Rev. Father Maguire and Mrs. Bradlish Billings, of Ottawa, president of the Women's Historical Society.

General Cruikshank referred to the town of Prescott as being one of the most historic towns in Canada and said that the citizens had a great asset in its historical sites.

The first memorial was unveiled at Adam's Point, River Road east where a fine monument was recently erected to commemorate the old French Fort, which formerly existed on Chimney Island. A. C. Casselman unveiled this monument, while the invocation and dedicatory prayers were offered by Rev. Canon Patton.

The second ceremony took place at Windmill Point, where the famous battle of the windmill was fought in 1838. The building stands in a splendid state of preservation and is at present used as a lighthouse. W. P. McCarthy unveiled this tablet being assisted by Mary E. Fraser, whose father, Major Fraser fought in the above battle, and was in command of First Battalion of Grenville militia. The invocation and dedicatory prayer were offered by Rev. William Howitt.

The third ceremony took place at Fort Wellington, which was constructed in 1812-13. This tablet was unveiled by Brigadier General Cruikshank and as the flag fell away there was an outburst of applause. This old fort is a site of widespread interest and is visited yearly by some thousands of tourists. It contains a museum with many objects of historic interest. Throughout the proceedings music was rendered by the Prescott citizens' band and a male quartette.

Flowers were placed on the memorial by Mrs. R. T. Alexander, Mrs W. M. Leach and Mrs. E. A. Cook, past presidents. The ceremonies were concluded by singing "God Save the King."

Hon. Duncan Marshall Says Tariff Question Is Big Election Issue

Former Albertan Minister Declares Prosperity of Agriculture Is Base On Which the Welfare of the Entire Counry Is Founded.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH BRITAIN.

A few electors of Smith Township who braved the elements last night and wended their way to the Temperance Hall on the Fourth Line were rewarded by hearing a stirring address on current political history from the Hon. Duncan Marshall, formerly Minister of Agriculture in the Alberta Legislative Assembly and now Liberal organizer in the Province of Ontario. Mr. Marshall declared that the main issue before the electors was High Protection versus Moderate Protection, and scathingly denounced a high tariff wall as benefitting a few greedy manufacturers at the expense of farmers and other workers in basic industries.

Another meeting which was scheduled for Selwyn was called off on account of the rain with the result that the combined oratorical strength of the Liberal delegation was concentrated on the meeting in Central Smith. The candidate, J. J. Duffus, Dr. A. H. Allan, A. E. Guidall, and G. A. Gillespie also addressed the meeting.

The Rev. W. S. Edgar, who was in the audience, was appointed chairman.

Hon. D. Marshall

Mr. Marshal, who began his address by eulogizing Mr. Duffus as a man who by reason of his early upbringing on the farm, his training in business and experience in civic and commercial positions, was specially competent to represent a riding like West Peterborough, declared the Liberal party stood for a moderate tariff. They were not out to establish Free Trade. That was not practicable.

Canada was an agricultural country with great stretches of arable land, with vast quantities of agricultural products to sell. She could not sell them all within her own border and had to sell the surplus to other countries. But in order to sell to other countries, Canada had to buy from them. Great Britain was the best market for agricultural products in the world. By raising a high tariff against British manufactured goods Canada would close the best market for her farm products. High protectionists were accustomed to argue that behind a high tariff wall, factories would develop and the farmer would become rich by selling his produce to the factory worker, while the factory worker would become rich by manufacturing for the farmer. How we were all going to get rich off one another like the two Kilkenny cats that devoured each other, the speaker had never been able to figure.

Need of Outside Market.

In a Farmers' Advocate which he had picked up that day from the desk of Mr. Duffus' office, he read an editorial (the Advocate was independent and non-political) which stated that last year, Canada exported 721 million dollars' worth of agricultural products. Canada raised 721 million dollars' worth more than she could eat. This was where protection fell down. Protectionists overlook the fact that the vital thing in the development of Canada was the development of agriculture, and the vital need of agriculture was a market. Why was a market such a vital thing to the farmer. If a man made an automobile and did not sell it right away, all he had to do was to make an alteration in the lamp at the side to bring it into conformity with the next year's model and it would sell all right.

But they could not keep the butter until the following year. Nor would eggs keep fresh for ever. Probably his hearers had noticed that Canada exported 400,000,000 bushels of wheat. Let them try to keep that for a year. Why wheat would be a joke in the following year. It would not be worth any more than twenty-five cents a bushel. They had to get a market, have the stuff taken out of the road and eaten up. Where would they get the market? If they held the stuff until they had factories enough to consume it, the rats and the gophers would be on the job first. They had to sell the farm produce to other countries. That was the way to get rich. When the farmer sold more off his farm than he paid away in purchases, he got rich. A nation was just like an individual in this respect, for a nation was a group of individuals.

Trade and Exchange.

Trade was an exchange of commodities. It was more of an exchange of commodities between nations than between individuals. Canada exported millions of dollars worth of foodstuffs to Britain. The reason was that there were 45 million people located on these two little pin pricks of islands, and Scotland was mostly rocks and rivers, lakes and scenery, with little land good for farming. Ships carried these foodstuffs to Britain and brought British goods here on their return journey. If they had to come back empty the time would come when they would cease to come.

Law of Trade.

This was one of the laws of trade which high protection advocates could not get round. Return cargoes need not go direct to Canada. For example, when a ship unloaded at Liverpool or Glasgow it might take a cargo of cutlery. They made very good cutlery in Sheffield. Where would the cutlery go? It might go to Brazil, where they used cutlery on each other. It might then be loaded up with coffee. Where would the coffee be unloaded? Among the greatest coffee drinkers in the world —the people of the United States. After unloading the coffee, it might take a cargo of cotton, which would be discharged at Montreal, and the ship would again be loaded up with butter, grain or eggs for the British market. But if they did not buy goods from Britain, they would not be able to sell goods to Britain. They would have to buy from Britain to keep their markets.

What Happened in 1896.

This was what happened in 1896. They had a Government then which raised the tariff against British goods. Factories sprung up. High tariffs always developed factories at first. If they told a man they were going to put on a duty of 35 per cent. on the goods of his competitors which would allow him to add 30 per cent. to the price of his goods, he was going to take full advantage of the arrangement, and many more would go into the business. Between 1880-90 many factories were built and prospered. Then they went to pieces. It was found that it was useless to build factories to supply the wants of farmers who had lost their markets. This was just what had happened. Canada had then shut out British goods, and in doing so had shut herself out of the British market. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on coming into power, reduced the tariff on British goods and instituted the British preference. What was the howl then? There was nothing new about the calamity howl declared the speaker. There had always been a similar outcry when any

ADDING INSULT TO INJURY CLAIMS CAPTAIN OF THE MARGARET WHEN QUESTIONED BEFORE COMMISSION

SPOKE LAST NIGHT.

HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL.
Who Addressed the Electors of Smith at a Meeting last night, on Behalf of J. J. Duffus.

WORTH $25,000

Instructed by the Department to Restore It to Former Owners.

HALIFAX, N. S., August 27. — (Canadian Press).—"I reckoned it was adding insult to injury to have to do it," Captain Lecouvee, of the Customs steamer Margaret, told the Lemieux Commission yesterday afternoon when asked about the rum-runner W. C. Kennedy. The captain told Commissioner Sir Francois Lemieux that he had captured the W. C. Kennedy in 1923 with 806 cases of Scotch whisky on board, worth $25,000, had landed this valuable cargo safely at Quebec, and one year later had been instructed by the Department of Customs at Ottawa to proceed to Quebec, load the cargo, bring it down to Halifax and transfer it to its former owners. The captain told W. F. O'Connor, K.C., who was conducting his examination, that this had been a sore point with him ever since.

The seizure had been made in the Northumberland Straits, and the reason given by the Department for returning the cargo was that these waters were extra-territorial.

"Until the W. C. Kennedy was seized, the ruling of the Department had been that the Northumberland Straits comprised territorial waters, but upon the seizure of the Kennedy, they reversed their position without apparently referring the matter to the Justice Department at all," remarked R. L. Calder, K.C., one of the Commission counsel.

The entire afternoon was devoted to examination of the Margaret's master, and he will be further examined to-day by L. A. Forsyth, counsel for Hon. Jacques Bureau.

Mr. O'Connor questioned the captain at some length in regard to trips made on the vessel by Mr. Bureau. He drew the attention of the witness to an interview given by him (Captain Lecouvee) at the close of the navigation season of 1925. In this the captain was reported as saying that rum-runners on the Nova Scotia coast were organized on such a large scale that they were actually in one another's way. The captain, it was reported, had told the newspaper that he estimated the number of schooners engaged in the rum traffic at 225.

"Were conditions as bad as you said?" asked Mr. O'Connor.

"I can safely say they were," replied the witness.

Mr. O'Connor then took the captain through the log of the vessel for that year in order to ascertain how the Margaret had dealt with such conditions. The captain explained a delay of about a week in getting started by saying that "it must have been the fault of the Department." He said also that one trip taken by Mr. Bureau and W. F. Wilson, chief preventive officer, up the St. Lawrence was to demonstrate the oil-burning engines newly installed on the ship. Mr. O'Connor suggested that it was nearly the month of August, 1925, before the Margaret really got out on her patrol along the coast of Nova Scotia to hunt for the rum-runners which the captain said were so numerous, and the captain agreed that this was partly true. During this summer, according to the log, Mr. Bureau had made an inspection trip to Charlottetown, the Magdalen Islands and North Sydney.

During the course of the hearing, the captain was asked whether or not Premier Meighen had made election speeches from the deck of the Margaret in 1921. He said positively that no speeches had been made. The bill amounting to $58 for meals served to the Meighen party while on board had been regularly rendered by the steward of the vessel.

Bigger Men Than Ever Join New York Police

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (United Press).—Fourteen hundred and forty-seven bigger and perhaps better cops have been added to New York's police force with the graduation of this year's class of the Police Training School.

The city's finest now total more than 16,000 men. The recruits to the ranks of those authorized to swing clubs followed elaborate exercises attended by 8,000 persons. Police Commissioner McLaughlin told the assembly that physical and menal standards were raised by the school this year. The typical blue coat graduated in 1924 weighed 156 pounds and his height was five foot nine inches. This year's graduate, he said, weighed 161 pounds and stood five feet ten inches.

A servant of Billinghausen has just won half a million marks—$125,000 —in the Brunswick State lottery.

Jewish Sacramental Wine Must Be Sold By Rabbis

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (United Press).—Sacramental wine to be used by Jews in observing Rosh Ha Shaanah and Yom Kippur next month must be obtained from the Rabbis at their homes or churches. A new order put into effect by Major Chester P. Mills, New York's "dry" administrator, will force all stores selling sacramental wines to close this branch of their business. Heretofore the Rabbis appointed agents to distribute the wine used in family communion.

In many cases the store keepers did not know the people to whom they sold the wine, said Major Mills, and thousands of persons of Gentile faith have been buying the wine in New York.

CHURCH STILL STANDS DEFIANT

Will Work and Wait For Years, Says Bishops' Statement.

BUSINESS POOR.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27 (Associated Press Despatch).—The Catholic Episcopate, in a written statement yesterday, announces that it will wait and work for months or years, if necessary, for a settlement of the situation arising out of the new religious regulations promulgated by the Government. It declares that church services will not be resumed until the laws are amended or repealed, and it has instructed all Catholics not to permit a schism within the ranks.

The Episcopate expresses the belief that the Government's tactics are an attempt to cause Catholics to divide among themselves, and adds: "But with God's aid Catholics will not yield to such threats."

"No Hope of Improvement."

The Episcopate discusses what it describes as the "vacillations" of Senor Saenz, the Mexican Foreign Minister, respecting his reported San Antonio interview. Senor Saenz's repudiation of the position attributed to him at San Antonio, in addition to publication of Government inspired statements regarding its firm attitude, leaves, according to the statement, "no hope of improvemnt in the situation."

Bargain Sale Placards.

Bargain sale placards and "to rent" signs are becoming quite common in the business section apparently as the result of the economic boycott by which the Catholic party protests against the Calles Government religious regulations. Talks with many Catholics in various walks of life elicit almost universal determination to buy nothing except absolute necessities of life until what they claim to be their rights are assured them by the fundamental law.

Shrewd business men fear that many failures are imminent in the commercial world. The Calles Government shows no sign of yielding in the controversy.

Statement From Rome.

ROME, August 27.—The Pope's admonition to Mexican Catholics to maintain an attitude of discretion and prayer, the Holy See announces, "is not given in the sense of urging adaptation to the conditions of slavery which President Calles is trying to impose on the Mexican Church, but in the sense of keeping Catholics outside the revolutionary Governments, which are contrary to the doctrine of the Church."

The statement of the Holy See, which was issued in answer to an open letter from the Mexican Minister, Carlos Casaurano, setting forth the point of view of President Calles, declares that the Vatican is not alarmed at the prospect of the formation of a dissident Mexican Church.

Third Blaze In House Takes Life Of Child

SASKATOON, Sask., Aug. 27—Fire which has twice unsuccessfully dogged the steps of the family of Joseph Hebert, an engineer here, in its third attempt took the life of his daughter, Marguerite, 2 years old, on Wednesday.

In the winter of 1925 the whole family was nearly suffocated by coal gas from a defective furnace, while in March of this year the Hebert home at Sutherland, three miles from Saskatoon, was burned to the ground while the family was at church.

Yesterday little Marguerite was playing on the veranda of the new home with a lighted candle, when her dress caught fire. She died in hospital after six hours of unconsciousness.

MINERS QUIT WORK MATES NON-UNION

Nova Scotia Men Won't Go Back Till All Join U. M. W.

STELLARTON, N.S., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Nine hundred men on the Albion and Allen shafts of the Dominion Coal Company were idle yesterday, when the United Mine Workers of America, following their threat of Wednesday refused to go down in the pits until every man had proved to be a member of that organization.

In the course of their endeavors to make the mines of the Dominion Coal Company 100 per cent. United Mine Workers of America, advice was given the Acadia Coal Company by Thomas Scott, District Board member of the United Mine Workers, that unless the non-union members at Albion and Allen shafts joined up, the United Mine Workers would not work.

Nearly 1,000 men employed in these two shafts refused to work, and the 100-odd men who broke away from the United Mine Workers two years ago to join the One Big Union were unable to work in the pits alone.

A conference was held yesterday afternoon to seek a remedy for the situation.

Flower Plots At Station Add Beauty To Corner

The garden plots of the Canadian National Railway Station looked very attractive and refreshing to the eye this morning after last night's copious rainfall. Four plots, one at each corner of the ground, are occupied by shrubs, petunias and geraniums. Two crescent-shaped sections filled with blooms, relieve the expanse of vividly green sward, and in the centre around the flagstaff are the old fashioned hollyhocks, castor plants cannas, and rows of salvia, and rubber grass—adding both dignity and freshness to the scene.

Mourned As Drowned Returns To See Parents

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., Aug. 27 (United Press). — William Ellison, missing for two years, and "buried" as dead, is visiting his parents here. He said he had been 'following the ponies.' Shortly after his disappearance, a body found in the Ohio River was identified as his. It was buried at Lutonia, Ky., and later removed to the family plot in Lawrenceburg. Ellison's parents had collected his life insurance.

Ivory billiard balls have been known to increase in size over a period of year, although the exact explanation of this phenomenon is not yet clear.

RAILWAYS NOT ENTITLED TO RATES INCREASE

Meighen Discusses Freight Rates Before Manitoba Audience.

HUDSON BAY RAILWAY.

Will Complete Railway If It Costs No More Than $9,000,000.

SELKIRK, Man., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—"There is no need in the world of any addition by a dollar to any freight rate that you pay today," Premier Meighen declared here at an open air meeting. "Under the railway conditions of this time," Mr. Meighen added, "Our railway rates are sufficient to bring a fair return to our railways. They are not entitled to any more, and I am not going to take any step of any kind that will result in any increased rate paid by the farmers of our country on their products. I hope that is plain enough. I never was in favor, I am not in favor of Parliament fixing rates, What I have objected to in connection with these so-called Crow's Nest rates, is not the rates, for I believe the railways would have gone down to the rates or the Railway Commission fixed them."

"You cannot have war rates at all times," Mr. Meighen proceeded, "they are not necessary and they cannot be sustained."

Mr. Meighen charged Mr. Mackenzie King with having held out "A brazen, infamous bribe to Western Canada." Mr. Meighen's reference was to the statement of Mr. King in the last campaign that the Liberal Government would complete the Hudson Bay Railway if sufficient Liberals were returned from the West. Mr. Meighen spoke of Mr. King's statement as "a bribe as infamous as ever insulted the intelligence of the Western people." Mr. Meighen added that he would go right ahead with completion of the Hudson Bay road if the cost did not exceed "even three times the $3,000,000 which its advocates claimed, but if it is going to cost $50,000,000 I say frankly it is going to take longer to do it.

"The population here," he said, "shows an increase of five per cent in five years. One per cent per year. Think of it, we have had more than that number coming as immigrants though our immigration has been small. The whole of our natural increase has gone into the veins of the United States."

He spoke of the Liberal tariff platform of the Ottawa convention. Liberals, he said, had been challenged to move that platform in the House. "But you couldn't raise them from their seats if you plastered their seats with tacks," he commented.

MOSLEM YOUTHS PROTEST COST OF MATRIMONY

Two hundred young men have filed complaint, declaring times are so bad and the cost of living so high that they cannot pay the parents the prevailing compensation for young brides.

The compensation usually is $100 in cash, 100 pounds of sugar, 35 pounds of butter, 35 pounds of honey, four pounds of Chinese tea and two pairs of shoes.

proposal was made to lop off some of the duties. Sir John A. MacDonald had said the tariff was not for all time, but merely to put the infant industries on their feet. But, unfortunately, the stronger these industries became, the more lustily they yelled when anything was mentioned about lower tariffs.

Tariff for Consumer

A tariff put in by the Government in favor of the producer was dishonest. High tariffs were put in for the sake of a few rich manufacturers in order to make them still richer. But when a tariff was made for the consumer, such a tariff was for everybody. All were consumers.

The Constitution

Touching briefly on the constitutional issue, Mr. Marshall declared Canada had to have identically the same constitution as possessed by Great Britain. In Britain the King for over 100 years had followed exactly the advice given him by his Ministers. Britain had a great struggle to secure this form of government. The British cut off the head of one king and put another off the throne and when at any time a king or queen stood in the way he or she was brushed aside. British institutions were the finest in the world and Canada insisted on safeguarding them. In Canada, they had been accustomed to boast that they had a finer system of government that any Republic. They had, and it was their duty to maintain this British system of government by the people.

J. J. Duffus

Mr. Duffus took issue with a statement made by one of Mr. Peck's supporters at Indian River, to the effect that the Liberals were sheering away from the Customs issue. Mr. Duffus declared there was no desire on the part of the Liberals to minimize the gravity of the issue and said he took the attitude that all concerned in the scandal should be punished.

The information which Mr. Stevens used in the House was ferreted out by the Department concorned. Mr. Stevens by broadcasting the news had nullified the results that would have followed the investigations instituted by Hon. Mr. Boivin, a Minister who wore himself to death by his devotion to duty.

DECIDED INCREASE MARKS ADVANCE SALE

Exhibition Promises to be Even Greater Success This Year.

The Peterborough Exhibition this year will be the best since its inception, declared Roland Denne, the president, to The Examiner today. He stated that there had been a decided increase over last year in the sale of the advance tickets, which indicated to him a greater interest in the exhibition on the part of the public.

To accommodate those interested in the election a special wire service direct to the grand stand has been arranged and full returns will be given out during the evening of September 14. The results will be announced through the grounds with the aid of amplifiers.

Webber Turner, the director of amusements, he said, was at present in Toronto arranging for many extras and already had secured some that could not fail to make a hit with the public.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

Viscountess Rhondda Described as England's Most Capable Business Woman.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Viscountess Rhonda, who has been elected president of the Institue of Directors, is regarded as England's most capable business woman. Tribute to her business ability was paid to her by the Hon. Sir John A. Cockburn, when in proposing her election, he spoke of Lady Rhondda as a woman who had proved herself to have one of the cleverest business heads in the country.

"Women generally," he added "are more equable and more businesslike than men. They do not rise to such heights of disastrous imaginuation or sink to such depths of despair, and they are less likely to plunge."

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR BAD STOMACH GIVES QUICK RELIEF

No Need of Strong Medicines or Diet — Famous but Simple Old English Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition, Banishes After-Eating Distress.

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system by following unnecessary starvation diets.

Never hurry your meals or overeat of anything, but within reason most folks may eat what they like—if they will keep their stomach sweet, clean and active and free from the souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a small amount of pure Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless and inexpensive form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia, which may be obtained from any druggist for only a few cents, will easily convince you of the great value of this old English recipe.

FIRE CHIEFS SEE DEMONSTRATION

Gas Mask and Resuscitation Apparatus Used at Convention.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS.

WINDSOR, Ont., August 27. — The Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association yesterday witnessed a number of interesting tests with gas masks, smoke protectors and other aids to fire-fighting. The tests made in an open lot at Park Street and Dougall Avenue attracted several thousand people. One of the most interesting of these was the pumping of mono-oxide gas from the motor of a fire truck into a small hut in which was imprisoned a demonstrator equipped with a gas mask. After nearly 30 minutes' incarceration the "victim" emerged unscathed. A cat placed in the hut at the same time became unconscious a few minutes after the gas began to enter the building. It was resuscitated by the prompt use of oxygen administered by a patented device. The convention, which began two days ago, will adjourn to-day.

The rapidly growing traffic problem, resultant from the use of automobiles, presents a challenge to fire fighters, whose aid can be enlisted in an effort to make the streets of Canadian cities safer, Alderman C. R. Tuson, traffic commissioner of Windsor, told the delegates at the meeting yesterday.

The problem, Alderman Tuson said, was too great for the police alone to handle. He believed that a great benefit could be derived from having all firemen sworn in as special constables, with the right to deal with traffic ordinance violators in the same manner as policemen do.

At night the delegates were guests of the committee in charge of the convention at a moonlight ride on the steamer St. Claire, organized by the Windsor Fire Department.

TWO MEN KILLED AT DOME MINES

Believed They Were Blasting Holes When One Exploded.

OTHERS INJURED.

SOUTH PORCUPINE, Ont., Aug. 27. — Canadian Press. — Two men are dead and two others were seriously injured in an explosion in the Dome Mines yesterday.

The dead are Emil Houthood, 25, and Henri Dassich, 40.

In addition, John Polojckuk, Armenian, 37 years of age, lost the sight of both of his eyes. He was operated on yesterday afternoon in an attempt to save his life.

Complete details of the tragedy have not yet been secured. It is believed the men were engaged in blasting holes, and were charging up a hole when some missed holes exploded. The accident occurred in a cross cut on the sixteenth level. Some of the men were badly mangled.

Alhough it has a huge tongue, the whale has very little sense of taste.

DINNER PLATE CORSAGES.

Huge Bouquets Are Present Day Fashion in London.

The modest nosegay which adorned milady's left shoulder at the beginning of the season has assumed the proportions of a dinner plate, while the newer frocks are being shown with still larger blossoms poised on the right hip. These large flowers are made of gossamer fabrics, of the organdie or chiffon type. The style, which is well adapted to evening dresses, is having quite a holiday vogue at the smart resorts.

ONTARIO APPLES.

The Ontario Government's campaign for better prices and larger sales for Ontario agricultural products in the British market, an undertaking very much desired by Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agricultural, is being continued.

The conference of representatives of the apple industry held in Toronto this week at the request of the Government was an important step, and the decision to send a personal agent to handle Ontario apples in the British market will be regarded as a progressive plan likely to give good results.

The delegates were wise in declaring against the exportation of any grade three apples.

The whole object of the campaign should be to convince the British people that Ontario apples are the finest produced anywhere.

The export of high quality Ontario fruit, with the sales looked after by a special agent, should ensure for Ontario apples a ready sale in Great Britain at top-of-the-market prices.

THE TOURIST CAMP.

A grateful motorist who had been well looked after during his visit to the local tourist camp at the Exhibition Grounds wrote to the City Council to express his appreciation of the camp and of the services rendered by the caretaker, John Gillespie, whom he described as a "real host."

The incident is mentioned here first because it is proof that a well conducted tourist camp is of good advertising value to a community, and secondly, because such a sense of gratitude is not generally found.

We are not as keen as we should be to give thanks for good service.

It only cost this Niagara Falls visitor a 2c stamp and a few minutes time to pen his letter, but the fact that he took the trouble to do it indicates that spirit of courtesy and gratitude is not altogether extinct.

Incidentally, it might be pointed out that although written letters of thanks in regard to the tourist camp have been a novelty, visiting motorists have not been slow while here in expressing their appreciation of the conveniences furnished by the local camp, and particularly of the courteous manner in which they have been looked after by Caretaker Gillespie.

THE TRAFFIC BYLAW.

The Examiner hopes that the Police Department will have the hearty co-operation of motorists in carrying out the new traffic bylaw which requires drivers to bring their machines to a full stop in entering the streets designated by the bylaw as through streets.

This paper has long advocated the passing of such legislation, being satisfied from the experience of other cities which have tested the plan that it will make conditions safer for every motorist.

There is, among some drivers, the feeling that a measure of this kind is not needed; yet it must be admitted that a general compliance with the bylaw will reduce the danger of collisions at street intersections to a minimum.

Two features in connection with the measure should be remembered.

And secondly, the fact that such a rule is in force does not convert the through streets into speedways.

Drivers on such streets are expected to observe the law in regard to crossing street intersections, which calls for a speed of not more than ten miles an hour.

An earnest effort to co-operate with the police in the enforcing of the new bylaw will be of benefit to motorists in particular and the community in general.

THIS MUST STOP.

The Water at the Lake street bathing beach is considered by the Chairman of the city's Parks Committee to be so dangerously polluted as to render it necessary to close the beach several weeks ahead of the usual time.

It is a most inexplicable thing that such conditions should be allowed to continue.

For a number of years there have been complaints that the water in the Otonabee was unsafe for bathers; yet the pollution has been allowed to continue until it has become necessary to deprive bathers of their privilege of enjoying their favourite pastime.

Surely it is possible to trace the origin of the pollution.

And surely, when the source has been located, steps can be taken to ensure the elimination of the trouble.

If the local Board of Health has not sufficient authority to deal effectively with the question, the assistance of the Provincial health authorities should be obtained.

At all events the pollution of the Otonabee should be stopped, and the people will expect the City Council and the Board of Health to take up the fight for purer water and carry it through to a successful termination.

THE CALL FOR HARVEST REINFORCEMENTS.

A fine wheat crop in the Western Provinces will do the country no good if it is not harvested, and it cannot be harvested without help from the Eastern Provinces. The West has always looked to the East for harvest reinforcements and the greater the crop the greater has been the demand for Eastern labor. This year, with an estimated yield of 385,000,000 bushels, or thereabouts, the call has been for fifty thousand men, and less than half of that number have responded. It is possible that much of the surplus Eastern labor available in other years has been lost to Canada, through the southward migration that is still in progress, but no one likes to think that this cause alone is responsible for the drop of thirty per cent. in the number going West from Ontario, or forty per cent. in this Province, and of very nearly fifty per cent. in the Maritimes. It is inconceivable that enough men cannot be spared, even from other occupations, in the Provinces east of the lakes for the necessary business of getting the Western crop harvested. The Prairie Provinces cannot do the job alone. They have, moreover, a right to look to the more thickly populated older Provinces for the seasonal aid which they require, inasmuch as all these Provinces stand to benefit from the new wealth which the prairies have produced, provided there is no failure in the final process. The wheat crop raised last year was a factor of the utmost importance in the sum of Canada's economic progress during the succeeding months. Without the wheat crop, and without the raw materials which the Dominion is exporting for manufacture by foreign labor, there would have been very little commercial improvement. The harvest did much to compensate the country for serious set-backs in other industries and every bushel of the crop now ripe is needed in order that the fullest advantage may again be taken of one great branch of production which the influence of politicians and amateur economists has not blighted. It is for this reason that Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces should make a real effort to provide the fifty thousand men who are wanted in the West.—St. Catharines Standard.

THEORY OF PROGRESSIVES AND GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY.

(From The Montreal Star.)

The Progressives have a theory that it ought to be possible for Parliament to reject a Government measure or even to condemn a member of a Government for unworthy conduct, without imperilling the position of the Government itself. That is, they reason that it may be quite possible that Parliament does not favor a measure which the Ministers must swallow in order to placate some small group whose general support is necessary; yet that same Parliament may not want a change of Ministry.

That is, of course, an approach to the American system of immovable Cabinets, not responsible to Congress, which can stay in office no matter how terribly Congress may maul and multilate their measures. It is a long step away from the British system of responsible government.

The temptation to make such a change arises wholly from just such "group" movement as the Progressive. When we had only two parties, it was obvious that any measure, which could not get the support of the majority party, could not be taken up by the Ministry. If the Ministry persisted in taking such a measure up, it not only went counter to its party but it lost the confidence of that party; and this would be especially true if the party felt so strongly on the subject that it openly defeated the Ministerial measure in the House.

But when "groups" come into the picture, the whole situation is changed. The Government may be compelled to win the support of a "group" by promising the whole strength of the Government vote behind some "crank" bill desired only by that group. In exchange the "group" promises to support the Government on all confidence motions. That is what some people call a "political bargain" while others describe it in terms not permitted in Parliament. But, whatever it may be it is the product of the "group" system of government which the Progressives have been almost wholly responsible for importing into this country.

Our people as a whole, however, will be very reluctant to abandon the British system of responsible government. It is the only method by which the executive branch of the governing machinery can be kept constantly responsive to public opinion. An Executive Council, in a position to defy public opinion for four or five years, could do a lot of harm. It is not only in making the laws and in voting supply that the people should be empowered to rule, but in operating the laws and spending supply.

The Progressives would probably argue that they do not desire to change this admirable arrangement, but that they do desire to be able to vote down bills which the majority of Parliament do not favor without disturbing the Cabinet that framed them. But a little thought—in fact, a little study of their own experience—ought to convince them that this arrangement would be unworkable in a Parliament which could dismiss its Cabinet at will.

Let us suppose a case. Let us suppose that a Liberal Government wanted the support of a Progressive group, and, in order to get that support, was driven to draft and back a Rural Credits Bill. Parliament as a whole might disapprove of the measure. Lots of Liberals might want to vote against it. Under the Progressive plan, they could do so without upsetting the Government. But there would be nothing to prevent the Progressives from serving notice on the Liberals that if they did exercise their new freedom in this manner, the Progressives would immediately join the Conservatives in voting want of confidence in the Government—and out it would go. That is, the Government would not fall on the Rural Credits vote, but it would fall immediately afterward on a straight vote of want of confidence. And one fall would be about as painful as the other.

In fact, this is very much what does happen, except that we now have a short cut to the same end—that is, the Government falls on the Rural Credits vote and does not have to linger along waiting for the second blow. There is no way of divorcing the fate of a Government from the fate of its official program unless we will strip Parliament of the power to unseat a Government. And to do this is to abandon our tried and long successful British system of responsible government.

This is only one of the "reforms" that the Progressives would like to inaugurate which seems to promise a superficial advantage, but which would seriously shake the foundation of institutions which it has taken the free democracies of the Empire centuries to build up.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Motorists who do not obey the new traffic bylaw will find it a poor defence to tell the court they don't think such a measure necessary.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Quietness featured the export trade in grain on the local produce market yesterday, although there were reports of a steady improvement in ocean grain room. A fair business was done with Liverpool, London and Glasgow. An increased demand in the cash grain market for Canadian Western oats was the dominantnote in that department, but since the premiums were advanced 1 cent a bushel in the Winnipeg market little business was accomplished. A moderate demand developed from country buyers and prices were steady.

A decline ranging from 3-4 cent to 2 cents a bushel in the spring wheat flour market at Winnipeg brought a steady demand from foreign buying. The trade with domestic and country buyers however is slow, sales being confined to small lots.

The market for winter wheat grades was unchanged.

Millfeed and rolled oats were unchanged.

Receipts of butter yesterday were 5,059 packages. A weak feeling developed in the market with a lowering in prices from 1-4 to 1-2 cent a pound. Western No. 1 pasteurized creamery was quoted at 32 7-8 to 33 cents; Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized at 32 1-2 cents, No. 1 unpasteurized at 32 1-2 cents and No. 2 grades at 30 1-2 cents a pound.

Cheese reecipts were 5,955 boxes. There was no change in prices. No. 1 western white sold at 17 1-2 cents and eastern grades at 17 1-8 cents a pound.

Choice hand-picked beans sold at $2.25 a bushel and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 a bushel.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Splendid weather and the impending movement of Spring wheat both sides of the Canadian line led to lowering of all grain values yesterday. The wheat market closed unsettled, 7-8 to 1 7-8 down, corn 3-4 to 1 1-8c off, oats showing 1-4 to 5-8 to 3-4c decline, and provisions varying from a setback of 7 cents to 17 cents advance.

At first the wheat market had an upward trend, but in the later dealings free selling developed on the part of houses with connections northwest. Then early strength faded out and liquidating sales from holders here ensued, increasing the market burden due to hedging against new spring wheat. Under such circumstances, closing quotations were at virtually the day's bottom level, with Canadian crop news a leading factor in forcing prices to break.

A rush of Canadian wheat marketward was reported, influenced by the crop improvement reported to have taken place. Owing to the weather of the last two or three weeks, yields in Canada were said to be exceeding expectations. Besides, new export buying of North American wheat yesterday was of unimpressive volume, about 450,000 bushels. On the other hand, early strength here resulted from the fact that wheat shipments out of Chicago are large. Furthermore, gossip was current that a large sleeping short interest in September delivery might soon be disclosed.

Corn and oats sagged both as a result of wheat being on the downgrade and on account of favorable weather in the corn belt. May and September oats touched a new low price record for the season.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to an upturn in hog values.

"MORE THAN YOU CAN HELP" OR "CANNOT HELP"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"'Do not exaggerate more than you cannot help.' Is this good English?" wrote a correspondent to the editor of a New York newspaper.

To this the editor replied:

"None better. It has the overwhelming authority of Dr. Samuel Johnson. The Oxford Dictionary classes as a 'common but erroneous' usage the omission of the negative. Ayres, however, condemns it." The Ayres to whom reference is made is Alfred Ayres, who wrote a book called "The Verbalist, a manual devoted to brief discussions of the right and the wrong use of words, and to some other matters of interest to those who would speak and write with propriety. The book was published forty years ago, and is still quoted frequently as an authority on the uses of words.

At the beginning of his work Ayres cites several passages from famous authors advising the study of one's own language. Among others is the following quotation from Locke: "If a gentleman be to study any language, it ought to be that of his own country."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

DON'T GET DAD WRONG

Don't get Dad wrong: he works each day
At the same old job in the same old way,
And he gets ahead, but he won't advance
Like he would, perhaps, if he took a chance.
But the house is ours, though the house is small,
It's a little place, but we own it all:
We haven't as much, perhaps, as some,
But there's always a home to which to come.

Don't get Dad wrong: we would like to get
A lot of things that we haven't yet,
A lot of things that we really need,
But Dad's old-fashion in word and deed.
Yet he never hurries across the street
To dodge some man that he hates to meet;
He has the cash when he comes to buy,
And he looks the whole world in the eye.

And spends a little, puts some away,
He buys a bond, or a bit of land,
But the kids don't always understand.
For he looks ahead with the eyes of love,
And it isn't himself he's thinking of
When he saves a bit as he goes along,
So, whatever you do, don't get Dad wrong.

THE GREAT STONE LIZARD

By Dr. Frank Crane.

He said its heart, Manhattan, had that shape as it lay with its head at the Battery and its tail extending to Spuyten Duvil.

A few facts about this city—which have been gathered from various statistics of the past year—will show the magnitude of its activities and give an inkling as to the reason for its soubriquet of "the wonder city of the world."

If the lamp posts were stretched out in a straight line instead of following the curves and angles of the streets they would reach to San Francisco.

If you began walking at a normal pace and walked for eight hours a day, it would take you from the Fourth of July to after New Year to simply cover all the miles of streets without walking on the same street twice.

There are more than four thousand miles of streets within the city limits. Over two thousand five hundred of these miles are paved.

From its public libraries more than twenty million books are circulated each year.

In it twenty-two miles of babies are born each year.

There are 137,000 of them. Put shoulder to shoulder these infants would form a line that many miles long.

In one of its many fish markets enough pounds of fish are sold each twelve months to distribute a two-pound fish to every one of the 196,940,000 square miles that make up the surface of this earth.

Every square mile from "Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand" would get its fish and there would be some left over.

THE HON. HOWARD FERGUSON'S POLICY.

Sir:

"If we are to be considered a part of the British Empire we must be in the British Empire and take our place there."

These were the words used by the Hon. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, when addressing the British delegates to the Empire Parliamentary Association, meeting in Australia, as they stopped off at Toronto. If we have not an Empire Parliament, and it is perhaps just as well we have an Empire Parliament Association, composed of members of parliament of every part of the Empire and meeting in each country or part of the British Empire in turn. It meets for the sake of keeping each legislative part of the Empire in touch with the others. It seemed to me in reading Mr. Ferguson's clear and emphatic statement as if it were a pointed declaration to Canadians as well as to the British delegates that the policy of the Province of Ontario was to be in the Empire to remain in it and to bear a share of its burdens, both in peace and in war.

What a contrast to the statement of the Prime Minister of Canada, Mr. Meighen, who says: "In case of war Canada will call a genral election and see if she will take part or not."

This is Mr. Meighen's idea of empire. This is the trash he committed the Conservative party to, when to save his own skin as party leader he determined to get a foothold in Quebec at all costs. Not that the loyal French are not with us but there is a "nationalist" group there and these Mr. Meighen is angling for. It is a nice thing, isn't it, to think that the Conservative party of Canada is being dragged round like a can hitched to the tail of the "Nationalist" dog, the dog that prides itself on saying that it will chew the British flag to pieces if the word empire is ever mentioned to it. All honor to Mr. Ferguson, even if he did invent 4.4 beer. He is a loyal subject of the King and the great British Empire and that is more than Mr. Meighen is or any man or woman who supports his "war-policy."

Lt.-Col. J. T. Carrick, ex-M.P., a veteran of the late war and a Conservative, announces his candidature at Port Arthur as an independent. He is a man of great prominence and wealth, who feels that "independents" are the ruling power at Ottawa and that it is necessary to join their ranks. It is said that he radically disagrees with Mr. Meighen's empire policy. He was formerly federal member for that district.

INVESTIGATION INTO DEATHS OF THE POISON ALCOHOL VICTIMS RESULTS IN TWO MORE ARRESTS

Former Policeman of Brantford is Accused of Smuggling Liquor.

TAKEN TO NIAGARA

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., August 27.—Further developments in the investigation being conducted by the Attorney-General's department in connection with the alcoholic poisoning cases were announced on Thursday morning with the arrest of Joseph Cox, ex-policeman, of St. Catharines and Brantford, and C. W. Smith, of Hamilton, on charges of smuggling.

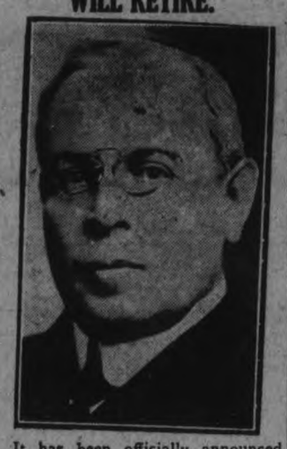
Cox was apprehended at St. Catharines, and Smith was arrested in Milton after an all-night wait by Provincial police, who were expecting his arrival. He was immediately taken to Niagara Falls. Smith, it was stated, was one of the men indicted by a United States grand jury for violation of the Federal Prohibition Act.

Rocco Perri, J. B. (Ben) Kerr, Harry Sullivan, Edward Miller and Joseph Romeo, the men arrested here in connection with the deaths of several persons, caused by drinking bad booze, will appear in police court again on Saturday morning to face charges of manslaughter, administering poison, and two counts under the Customs Act.

The quintet were admitted to bail of $20,000 two weeks ago, when the Crown Attorney was unable to state when he would be in a position to proceed with the cases. Should he express his readiness on Saturday the evidence will be presented, and it will remain with the magistrate to decide whether or not it is strong enough to commit the accused for trial.

Peter White, K.C., will represent the Federal Government in the Customs charges, and George Ballard will act for the Provincial Government in connection with the charges laid under the criminal code.

WILL RETIRE.



It has been officially announced at Canadian Pacific Railway headquarters that W. B. Lanigan, above, general freight traffic manager, has retired from the service.

RYE CROP VARIES.

REGINA, Sask., August 27. Canadian Press. — Rains in early August have greatly benefited grain crop in Saskatchewan, and better yields than anticipated earlier in the season now are believed possible, states a government crop report issued here.

Cutting is well under way in the province ,but practically no threshing has been done.

Hail and sandfly damage is apparent in many districts. Otherwise the crops in general have not suffered materially from any cause during the last two weeks.

The estimates of the yield of fall rye vary considerably with the average from 18 to 20 bushels per acre.

The recent rains have greatly improved pasturage, and livestock generally are reported in fair condition.

GUNMEN KILL TWO IN FEUD

Kidnapped, Taken To Outskirts of Detroit, and Shot.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 27—One man was killed and another probably fatally wounded by feud gunmen at Eleven-Mile Road outside the city limits late Wednesday night, after they had been kidnapped in Detroit. The dead man is believed to be Paul Clarke, Detroit. He was shot three times. The wounded man is Bud Gilboe, 30 years old. He is in Pontiac Hospital with two bullet wounds in the abdomen tand two in the neck. Hospital physicians say he will die.

Both men were shot and thrown from an automobile, police learned. Gilboe was taken to the Birmingham police station and later to the Pontiac Hospital. He mumbled a story that he and Clarke had been forced at the point of a revolver to get into an automobile at 3442 Third Avenue by two men. The gunmen were known to him, he said, as John Reed and "Tennessee Slim."

ANGRY MINERS ATTACK POLICE AT LANCASHIRE

Squads of Mounted Men Required To Check Infuriated.

BREAK WINDOWS.

Miners Trying To Get Owners To Resume Negotiations.

LONDON, Aug. 27—While representatives of the Miners' federation conferred yesterday with members of the ministry in an effort to find means to end the coal stoppage, a crowd of infuriated miners at Ashton Green, Lancashire, smashed the windows of a hotel and stoned mounted police in the most serious of recent trouble in the coal area.

Save Industry

While Cook, the miners' leader, is anxious to do something to prevent a complete collapse of the strike, the miners are trying to get the government and the owners to resume negotiations. In the meanwhile, many owners are taking steps to reorganize their plants in an attempt to rescue the industry, which at present is in a deplorable condition. Following the decision of a group of South Yorkshire colliery interests to amalgamate their properties in order to economize by the reduction of costs, it is understood that preparations are in progress for a joint working agreement between two powerful anthracite combines in South Wales.

More Members

They have amalgamated a number of anthracite collieries with a capitalization of over ten million, under the chairmanship of Sir Alfred Mond, with the United Anthracite Collieries, which have a capital of $12,500,000, under the chairmanship of F. A. Szarvasy. This is in accordance with Sir Alfred's merger plan, but the actual arrangement will not be completed until the strike is ended, when it will be submitted to the shareholders.

The South Yorkshire scheme for the grouping of collieries is the idea of Lord Aberconway, and the amount of capital involved is $5,000,000. It is expected that a further amalgamation will follow and that in time the unprotfiable collieries will be eliminated.

Public Optimistic

Public opinion is optimistic regarding these latest developments, which are full of hope for the future, if peace can be secured. Meanwhile, the superiority of British coal has been impressively demonstrated. Railway companies, wihch have been using German coal since the strike, find the power generated insufficient for British locomotives. Other industries are complaining largely of the inferiority of foreign coal.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM INJURIES

Two Young Men in Car Struck By Engine Are Bruised.

AT TRENTON.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 27 Two young men, William and Roy Middleton, of Western Ontario, narrowly escaped serious injury when the truck in which they were riding was struck by a yard engine in the Canadian National yards at Trenton early yesterday.

The men, who are employees of the Duro Products, had recently come to Trenton with the corner stones for the new Masonic Temple, were on their way home and on reaching the crossing evidently did not see the approaching locomotive. Both sustained cuts and bruises.

DENIES REPORT OF DIFFERENCES IN SCHOOL BOARD

Chairman Says No Disunion Between Trustees of Separate School Board.

ANSWERS LETTER.

No Declaration of Racial War Against English-Speaking Members.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—A reply was issued yesterday afternoon by Sam Genest, chairman of the Separate School Board, denying that the action of the French speaking Separate School trustees in rejecting a resolution of the English speaking members of the Board, which invited the English Canadian community of Grey Nuns to staff certain English Separate Schools in Ottawa, was a declaration of racial or religious war against the English speaking Catholics. Mr. Genest's letter contains the following:

"In consequence, the assertion in the letter written by the English speaking priests and published in yesterday's newspapers, that 'The French-speaking members of the School Board have declared a racial and religious war upon the English-speaking Catholics of the Ottawa Diocese,' is devoid of foundation, indeed dishonest. The matter has nothing to do whatever with Catholics outside of Ottawa and concerns only the internal administration of the Ottawa Separate School Board."

Mr. Genest's letter asserts that the Board has for many years had a contract with the Grey Nuns of Ottawa (the parent body) and this community has faithfully kept this contract, so that it would be unfair to engage teachers from the newly formed community, the English Canadian Grey Nun community, when the parent body is in a position to supply the teachers fully qualified for the position. The letter adds:

"It is a matter of indifference to the French-speaking trustees what costume or name is borne by the Sisters employed by the English-speaking committee, but in this particular instance they are opposed to the employment of the Sisters of the newly formed community because of the feeling and spirit these Nuns have manifested, particularly within the last two years. The French-speaking trustees want peace and harmony within the School Board and between the two races in Ottawa; that is why they refuse to employ Sisters who in their opinion are every little disposed to imbue their pupils with this spirit of peace and harmony."

The reply of the Chairman of the School Board is to a letter from M. J. O'Farrell, Secretary of the English-speaking section of the School Board, pointing to the rejection of the resolution of the English-speaking trustees and an open letter signed by 26 priests in the Ottawa diocese protesting against this action of the French-speaking trustees.

Mr. Genest's reply claims that only three of the 26 priests who signed the letter live in Ottawa.

FUNERAL SERVICE

MARMORA, Aug. 27.—The funeral service of the late John Kelly took place on Wednesday afternoon at St. Paul's. The special hymn sung was "O Love That Wilt Not Let me Go." The Rector who officiated gave a short address.

The pall-bearers were: W. D. Nickle, L. Wannamaker, S. Ellis and T. Gawley, all of Malone and former neighbors of the deceased. Interment followed in Marmora cemetry.

In Dallas, Tex., five and a half miles of new street railway line is now building to replace service that has been given by automobile bus. This is in conformity with the new practice of a number of street railway companies to "pioneer" with buses and later to lay tracks for permanent rail service when a locality within a city has been developed.

STRESEMAN WINS SMALL MAJORITY

Reichstag Foreign Affairs Committee Adopts His Report on League.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German Foreign Minister, triumphed by a narrow margin over the Nationalists yesterday at a stormy secret session of the Reichstag Foreign Affairs Committee, which met to hear his report on the League of Nations situation.

The correspondent was authoritatively informed last night that the Nationalists introduced a resolution demanding that the Government convene the Reichstag and submit to it a question of whether Germany should join the League in view of the failure of the Allies to reduce their forces of occupation in the Rhineland. When the resolution was defeated, the Nationalists proposed that the Committee on Foreign Affairs meet again after the forthcoming decision of the League's committee of investigation into the composition of the Council is made public. Again they were defeated by a few votes.

Dr. Stresemann told the committee yesterday that Chancellor Marx will not go to Geneva unless the Premiers of all the other great powers do so. He also said the German Government will do everything possible to keep Spain in the League, and that after Germany is admitted she will, under certain conditions, support Poland's claim to a permanent Council seat, as well as that of Spain.

CHICAGO TO HAVE PINKER LUNGS NOW

Railways Are Electrifying Their Lines Inside the City.

A human lung in alcohol, resembling an exceedingly dirty sponge and labeled "Chicago dweller" was exhibited by the city health department in a recent Chicago business exposition alongside another jar containing a pink and healthy specimen 'From the country." It shocked people, just as the city health department intended. It was one of the department's protests against smoke and soot. Today Dr. Herman A. Bundesen, Chicago's health commissioner, is registering joy instead of gloom for the Illinois Central Railroad has electrified its suburban lines running into the city and the Bundesen campaign against soot and smoke is making great headway.

"I am glad to congratulate the railroad on moving from coal to electricity," declares Dr. Bundesen. "This move means much for the whole middle west for the reason that it will serve as an object lesson to others. It is an advance in civilization and urban health protection.

"For the immediate health situation in Chicago it means much for the reason that breathing smoke-polluted air, laden as it is with poisonous gas and injurious foreign matter, is an important detrimental factor to physical well-being. The solids in the air, consisting of tar, soot, sulphuric acid and fine ash from burning coal irritate sensitive membranes, increase the susceptibility to pulmonary diseases, nasal and throat disorders, diminish potential reserve and increase fatigue, irritability and malcontent.

"Apart from the direct effect upon health of breathing dirt-laden air, there is a more serious loss caused by the action of a smoke pall filtering out the life-giving ultra-violet rays from the sunlight. Smoke in Chicago cuts off approximately one-half of the possible winter sunshine which is a necessary body tonic Solid particles, forming a smoke-pall over a city not only cause a decrease in the amount of sunshine with a direct health loss, but protect infectious bacteria from destruction by these rays. Smoke increases humidity, also the frequency and duration of mists and fogs.

"Smoke is one of the chief liabilities of Chicago. Statistics show that locomotives cause about 43 per cent of the total smoke in the city. Up to the present time, however, the coal burning locomotive, of which there are approximately 1800 operating at all times within the 200-square-mile area of the Chicago terminal district, has proven an insurmountable obstacle in the campaign for smoke abatement.

"But railroads are awakening to the necessity for a change in their method of operation. The new Illinois Central electrification is one evidence of that. And the recent acquisition of an oil-electric locomotive for test by the Chicago and Northwestern Railway is another."

One type of powerful electric landing light used at some of the fields along the U. S. mail airway is of 500 million candle-power.

A SIMPLE RECORD OF FACT

OF INTEREST TO THE MOTORISTS OF CANADA

ON February 15th—just six months ago—we raised the curtain on a merchandising success that has no counterpart in the annals of modern business. It was then that we revealed the record of our four-year search for the ideal motor lubricant, and announced the culmination of that search in the development of a new and wonderful refining process. At once the attention of the motoring world was focussed upon Marvelube Motor Oil, by reason of the positive assurances we gave to trade and public that it would prove a revelation in lubricating efficiency.

On April 20th, Marvelube went on sale across Canada. On that very day it became apparent that our high claims had awakened the interest of car owners to an extent never achieved for any other oil product. That first day our Dealers and Service Stations set new records in crank-case fillings for customers anxious to get the lubrication benefits which we had told them Marvelube would ensure.

By May 1st, Marvelube sales had attained such proportions as to reveal a most gratifying readiness on the part of the Motoring Public to accept our claims at their full face value. From every one of our twelve Sales Divisions came reports of a demand so vastly in excess of our most optimistic anticipations as to constitute evidence of a public confidence seldom vouchsafed to any commercial institution.

By June 1st—to meet this unforeseen demand—we had doubled our plant capacity.

And yet today, in spite of intensive efforts to place adequate stocks at all our Sales Outlets, we still occasionally hear from Dealers and Service Stations that they have had to report themselves "temporarily sold out on certain grades"—and this in spite of the fact that we have been producing Marvelube at a rate sufficient to fill a demand far in excess of our total Motor Oil sales for 1925.

The proved effect of Marvelube—in smoothness and economy of car operation—has so amply justified all the claims we made at the time of its introduction, that today we find the great body of Canadian Motorists not only using Marvelube, but actively encouraging their friends to enjoy the advantages of this greater lubricant.

Accepted at first "on faith" by motorists who realized we would not jeopardize our reputation by the slightest exaggeration of the actual facts, Marvelube is to-day dominating the oil trade of Canada by reason of actual results achieved in daily use in at least three hundred thousand crank-cases. There is no longer need for claim making. Marvelube now has a record of claim proving whereby even the ultra-sceptical must be convinced.

To complete the record of Marvelube's dramatic success, we now have on file official endorsements of this great oil discovery by the manufacturers of seventy-nine per cent. of the motor cars used in Canada. Marvelube, having been subjected by them to searching tests, has received unqualified endorsement as a Motor Oil of low carbon-content, low-cold test, infinitesimal sulphur content, unique resistance to emulsification and amazing ability to retain its "body" under the most severe operating conditions.

In thanking the manufacturers of motor cars who have so frankly endorsed Marvelube, and in expressing our appreciation to the public for their prompt acceptance of the new oil, we reiterate, for the benefit of those who have not yet tried it, the unqualified statement that Marvelube is different from and superior to any other lubricant that has heretofore been offered to the motoring public.

By securing the exclusive use of Peruvian Crude, we placed ourselves in possession of the most valuable raw material for the making of lubricating oil that has ever been wrested from the oil fields of the world.

By discovering and perfecting the Marvelube process of refining, we so enhanced the inherent properties of that great crude as to be able to offer an oil possessing new and distinct properties and revealing a superiority to any other lubricant hitherto produced.

There is only one Marvelube, and the benefit of its use can easily be proved to any motorist's satisfaction by filling his crank-case with the correct grade and observing the result.

THE WORLD IS IN BONDAGE. Why is there so much distress and perplexity in the world? Why are the nations so desperately preparing for war? Why is there so much selfishness among men? Why do men manipulate the prices of food and raiment of the people and profiteer therein? Why do the politicians and the clergy deceive and mislead the people and lend their support to the selfish interests? Why are the people so much oppressed? Why are the people afflicted with famine, pestilence, and disease? Why are they the victims of sickness, sorrow, suffering, and death? Why is a man in bondage to so many evil things? Who is responsible for all this unhappy condition? May we hope that the people will ever be delivered from this sad state and enter into the joys of peace, prosperity, health, life, liberty, and happiness? Why am I? From whence did I come? What can I do to help my fellowman?

SHIP SAILS WEST ROUND WORLD TO REACH PORT 2,000 MILES EAST

Garthneill, Sailing Vessel Belonging to Marine Navigation Company of Canada, Had Great Battle With Winds and Waves of Two Oceans.

JOURNEY OF TWO MONTHS AND A HALF

By A. W. V. KING.

SYDNEY, Aug. 27.—(United Press).—Romance went from the seas, say the old sea-dogs, with the deep-sea sailing ships.

If that is so, there is mighty little romance left to be garnered under the Red Ensign of the British. There are now only four British deep-sea sailing ships—the full-rigged ships Monkbarns and William Mitchell, the barque Kilmallie, and the four-masted barque, Garthpool—and all of them were in Australian ports within the last year or so. A fifth, the Garthneill, recently was sold to an Adelaide firm as a store ship, after waiting fruitlessly for eight months in Melbourne for a cargo.

It was a sad end to a sentimental journey which had already cost her owners, the Marine Navigation Company of Canada, many thousands of dollars. In May last year she arrived in England with a cargo of nitrates from Chile, showing a heavy loss on her two years' voyage round the world. She was about to be broken up when her owners yielded to sentiment and sent her out on a last voyage. If it did not return a profit, she was to be broken up, but no amount of sentiment would procure her a cargo, and she arrived in Australia, never to return. The loss of keeping her idle in commission could not go on forever, and she was sold for the proverbial song.

The Garthneill, then the Inverneill, was launched at Glasgow (Scotland) in 1895. She paid her way for more than 20 years, and in 1919 had her greatest fight against wind and waves. She left Melbourne in June, 1919, in ballast for Bunbury, on the southern coast of Western Australia, to pick up a cargo of hardwood for South Africa.

Seven weeks later a strange barque was reported off Sydney. It was the Garthneill, coming back from a losing fight with the storm devils of the Great Australian Bight. After refitting another attempt to make westing failed. Then the master, trusting to providence that the westerly wind would hold, decided to take the route via the Horn and Cape Good Hope in order to reach Bunbury in time to keep his charter.

The west wind respected the brave man in charge of the Garthneill, and two and a half months after leaving Sydney, the Garthneill arrived at Bunbury, after travelling nearly round the world to reach a port barely 2,000 miles from her starting point..

Since then cargoes have been difficult to secure, and slowly the Garthneill has dropped out of the race with Progress, a defeated warrior of the seas.

MOTOR CAR HAS FORCED ENTRY INTO JAPAN DESPITE POVERTY

Absolute Necessity in Modern Industry Is Well Illustrated.

WAR CHANGES.

TOKIO, Aug. 28 — No better illustration of the utility value of the automobile and its absolute necessity as a factor in modern industry could be had than the way it has forced its way into Japan in the last three years despite a national poverty that has reduced the purchase of most other types of manufactured goods from abroad.

The real beginning of the motor vehicle in Japan dates from the earthquake which virtually destroyed the great port city of Yokohama and reduced much of the industrial section of Tokio to ashes, but this catastrophe as it now appears only hastened a change that already had been rendered inevitable by the transformation in economic conditions that had been wrought by the World War.

The earthquake accentuated the financial depression, but it by no means began it. The adverse trade balance on which Japanese spokesmen lay so much emphasis, had existed since 1920 and the national debt had increased in the three years preceding the disaster at a rate more rapid than in any previous time of peace in the nation's history.

The earthquake undoubtedly added to the difficulty, but it also may have proved a blessing in disguise in that it compelled immediate recognition of the fact that the nation could not hope to cope with after-war conditions without another great advance toward modernization of its industrial life.

Big Benefactor from War

In a comparative sense Japan prospered to a greater degree from the war than any other country. When the shipment of European goods to the Oriental market suddenly was cut off in 1914 the industrial equipment which the nation had been slowly and painfully assembling in the previous decade suddenly came into its own. There was a market abroad for everything that the Japanese could make in the way of manufactured goods, regardless of quality and almost at any price.

The condition naturally required increased capital and labor. Not only were the profits of new business poured back into expansion of plants but large sums were borrowed by the industries. High wages were offered to induce the farmers to desert their land and come to the factories, and industries bid against each other for the limited supply of available skilled labor. Wage scales in some instances doubled and trebled.

The trouble came at the end of the war, when much of the foreign trade Japan had developed suddenly came to an end. Other countries faced the same difficulty and in the United States, the other big beneficiary of the war, it was particularly acute. There was, however, a distinct difference in method of meeting the condition in the United States and Japan.

In the United States whatever props the government had given to business during the war were suddenly withdrawn. Such steps, as the authorities at Washington took were all in the direction of forcing a prompt and drastic deflation. For a time during 1920 and 1921 American business men were forced to a fierce scramble for their financial lives. Many individuals went broke, but American industry stood the strain and when the after-war trade began to open up in 1922 they were ready and waiting for it.

Different in Japan

Japanese industry was different, in that it was closely tied in with the government. During the war the government had borrowed money heavily and most of it went to stimulate industry. The national debt had heavily increased and the security for the new bonds outstanding was principally in the newly built factories. Deflation of industry could not be affected without deflation of the government at the same time. For the particular ministers in power to attempt the process mean in addition to possible national bankruptcy, loss of their own jobs.

Reducing the wages of the mass of population never is a popular task and Japanese politicians are no different than those in other countries in the respect that they shrink from anything that may produce a national upheaval.

Hence it was that Japan made no attempt to deflate. Instead it endeavored to maintain a war standard of living, which had become fictitious, by a process of governmental subsidies to industry supplied from borrowed money and by tariffs, designed at one and the same time to add to the governmental revenue and to restrict purchase by the Japanese people of goods from abroad.

And just as this process of robbing Peter to pay Paul was at its height came the earthquake with its demand for an additonal huge sum of reconstructive capital.

It is significant that almost the first move of the Japanese government as it contemplated the debris was to remove the tariff on motor trucks for six months, Sept. 1, 1923, to April 1, 1924. It was a recognition of the practical impossibility of removing the wreckage and rebuilding Yokohama and Tokio by the wheelbarrow process then extant. The little one-ton motor trucks, which are the best Japan now offers in the way of hauling facility, look woefully inadequate to one accustomed to the huge motor conveyances now used in American industry, but they are Herculean in their power as compared with men's backs and the handcarts which made up the bulk of the nation's carrying equipment before they came.

Fleet of Buses Bought

Not only did the government facilitate the purchase by private citizens of motor trucks, after the earthquake, but the municipality of Tokio immediately placed an order for 1,000 Ford buses to supplement the crippled street railway service of the capital. Much of the popular interest in motor vehicles in Japan may be traced to the introduction of these little buses, which supplied the first opportunity most men, women and children of the city ever had had to ride in a motor car.

Like the motor trucks of the same size they look very inadequate to the Westerner, but they are the acme of luxury and speed, compared with the tiny bobbing Toonerville trolleys that supplied most of the city transportation before they came.

Quickly following the motor buses came a great increase in taxicabs. There are now more than 6,000 motor cars equipped with taximeters in use in Tokio, and about 2,000 in Osaka. In addition in the latter city, there are 2,200 yen-a-ride taxis (somewhat analagous to the American jitney bus) which make a charge of one yen (47 cents) to any destination within the city limits.

Following the trucks, buses and taxis has come a considerable purchase of passenger cars by private citizens, though the number of these still is infinitesimal in comparison with the population. The practical difficulties in the way of a drive-yourself auto in Japan still are very great. To begin with there is a 35 per cent tariff duty and heavy shipping and handling costs that place the price of the cheapest type of American automobile, with necessary equipment, at about $1,000. Second are the facts that the minimum tax applied to the lowest sort of motor car is 500 yen ($250,000) a year and gasoline costs about 50 cents a gallon.

Then there is the chauffeur system. No Japanese apparently wants a car to drive for himself. A privately owned automobile still is regarded primarily as an expression of the affluence and social standing of its owner and for a Japanese person of standing to be seen piloting his own way through the streets in a motor car would be to reduce him in the popular estimation to the rank of taxi drivers and truckmen. It simply isn't done.

So He Must Hire One.

Hence, if a Japanese gentleman is to sport his own motor car he must have with it a chauffeur at a salary of at least $60 a month. Competent chauffeurs are rare and in great demand and they ask a salary much higher than is paid to the average Japanese bank clerk. Also they demand certain perquisites that increase the cost of their services. The system of "squeeze" prevalent among classes of private servants in the Orient, is particularly irksome when practiced in conjunction with a motor car.

The Japanese chauffeur, if he is to remain contented, must be delegated the job of buying gasoline, with the certain knowledge of the owner that he will take a small commission for himself on every gallon consumed. Also he is the broker for equipment and repairs. The more things he can find to spend money for in connection with the car, the more his return at the end of the month.

American and other foreign automobile owners in Japan have worked hard to break up this system of "squeeze," and they have been aided to this end by the establishment of service stations, supervised by the American automobile manufactureres, who will not countenance the exactions of the chauffeurs, but Japanese car owners still are generally at their mercy. They know very little about the mechanisms of their cars and deem it belittling to inquire too closely about them.

Use of the automobile in Japan so far is confined almost exclusively to trucks and public vehicles— a development that has come mostly since the earthquake in 1923. Of the 34,000 cars in the country, 25,000 are Fords and of these more than 14,000 are trucks. In 1925 6,534 motor cars and trucks were imported and of these 4,560 were Fords. Within the last year a Ford assembly plant, the first real automobile factory in Japan, has begun operation at Yokohoma, and its production for the first five months this year nearly equalled the 1925 total. The maximum Ford production so far was 1,304 in April and its expects to market 10,000 to 12,000 cars this year.

A Step in Machine Progress.

The manner in which the Ford trucks and taxis are coming forward to replace the handcarts and jinrickshas today presents one of the most striking aspects of Japanese life. In view of the poverty of the Japanese nation, the way in which it is absorbing this motor equipment appears at first glance almost astounding. It can arise only from a recognition on the part of industrial leaders that complete revision of their system of carriage and transportation is a first essential to solution of the trying economic conditions they face.

Wages and cost of living have risen too high to permit use of men to haul hand carts or to transport freight for long distances on their backs. The old system, even if it were economically feasible, is too slow to meet the requirements of modern industry. Competition with other countries will not permit of it. With the system of making goods by hands must go also hand transportation and the complement of the factory machine is the motor truck.

Also Japan recognizes that it cannot go back to pre-war condition even if it would. It is launched on a new era of industrialism that is beyond recalling, and it must sweat and starve on this line until it works out its place in the commercial sun. Im proved transportation is a first essential to the new sytsem and there is at the moment no competitor of the American automobile in providing it.

PILGRIMS' PROGRESS FLOODS BOOK MARKET

First Edition Sold for 6,800 Pounds—Publish in 1678.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The sale of a first edition copy of Bunyan's "Pilgrims Progress" published in 1678, for 6,800 pounds has had a curious sequel.

During the next few days following the sale dozens of people who had read the news, carried copies of the "Pilgrim's Progress" to the auction rooms in the fond hope that they might possess a treasure. The copies submitted ranged from 10 to 100 years old and of course proved almost worthless.

ANOTHER SIGHTED.

NEW YORK, August 27. — Jiddu Krishnamurti, young Hindu in whom Theosophists proclaim the second coming of Christ, sat down in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel yesterday without any of the trappings of divinity and for upwards of an hour let a jury of newspaper and magazine writers rummage his soul for headlines.

For any Theosophical devouts, actually believing this the second advent, the scene would have been fantastical beyond imagination, with the Scribes and Pharisees conducting a sort of inverted Spanish Inquisition.

Be it said for the Hindu's courage, no phalanx of his true believers supported him. Dr. Annie Besant, his silver-headed "John the Baptist," did not appear in her official role of "protector" of the Order of the Star in the East. Krishnamurti went the ordeal alone. The young Hindu laid himself open alike to the coldly scoffing and the kindly inquisitive.

He spoke precisely, modulated English, the R's rippling, the A's broad. He shrunk from point blank questions about God and the World Teacher and his relation to these supreme things.

He had been asked repeatedly to tell how it felt to be possessed by this mysterious World Teacher, by which name the Theosophists refer to The Christ. He had shrunk away from direct answers. Finally:

Difficult to Describe.

"How can you," he asked, "describe to another an experience of which he has no ken. Suppose you had gone to Beethoven or Mozart and asked to play you something and he did. And you would say, 'I do not understand what it means.' Do you suppose he could explain to you in words what it means?"

"Are you a Socialist?" asked a young man from a radical monthly.

"Well, in a way. But what do you mean exactly? There are so many kinds of Socialism."

"I should define Socialism as ownership of the tools of production by the people," said the young man.

"Yes, I believe in that."

Krishnamurti fidgeted and looked embarrassed at all this attention he was getting.

"If you believe in simplicity," put in an ironic voice, "why do you not live like Gandhi? Why didn't you come over second-class?"

The Hindu vibrated with excitement. "I can explain that easily. I know Mr. Gandhi and have a deep respect for him. But you do not know India. Things are possible there that are out of the question here. In India, for example, I could take off my clothing and live without attracting any attention. You see——"

Only Asked For Quiet.

His face was grave and absorbed, and he was surprised by the interrupting laugh. He continued his explanation, pointing out that he was indifferent to surroundings and only asked for quiet and cleanliness, that was all.

"In America," he said in answer to a question, "you have supreme material development. You have extraordinary physical well-being. In India we have neglected the physical in order to attain extraordinary spiritual development. Each is in error.

"What makes a civilization great? It is its refinement, its spiritual power and creativeness, flowering in art and thought.

"I don't presume to tell you these things. You've asked for them. You've spurred me upon ground where I hesitate to tread.

"Try to achieve happiness. Find out what is permanent and indestructible. Find out what is impermanent and superficial. Forego the temporary for the eternal. The temporary is outside and the eternal inside you. Happiness is inside you. Jazz and dollars and 'a good time' distract you from the reality. America is living by the gold standard."

Krishnamurti said many more things in that interview that covered all things from cheese to cosmos. He said he believed in prohibition, had no objection to marriage or divorce, believed one could only know happiness in proportion as one knew sorrow, held Shelley as sacred as the Bible, believed meat eating was coarsening, had never touched it himself, and even regretted the necessity of eating eggs.

LEAD FOR CANCER.

EDINBURGH, Aug. 27.—Out of 227 "hopeless" cases, 30 have had no recurrence of cancer after treatment with lead. Lead salt injections are poisonous, however, and an effort is being made to find a lead colloid that will not have poisonous results. The 30 cases reported cured showed no effects of lead poisoning.

ARMOR DRESSES.

Use of Steel For Trimming Very Popular in London.

Steel-trimmed ladies will be the London fashion next fall. It has been found that steel gives just the note of gray relief necessary to make the all-prevailing navy blue attractive. Consequently Bond Street designers have produced attractive model gowns with steel clamps which can be punched in all over the front of gowns, and many of the new models show very elaborate designs worked out in steel.

MADE IN CANADA FAIR WILL SHOW HOME PRODUCTS

Manufactures From Many Parts of Dominion to be on View.

KIWANIS EFFORTS

To Demonstrate Wisdom of Buying Nationally-Made Merchandise.

We venture to say that there are few people in Peterboro who can tell you off-hand the number of manufacturing industries there are in town. Whenever the question has been asked the replies have run anywhere from twenty to forty. Neither are right and both are under the correct number.

A Fair showing only the Peterboro manufactures would be an eye-opener to most of the people in the city. If such would be the case in just the Peterboro manufactures, how much more would it be so when the manufactures from all over Ontario and, in fact, from many parts of Canada will be shown at the Produced-in-Canada Fair, put on in the Armouries by the Kiwanis Club. An exhibition such as this will be both interesting and instructive and will be viewed by the people of Peterboro, and also by those of the surrounding district within a radius of many miles.

The proposed fair is going to be a big thing. It is planned to have it even bigger and better than the one put on in Hamilton last spring, which was such a decided success.

There is much produced in Canada that we do not know of; many articles are imported that can be procured in our own country, and one of the objects of the coming exhibition is to show what is really produced in Canada, and that it is unnecessary to send outside for merchandise that is probably inferior to that produced at home if we only knew about it.

PUDDY SHINGLES CAUSE FIRE SCARE

False Fire Alarm Raised During Saturday's Rain.

DOURO, Aug. 27.—An amusing incident occurred on Saturday last. Some new fine shingles which had recently been put here and there on the roof of the barn of John Torpey turned red from the rain, and the impression got abroad that the barn was on fire. A call for help was sent to Keene. Keene telephone central rang Douro and the Douro operator rang several of the southern lines. Some people responded and were amazed when they learned that the scare was a false alarm. Much speculation was rife when the alarm was sent in as to what would cause a fire during a heavy rain. Most people decided that it would be sponstaneous combustion from grain put in that was wet.

Much consternation was caused in the southern part of the township on Wednesday morning when news of the burning of the Indian River cheese factory was sent around. Farmers wondered what they would do with their milk. However arrangements were at once made with the Gillespie Co. of Peterboro to handle the milk and trucks wer sent out at once to bring in the milk.

ALSACE'S HOME RULE DEMANDS MAKING IT NEW DANGER SPOT THREATENING CALM OF EUROPE

People of Restored Province Wish to Govern Themselves.

PROPAGANDA CHARGE.

French Claim That German Money is Influencing Home Rulers.

(By A. C. Cummings, United Press Special Correspondence.)-

MULHOUSE, Alsace (United Press).—Few parts of Europe, except perhaps German Switzerland, appear more idyllic, yet Alsace is not happy. It is not even convinced that it is prosperous. At least, not as its neighbors on the other side of the Rhine.

Alsace, when the war ended, threw in its lot enthusiastically with France. It hated the Germans, the world was told. Joyfully it became a French "Department," so it was said and believed.

Today, Alsace, so far from being joyful in its new-found freedom, is demanding the right to govern itself, to make its own laws and to collect its own taxes. It wants to be independent—not of France, perhaps, but at least in France. It wants home rule.

The French have a very simple explanation for so complete a reversal of sentiment. It is that German propaganda is busy, that the tools or dupes of Germany are working to distract the mind of official France from other fields where the never-ceasing war of diplomacy is waged. If there was no propaganda there would be no discontent and no crying for the political moon, the French claim.

How firmly they believe it true was shown relently when the Paris government severely disciplined a number of state servants who dared sign a manifesto asking for autonomy for Alsace within the frame of the French Republic.

French authorities assert that the Alsace Germans who were expelled after the war or who emigrated and would like to return are sending money in to assist in the agitation for home rule and that there are political parties in Germany who who want nothing better than to embarrass France by making Alsace another Ireland.

But, allowing for all this, one cannot escape noticing in Alsace that there is much political and some economic discontent. For one thing, there is the collapse of the franc compared with the stable Swiss and German currencies just across the frontiers. For another, there is the growing feeling that Alsace is neither French nor German but a country with its own customs, something of a native culture, and even now capable of making its own laws.

"Alsace never voted to join France," it is said. "She might have done so given the opportunity. But the fact remains that she did not and so she is free."

"What she wants now, or at least what the Home Rulers want—and it is true that they are only a minority of the population—is the right to govern herself within the framework of the French Republic. It is said that the framework does not permit the grant of autonomies such as the British Empire is built on. Well, in Alsace, we say that it is all the worse for the French Republic.

"We do not forget that the German Republic is a union of free states and though we would rather gain our ends within France, who can tell what may happen in the future if we find ourselves denied our desire? We are not without an alternative. The German republic would not be averse from giving us the rights and powers of a Free State within the Reich."

This is the real danger of the Alsace Home Rule movement. At present limited and perhaps only too easy to disregard, it has incalculable potentialities. Today its direction is all towards France, so far as an outsider can see. Tomorrow, the eyes of Alsacians may turn across the Rhine whence their language and most of their culture come.

trade so as to prevent manipulation of prices and attempts to corner foodstuffs.

M. Poincare feels that it is only just, if he asks citizens to economize, that the government also should do its part in this direction. Consequently he has prepared a program of radical economies in the administrative services, involving the fusion of various section of them and simplification of others. These measures are being worked out in the various departments so that they can be put into operation at the earliest possible date.

The announcement of these new measures has been well received, on the whole, as attesting the government's first determination to deal with the financial situation without vacillation, and as bringing home to the population in general the real seriousness of conditions in a practical as opposed to an academic, manner.

On Aug. 26 the price of bread, under the new system, will be increased 1 sou per kilogram (2.2 pounds).

Appeal to School Teachers

A circular to school teachers, issued by Edouard Herriot, as minister of public instruction, suggests ways in which they should recommend economy in the nation's new campaign of retrenchment announcer by the cabinet. No sacrifice is insignificant, the minister says, if made by everybody. The suggestions are:

Fruit and vegetables should be pared as little as possible, and ashes carefully sifted.

Everybody should avoid wasting a single crumb of bread.

Coffee should be taken weaker than formerly and less sugar used.

Preserved milk should be avoided as being an imported article.

Less gas should be burned and the electric light turned off when not actually required.

Bits of paper should be saved and sold instead of being thrown away.

Automobiles should be used only when omnibuses or subways are not available.

German Tourists Turn Tables

German tourists, turning the tables on the French who poured into the Rhineland when the mark was at a low rate, are now, thanks to their restored currency, thronging into the Savoy region, particularly in the higher resorts of the French Alps. So great is this invasion that at Chamonix the natives complain there is almost as much German as French spoken.

The German tourists are reported to be good spenders and to have a particular penchant for champagne.

The local population, in spite of the money the foreigners bring in, is beginning to be a bit restive because of what they regard as the complacency and over-obsequiousness of certain restaurant and hotel proprietors and waiters.

DISORDERS MARK HOMAGE TO STAR

Solemn Occasion Is Turned Into "Three-Ringed Circus" Says Attendant.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).— Rudolph Valentino's body was barred from public view today to avoid further disorders among the thousands who have flocked to the screen idol's bier, and possible clashes between rival groups of Italian admirers.

"Normal decorum and dignity now prevails at the Frank E. Campbell funeral church," says an advertisement in today's papers. Attendants said the solemn occasion had been transformed into a "three ringed circus."

Plans for a public funeral Monday have been abandoned, and the ceremonies will be attended by invited guests only.

One woman who stood in line five hours, made three rounds of the actor's bier, fainted each time, and was ordered by the police not to return again. A weeping girl was found to have an onion in her handkerchief. Girls plied powder puffs and lip sticks as they neared the casket. Women fainted and became hysterical.

EXPECT WHEAT TO SAVE FRANC

French Premier Seeks By Restrictions To Make Best Use of Cereal.

MANY TOURISTS.

PARIS, France, Aug. 27 (A.P.).—Premier Poincare, by the publication of his drastic economic programme calling for a "period of penitence," has removed any doubt that he intends to try to stabilize the franc without having recourse to foreign credits. Such credits cannot be obtained without first ratifying the Washington and London debt accords, at present impracticable owing to the political situation in France.

The feature of the premier's programme is an attempt to restrict imports of wheat by forbidding the sale of fresh bread, by restricting speculation in wheat, by registering the wheat-producing areas and generally controlling the wheat-trade so as to make the best possible use of the country's production of the cereal.

Two-Course Meals

Other measures of the premier aim at the stopping of waste and the lowering of prices. Restaurants will be forbidden to serve more than two principal courses, as during the war, and committees will be appointed to watch all branches of the provisions

FINAL PAYMENT ON COARSE GRAIN

More Than Million Dollars Sent Out By Saskatchewan Pool.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 27 (Canadian Press) — Cheques totalling over $1,000,000 have been placed in the mails by the Saskatchewan coarse grain pool, addressed to its Saskatchewan members, representing the final payment of the 1925-26 crop, the first crop handled since the pool was organized.

The cost of operating the pool for the first year is a shade under half a cent or, to be exact $.0049 per bushel while the carrying charges were $.0081 per bushel or a little better than three fourths of a cent.

CITY MEMORIALIZES KOSCIUSZKO'S LIFE

Poland's Hero is Buried Alongside the Bodies of Her Kings.

CRACOW, Poland, Aug. 27.—Cracow is to the memory of Tadeusz Kosciuszko what Mount Vernon is to the memory of George Washington. One cannot walk far in this old city of the Polish kings without coming upon some reminder of the great national hero whose name kindles more enthusiasm both in America and in Poland than that of any other Pole.

Also Served America.

Whether as colonel of the artillery and personal adjutant to George Washington in the American War of Independence, or whether as leader of the Polish insurrection of 1794 against Russian oppression, he was one of the most picturesque figures of his time. Partisans of Marshall Pilsudski today refer to the virtual dictator of Poland as "the second Kosciuszko", and the imagination of Polish school children is fired by copious references in the textbooks to the exploits of Tadeusz Kosciuszko.

The mecca for the visitor to Cracow is the Wawel, a rocky hill on the left bank of the Vistula. It was the fortified seat of the Polish dukes and kings from the very dawn of the nation's history. It is thus, as it were, the emblem of the Polish nation.

Buried With Kings.

One of the proudest structures on the Wawel is the cathedral. In its spacious underground corridors there is the Crypt of St. Leonard, reserved for the coffins of the Polish kings and their families. The only non-royal national hero to be honored by a burial place alongside of the kings is Kosciuszko.

Every visitor to the cathedral inspects the Treasury in the vestry. As the priest in charge exhibits and explains the priceless bejewelled chalices, royal crowns, chasubles, and reliquaries, he pauses to point reverently to an old ragged, weather-beaten, faded, bullet-riddled flag and says, impressively:

"This is the flag that Kosciuszko carried during the American Revolutionary War. America not only honored our revered national hero during his lifetime by extending to him the pivilege of American citizenship, by settling a considerable annual pension with landed estates and conferring the rank of brigadier-general upon him, but to this day his memory is kept alive by Kosciuszko parks and Kosciuszko monuments in various cities of the Union."

In the National Museum one also finds many objects of personal adornment and use worn or carried by Kosciuszko during his lifetime.

FIRST AUTOMOBILE NOW RUSTED WRECK

First Gasoline-Driven Vehicle May be Found in Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 27.—Time's relentless hand has left only the broken, rust eaten frame of the first gasoline driven vehicle which now lies in the basement of an Indianapolis business house.

The old machine, built by Charles H. Black, an Indianapolis blacksmith and carriage maker, lost the honor that went to another Hoosier, Elwood Haynes, because his application for patents on his engine were denied. Black sought patent papers in 1891, two weeks after the Otto Gas Engine Company of Mannheim, Germany, filed for American protection of a gas engine.

Ran Twenty Years.

Black was offered patents on his differential gear and floating rear axle, but disgusted, he refused them. He lived to see both become universal equipment.

Black began operating a forge and wagon plant in Indianapolis in 1865. Later in the 80's he became interested in gasoline engine propulsion of vehicles. He eventually perfected an engine which he attached to a type of carriage, known as a runtype of carriage, known as a runabout. He drove it more than twenty years. Several years ago it was stored in the business house basement by an owner who never reclaimed it. Black first used a kerosene torch in his ignition system, but later procured a cumbersome storage battery. His first spark coil was imported from Germany. It weighed sixteen pounds.

Two years after Black's failure, Elwood Haynes of Kokomo, an oil operator, who had perfected an automobile in the wagon works of Elmer Apperson secured patents on his machine. It is today in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington labeled, "First gasoline automobile."

Others Followed.

Indiana became the cradle of the automobile industry through the activities of Haynes and Apperson, and now only Michigan and Wisconsin produce more cars than the Hoosier state. However, few of the early well-known Indiana made cars now are in the market. The Cole, National and Pathfinder no longer are made. The Premier factory makes only cabs. Stutz is out of control of the Stutz plant, and since retiring from that concern, has made the H.C.S.

The Monroe, Lafayette and Maxwell, all Indiana made cars, aren't manufactured now. In place of these pioneers in the automobile field are the Marmon, Stutz and Deusenberg, of Indianapolis; the Studebaker at South Bend; the Elcar at Elkhart; the Davis at Richmond; the Chrysler at Newcastle; the Auburn at Auburn and the Lexington at Connersville.

ENGLISH CITY BRINGS SEA THIRTY MILES

Canal Makes Inland City an Ocean Port.

MANCHESTER, England, Aug. 27.—All the ingenuity of building engineers is represented in the Manchester chip canal, which makes this city an ocean port thirty miles inland.

The canal crosses a river and a canal, and five railroad bridges were raised on long grades so that large vessels might steam in to Manchester.

Bridge Canal.

The Bridgewater Canal, handling horse towed barges, crosses the Manchester strip without their waters meeting. This is accomplished by actually carrying the smaller canal across the other on a high swinging bridge.

Gates at either end of the water bridge shut the water in the channel, close the exposed ends of the canal, and bridge, water and all are pivoted around.

The canal, which cost 14,000,000 pounds was constructed to fight the high rates charged at Liverpool for dockage and shipping and was opened in 1894, six years after construction had begun.

Ships pass through a system of locks to Manchester where the water level is sixty feet higher than the ocean.

River Taken Under Water Road.

Near the mouth of the canal, it is crossed by the river Gowry, up which the tidal waters flow. This river is piped beneath the canal in huge siphons of cast-iron, twelve feet across and 400 feet long.

The canal terminates in eight docks, branching in groups of four on either side of it, covering 120 acres, with 286 acres of quays.

Along the dock quays are transit sheds and warehouses, and in front of, and behind, these are railway lines connected with all the great railway systems.

Two grain elevators with a total capacity of 80,000 tons can take grain from vessels at the rate of 500 to 900 tons an hour, while under the quays on both sides of one of the docks, reached by manholes, are endless moving bands, electrically driven over rollers, carrying the grain in streams sometimes half a mile long to the elevator at the dock head.

SANITARY DISTRICT TO BE CLEANED UP

Monaghan Council Instructs Sanitary Officer to Inspect Houses.

The North Monaghan Council held their monthly meeting at the Court House on Wednesday.

Frank Pratt, sanitary inspector; Dr. J. A. Morgan, medical officer of health, and J. V. Gilroy were present at this meeting when there was a full discussion into the sanitary conditions of the township.

A number of residents in the area set aside under the special sanitary by-law No. 876 have not complied with the law and Mr. Pratt, the inspector, was instructed to take immediate action and to prosecute some of the most serious offenders.

A resolution was passed that the sanitary inspector make a thorough inspection of the area set aside for sanitary purpose under by-law number 876 and to make a report of his inspection, house by house, as to whether the owners used septic tanks, cesspools, sanitary closets, or earth closets and to report also on the general sanitary condition of each householder's property within this area.

The following bills were passed and ordered to be paid:

A. Paterson, 12½ cords of wood, $7 per cord, $87.50; J. McIntosh, services re last assessment of school section Nos. 1 and 4, $6.00; Peter Hamilton Co., repairs for crusher, $1.25; Peter Hamilton Co., grinding knife, 50 cents; J. Whitfield, excise stamps, $15.84; Bailiff's fees, $8.50; Municipal World, 67 cents; Kingan Hardware Co., $10.70; A. Paterson, $1; McClennan Hardware $1.60; A. Paterson, mower repairs, $5.25.

The following items were passed for the Board of Health:

Dr. J. A. Morgan, $1.70; Dr. J. A. Morgan, Board of Health meeting, $2; H. B. Kye, Board of Health meeting, $2; James Lang, Board of Health meeting, $2.

The treasurer was instructed to pay Bert Paton for gravel drawn from his pit, under the direction of Walter McKee and J. B. Fowler.

The meeting then adjourned, next meeting to be held Monday, September 13, at 2 p.m., at Court House.

THEY PREFER BRUNETS.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Portraits of women shown in the annual exposition of Royal Academy works prove at least one thing—that all gentlemen do not prefer blondes. There are few blondes in the group and few red heads. Most of the heads shown in the gallery are black.

A GREAT CHANGE

I have never seen a man so astounded as John Meredith, when I asked him to take me to a theater and then to a cabaret. If he had been facing a lion he could not have expressed more terror.

"Do you mean it, do you really mean it?" he asked. "Would you be seen in a public place, a beautiful girl like you, with me, a man who is 'deformed'?"

At that word he shuddered a little and really I was sorry that I had said it to him, but I knew that he must have a big jolt to get him out of himself.

"Why shouldn't I be seen with you?" I asked, impatiently. "Has no one ever told you that you are one of the handsomest young men in the city?"

"No, I've never been in the city long enough. Men wouldn't tell me that and I've never met any women."

"Well, how do you like it?"

"I can't say that I exactly hat e it," he said, with a grin which changed his whole face.

I cannot say that I had told the exact truth, but with the smile on his face my flattery had become no lie. I scrutinized him rather carefully and then said, "Keep that smile that won't come off, and you will be the observed of all observers."

"Good Lord. I hope not."

"Do you want to back down?"

"And have you call me a coward, Judy?"

Instead of answering I said, "Now that you've called me Judy I know you like me. Shall we take Joan? Is that man Symington presentable?"

"Of course," John Meredith seized my hands. "I didn't know a girl could be like you," he said.

"They're all like me, John," I said. "If you give them a chance."

"Then I've missed a lot," he said; with another grin.

We were standing there holding hands when the butler announced Mr. Symington.

"Come in. I want to introduce you," John said. "Miss Dean, this is Mr. Symington, the man who is going to Darkest Africa with me. Harry, Miss Dean and Joan and you and I are going to the theater tonight. Will you get us some seats?"

"Do you mean that, Jack?" he gasped.

"Of course," said John, and with another grin he dropped my hand and they walked away, he limping a little more, perhaps, than ever before, for he had forgotten to walk slowly and watch his step.

They must have met Joan at the door for she came in looking completely mystified.

I told her of our talk.

"Well, I'm only surprised that he took it the way he did," she said.

"Do you know where we're going?" I added, "to the Beaux Arts. I want to show those people over there that I'm stepping out in good company."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

WILLIAM HAZLITT AND SARAH STODDARD

One sunny day in May, in the year 1808, Charles Lamb smiled his gentlest as he officiated as best man and his sister Mary was equally sweet as she attended to a bridesmaid's duties. The bride and groom were William Hazlitt and Sarah Stoddard and they innocently embarked on fifteen years of mutual unhappiness.

William Hazlitt is now celebrated as a great essayist and critic. His father was the founder of the first Unitarian Church in Boston and though British, he sided with the Americans in their fight for independence. Hazlitt was blessed, or otherwise, with a high degree of temperament; Sarah Stoddard turned out to be somewhat prosaic and business-like. They bore each other for fifteen years and then it became public news that Hazlitt had fallen in love with his landlady's daughter, one Sarah Walker, a pretty girl, but very ordinary and a coquette without particular ideals.

Mrs. Hazlitt could not condone this open display of her husband's undomestic affections and sought a dissolution of her marriage. This was given her and the unsuited couple were freed of each other.

No sooner did Hazlitt enter blissful bachelorhood, when for some unaccountable reason he married a widow, Mrs. Bridgewater. The experienced newlyweds set out for a honeymoon in travel and when at the end of a year it was over, they parted.

The following letter was written by Hazlitt to Sarah Stoddard when Sarah was still Hazlitt's sweetheart:

"My dear love—about a week has passed and I have received no letter—not one of those letters in which I live or have no life at all.' What is become of you? Are you married, believing I was dead (for so it has been reported)? Or, have you fallen in love with some of Boccaccio's heroes? Which of them is it? Is it with Chynon who was transformed from a clown into a lover and who learnt to spell by force of beauty? Or with Lorenzo, the lover of Isabella, whom her three brethren hated (as your brother does me) who was a merchants' clerk? Or with Frederigo Aberigi, an honest gentleman who ran through his fortune and won his mistress by cooking a fair falcon for her dinner, though it was the only means he had of getting a dinner for himself? This last is the man; and I am more persuaded of it because I think I won your good liking myself by giving you an entertainment—of sausages, when I had no money to buy them with. Nay, now never deny it! Did I not ask your consent that very night after, and did you not give it? Well, I should be confoundedly jealous of those fine gallants if I did not know that a living dog is better than a dead lion; though now I think of it, Boccaccio, in general, does not make much of his lovers. It is his women who are so delicious. . . . Talking of departed lovers, I met my old flame the other day in the street. I did dream of her one night since, and only one; every other night I have had the same dream I have had for two months past. Now, if you are at all reasonable, this will satisfy you."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite.

Woodson Dixon, Advertising Director of the Long Beach Morning Sun says:—

Newspaper advertising is the Master Key which opens the purse of both the masses and classes alike. It is the quickest and least expensive method to get your message to the public. When an advertiser buys space in his daily newspaper, he is merely buying a frame for his picture. The business and Good Will creative from that space is the deciding factor as to whether his advertising is an investment or an expense.

Illustrations are of vital importance for they will catch the eye and tell your story far better than printed words. Glance through your local newspaper and notice the methods your successful merchants use in their advertisements and you will have the "importance" of illustrations answered in a concrete form.

Some men claim they do not need newspaper advertisements. They seem satisfied to drift along and allow their competitors to incresae their business by advertising. Neither did Henry Ford need to advertise, but he took advantage of the opportunities advertising afforded and is continually building new factories to cash in on his investment in newspaper advertising.

EXPEDITION TO TAKE CENSUS OF WHALES

LONDON, Aug. 27.—How many wives has a whale? How long does he live? What is Mrs. Whale's average family?

These and other facts pertaining to the great mammals are the object of an expedition being fitted out by the British Government to conduct a whale census. A ship, the Scoresby, will go on a long voyage in whaling waters after the information that it is hoped will prevent the extermination of the animals.

Small identification discs will be shot into the backs of all the whales sighted. These small darts, it is said, will cause no discomfort.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, 1926, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an unfavorable day in planetary direction, many adverse influences being active.

The Moon is in a sign making for restlessness and extreme sensitiveness, which may cause irritability.

Under this sway there may be undue suffering from weather changes and reduced resistence to various bodily ills.

This is an unfavorable rule for signing leases or contracts, for they are likely to be unsatisfactory to both parties.

Newspapers and periodicals may find this a date on which there will be great activity, for news of exciting and sensational characters is likely to break.

Mars is in an aspect making for delays on big engineering projects and constructive enterprises, which will be numerous and profitable as autumn advances.

Many domestic understandings and quarrels may take place while this configuration prevails; divorces and wrecked partnerships of various sorts may be precipitated under this lunation

Conflicts of opinion regarding military training will be sharp in all probability, for disarmament is to cause bitter controversies.

Politics may suffer from the affliction of the major planets. Party lines may be considerably blurred in the coming autumn campaigns.

Office-seekers are warned that they may expect campaigns in which there is much intrigue and secret effort.

The rising position of Saturn is likely to bring trouble regarding foreign loans and financial adjustments.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of many anxieties. Danger from thieves and fires is indicated.

Children born on this day probably will be endowed with great natural gifts. Remarkable memory is likely to be early manifested.

The quaint and charming name of Belinda is derived from the Italian. Though most frequently applied in modern fiction to the sweetest of the sex, and pretty coquettes, Belinda means a serpent. So beware, young men, of the baby doll who answers to the cunning, old-fashioned name!

How Belinda came to be evolved is not clear to etymologists. She simply appeared in Italy, and is believed to have had her origin in the fashionable craze for names ending in "a" which sweet Europe in Queen Anne's Augustan age. The first Belinda recorded in history was the wife of Orlando, a debut sufficiently prominent to spread the name far and wide. But greater vogue was to be hers, and when Pope chose Belinda for his heroine of "The Rape of the Lock," her permanence was assured.

In those days, it needed only a famous author to immortalize a feminine name by putting her in a book and all the fashionable maids of the country adopted her for their own, just as to-day a screen favorite's coiffure and costumes are copied by adoring flappers.

Belinda flourished in England and Italy, but her popularity was negligible in France, and Germany refused her completely. Spain took her from Italy, but, despite the vowel ending, she was a bit too harsh for Spanish ears. America welcomed her whole-heartedly, and she flourishes here to-day, both actually and in fiction.

Belinda's gem is the cat's eye. It is a talisman against evil and disease, and has a mysterious magnetic power which renders its wearer irresistible to those whom she wishes to attract. Friday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number

VERY CHEESY!

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The freighter Suffolk had just reached Liverpool and was being unloaded. Stevedores rushed from the hold, complaining of a dreadful odor. Two officers went to investigate. Half an hour later, when they had failed to return, a search was started. They were found unconscious in the hold, gassed by the fumes given off by the ship's cargo of cheese.

Today's Fashion By Vera Winston

This Youthful Coat Exploits Green Kasha and Narrow Black Velvet.

Kasha and kasha duvetyn remain favored materials for Fall, and will doubtless be seen as much as the new broadcloth and lustre surfaced fabrics which are so smart.

The diminutive coat above is developed in kasha of a green shade slightly lighter than the bottle green tone. It has man-tailored lapels, and adds a feminine touch in the little shoulder cape.

A striking color contrast is furnished by the narrow black velvet edging on cape and cuffs.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The carnelian is today's talismanic gem. The ancients believed that it brought good luck in love affairs—indeed, they claimed that at this time no lover would be successful unless he wore this stone.

Today's natal stone is the emerald, which brings assurance to those who appear in public—such as speakers, singers, etc. It also bestows on its wearer the power to foretell future events, if the ancients are to be believed.

Yellow is today's lucky hue. It brings happiness and good cheer to those who wear it.

The white rose is the lucky flower for today. It is believed to bring peace, contentment and domestic happiness.

CURVES RETURNING.

London Restaurants Now Cater To Ladies Wishing To Grow Plump.

Now that silhouette fashions are disappearing and curves returning, London women are eating more candy, pastries and sweet food generally. There is no need to fast, as was so necessary when the slim shadow shape was popular and society dames are feasting on candies and sweets as they have not done in years.

Hotels and restaurants have been quick to note this change and have introduced a color scheme of sweet dishes which is proving highly popular. Most of these dishes have a fattening tendency and "half-starved" society women who have been following the silhouette mode for months are becoming something of gourmands in their efforts to develop the fashionable curve.

Daily Short Story

MOTHER'S MAGAZINES

"Mother darling, honestly I don't think there's anyone in the whole world who can collect more magazines than you can. I've just been up in the loft and found barrels, boxes, trunks—everything stuffed full of old magazines."

Mrs. Crawford grinned. She had been teased during many years about what her family called her "mania" for keeping all the old journals and periodicals. "Just think how useful they would be if we wanted to start a shop. Once when I was in London I saw a shop filled with old magazines and they were all selling for six pence and three pence. Years and years old they were, too, so——"

"My word, I'd like to have ten cents for every one about this place—Mother!" she broke off as inspiration siezed her, "I could start around in the old bus and sell magazines to all the country people who never get a look at one—wouldn't that be a grand idea? It would help Dad a lot if I could make a little money so easily."

"What an idea—you mean you would drive about with a car full of magazines just like an old clothes man or——"

"Just about," laughed Enid, "only I wouldn't ring a bell all the time. I would just go about to the isolated people and I'll bet it will be a blessing to them—magazines don't go out of date as far as reading matter goes."

"It is really a good idea and we can buy father some of those new incubators he wants so badly."

"I think mother wants them as much as Dad," laughed Enid again, "and you really think you can sacrifice some of the magazines——"

It was no time at all before Enid was started on her route. She had painted up the old delivery wagon that her father delivered chicks in and fitted it with shelves. Outside she had a large sign bearing the words, "The Magazine Shop."

Enid found her way to the straggling clumps of small houses in outlying districts that boasted neither shops nor brain food. It was remarkable how seemingly starved some of those country people were for something in the nature of reading matter and picture books. Enid got very close to the lives of many of her patrons and was thoroughly enjoying herself. Many times her mother came along with her and Mrs. Crawford took to bringing along a lot of fancy cushion tops and little oddments of house-cheering bags and baskets which she made in her spare time. They sold well.

The new incubators could be purchased at almost any time—so successful was the traveling shop.

But there was much more in store for them than any of them suspected—at least, until Jack Darwin rode into the scene on his bycycle.

The two women in the car did not know at first whether he was following them for flirtatious possibilities or whether he was merely trying to see if he could cover the road at the same speed as Enid.

Instead, he was trying to let them know that he wanted to see their wares. Enid drew up finally and Darwin jumped off his wheel and mopped a heated brow.

"I want something to read," he breathlessly informed them.

Swiftly observing that he was the type of person she had been selling to she said with a lovely smile, "We only have a very old magazines—nothing of a later vintage than last November."

Darwin laughed. Nine months is young for a baby, but a magazine! Still, some stories are ageless. Let's have a look."

"I say, you have some old ones," he muttered. Then suddenly he turned, "Is there a chance in the world hat you would have any Ramblers of ten years back? If you had the one I want, well—it might mean a small fortune for all of us."

"What's it all about?" inquired Mrs. Crawford. "Yes, I had all the Ramblers once—but you see we have sold heaps of magazines—the one you want might be gone."

Darwin was quite excited by now. "I had a story in the Rambler of December, either nine or ten years ago. It has been put on the screen—without my name—well, in fact it's been stolen. My lawyers are at work. I've been a bit up against it since I have lost the only published copy I had. If——"

"If," said Enid suddenly, "you can put your bike on the top and hop in with us you can go up in the loft and have a look. It's well worth it."

A moment later the three now excited people were speeding up toward home and mother's collection of magazines.

Dusty and covered with cobwebs three hours later Enid and Jack came triumphantly down with the magazine they sought.

"If I win my case—and there's no reason why I can't—it will mean something like a fifty thousand check—they've made a super picture from this story." He was laughing and so was Enid and it was not entirely due to the finding of the story. Finding one another had much to do with it.

"Mother darling!" Enid shouted, "your passion for magazine collecting will probably be the means of giving Mr. Darwin a big success and——"

"Far greater success than anyone can for the moment suspect," said Jack Darwin and flashed a look toward Enid.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(United Press.)— Paris high-hats us with high-crowned turbans of felt, velour and velvet which look extremely Russian in influence. These new high-crowned shapes are very chic on both young and older women, although they are inclined to give a more sophisticated air than the flapper desires.

For the flapper the Apache tam which combines the high effect with youthful lines is sponsored. One smart New York store is selling these felt tams in such colors as Chanel red, tan, bright rose red, green and black. A deep head-fitting band of felt extends deep over the forehead and this gradually molds upwards into a tam crown. The felt is pecot-edged at the base where it meets the forehead and does not turn under to meet the hat lining since the Apache model must lie flat to the forehead, without displaying any bulk. Crowns of the various millinery models are soft and may be draped or dented to suit the face of the individual.

A craze for gold and silver metallic effects will be found in the Fall gown collections. Velvet combined with gold and silver lame forms many of the newer gowns of formal type. One gown which is typical of the mode, has a soft crinkly gold lame bodice which molds the figure in semi-fitted lines until it reaches below the hips where three circular ruffles of black chiffon velvet forms the tiered skirt. The ruffles are set onto the bodice in irregular fashion thus avoiding the straight-about hip-line. Metal brocade turbans will undoubtedly be popular again for formal occasions due to the metallic influence in frocks.

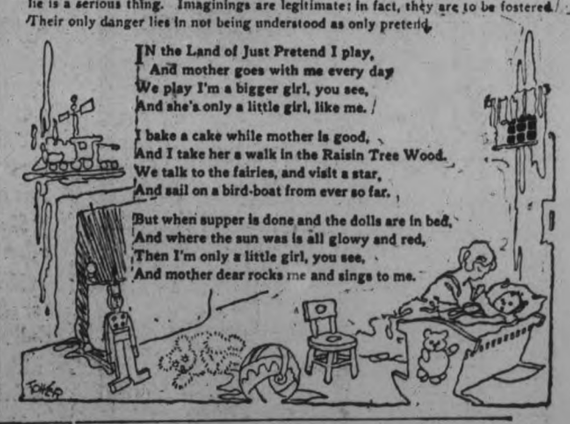
The Land of Pretend

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

WE must be careful to distinguish a child's imaginings from untruths. Often I've heard a grown-up say: "Why, that isn't the truth." Well, perhaps it wasn't, but surely it wasn't a lie, either. It was an only-just-pretend incident. A lie is a serious thing. Imaginings are legitimate; in fact, they are to be fostered. Their only danger lies in not being understood as only pretend.



IN the Land of Just Pretend I play,
And mother goes with me every day
We play I'm a bigger girl, you see,
And she's only a little girl, like me.

I bake a cake while mother is good,
And I take her a walk in the Raisin Tree Wood.
We talk to the fairies, and visit a star,
And sail on a bird-boat from ever so far.

But when supper is done and the dolls are in bed,
And where the sun was is all glowy and red,
Then I'm only a little girl, you see,
And mother dear rocks me and sings to me.

KING FORECASTS LARGE MAJORITY IN NEXT HOUSE

One of Largest Liberal Representations Yet Seen, He States.

ILLEGAL ACTS.

Meighen Government Had Been Refused Money By Parliament, He Says.

ANNAPOLIS, August 27 (Canadian Press).—In the oldest town in Canada, Mr. Mackenzie King last night declared that no more important issue affecting the rights of people had arisen since Confederation than the so-called constitutional question. The Government which was appealing to the country, he said, was an administration which had been discredited and defeated in the House of Commons and refused a single dollar of money by Parliament. Yet Mr. Meighen had taken $54,000,000 from the treasury by the Governor-General's warrants.

The acts of Mr. Meighen's Government, he said, were wrong and illegal. No other Conservative Prime Minister would have played fast and loose with the constitution, he said, as Mr. Meighen had done.

If the people were interested in such legislation as the Old-Age Pension Act, which had been rejected by Conservative Senators, they would see to it that the Liberal Government was returned, in order that only Liberal Senators would be appointed.

The Liberal leader spoke of "the rising tide of Liberal enthusiasm" which, he said, he had witnessed in the past fortnight.

Liberals from the West, from Ontario and from Quebec, he said, were "most anxious to join hands with friends from the Maritimes" to show that no part of Canada was nearer and dearer to the people of Canada as a whole than the Eastern provinces.

"Make no mistake about it; from the west to the east of Canada you are going to see one of the largest Liberal representations ever seen at Ottawa," said Mr. King in forecasting the election result.

LAWYER'S DEATH HALTS INQUIRIES

Mother of Mrs. McPherson Says He Had Arranged For Conversation.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, declares that the drowning of Russell A. McKinley, blind lawyer of Long Beach, had halted, temporarily at least, the move guided by Angelus Temple investigators to bring about the surrender of one of the evangelist's alleged kidnappers. McKinley and two companions were found drowned at Beach City yesterday, their bodies pinned beneath an overturned automobile.

Mrs. Kennedy said that the lawyer had established contact with the alleged kidnappers and had engineered a telephone conversation between Mrs. McPherson and one of the suspects. The evangelist's mother said that her daughter recognized the voice as that of one of her abductors.

FOUR EXECUTED FOR CONSPIRACY

Turkish Unionist Leaders Hanged To-day Bring Total To Seventeen.

PLOT AGAINST KEMAL.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August. 27 (Canadian Press).—Four prominent Unionist, Djavid Bey, Dr. Nazim Bey, Nilmi Bey and Nail Bey, sentenced to death yesterday by a special court on a charge of conspiring to slay Mustaph Kemal Pasha, President of Turkey, were executed at midnight in the prison yard at Angora.

To-day's executions bring the number of men hanged for an alleged conspiracy against the life of Kemal Pasha to seventeen, thirteen well-known men having been hanged at Smyrna recently.

Five other members of the committee of union and pregress have been sentenced to perpetual punishment.

The result of the trial has caused a deep impression in Turkey.

MEIGHEN READY TO RESIGN IF ACTS INVALID

Renews His Challenge To Liberals To Take Orders To Court.

AT WINNIPEG.

Would Give Up Leadership of Conservatives If Protest Upheld.

WINNIPEG, August 27. Canadian Press. — Premier Meighen last night renewed his challenge to Mr. Mackenzie King.

"Let them even yet," Mr. Meighen exclaimed in discussing whether his acting ministry constituted a legal government or not; "let them even yet challenge any act of ours as invalid because we were not legally a government. If they succeed I am prepared to resign the leadership of the Conservative party."

An order-in-council passed by the government could be challenged in the courts, Mr. Meighen said. If the government were not legally constituted, the courts would declare the order invalid.

"I owuld like," he said, "to put that challenge to them to-night."

ATHENS, Aug. 27—General Condylis has formed a "business Cabinet," in which not a single naval or army ofifcer except himself has a portfolio ,and in which politicians are conspicuous by their absence.

The new Foreign Minister is Periocles Argyropouios, formerly Minister to Angora, and the Minister of Finance is M. Drossopoulos, Governor of the National Bank of Greece.

LADY TRAPPER TELLS STORY

Miss Hallett Has Had Many Adventures in Peace River Country.

HELPS FATHER

EDMONTON, Alta., August 27.—Canadian Press. — Meeting a full-grown bull moose face to face in the mountains, when carrying a pack of 55-pounds strapped on her back, and with no protection other than an empty shot gun, hunting ducks on the Peace River in the middle of winter; camping out in the snow for three days in December weather without food, nor blankets; doing a man's work as a daily routine along her northern trap line—these are among the many novel adventures which Miss Mary B. Hallett, the only woman trapper in the Peace River country, and one of the few known to history, can describe from actual experience.

Miss Hallett claims Fort Vermilion as her home town and uses that northern outpost as a base of operations for her traplines, which lies north and east of that point about 6 days journey. She makes a trip to the "outside" each year.

Miss Hallett related on one of her visits to this district that she always accompanied her father when he went out trapping in the winter time.

"We have been at it for three years now and are still going strong. I know that it is rather unusual for a woman to spend her time in this way but I am very fond of the life and have done well at it," she said

"Dad and I always go over the line together and take pot luck on whatever comes along. Sometimes we have a hard time of it when we get caught out in the bush at night away from camp and without food or blankets. This has happened more than once, but we always manage to pull through.

"This last winter," she said, "I was only out a little more than two months, but the year before I was out all season and succeeded in making more than $800 as my share of the proceeds as well as catching a beautiful silver fox, which I gave away as a Christmas present.

"Sometimes we do have rather exciting times, Dad and I. One day last fall we were travelling through the mountainous country, packed to the very limit, and with our dogs heavily packed, when we ran into a full-grown bull moose. The only gun we carried with us an old double barrelled shot gun which we had taken along to kill rabbits for our food. It was unloaded at the time.

"We had just crossed a deep ravine when we almost ran into the moose coming up the other side. We had no time to load the gun, but stopped short in our tracks. Things looked interesting for a while. Then the moose, evidently more surprised than we were, beat a hasty retreat, and left us in peace.

"Last winter we saw a rather interesting thing when we were travelling along the ice not far from Vermillion. In several places there were air holes in the ice and in one of these we came upon a flock of ducks, several of which we managed to bag. They made a meal which was very welcome from the usual camp diet.

Miss Hallett declared that her catch last season had included a good variety of beaver, mink, marten, lynx and fox.

WRAPPING PAPER.

Peterboro, Aug. 25, 1926.
Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—May I ask the favor of a little space. I want to protest if I may against the practice of some storekeepers of wrapping bread in newspapers. I would not mind so much if I was sure the papers were purchased at The Examiner or some other newspaper office and had not been used, but one is never sure of this.

Perhaps dear sir, you would hardly credit that the piece of paper I am enclosing was actually wrapped around a loaf purchased by my husband at a little store which, out of a desire to help, we have patronized, but I'm afraid now they will find they have lost a customer.

I am writing this letter to warn other indifferent storekeepers who may be mean enough to use the newspaper they have handled and read and perhaps given the children to play with, that they too may lose custom through their dirty practice also. I write to protect those who care to be protected from germs of disease.

Thanking you, I am,
Yours truly,
Indignant Housewife.

FROM MR. CARVETH.

Editor:
Dear sir:

If Mr. Peck did not vote against the Budget why is he opposing the King Government? That is what all the people out our way want to know.

JOHN CARVETH,
Buckhorn.

FROM MR. GORDON.

The Editor, The Examiner:
Dear Sir:

I understand that Mr. Peck produced a letter last night from Mr. Beauchesne, the Clerk of the House of Commons. Mr. Peck had already said that he could not get a letter from Mr. Beauchesne, and neither could I. I got a letter showing that Mr. Peck, when he said that he did not vote against the Robb Budget had made a statement that was untrue. I repeated to the audience on every occasion that the Robb Budget was the Ways and Means Resolution, and was a motion which must first be passed before the change of taxation proposed by the Government could be made.

Mr. Peck, deliberately over his signature, said that he did not vote against that Resolution, which if defeated would have prevented the reduction to penny postage, reducing income taxation, removal of the stamp tax on checks and the reduction of automobile duties.

As I said before, if Mr. Peck's vote had succeeded in defeating the Budget Resolution, Peterborough people would have been taxed $100,000.00 per year more than they now are taxed.

Those statements that I made are true, and Mr. Peck's statement that he did not vote against the Budget Resolution, which was the Ways and Means Resolution, was untrue then and his statement is untrue now, and no one needs to go beyond an authority like Mr. J. H. Burnham.

I will give $500 to the Children's Aid Society and I will give $500.00 more to St. Vincent's Orphanage if Mr. Peck can get a letter from the Clerk of the House of Commons or the Deputy Clerk, saying that he did not vote against the Ways and Means Resolution as shown in the May 18th, 1926, Hansard, which has been described for generations as the Budget in the British Parliament as well as the Canadian Parliament.

Mr. Peck voted twice—once in favor of Dr. Manion's milk-and-water amendment, which he calls a "sly" vote, but which is more properly described as a "slick" vote, and his second vote, whereby he tried to increase the taxation of the City of Peterborough $100,000.00 a year, is contained on page 323 of the Votes and Proceedings of the House of Commons, which are the official records of the House.

Yours faithfully,
G. N. GORDON.

Lapointe Blames Premier For Statements Made By Doucet.

TOURING ONTARIO.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press)—Declaring that he did not hold Mr. Doucet responsible for his statement concerning the launch "Margaret," but rather Premier Arthur Meighen, who had been on the platform when Mr. Doucet's statement was made, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, opened his Ontario tour last evening.

He spoke in the armories in the interests of W. Ross Macdonald, Liberal candidate in Brantford, and T. Scott Davidson, Liberal Progressive candidate in Brant. He was accompanied by Hon. J. A. Robb, Senator A. C. Hardy, and Senator Archie McCoig, all of whom spoke briefly.

Stating that the important issues of the campaign were those which the citizens themselves decided, rM. Lapointe recalled that the Liberal administration after the last general election had been called a "rump" government. But it was not a shadow government, he said, with but one minister sworn in. And the "rump" government, he said, defeated the "shadow" government three times.

YOUNG MAN DIES TRYING TO SAVE DROWNING GIRL

Rescue Party in Boat Gets Girl, But Youth Sinks From Sight.

HEART TROUBLE.

Body Quickly Recovered, But Life Extinct—At Lake Rousseau.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—W. B. McDonald, formerly of Toronto, and more recently employed as cashier in the Saskatoon branch of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company, was drowned near the Windermere House, Lake Rosseau, on Wednesday evening in a plucky attempt to save a nursemaid who had got beyond her depth. Mr. McDonald disappeared from sight before occupants of a boat who managed to pull the girl from the water could reach his side. Although his body was recovered a few minutes afterwards, life was extinct. Death was attributed at the time to heart trouble.

Decedent had been in bathing and was standing on the shore, when he either heard cries from the nursemaid or observed her frantic signals for aid. In any event, he immediately went to her assistance. The girl grappled with him and he was unable to make any headway.

Attracted by the shouts of observers of the struggle, a boat manned by several men put out for the tiring pair.

Girl Clings to Gunwale.

As it reached the spot, the girl managed to fasten her fingers on the gunwale and to cling there until drawn to safety. Meanwhile, Mr. McDonald—strength sapped in the struggle—had vanished from sight. None of the men about could swim, it is understood, and not until the hotel physician appeared on the scene was the body recovered. The physician dived repeatedly until he brought the decedent to the surface and shore, where he practiced resuscitation, but to no avail.

Mother an Eye-Witness.

An added sad feature of the drowning was that Mr. McDonald's mother, with whom he was spending his vacation at the Windermere House, was an eye-witness. At the time her son went to the girl's rescue she was seated on one of the docks at the resort. She saw him endeavor to pilot the girl to safety, but was not aware of his identity until he began to struggle for his own life. Two sisters of the decedent, Miss Lilian and Miss Jeannette McDonald, who, with the mother and another brother, Dr. J. L. McDonald of the Sick Children's Hospital, reside at 6 Edgewood Crescent, Toronto, were also stopping at the Windermere House at the time, but were not on the scene of the fatality

Decedent was only a fair swimmer, it is said. Although believed to have been in the best of health, the overexertion attendant upon his efforts to save the girl proved, it is generally conceded, too much for his heart. He was 25 years of age, and was well known in Saskatoon and Toronto. In Saskatoon he lived at the Y.M.C.A., and attended Knox Church.

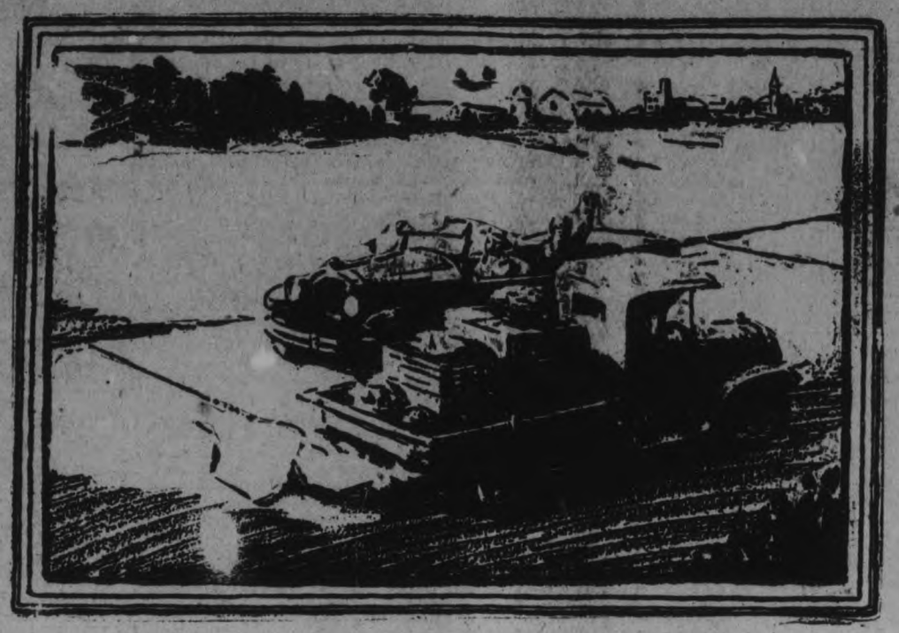
THE SPIRIT OF NEIGHBORLINESS



Another Little Message

About that cup of Sugar

RECENTLY we suggested that the essentials of the true spirit of neighborliness were exemplified in the borrowing of a cup of sugar.

Over the back-yard fence is a short cut indeed, to neighborliness. Miles so often are the fences that divide the comman ground of mutual understanding and good will. The less the distance, the lower the fence.

□ □ □ □

That's one reason why we've always worked so earnestly and faithfully for better roads. The road that brings you nearer to us is the same broad highway that brings us nearer to you. Literally and figuratively it increases efficiency in the delivery of the goods. Another essential to the true spirit of neighborliness.

You'll find the same spirit at this end of the road—in our stores and places of business. Courtesy, desire to please, eagerness to rectify error, sincerity in quality, fairness in price—these are the elements of neighborly dealing which we are constantly striving to improve.

Just call across the fence. We're neighbors you know.

TEX RICKARD CLEARS DEMPSEY OF ALL FEAR CHARGES AGAINST FIGHTING COLORED CHALLENGER

Has Own Reasons for Not Staging Dempsey-Wills Bout.

ISSUES FACTS

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Tex Rickard for the first time explained the real reasons why he never has made a serious effort to put on a heavyweight championship match between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills. He also defended Dempsey against the charge that he has been avoiding the colored challenger through fear.

Rickard, in a formal statement said: "It has so frequently been stated that Dempsey is afraid of Wills that I feel it is due to the champion that I make a plain statement of facts, refute some statements which have been both inaccurate and venomons, and give the public the opportunity to reach an unbiased judgment.

"My experience with the Jeffries-Johnson bout long ago convinced me that a Dempsey-Wills match would not be a good thing for boxing. As I became better acquainted with the game and talked with persons of influence, I saw no reason to change this opinion. I have made more negro champions and promoted more mixed bouts than any other man in the country, but I did not think it wise to hold this particular match.

Everything Ready.

"Nevertheless, in September, 1924, I prepared to hold it, with the ready consent of Dempsey, and even went so far as to have tickets printed. A few of those tickets are still in existence. That the bout was never held was no fault of the contestants or of mine.

"If I had needed anything beyond my own conviction that the holding of this match was not practicable, that experience would have settled the matter.

"Finally, I decided to match Dempsey with Tunney, whom I considered and still consider his most dangerous opponent. In March of this year I wired Dempsey, saying I wanted him to box Tunney. His telegram in reply read:

Asked for Wills.

"'Why not Wills?'

"When I went to Fort Worth to meet him he asked me the same question, but I told him that for business reasons I did not wish to promote a Wills bout, and that I did not believe it could be held.

"Dempsey had given me sole power to represent him before the New York Boxing Commission. That mean tthat I was empowered to go before the commission and agree that Dempsey would box any opponent I named. I had already agreed to give Tunney the match, but if I had switched to Wills, Dempsey not only would have been willing, but would have been more pleased. I believed Tunney the tougher opponent and thought he would make the better battle.

Clears Champion.

"I make this statement as a mere matter of justice to one of the greatest of heavyweight champions. To say that Dempsey fears Wills is a joke. He considers him a clean-living, estimable citizen, but a second-rate fighter."

Rickard added that he didn't issue the statement to ballyhoo the fight. "It doesn't need any advertising," he said. "We already have orders for a million dollars' worth of tickets."

Jack Kearns, in an interview yesterday, charged that he had tried three times to get Dempsey into the ring with Wills and that the champion backed out each time.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The galloping Maple Leafs from Toronto increased their lead at the top of the International League by two full games yesterday. The Canadians were at home to Nowark and annexed both ends of a double header, 3 to 2 and 3 to 1. Meanwhile their closest rivals, the Baltimore Orioles, dropped a double header to the Stars at Syracuse. The scores were 6-4, and 8 to 0. The Canucks now hold a six-game advantage at the top of the standing. Toronto had to come from behind in both games, and in winning the second game, downed the ace of the visiting twirling staff, Al. Mamaux. Sorrell held the Bears to two hits in the second game.

Miller and Frankhouse were the winning Syracuse moundsmen in the Stars' double victory over the long-time champions. Both twirlers were backed by splendid hitting which a flock of Baltimore pitchers were unable to halt.

Rochester took two games from Reading, the first 2 to 1, and the nightcap, 2 to 1. Buffalo defeated Jersey City 6 to 3, in the opener of a scheduled double bill but the second game ended at 4-all. the fixture being called at the end of the ninth owing to darkness.

FOOTBALL NOW HOLDS INTEREST OF OLD COUNTRY

Will Open With Eighty-Eight Clubs in Three Divisions.

ON SATURDAY

Changes in Teams Being Well and Thoroughly Canvassed.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press.) — With the end of the cricket season now in sight and a summer of excellent sport rapidly drawing to a close, interest in the old country is being directed towards the opening of the football year. On Saturday next the great winter sport will begin another season and the eighty-eight clubs in the three divisions are all set for the start. The customary crop of speculations is being raised and the changes of the various teams are being well and thoroughly canvassed.

The compositionof the First Division of the English League presents the curious feature of almost one-third of the teams—seven, to be exact — being from one county, Lancashire. These are Blackburn Rovers, Burnley, Bury, Manchester United, Bolton Wanderers, Everton and Liverpool. The Midland counties claim five clubs in Aston Villa, Leicester City, West Bromwich Albion, Birmingham and Derby county. Yorkshire with four comes next. These are Huddersfield Town, Leeds United and two Sheffield teams. The United and The Wednesday, Newcaste United and Sunderland represent the north of England, while Cardiff City is the only representative from Wales.

The hopes of the Metropolitan area rest in Arsenal, Tottenham Hotspur and West Ham United. It is thus noted that the south of England is totally without representation in the first string.

By a strange combination of circumstances, all the London clubs are at home on Saturday, the Arsenal opening the season at Highbury with Derby County, the newcomers to the First Division. The Spurs acting as hosts at Whitehart Lane to Everton, and West Ham receiving Leicester City at Upton Park. Arsenal finished second to Hudderfield Town in the League championship last season and it is believed that they will for the most part field the same eleven this year that brought them so close to the honors. Their opponents, Derby County, who came up from the second string with The Wednesday, will likely prove a formidable opposition and an excellent game is anticipated.

Huddersfield Town, the League champions, open their season away from home, travelling to Bury, an aggregation that wound up in fourth place, while Sunderland, who were third in the League race, go to the Midlands where they will engage West Bromwich.

The other scheduled encounters are:

Blackburn Rovers at Birmingham; Cardiff City at Burnley; Bolton Wanderers at Leeds; Manchester United at Liverpool; Aston Villa at Newcastle; and Sheffield United at The Wednesday.

In the Second Division, particular interest will be invested in the game at Barnsley where Grimsby Town, who were promoted from the third string, will furnish the opposition. At the same time the game at Swansea where the home team, who were advanced last season, meet Reading, the other newcomers, will produce some of the old rivalry of two years ago when Swansea Town and Reading were both battling for promotion from the Third Division. The demoted teams, Notts County and Manchester City, meet South Shields and Fulham respectively.

Other engagements are:

HOLLOWAY SOCCER CUP TO-MORROW

Masseys Vs. Thistle at Nicholls Oval—Kick-off at 3 O'clock.

After many weeks of non-playing in local circles, the Masseys, the Phelan cup holders, will meet the league leaders, the Thistle, in the semi-final of the Mayor Holloway Soccer Trophy, which was presented by him in the early part of the season so as to be competed for under the title of the Injured Players' Benefit Fund. The object of this asset is to create a surplus to meet any liability that may be incurred during the playing season through any participant being unfortunate in accident. It is up to the soccer fan to help this worthy object when the collectors pay them a visit.

This is the first year of the Holloway cup and both elevens are anxious to be the first team to have their name engraved upon it.

J. C. Russell is the ruling official with the whistle and neutral linesmen are T. Stewart and William Anderson. Kick-off is at three o'clock, at Nicholls' Oval.

SCIENTIST MAKES FLATTEST THING KNOWN ON EARTH

Feat of 70-Year-Old Optical Instrument Maker at Washington.

THREE MONTHS' WORK

Result Was Surface Surpassing Most Exacting Demands.

By ISRAEL KLEIN.

The flattest surface on earth has been produced by John Clacey, 70-year-old optical instrument maker at the U. S. Bureau of Standards in Washington.

"Flatness" is only relative. True, ideal flatness is practically unobtainable. But when a surface has been obtained that is less than a five-millionth of an inch out of the true plane, there's little room for quibbling.

This is the achievement of Clacey. With the ultimate of patience and care, he has polished three discs of silica glass, or fused quartz, until they represent the closest to flatness that has ever been attained. In fact, these discs, less than a foot in diameter, are so flat that if they were magnified to reach between Washington and Chicago—1,000 miles—and their surfaces magnified in proportion, no point on any surface would be out of the ideal plane by as much as one inch!

Three Months!

Heretofore, the standard of flatness, or planeness, has been a disc of common glass, which would vary with the temperature. Since quartz is much less responsive to heat, it was decided to make a standard of planeness out of this form of glass.

For three and a half months, Clacey polished the three discs originally bought in the rough, until he got them to the standard required. All this time he worked over a circular pedestal on which he swept each disc in varying circles and loops so as to polish it evenly and surely. It required considerable exertion, since each disc weighed 13 pounds and the hard pitch on which he polished it exerted a pull against his movements.

But he kept on, first polishing the discs against one another, with only a fine rouge and water between them, then finishing the process by the more delicate operation on the pitch-topped pedestal. This pitch had to be of a definite hardness and temperature, which only the keen sensitivity of the practiced veteran could discern.

Infinite Care.

This polishing process had to be exact, so exact as to satisfy measurements in the millionths of an inch.

For this operation, therefore, Clacey was slow and precise. He had to judge even the length of stroke to use, when and to what extent it should be oval, when it should be circular and how much the disc should be rotated at the same time.

He had to know how much pressure, if any, he should apply in addition to the weight of the disc and when to stop, to allow both disc and the pitch to return to normal temperature. He had to know exactly when the pitch became too hard or too soft and when it needed reforming.

And he had to know almost to a certainty how much polishing was necessary to remove a given thickness of the quartz.

Finished, he found his surfaces so flat that they surpassed the demands of even the most exacting instrument known for testing the flatness of objects.

SOFTBALL GAME FOR TO-MORROW

Firemen Will Meet All-Star Team From Other League Clubs.

AT RIVERSIDE.

The fans of this city are going to be able to see a softball game tomorrow afternoon at Riverside Park when the Firemen play the All Stars of the city. The Firemen ran away with the post season series and have tucked the first game of the Eastern Ontario softball finals under their belt. The All Stars are determined to set the Firemen back a cog or two so as to show them that they are not able to take everything and also to pay them up for some of the defeats that the Firemen administered them in the season that has just come to a close. The game is scheduled to start at 3.00 o'clock and Chief Gimblett promises to have a real line up. On Monday the Firemen go to Kingston to play the second game of the O.A.S.A. series.

LINDSAY HERE THIS EVENING

First Round O.B.A.A. Contest With Crescents at Exhibition Park.

Lindsay's O.B.A.A. Intermediate entry will be here this evening for a first round contest with Crescents, winners of the East Peterborough League. The visitors have several veterans including Starr, their first-string pitcher, and Bill Richman, on the line-up, and won their home series with comparative ease.

While the game is scheduled at 4.30 o'clock at Exihibtion Park, it is quite probable that the fans who get to the grounds at five o'clock will see all of the game. Nine innings will be played.

Crescents are in great condition for the tussle. They have just emerged from a three-game series with the Cogs, and Casey Masterson has had enough rest to warrant one of his best pitching performances.

WINDSOR TRACK ATTENDANCE LOW

May Be No Racing At All Next Year, Says General Manager.

WINDSOR, August 27. — The crowds are getting smaller each meeting at Windsor race track, according to track officials, who said yesterday that all next year's racing may be cancelled.

Half empty grand stands—a scattered thousand or so fans in betting sheds underneath, 500 habitues strolling around the grounds in front of stands, half as many more in paddock and lunch rooms — this was Kenilworth Park Track yesterday afternoon. Less than 2,500 paid admissions were counted by the management.

At the same track a few years ago more than 30,000 passed through the gates one afternoon to see horses run.

Only 1,500 There Monday.

Monday's total attendance did not exceed 1,500, many of them professional race followers, who go from track to track during the season. These figures were given by officials of the track.

"Is the public losing interest in racing? Have the tens of thousands of frequenters come to the conclusion that they cannot beat the game, or how do you account for the tremendous falling off in attendance in a few years?" Abe Orpen, secretary and general manager of the Kenilworth Park track was asked as he sat in his office and watched patrons trickle slowly through gates.

"How many people do you suppose are here?" he asked in reply. "Probably 3,000 or 4,000."

"Well, there are not more than 2,500. That is an outside estimate, isn't it?" He questioned one of the gate officials who came along.

"I cannot tell you the reason," he said, "but a number of reasons probably enter into it."

"There isn't the interest in racing there was a few years ago. Year by year our receipts are less. The Government tax is to blame to some extent; the immigration problem accounts for some thousands more. We are losing money every day we keep the track in operation."

Pari-Mutuels Deserted.

The Government demands a tax of $7,500 a day for fourteen days of racing allowed each year on tracks in Ontario. In addition, 5 per cent. is deducted from every winning ticket and an amusement tax of 25 cents on each admission is charged.

Mr. Orpen glanced across to the pari-mutuel machines, where the rush of bettors in other days kept long lines of sellers and cashiers busy taking and paying bets. The $50 and $20 wickets were deserted. A few straggled through the $10 and $5 barriers that led to the machines. There was no long waiting line at any of the other booths.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE HOLLOW LOG.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

When Buster and Custer asked their father one day if they might go adventuring with him, over the fields and through the woods, the two little rabbit boys never imagined what was going to happen. Uncle Wiggily himself did not know.

But, it happened all the same, and this is the way of it:

Buster and Custer often went hopping with their daddy on little trips about Woodland near the Orange Ice Mountains. They had great fun, sometimes finding a stray carrot, or

"I hear a funny noise in that log," went on Custer.

And, as the rabbit gentleman and the two little bunny boys started away from the hollow stump bungalow, around the corner came hopping Tooter.

"May I come?" he asked.

"Yes, but where is your brother Scooter?" asked Uncle Wiggily, for most of the forty 'leven little rabbit children came in pairs, like twins, as were Holly and Tolly, Jingle and Jangle, Buster and Custer. So it was with Scooter and Tooter, only this time here was Tooter without Scooter.

"Scooter took his bag of marbles and went to get some one to play with him because I didn't want to," answered Tooter. "I guess we'll find him after a while."

So Uncle Wiggily went to the woods with Buster, Custer and Tooter. They found a patch of clover on the way, and stopped to nibble some of the green leaves. And afterward they came to an orchard where they got apples.

"Scooter isn't having as much fun as I am, even if he is playing marbles," laughed Tooter, and Buster and Custer said they thought not.

Then the four rabbits reached a shady place in the woods, and, while Uncle Wiggily sat down to rest himself, Buster, Custer and Tooter hopped about picking up white and red stones to toss in the brook, having fun that way. At last the little rabbit boys saw, over in the field, a log, lying on its side as if it were asleep.

"Maybe it's a hollow log and we can hop through it and make believe it's a tunnel," said Tooter.

"That will be lots of fun," agreed Buster. But, when Custer, who was the first to reach the log, looked in, he was much surprised.

"It's a hollow log all right," said Custer.

"Then crawl in and we'll crawl after you," spoke Tooter.

"No! I don't want to crawl in," went on Custer.

"Why not?" asked his brother Buster.

"'Cause I hear a funny noise in that log," went on Custer. "Listen!" And when they had all listened they heard a deep, rumbly voice say:

"Let me out! Let me out!"

"Oh, hark to that!" cried Tooter. "I'm going to tell Daddicums!"

So they hopped back to where Uncle Wiggily was half asleep in the shade, and when the rabbit gentleman heard about a deep, rumbly voice coming out of the hollow log, he said:

"Nonsense! It is only an echo!" But when he had gone with the little rabbits to listen he changed his mind. "I guess one of the bad chaps is in that hollow log," said the rabbit gentleman. Then, stooping over, and putting his mouth close to the hole in the log, the uncle bunny asked:

"Who are you and what do you want?"

"I am Scooter! I'm one of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit boys!" was the answer, "And I want to get out!"

"Oh, don't you believe him!" cried Tooter, Buster and Custer. "That doesn't sound at all like Scooter's voice!" But, when Uncle Wiggily had sent for the Police Dog, who broke open the hollow log with his club, out came Scooter.

"How did you get in there?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"One of my marbles rolled inside the hollow log and I went after it," was the answer. "But the log was so tight that I couldn't get out again and I had to stay."

"Well, I'm glad we found you," said Tooter. "But, what made your voice so queer?"

"It was because he was in the hollow log. It was like calling up from down in a cellar," said Mr. Longears. "After this, Scooter, don't go in hollow logs unless you are sure you can crawl out." And, Scooter said he wouldn't. And, if it doesn't snow when the ice man brings in a bottle of coal to make a fire in the bath tub, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's summer taffy.

MORE OFFICERS NEEDED TO STOP RUM SMUGGLING

Head Of Customs Service in Nova Scotia Tells of His Needs.

AT PROBE SITTING.

Captain of 'Margaret' Concludes His Evidence This Morning.

HALIFAX, N.S., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Twenty fast patrol boats each seventy-five feet long, are required to cope with the rum smuggling business of the coast of Nova Scotia. In addition to these, the land preventive force should be increased. The above suggestions were made by Angus Young, of Cape Breton, in charge of the Customs Preventive Service for Nova Scotia, who appeared before the Customs Commission this morning. He said public opinion in Nova Scotia was not behind the law and this fact made suppression of smuggling difficult. Another difficulty confronting the preventive service was insufficient patrol boats and officers. At present, he told the commissioner, there were four customs cruisers, five patrol boats, and two harbor boats.

This morning saw the conclusion of Captain Alfred Lecouvee's evidence before the commission.

"If I could I would give you a certificate of impartiality as a witness and loyalty to the chief as a public servant," declared Sir Francois Lemieux, in discharging the master of the famous "Margaret."

Captain Lecouvee was examined this morning by L. A. Forsythe of Halifax, appearing on behalf of the Hon. Jacques Bureau. He stated that part of the trip taken by the Hon. J. D. Reid on the Margaret in 1914, was devoted to fishing. During the Meighen trip of 1921, he said, the Margaret was not off her patrol grounds, and he would have boarded a rum runner if he had seen her. The longest period of time during which Mr. Bureau had been on the vessel he placed at 12 days.

"For the purpose of suppressing smuggling, would you prefer to have guests on board or not?" asked Mr. R. L. Calder, K.C., of the captain, just before he concluded his testimony. The captain said he would prefer not to have guests.

Mr. Young told the commission of his efforts to secure the motor boat Rambler, seized for smuggling, for the preventive service. He claimed the boat would have brought two thousands dollars under forced sale but was finally disposed of by the Department at Ottawa to J. Cruickshanks of Sydney for one thousand dollars. He said he subsequently wired the Department that Cruickshanks was a rum runner. The witness also stated that the Stella Maris, a boat attached to the preventive service, had been kept in commission for six months tied up to a dock in North Sydney, awaiting the signing of a crew. He identified a telegram to W. F. Wilson, Chief of the Preventive Service, recomending an engineer, and Wilson's reply asking if he had consulted F. L. Kelly, M.P., for Cape Breton North before making the recommendation.

DEMPSEY STARTS TRAINING FOR FIGHT

Bids Good-bye To Wife, Who Leaves For Work in Movies.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 27. Canadian Press. — Jack Dempsey assumed the role of a bachelor to-day, moving into his bungalow to live, with two or three camp attendants until the finish of his training campaign for the defence of his world's heavyweight championship against Gene Tunney, in Philadelphia, on September 23rd.

The title holder bade good-bye to his wife, Estelle Taylor, yesterday. She left for Hollywood to resume motion picture work. Mrs. Dempsey has no desire to see her husband fight.

"I could not stand it to see Jack punished," said Mrs. Dempsey. "If he should be knocked down or knocked out, I probably would faint. Jack wouldnt like that. However, I have no fear as Jack has assured me he will win and as quickly as possible, too. I have every confidence in him to do just that."

Pauline La Budda, a strapping Wisconsin German girl, who spent two years in the White House kitchen, when Woodrow Wilson was president, reigns supreme in the kitchen of Jack Dempseys Bungalow to-day. "She rattles a mean stove lid," in the words of the champion.

FEDERAL NOMINATIONS

The following candidates for the House of Commons were nominated yesterday:

CRUSADERS END CANADIAN TOUR

Church Army Party, 28 Strong, Sails To-day For England.

TEN FROM U.S.A.

The eighteen Church Army Crusaders who recently visited Peterborough, concluded their Canadian tour at Hamilton, Ont., on Thursday, August 26. After leaving Peterborough—with the exception of their campaign in the City of Toronto—the Crusaders worked through the Dioceses of Toronto and Niagara in two groups.

On Wednesday night, at the close of their visits to Dundas and Dunville respectively, the members of both groups journeyed into Hamilton and met together at the Cathedral Parish House. Here they were joined by the contingent of ten evangelists who had the previous day at Rochester, N.Y., brought to a close a successful Crusade of Witness in the United States, which began at Washington, D.C.

The twenty-eight Crusaders were then entertained to a bountiful supper, served by friends of Christ Church Cathedral congregation. The Venerable Archdeacon MacIntosh presided, and other clergy present included the Very Rev. Dean Broughall, the Revs. W. A. Brown, A. N. Barclay, J. L. Hughes.

On Thursday morning, at 7.15, a celebration of the Holy Eucharist was held in the Cathedral, the celebrant being the Very Rev. Dean Broughall.

At 12.15 (noon) the Crusaders left by the C.N.R. train for Montreal, from which port they sail today, August 27, by the S.S. Ascania for England.

ONTARIO CROP IN BAD SHAPE

Farmers Are Having Great Difficulty in Harvest Operations.

RAIN INTERVENES.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.— (Canadian Press.)— A serious situation among the farmers of Ontario is indicated by reports received from many points in the province with repect to the condition of the crops. On account of the long continued wet weather grave fears are entertained for the safety of the harvest. Little cutting has been done in Ontario, particularly in the western and central portions, during the week. Farmers are experiencing considerable difficulty in using their binders on soft land and recourse is being made in some sections to the old-fashioned reaper and hand rake, leaving the grain to be bound by hand. This is more particularly the case on heavy clay lands.

Showers fell over a large part of Central Ontario last night and further held up harvesting operations.

GREAT WELCOME FOR MISS EDERLE

Parade, Music, Whistles and Other Demonstrations Are Given.

NEW YORK, August 27. Canadian Press.—Gertrude Ederle, who swam the English channel in record time, returned from Europe on the Berengaria to-day, and was accorded a welcome similar to that given to the country's most distinguished guests.

The girl swimmer and her father were transferred from the liner to a launch and then proceeded to the Battery amid cheers, music, the shrill tooting of harbor craft and the spouting of fire boats.

Lower Broadway gave a characteristic welcome to Miss Ederle, with a parade and all the fanfare accorded to the Prince of Wales and other celebrities.

INSIGHT GIVEN TO LIFE IN JAPAN

Speaker at Kiwanis Luncheon Tells Something About Country.

IS TEACHER THERE.

"Japan as a Neighbor," was the topic chosen by the Rev. Cuthbert Cooper Robertson, addressing the members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon this afternoon in the Empress Hotel. Mr. Robertson, who was in Japan under the aegis of the Church of England Missionary Society, has been a teacher of English in a High School at Nagoya, Japan, whither he is returning at the end of his vacation. He was introduced today by Kiwanian Doug. Paterson, a former classmate of Mr. Robertson, at University College.

Japan, said Mr. Robertson, was a country which was well known, yet in many respects was little known. After a long experience in a foreign clime, Mr. Robertson declares that mankind is pretty much the same all the world over.

In opposition to prevailing belief, Mr. Robertson asserts that Japanese are often scrupulously honest, and pays tribute to the hospitality and courtesy of our neighbors across the Pacific.

Theoretically, Japan was a militaristic country, but in point of fact the military spirit was not dominant among the people. On account of the fact that the Chief of the Military Staff had the ear of the Emperor, the authority of the Diet was sometimes disputed and a dual condition of things occasionally prevailed in regard to items of military interest.

Ninety per cent of Japanese students were opposed to military training in schools and a recent change substituting active service officers for reserves in charge of the school military drill aroused intense opposition and in some districts, a strike among the students.

The business men of Japan were also largely opposed to undue military effort and expenditure.

Student life in Japan was greatly different from student life here. There was no great Christian background behind the Japanese student and no outside activities—a circumstance that frequently rendered him a prey to things that were good neither for himself or mankind.

The thanks of the club were expressed by Kiwanian J. J. Turner, who also extended Kiwanian good will towards Adjutant Ham and Rev. David Wren, newcomers to the city.

Visitors to the club were J. C. Hawe, Peterborough; Dr. J. R. Koch, U.S.A., J. H. Gladman and G. Watson of Toronto, and Ken Blood of Peterborough. F. H. Dawson was booster for today and Kiwanians Bill Welbourn, Jack Marshall and Isaac McNabb won the prizes —"three bags full."

94 DROWNED.

Ferry Boat Capsizes and Breaks in River in Bengal.

NOAKHALI, Bengal, India, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press). — Ninety-four passengers on a Megna River ferry boat are believed to have been drowned when the craft capsized in midstream and broke in two. One hundred passengers were on board, and only six are known to have been saved. Many of them were carried away by the swift rushing water.

Chicago Mail Merchants Stop Selling Sidearms

CHICAGO, Ill., August 27. — (United Press). — Chicago mail order houses have agreed to discontinue the sale of side arms. "We want to co-operate with law enforcement authorities," said G. E. Crandell, of Montgomery, Ward and Company. Crime statistics show that mail order guns figure in nearly every killing.

HOW TO SWIM

by William Cannon

THE FULL TAKE-OFF.

Now for the full take-off. Stand 18 inches from the tip of the board and jump to the end with knees stiff.

The take-off will then come naturally and the body will shoot upward and outward as it is inclined, after the jump.

Care should be taken not to slip, although if the tip of the board is properly covered there should be little likelihood of that, and to be sure to fully clear the board.

As the board throws the body upward, the body can be thrown upward and outward by the shoulders.

Remember that the arms should not be held in rigid position but should ccome up naturally and balance the body but the hands should always be before the face when the head enters the water.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

The dream of returning to the old home town in a big limousine, with plenty of money, has probably buzzed in the brain of every young man in the world at some time or other.

And upon this common and youthful ambition is built "Rolling Home," the Universal production starring Reginald Denny, which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre, is built.

Only Reginald, believed by the admiring home towners to be a millionaire, plays the role of a penniless young man who has found that the world isn't as willing to give up its fortunes as he had been led to believe.

He has promised to return home on his birthday, however, and can't bear to tell his mother and the villagers that he is a failure, so, with the help of a friend, he carries it through by bluffing.

Denny, with all his recent farce successes, has never been funnier than in "Rolling Home." It is a story ideally suited to his talents as a farceur, and he makes the most of every opportunity. He shou add hundreds of admirers to his large army of fans with his work in this picture.

Dainty little Marion Dixon plays the feminine lead opposite the star, and provides an excellent reason for Denny's wanting to go back to the old home town.

Ben Hendricks, Jr., as Denny's friend and confident, who helps him carry on the pretense of riches, shows a remarkable versatility, and a splendid sense of comedy, as do E. J. Ratcliffe, Margaret Seddon, George Nicholls and other members of the cast.

William A. Seiter should be commended for his great directorial work. He has squeezed the last drop of comedy from every possible scene, and often leaves the audience gasping for breath with his laughable situations, piling one on top of the other with scarcely a pause.

"Rolling Home" is a screen version of John Hunter Booths popular stage play, and was adapted to the films by Rex Taylor, John McDermott and the director.

WEDDING BELLS.

LOWES—CLARK.
A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Aug. 25, high noon, at "Mapledale," the residence of Mr. W. J. Clark, Ennismore, when his daughter, youngest of six, Mildred Catherine, became the bride of Stanley Perinett Lowes, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lowes, Emily. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. H. Earle, a former rector of Omemee. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked very lovely in a gown of white crepe, trimmed with hand-made French Indo China lace and wore a beautiful rope of Japanese pearls. She wore a bridal veil with orange blossoms and lily-of-the-valley, and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses and baby's breath. The only attendant was the bride's sister, Greta, missionary from Honan, China. She also wore white crepe trimmed with hand-made lace and carried roses. The bride entered the room to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by her niece, Olive Webster, of Norwood, who also played very sweetly during the signing of the register. After the customary greetings and congratulations the wedding guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. The drawing room was most tastefully decorated with crepe paper, and banked with gladioli and other flowers. Mauve and white were the predominating colours in the dining room. The groom's gifts to the bridesmaid and pianist were beautiful silver mesh bags. The happy couple left by motor, the bride travelling in a navy blue satin faced crepe dress with hat and coat to match. They will reside in Emily. Previous to the wedding St. James community gave the bride a surprise party at her home when they presented her with a purse and gold.

The blinding rain of last night was responsible for an automobile collision at the intersection of King and George streets.
In the midst of the heavy rain storm J.Dean, travelling south on George, turned at the intersection with the intention of heading north when a car belonging to the Stinson Livery and driven by W. Gillespie, came up to the corner, and the two vehicles came in contact.
Mr. Dean's car suffered most, having a fender bent and the running board damaged. None of the drivers was injured.

TWELVE PEOPLE TIED FOR FIRST IN ESTIMATING ON DOLLAR DAY

Unique Result of Contest For Prizes Offered By Merchants.

GET $12.50 EACH.

One of Successful Winners Makes Estimate on Examiner Blank.

The figure that represents the number of tickets dropped in the box on Dollar Day has its ups and downs, and this time it took a jump of 1,400 over that of January last. The correct number this time is 13,776, and while none of the estimators hit on the exact figure, there were no less than twelve who came within one of it, and the entire $150 will be divided equally between them. One of the winners, J. A. Robinson, of King Street, made his estimate on an Examiner ticket, and receives the additional $10.00 offered by The Examiner if such a thing takes place. This happens to be the third or fourth time The Examiner has had to pay this $10.00, which it does cheerfully as an added attraction for the big event. The extra prize of $10.00 was won by Mrs. J. W. Conway, of 52 Olive Avenue, who bought a pair of the pictures advertised in Tuesday's Examiner by Messrs. McBride and Franks. This was the selected item and Mrs. Conway was sent the cheque this morning. The prize money will be paid out at The Examiner Office on Tuesday next.
The names of the winners are as follows: 10 whose tickets contained the number 13,777, are:
F. Dyer, 429 Chambers Street.
M. Richardson, Empress Hotel.
Naomie E. Horn, 51 McDonnel St.
Elsie Inch, 94 Bennett Street.
A. L. Russell, Bailieboro.
Mrs. F. Shurety, 690 Water Street.
Edith Panter, 62 Chamberlain St.
H. F. Doxsee, 160½ Simcoe Street.
Mrs. L. Conway, 333 Burnham St.
J. A. Robinson, 505 King Street.
The two whose number was 13,775, were:
Mrs. Hair, 540 Sherbrooke Street.
E. B. Edey, 85 Aylmer Street.
The above twelve will be paid $12.50 each as their share of the $150.00 which constituted the merchants' bonus fund, made up into eleven prizes.

Wheat Prices Go Down On Additional Offerings

CHICAGO, August 27. Canadian Press. — Active speculative offerings carried wheat prices downward today during the early dealings. Reports of favorable harvest weather in the northwest counted as a bearish factor.
Opening 1-8 to 3-4c lower, wheat underwent a material further drop, corn and oats were weak, corn starting 1-8 to 5-8c off and subsequently suffering a decided additional decline. Provisions tended to advance.
The apparent slowness of export demand for North American wheat gave emphasis to-day to bearish effects of enlarging the movement of the spring crop.
The prospects of better yields of wheat in Canada than had been looked for counted as a further influence to-day in the direction of lower prices. Improved threshing returns from various parts of the United States wheat region were also given attention.

TORONTO, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press) — Nipissing was the strong spot in a weak session of the Standard Mining Exchange today with gain of 40 cents to 6.90, after touching a high of 7.20. Lake Shore also showed strength, gaining 21 cents to 14.02. Noranda firmed 15 cents to 19.45.
In the silver list Keeley and Mining Corporation were each three cents higher to 1.73 and 3.88 respectively. Castle Trethewey was off one cent to 1.42, and Bourlamaque two to 1.10. Hollinger lost five cents to 19.35, and Tough Oakes was off one to 48 1-2. In the unlisteds Amulet was up two to 1.40 and Towagmac was off ten to 3.30.

Brazilian Leads Trade On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press)—Brazilian Traction was the active leader in the trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange. The stock eased one half to 117 3-4. The market was confined to a rather narrow list with prices somewhat irregular.
Nipissing Silver was the strong part in the mining section with a 55 cent gain to 6.90. Consolidated Smelters was off one half to 242 1-4 while Canada Steamships Common was stronger with a 3 1-2 point jump to 25. Kelvinbi firmed 1 1-4 to 88 3-4. Bank of Commerce eased one quarter to 221. British American Oil was off one half to 58, while Noranda gained 15 cents to 19.40.

Stock Prices Recover With Demand Brisk

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. Canadian Press. — Stock prices made further recovery in to-day's market, which was featured by brisk demand for dividend paying railroad shares.
Atchison was the leader in the rail group, crossing 151 to the highest price for record for an overnight gain of four points.
The demand for the industrials broadened as public participation increased, tobaccos giving an impressive demonstration of group strength with several issues in that group mounting to new peak prices for the year. Union tank car was bid up over five points to a new top, and Warner Bros. pictures, which has been the feature of recent markets, was selling five points above yesterday's final quotation by early afternoon. Motors, equipments and steels also presented several points of strength.

VISIT OF BAND ROUSES INTEREST

Famous Flint S. A. Musicians Will Be Here on Tuesday.

Indicative of the widespread interest in the visit of the famous Flint Band was a message received over the long distance telephone at 7 o'clock this morning by Adjutant Frank Ham. It was as follows: "Reserve six seats for Tuesday. We are coming from Cobourg for the Flint Band Musical Festival."
The Band is expected to arrive on Tuesday about noon, and at one o'clock a welcome luncheon will be tendered the visitors by the local members of the Salvation Army. At this luncheon, His Worship the Mayor, Dr. W. T. Holloway, accompanied by Alderman R. Denne (Chairman of the City Reception Committee), will be present and officially welcome the visitors on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough.
The afternoon will be given over to sightseeing, the Band being particularly interested in seeing the farfamed Peterborough hydraulic lift lock and other outstanding places of interest.
The band will meet at the Temple, Simcoe Street, at 7 p.m., and will march to the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, where a high class musical festival will be given. G. A. Gillespie, President of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, will preside.
The conductor of the band, Bandmaster William Broughton, is a graduate of the Chicago Conservatory of Music and is also a noted composer of Salvation Army music. His compositions are played by Army bands throughout the world, and are favorites with the Peterborough Temple Band.
Envoy Walter Jeffreys, the blind singer, is accompanying the band. His vocal selections will be highly appreciated.
Adjutant Ham desires to thank the citizens who have so kindly promised to entertain the visiting bandsmen.

SPAIN'S INVITATION TO POWERS TO DISCUSS CLAIM TO TANGIER CAUSES MUCH EMBARRASSMENT

Britain and France Strongly Opposed To Spanish Demands.

KEEPING SILENCE.

Italy Complicates Matters By Announcing Support of Spain.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The Great Powers are much perturbed at the Spanish invitation to all concerned to meet at Geneva next Wednesday and discuss the Spanish claim to Tangier. The nations invited include Italy, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Portugal and the United States.

The United States ocupies a different position from the others, but is included in the general Spanish statement that all signatories of the Tangier convention and Algeciras Act are asked to meet. The United States signed a rider to the Algeciras Act but will not attend at Geneva.

The Spanish action was unexpected and Great Britain and France are now in consultation, hoping to get Spain to withdraw what amounts to a claim that the principal of League powers, at the same time as the meeting of the Assembly, should consider the Spanish claim for a permanent seat in the League Council and her alternative claim to Tangier.

France and Britain are decidedly antagonistic to the Spanish demand for sovereignty over Tangier, and especially at the attempt to link this up with a council seat, but pending reliable reports as to the Italian attitude the British authorities are trying to conceal the full implication of the Spanish demarche and seem unwilling to oppose the plan openly for fear of driving Spain into the arms of Mussolini and cementing a Spanish-Italian entente in the Mediterranean.

Embarrassed Silence in London.

So, while the British Admiralty objects, on stragetic grounds, to Spain getting Tangier, and the Foreign Office opposes the Spanish claim, for a permanent council seat in the interests of the peaceful admission of Germany, there is an embarrassed silence in all quarters here.

Asked directly whether Great Britain would refuse to attend the proposed Tangier conference at Geneva, officials took refuge in silence or evasion. The French official attitude at the present moment seems to be much the same as that of the British, while France's real intentions are concealed.

There is an uneasy suspicion in Paris and London that Rome and Madrid may be acting in collusion in a scheme to alter the balance of power in the Mediterranean to the disadvantage of France and Great Britain.

Will not Reply to Spain's Note.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—It is understood here that France and England will not reply to Spain's note claiming the right to administer Tangier un-

Shear Lamb and Make Coat Between Sunrise and Sunset

TORONTO, August 28.—At four o'clock yesterday morning Joe Brethrow, of Burford, Ont., will load one of his Southdown lambs into a motor car and drive to Brantford. At 5 a.m. the shearing of the lamb will commence at Gordon Cockshutt's mill. This will be the first operation in the manufacture of an overcoat for the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec. The idea is to have the complete garment ready for wear at 8 o'clock in the evening at the Exhibition grounds. A ready-to-wear garment from a lamb's back to the wearer's back all complete between sunrise and sunset is the task the woollen men have set themselves and they even expect to do better than this.

As things now stand it is certain, the woollen men say, that the tailor in Brantford will have finished his job by 5.30 o'clock. An airplane will be in readiness and the coat rushed to the Exhibition grounds. The aviator, when the machine is off the grounds, will jump into the lake in a parachute and at 6.30 o'clock the coat will have been delivered.

London To Run Street Cars Fitted Out Like Limousines

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Their utility having been brought into doubt, London's street cars may still be saved by luxury.

By way of experiment the London Council recently put a de luxe street car in operation along the Thames embankment. It contained seats as comfortable as those of a limousine. Special attention was paid to the lighting so as to enable passengers to read their newspapers without straining their eyes.

So popular has the car proved with pasengers that the Council today decided to order 100 more of the same kind.

CONVICT KILLS PRISON GUARD

IS RECAPTURED.

KINGSTON, Ont., August 28. — (Special.) — Attacking Guard M. E. Jenkins, and inflicting fatal injuries by hitting him over the head with an iron bar, Thomas McKoskey, a convict at the Portsmouth Penitentiary, made his escape from the penitentiary about 7.30 this morning, but was recaptured a short time afterwards.

Jenkins was removed to the Hotel Dieu and died this morning. He was a former member of the Kingston police force.

The convict McKoskey, who made the attack on him, was recaptured by the penitentiary mounted patrol after being at liberty for about an hour.

The attack took place at the prison farm where Guard Jenkins was in charge of a gang of convicts engaged in digging post-holes. He was giving McKoskey some instructions as to how the holes were to be dug, and while demonstrating had his back turned to the convicts. McKoskey had in his hands a very heavy crowbar which he was using or digging, and while the guard's back was turned he struck him over the head and fled.

McCoskey made a break for liberty down Johnston Street, taking a crow bar with him, with Mounted Guard W. J. Cox in pursuit. Samuel E. Sewell, quartermaster at Mowat Hospital, who was in an automobile, joined the chase, and after running across a couple of fields, McCoskey was halted by Cox and coverd with a rifle. The convict offered no resistance, and was taken into custody.

When Jenkins was struck down one of the convicts, named Dickson, ran to the first house and telephoned the Penitentiary, while others endeavored to render aid to the guard. Rev. Dr. Kingsley, Roman Catholic chaplain, was summoned and the last rites of the Church administered to Jenkins.

Jenkins was born at Picton and is survived by a widow and four children.

ATTRITION ONLY TERMINATION OF MINERS' DISPUTE

Publication of Conference Report States Factions Continue at Deadlock.

OCCASIONAL BREAK.

Chancellor of Exchequer Refuses to Consider Renewal of Subsidy.

LONDON, August 28. Canadian Press. — The publication of the report of the proceedings of yesterday's meeting between the miners and the government show there is not the slightest shift in the deadlock which has lasted for seventeen weeks.

There seems to be no prospect of a termination of the coal strike except by the process of attrition, through sectional breakaways by the miners from the stand taken by their leaders or exhaustion of the miners' resources. The miners' representatives had nothing new to propose at the meeting and the government had nothing to concede. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, flatly refused to consider a renewal of the subsidy to the miners in any shape.

Very frank talk was indulged in. A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, characterized Chancellor Churchill's attitude as "brutal."

Herbert Smith, president of the Federation, told the Chancellor: "If you think I am here to petition, you are mistaken. We have been doing our utmost to avoid flooding of the pits but after your speech we must fight on—you force us to do it."

Mr. Churchill had advocated an 8-hour day and the combining of district and national settlements, which brought accusations from the miners' delegates that he was espousing the owners' cause. He also declared that the government no longer needed to buy foreign coal, because it was coming in freely at the rate of 10,000,000 tons weekly.

The Right Honorable T. Mas Richards, who worked in the coal pits as a boy and later in life became general secretary of the Miners' Federation, speaking as a miners' delegate, remarked to Mr Churchill: "I regret your speech. I interpret it as telling us 'You cannot hurt us—carry on!'"

The situation in the coal fields is unchanged. While there is a slow drift back to work by the men in the midlands, the big coal fields in Wales, Durham and Yorkshire as yet are not affected by the movement.

Three hundred safety men have withdrawn from the Bentley colliery, in Doncaster, and the question of the withdrawal of safetc men in Wales is being discussed.

The Liberal-Labor weekly, the New Statesman, accuses the government "by its complete surrender to the owners" of openly declaring a class war. It says that Premier Baldwin has forfeited the trust of the whole working class, probably forever, and has thrown the two sections of parliamentary opposition, the Liberals and the Laborites, into each others arms, whether they like it or not. The paper suggests that these two parties now will bend their efforts to finding a means of compelling the government to appeal to the country.

COX CONDEMNS JINGOES WHO CAUSE HATRED

Chief Source of Danger To America, He Says, After Touring England.

NO UNKINDNESS.

Finds English Friendly and is Impressed With Respect For Law.

(By Clifford Day, United Press Correspondent. Copyright Aug., 1926, by United Press).

LONDON, Aug. 28.—"Irresponsible jingoes on both sides of the Atlantic have become a chief source of danger to America, James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio, once Democratic candidate for President, and an important newspaper published told the United Press today in an interview.

"As I see it," he said, "one of the greatest dangers to America are irresponsible jingoes in public life on both sides of the Atlantic."

Cox said, "They try to keep alive politically by appealing to provincial hatreds," He had just returned to London from a motor trip of nearly 2,000 miles in England and Scotland. "I could see no feeling of unkindness toward the United States among the masses of people," he said. "Among the middle classes the attitude appears to be very fair. Among the industrial and Tory classes on whom the burden of taxation weighs heavily there is a feeling that we have been too selfish. They feel that some way somehow the result is not equitable."

The tour on which he observed industrial and social conditions carried Cox as far north as the Upper Highlands. He traversed the principal industrial and agricultural regions and talked with score of persons of every class.

Cox said that one of the strongest impression gained on the tour was that of orderliness and absolute respect for law in England.

"During the trip I din't see a single speed trap or a single motorist arrested or admonished," he said. "One could leave belongings in a car in the garage for the night with perfect safety. Were I asked the explanation for this I would say it was due to two things—Punishment after arrest and the homogeneous populations and habits of generations."

Cox's observations have convinced him that there is no danger of Radicalism or Bolshevism in England. While he said that he saw evidences of industrial paralysis everywhere as result of the coal strike, he added that there does not seem any great impressment on the people.

LUMBERMAN WAS FATALLY INJURED

NORTH BAY, August 28. — Canadian Press. — Arsene Wolff, home address unknown, was fatally injured when struck by a flyin bolt in the lath mill of the Graves Bigwood Co., at Hardy Bay, on the south shore of Lake Nipissing, early on Monday morning. The injured man succumbed to his injuries Thursday afternoon in the local hospital where he had been brought for medical attention.

Wolff was apparently about 30 years of age, and had been working for the company but a short time.

The authorities are unable to trace Wolff's relatives or find anything of his earlier history. It was understood that a sister of the deceased lived in Nestorville and friends resided at 99 Sanguinett street, Montreal, but no answer has been made to inquiries sent to these places.

No Smallpox Epidemic Only Four Mild Cases

Rumors that have been prevalent during the last couple of days, regarding an epidemic of smallpox in the city, were effectually quashed by Dr. T. W. H. Young, City Medical Officer of Health, this morning, in an interview with The Examiner.

"There are only four cases of smallpox placarded in the city," declared Dr. Young. He expressed the opinion that rumors of this nature did an incalculable amount of harm to the city through their spreading to outside points.

If citizens have reason to believe there are cases of smallpox existing in the city that have not been reported, they should notify Dr. Young at once, and immediate action will be taken. Needless to say the source of the information would not be divulged, he said.

GRAIN IS SHOWN FROM DISTRICT

W. H. Merrill Has Collected Many Fine Specimens From Farmers.

FOR EXHIBITION.

W. H. Merrill has been interesting himself lately in making a collection of the various grains in the county and district and to-day he has on display in R. C. Heard's store window on Water street sheaves of the various grains which he has collected to be shown at the Industrial Exhibition. He has not been able to get all kinds of grain that are grown in the district on account of the recent storm.

He has on display a sheaf of Champion Speltz wheat, which is a new variety in this district, but which has been grown extensively in the west. This wheat looks like goose wheat, but on examination of the head it is found to be a much better yielder. This sheaf was grown by William Robinson, of Bridgenorth. There is also a sheaf of Wisconsin barley grown by Ernest Robinson, Otonabee, a sheaf of Victory oats, the variety that leads the world in cultivation. The field that this sheaf was taken from is 15 acres and the estimated yield is 900 bushels. This variety was grown by John Tharby, Hoard's Station. There are also splendid sheaves of Empire oats grown by William Brown, of Smith; Northland oats, by William Robinson, Bridegnorth, and Banner by Gordon Mann, Smith; Abundance oats by Ira Robson, North Monaghan, and Imperial oats by Melville Johnston, North Monaghan.

A sheaf of corn, of the Bountiful variety fourteen feet in height, was grown by George Lancaster, Birdsalls station, is also on display. This field is five acres in area and all the corn is approximately the same height. What is especially noted about this sheaf is that it has an abundance of cobs.

INVESTIGATION INTO CORRUPTION OF THE CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT IN NOVA SCOTIA NEARS CONCLUSION

Counsel States That Monday Would Be the Last Sitting.

PRAISES LECOUVEE.

H. R. Grant Declares Export Houses Greatest Menace To Proper Enforcement.

HALIFAX, N.S., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— The work of the Royal Commission investigating the Customs Department is nearly concluded as far as sittings in Nova Scotia are concerned. Last evening just before adjournment, R. L. Calder, K.C., counsel, said that he expected that the Monday sitting would be the last here. He warned, however, that it might be a late sitting. At the conclusion of the Halifax sittings, it is probable that the commission wil move to Saint John, N.B. There will be no sitting here to-day.

William Duff, former member of Parliament for Lunenburg, and Deputy Speaker in the last Parliament, is called to appear before the commission on Monday. Whether he will come, and if he does come whether he will be examined, now rests with Commissioner Sir Francos Lemieux. Yesterday, L. A. Forsyth, one of the counsel, informed the commissioner that Mr. Duff said, "It would be extremely inconvenient to appear now" on account of the election campaign in which he was a candidate. Mr. Forsyth said that Mr. Duff would be very glad to appear at some later date, if possible.

"My own suggestion would be that the matter might perhaps properly be deferred until after the electon is over," Mr. Forsyth said. He suggested that others engaged in the campaign who were called might prefer to wait.

R. L. Calder, K.C., commission counsel, said that Mr. Duff had intimated that he would appear Monday. In the meatime the commissioner could decide as to whether his examination would take place. "I think it is the first time a commission has been hampered by election considerations," he remarked.

Yesterday saw the final appearance of Captain A. Lecouvee, of the "Margaret." After further examination in the morning by L. A. Forsyth, representing Hon. Jacques Bureau, the captain was discharged by Commissioner Lemieux, who complimented him on his loyalty and impartiality in giving evidence.

In the afternoon, H. R. Grant, general secretary of the Social Service Council of Nova Scotia, declared his belief thatt "the greatest menace to proper enforcement has been the export houses."

"We can submit evidence to show the type of character of some of the persons who have been authorized by the Department of Customs to conduct bonded warehouses in this province," he declared. "Men who have been convicted of violation of our Temperance Act and of the Saskatchewan Prohibition law, and men who are interested in the Distillers' Corporation, Limited, Montreal. The record of some of these is such that we might expect them to assist the smugglers and rum-runners in their nefarious traffic."

Dr. Grant said that there had been dimissals from the customs service in Nova Scotia apparently without cause, and that there should be removal of certain individuals now enjoyed. Officers should be given power to forbid the manufacture of liquor on the premises of a householder if the privilege was abused.

Earlier in the day Angus Young, Acting Chief Preventive Officer for Nova Scottia, said public opinion in Nova Scotia did not seem to be behind prohibition law. He advised material strengthening of the patrol service to catch rum-runners.

GOLDEN ROD DAYS

(By Campbell E. Forde.)

Summer is passing with a last Midas touch along the highways, across the meadows and by the edge of the woods where the golden rod reflects her departing glory. In the marshy margins of the river the water lillies smile a farewell and the heavy-headed rushes offer a stiff salute. Wild plums are ruddy in the fence corners, and the wild cherry trees so fragrantly flowered in the blossom days of Spring are burdened with their dark red fruit.

The fields are bare again, roughly carpeted with faded stubble except where here and there the plow has turned the first furrows for another planting. Bare fields, where a few weeks ago the lush green grain undulated to the gentle winds like little waves rippling across a pond!

In the cool groves and sultry swamps drowsy August dreams perhaps of endless days, of permanence, little heeding the speeding hours, but Summer sees the signs of evanescence in the ripening fruit which yesterday were buds, in the falling leaf, even in the glowing yellow of the golden rod. These things, too, shall pass away!

Summer in her wisdom has learned the inexorable law of change, and broods over the fair kingdom she is about to quit wth pensive pauses along the path through the golden rod. Wild grapes are filling with nectar and the milk-weed pods are swelling with their downy seed; the partridge hen in the hardwood bush is clucking to her chickens and all nature seems well-ordered and enduring. But the dropping of acorns sound a warning to Summer that her days are numbered and she must prepare to go, that all these appearances of permanence are but illusory.

Wordsworth said that the passing of summer teaches the lesson to him who will listen, "That life is but a tale of morning grass withered at eve."

By October all this flaming beauty of the golden rod will be but towsy tufts of faded weed.

British Columbia Plans Sugar Beet Development

VICTORIA, B.C., Aug. 28 (United Press)—Erection of a $2,000,000 sugar beet factory near New Westminster, B.C., will be undertaken if the British Columbia government grants the industry a subsidy of $50,000 a year, W. H. Watson, head of a Vancouver syndicate, announced here.

"The project calls for a factory capable of handling 1,000 tons of beets a day during the operating season. Climate and soil of British Columbia are well adapted to sugar beet culture, government agricultural tests have shown."

FRENCH REPLY TO SPAIN'S NOTE

Formal Notice Will Be Sent Next Week Upholding Present Status.

PARIS, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press) —The French reply to the Spanish memorandum asking that control of the international district of Tangier be turned over to Spain probably will be forwarded early next week. The answer will say that the internationalization of Tangier must be maintained. France, in accord with Britain, will say that the government is ready to study a way of giving Spain a more active share in the administration of the district, but that France is unable to accept any suggestion that the League of Nations has jurisdiction in the matter or that a new conference should be called of the Powers that signed the treaty of Algeciras.

FRENCH REPLY TO SPAIN'S NOTE

Formal Notice Will Be Sent Next Week Upholding Present Status.

PARIS, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press) —The French reply to the Spanish memorandum asking that control of the international district of Tangier be turned over to Spain probably will be forwarded early next week. The answer will say that the internationalization of Tangier must be maintained. France, in accord with Britain, will say that the government is ready to study a way of giving Spain a more active share in the administration of the district, but that France is unable to accept any suggestion that the League of Nations has jurisdiction in the matter or that a new conference should be called of the Powers that signed the treaty of Algeciras.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

IDEAL HUMAN RELATIONSHIPS

Acceptance of the Commandments.

Honor thy father and they mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Thou shalt not kill.

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Thou shalt not steal.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's.

And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

And they said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

And Moses said unto the people, Fear not: for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your face, that yet sin not.

And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was.

IS AMERICA FORGETTING THE LAST SIX COMMANDMENTS

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 29: Ideal Human Relationships.—Exod. 20:12-21.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

The last six of the Ten Commandments, which form the subject matter of this lesson, are classed under the title "Duties to Man." As we suggested last week, however, they imply—quite as much as the preceding commandments—duties to God, for God is honored most when men express the spirit of his love and the spirit of true worship to him in the daily relationships of life.

Here, however, in connection with these commandments we have special occasion to emphasize the place of the Commandments at the very foundation of society. Can one doubt that the disregard of these Commandments is the great secret of much of the unhappiness, discontent and wickedness in American life today? Where home has no meaning and father and mother are not honored, or possibly are not worthy of honor, how can one hope to see sound conditions outside of the homes of the nation?

On the other hand, a nation that has good homes, where father and mother are Godly, where they surround the home with the spirit of love and service, and where they are themselves honored, will be a nation exemplifying a great social and political life.

Life Cheap Today.

Is there not need today of particular emphasis upon the Sixth Commandment? Not only in a wide-spread way but in very deep ways there is an essential disregard of the sacredness of human life. The life of the individual is held very cheaply in America at the present hour.

Think also of the need of a new emphasis upon the Seventh Commandment as the foundation of good relationships between men and women and happy married life. Can one believe that the thousands of people in America who have disregarded that commandment and who have sought to find happiness in what they called "self-expression" have found any real satisfaction? Do not the sordid details of marital unhappiness and of the divorce court scandals provide a striking commentary upon the meaning of this commandment and its inherent relationship to proper relations between the sexes?

There is need today of interpreting the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," in broader and effective ways. Too long have we regarded stealing with the thought of the burglar who breaks into the home at night or the pickpocket who filches something from a fellow mortal.

Graft Is Stealing.

We have not properly questioned the real rights of property and the rights of many to the things that they call their own. How have these things been acquired? Have great fortunes been built up by graft and dishonesty? Certainly not all great fortunes have been built up in any such way.

Patience, competency, effort, wise judgment, all have had to do with much great commercial success. But, on the other hand, there have been dishonesties too often in high places, and men have pursued gain without regard to the rights of their fellows. It is in such matters as this that these Commandments find their full expression and interpretation in Christians. It is not enough merely to define conventional standards of what constitutes stealing.

All these things must be tested ultimately by the spirit of essential justice and love with Jesus enjoined as the only ultimate and true justice between man and man.

Sound Rules.

The modern world might well have a new revival also of the Ninth Commandment. The bearing of false witness against one's neighbor is one of the most tragic practices in modern life, in business, in politics, yes, unfortunately in religion, and in the very name of Christ himself there is all too much of this bearing of false witness against one's neighbor.

Can we not also approve the wisdom of the Tenth Commandment? Covetousness corrupts and destroys spiritual life and happiness.

If a man wants sound rules by which to guide his life, if society desires true foundations and sound principles, where can either individual or society turn more hopefully than to the Ten Commandments interpreted above all in the light of Christ's teaching and obeyed with the power that Christ supplies?

LIBERAL WOMEN OF HASTINGS ORGANIZE FOR THE CAMPAIGN

Preliminary Meeting Attended By Fifty—Mrs. Needham Present.

SUPPORT FRASER.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Aug. 28.—A meeting of the Liberal women of the village was held here yesterday afternoon with an attendance of about fifty, and with preliminary organization steps toward the final polling on election day. Mrs. Needham of Toronto was present and was introduced by Mr. J. J. Collins, who then retired. Mrs. B. F. Doxsee was elected to the chair and Mrs. W. R. Leamouth was appointed secretary. Other executives were chosen for subdivision duties and plans were laid for the assumption of a large share of the work and responsibility devolving with the franchise.

Mrs. Needham's address dealt with the practical side of politics and included a general review of the issues in the present campaign. She emphasied the opportunity of women to make use of the ballot for the attainment of their ideals, and stressed the need of an efficient organization. Her appeal was in behalf of the Liberal cause and of the local candidate, W. A. Fraser.

Several campaign meetings are mentioned for Hastings in the local political gossip, but the dates were not assured yesterday. Hon. Vincent Massey and Hon. G. N. Gordon may speak here for Mr. Fraser, but the Conservatives have not their schedule of meetings ready for announcement.

Social Receipts

It was reported that the net receipts for the social held by the Catholic people of Warkworth were $684, but the final returns are not complete as the drawing for prizes will not take place until next week.

CHAPTER I.

"The greatest lover in the world" they called him, the men enviously, the women admiringly. To him it did not matter. You might watch him at a banquet table, paying as little attention to the women in their crimson and green and yellow brocades as he did to the pomegranates heaped before him in a bowl of turquoise glass from Syria. Their bare shoulders apparently meant less to him than did those of the monkey perched on his shoulder.

They wondered, all of them, why he was so indifferent, and whether it was true that he was cruel to women, that he had no faith in them, and never gave his heart in return for the ones bestowed so recklessly on him. Women had died for him, it was said, and he had smiled that mocking smile of his, and taken another in his arms.

They could not know, these exquisite women who sued for his favor, of what had taken place when the handsome, cynical man was a child of four, nor could they know that whenever a woman lifted eyes heavy with love to his, the memory of events long dead rose before him, making her less allurring than the ugly dwarf that stood at his shoulder at many a banquet.

Juan could remember as vividly as if it had been yesterday how he had sat in a round stone room, before a huge fireplace, playing with a little Italian greyhound. There was no light in the room but that of the leaping fire and a few tall candles in their iron holders, and that of the moonlight which streamed in through the narrow windows—white moonlight, white as a skull. Juan had not minded. He could see all he wanted to, his father a tall, stern man, and his mother, whom he worshipped. She was worthy of worship, for hers was a marvellous beauty. He had looked up from the hearth at her, as she stood with his father, with the white moonlight streaming over her face, and over the purple glory of her gown.

Not until long afterward did Juan know what the man and woman were saying to each other, that the man was saying farewell, because his king had summoned him, but that in less than two weeks he would return and again stand in this stone room, high in the old tower of the castle, and take his beautiful wife in his arms. He did not know till later, either, of the suspicion that made his father look so earnestly at his mother, searching her face so keenly with his eyes as if he could see into her mind and learn whether the rumor that she had a lover was true.

Don Jose de Marana went away at last, after embracing his small son and turning to kiss his wife one last time. He had closed the door behind him, and gone down the circular stairway that led to the courtyard below. And the beautiful woman and the handsome child had gone out onto a balcony, the woman's hand on the boy's shoulder, and stood there watching Don Jose cross the courtyard to where an ugly little hunchback held his horse.

Juan could remember clearly the way the moonlight had danced over his father's armor, and the gay cloths and decorated harnesses of his father's horse and those of his retainers. He had not caught the look that passed between his father and the hunchback, but he had seen Don Jose turn in the saddle and look up toward the balcony for a long moment. The little boy had loved that scene, all the vivid color that glowed in the moonlight, against the dark walls of the courtyard. He had waved to his father, but somehow, young though he was, he had known that his father hardly saw him.

His mother waved, too, and Don Jose bent his head in acknowledgment. The hunchback moved away. The cavalcade moved away, the men holding their prancing horses in line behind their master. There was a clang of the great iron gates as the last one passed through. And little Juan, sent back to the room in the tower by his mother, had heard it, and had known that his father was gone. Once more he and his mother would be alone except for the servants, as they so often were left alone.

Juan hoped that his mother would come back to him, in the room where the firelight danced over the delicately woven old tapestries. But she did not come. He could imagine now how she had stood there on the balcony, waiting, waiting, until she heard a signal from the shadows below, and bent forward to call softly in reply.

He could imagine what had happened then; how the gay, gallant young Leandro had climbed the tower wall, easily, grasping the cornices at its edges, quickly reaching the balcony and following Beatriz De Marana into the room.

He had looked up to them, the little boy, hoping that the man would sit down and play with him on the hearth, as he sometimes did. He sat there, holding in his hand a little figurine that the man had given him, a tiny statue of a man in armor. But Leandro was holding Beatriz tight in his arms, holding her as Don Jose had held her only a few moments before. Only now she seemed not to be the same woman. Her arms were around Leandro's neck, she lifted her face to his, instead of drawing back, as she had with Don Jose.

After a moment she left him, gently freeing herself from his arms, to slip between the gorgeously embroidered curtains that hung in the door between this outer room and her bedroom. It was then that Leandro remembered little Juan, and knelt beside the boy, to give him another little figurine, that of a beautiful woman. He set it on the floor, and as he did so knocked over the figure of the little man in armor. But neither he nor Juan noticed it; they were too intent on the figrue of the woman.

Juan could imagine what was taking place behind the curtains, now; he could see how the beautiful Beatriz must have unfastened her brocaded gown, impatiently, and tossed it aside, and caught up a crystal jar of musk-scented perfume, unsatisfied even with the great beauty which she was offering her lover, and tried to enhance it by scenting her hair and throat and softly rounded shoulders with the perfume. How beautiful she must have been, there in the candlelight, in her clinging undergarments.

She had come out into the other room, and Leandro had leaped to his feet and gone to her. His arms around her, they had moved slowly toward the bedroom.

Don Jose had told his son what was happening below, long afterward, when the boy could understand. He had described his own suspicions, and the way he had stopped, suddenly, on the moonlit road, and sent his men on without him. He had come back then, and questioned the hunchback, whom he hated for the news the man had given him, and gone slowly, reluctantly, up the circular staircase that led to the tower room.

It was an old tower, older even than the castle itself, and the stone of the staircase was crumbling. Under Don Jose's feet it had flaked off, despite his care, and bits of stone had fallen down a step or two. So that Beatriz, pausing in the doorway of the bedroom with her lover, heard them, and terrified, knew what had happened.

Leandro heard too, and would have rushed into the bedroom, but Beatriz prevented him, and ran to the balcony, hoping that the way to the courtyard was clear. But there below her, in the moonlight, stood the hunchback, looking up at the balcony.

SPAIN'S INVITATION

til they have reached agreement on a common attitude to be observed. Exchange of views is now actively proceeding between London and Paris on the subject.

Italy's announcement that she will support the Spanish claim complicates the situation. Although Britain and France are averse to the inclusion of Tangier in the Spanish protectorate in North Africa, they would like to arrange a compromise but refuse to admit a proposal to bring the question before the League of Nations.

Spain has been advised to make no attempt to use Tangier as a bargain counter for a permanent seat on the League Council, opinion here being that there is no relation between the two matters. Tangier can only be settled, it is argued, on the basis of the principles underlying the Franco-Spanish Treaty and the International Convention of 1923.

No solution is being discussed yet, and diplomats are frankly perplexed by the situation. On the other hand, despite a lot of moves behind the scenes, it is believed the question of permanent Council seats will be settled satisfactorily to all parties concerned.

Germany will be admitted to a permanent seat on the Council without opposition, it is hoped, while Spain and Poland will content themselves with semi-permanent seats under the Cecil plan. The latter scheme may be modified, however, to guarantee re-election to these semi-permanent seats when the first term expires.

Polish Foreign Minister Zaleski arrived here yesterday and conferred with Foreign Minister Briand. He is believed to have shown a spirit of conciliation.

NURSES CONVENTION CLOSES AT OTTAWA

Canadian Nurses' Association Elect Year's Officers at Final Meeting.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—"One of the most successful and profitable meetings in the history of the Canadian Nurses' Association," was the concensus of opinion of a group of prominent nurses yesterday evening, when the 13th general meeting of the Canadian Nurses' Association, held here this week, was brought to a close.

As was announced earlier in the week, Miss F. M. Shaw of Montreal, has been unanimously chosen as the President of this organization, succeeding Miss Jean Browne of Toronto. Others elected to office yesterday include: First Vice-President Miss F. M. Gray of Vancouver, B.C., who is connected with the University of British Columbia; Second Vice-President, Miss M. F. Hersey of Montreal, Superintendent of Nurses at the Royal Victoria Hospital; Secreary, Miss N. S. Buck of Sherbrooke, Superintendent of Nurses at the Sherbrooke Hospital; Treasurer, Miss Ruby Simpson of Regina, Sask., connected with the Department of Public Health, Saskatchewan.

Two changes in earlier elections in the Nursing Education Section have been made. Miss B. Guernsey, of the Royal Alexandra Hospital of Edmonton, is now chairman, with Miss Jean Gunn of Toronto as Vice-Chairman. The other officers in this section as elected at an earlier session, remain the same.

Most of the delegates, although here for the entire week, remained over yesterday afternoon for the motor drive and garden party at the Experimental farm. These entertainments having been arranged by the members of the Medico-Chirurgical Society of Ottawa.

IDENTIFY SOLDIER.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—A postal card dated March 20, 1917, has just cleared up the mystery of a hitherto unidentified soldier who was killed in June of last year. The soldier's parents remembered sending him the postal which was found on him while the bodies of the fallen were being placed in authorized British cemeteries.

OPPOSITION TO DEBT FUNDING

Recent Attacks Decide U. S. Senate To Await French Action.

MAY NOT RATIFY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 28 (By John Snure, Canadian Press Correspondent) — Whether the French debt settlement is ratified will depend largely on the action of France. Should the French Government ratify the settlement, the Senate of the United States, after a struggle, is likely to ratify it also.

But there will be no move in Washington toward ratification until the French Government has acted on the settlement favorably.

The House last spring, under pressure from the President and Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, passed a resolution of ratification. The Senate, however, did not act. Many House leaders felt it was a mistake for the House to take action in advance of action by the French. They predicted at the time that it would be interpreted in French, or by elements in France, as meaning the United States was eager for the settlement to go through and as meaning the settlement was to the advantage of the United States. This is exactly what has come about, despite the fact even those who are supporting the settlement here are doing it not on the theory it is a just settlement to United States taxpayers but on the theory it is better to make some adjusment and try to remove controversy.

In view of the Clemenceau attack and other developments abroad, both in France and elsewhere, the opposition to the French settlement has increased. Nevertheless, it is probable that if France ratifies the settlement, a majority of the Senate, under pressure from the White House, will vote for it.

If the French Governments rejects the settlement, then it is probable a move will be begun in the House to rescind its action. The effect of this would be to leave a settlement to the indefinite future. It would probably mean that no serious attempt would bemade in this administration to effect a settlement unless on the initiative of France. Meantime, there is no doubt the administration would frown on loans of private funds to that country.

THE LAST CHANCE.

The last opportunity for citizens whose names have been omitted from the voters' lists to have the mistake corrected will be afforded at tonight's sitting and on Monday.

The political organizations have located large numbers of people whose names have been left off and have had these registered, but in spite of their efforts, there must still remain a substantial percentage of citizens who are eligible to vote but are not listed.

Those who know that their names do not appear and have not as yet taken the trouble to be registered, are warned that after Monday it will be impossible to make any additions to the list.

It should be the duty of everyone to see that he is in a position to use his ballot on September 14.

This is an important election, and it would be in the public interest to have the total vote polled as large as possible.

Remember, after Monday it is too late to have your name put on the list.

THE MARKET REPORT.

The report presented a few days ago to the Ontario Department of Labour that there is not a combine handling fruit and vegetables in this Province, is satisfactory so far as it goes.

Every citizen of Ontario is more or less concerned in the sale of these products.

The difficulty always has been that the spread between the price paid by the consumer and the revenue obtained by the producer has been too large.

That is one feature of the situation that has always caused discussion, and another is touched on in the report when reference is made to the fact that in the rush season large quantities of produce are destroyed because the facilities of the Toronto fruit market prevent the trade being handled.

It has always been a mystery to many people why, when such a glut occurred, steps were not taken to sell such goods rather than have them destroyed.

Eagerness to protect prices has on most occasions prevented the consuming public from obtaining any advantage from the conditions mentioned in the report.

The most important recommendation made by the investigator suggests the building up of a better system for placing the goods of the producer before the consumer, and along that line there is work for the Ontario Department of Agriculture to do.

COMPULSORY VOTING.

The queerest feature in regard to the indifference of many citizens as to their duty in regard to elections, Federal, Provincial and municipal, is that if an attempt were made to disinfranchise such people there would be the most violent protests.

Yet a large percentage of them, of their own accord, treat their franchise as not of the slightest worth.

Political organizations have to make sure that their names are on the list, employing a staff of workers for weeks to this end, get them registered if they are not, tell them where they vote, and in numerous cases provide transportation to the polls.

And with all that machinery at work and in spite of campaign meetings, advertising and personal canvass, it is a rare riding that can show a total vote of 75 per cent. polled.

Weeks of labour are required to even make that showing, and it is no wonder that there are many citizens who believe that the Australian system of fining voters who do not exercise their franchise might profitably be adopted in this country.

THE EXPENSIVE MARGARET.

Evidence offered before Commissioner Lemieux as to the activities of the customs steamer Margaret throws considerable light upon one reason why the cost of government in this country is unnecessarily high.

This craft, fitted out with bedrooms and bathrooms for the convenience of guests, costs between $130,000 and $175,000 a year to operate, and her success against rum-runners can be judged by the fact that the only achievement to her credit is the seizure of $8,000 worth of liquor.

Apparently she has been used by both Conservative and Liberal Governments as a convenience, rather than as a menace to whiskey smugglers.

Evidence shows that she carried Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and party during the 1921 elections, and was frequently used by Hon. Jacques Bureau on voyages that did not seem to suggest very important public business.

In brief, the country has been paying out $130,000 to $175,000 per year for the maintenance of a boat that has done practically nothing to check the operations of rum-runners.

An $8,000 seizure does not balance up very evenly with the overhead involved in the keeping up of the expensive Margaret, handy as she may have been to various Governments when their Ministers had occasion to put to sea.

The Margaret should be scrapped if professions of our political leaders as to the need of economy are to be trusted.

COLLECTING THE INCOME TAX.

According to returns received by the city of Chatham from a questionnaire sent to fifteen other cities in the Province, opinion is divided on the merits of the municipal income tax. Six places—Ford, Windsor, Ottawa, Stratford, Niagara Falls and Brantford—did not send replies, which makes the investigation the more unsatisfactory. To be complete, it should have included towns and rural municipalities, for the income tax law in its application is no respecter of [illegible]. Perhaps however this is merely an initial inquiry. Chatham is to be commended for taking the question up even in incomplete form, and it may be hoped that its efforts will not cease until it has secured a general opinion and gained united action toward enforcing the law evenly throughout the Province or securing its abolition.

Although the Border Cities did not respond, press reports have interpreted the views of the authorities there as opposed to the law. Obviously, without an income tax the overflow of population from Detroit would multiply. Perhaps Niagara Falls feels the same way about it, although it is plain, as some of the replies stated, that if revenue were not obtained from this source it would have to be raised on real estate or in some other way. Toronto gets 3 per cent. of its revenue from incomes, and is doing it so successfully that it wants no change, no matter what suburban municipalities may wish. Eight other places heard from expressed no desire for immediate abolition of the tax, but some of them were open to conviction.

Hamilton has a committee studying the question with a view to learning whether an amendment to the law is desirable. Woodstock is not satisfied with the law and has had difficulty in enforcing it, yet would not make a change unless a satisfactory substitute were found. St. Catharines expressed a desire to have the whole question made a subject of study, although it is enforcing the law satisfactorily. Guelph does not find it perfect, but would keep it. Hamilton, London, Toronto and St. Catharines have bylaws to aid the collection of the tax, but no such measures have been adopted in Peterboro, Woodstock, Kingston, Guelph or Belleville.

A suggestion from London worthy of consideration is that a uniform rate be adopted, as in the case of the Federal tax. At present the tax depends upon the general rate in the municipality, and this means little without taking the assessed valuation into consideration. A forty-cent rate in one municipality may be actually lower than a thirty-cent rate in the neighboring town as applied to real estate, but as applied to income the ten-cent disadvantage exists. The income tax is thus, as a general rule, heavier on the resident of the small town than in the large city. While the income tax is assessed at the rate of thirty mills in Toronto, there are many places where it is forty mills or more.

Chatham has made a start, and should continue its investigation.—Toronto Globe.

THE FOREST AS A SOURCE OF MOISTURE.

There is food for thought in the statement of a forestry specialist at the Congress of Plant Sciences meeting at Ithaca, N. Y., that recent observations indicate that only about two-ninths of the moisture which falls as rain (or snow) is derived from the sea and other surfaces, and that the balance comes from land surfaces. In other words, land surfaces are more important than water surfaces in the proportion of seven to two.

This raises at once a large question. It is generally conceded that forest areas are the most important regulators of moisture. As the forests have vanished before commercial exploitation, fire and the ravages of insects and disease, the distribution of rainfall and snow has become more and more irregular. This condition has been often remarked upon by old pioneers in Canada and statistics have supported their view. In the areas covered formerly by forest the Canadian climate was more dependable. Rainfall was regular in summer; dry seasons were almost unknown. So, too, extremes of heat and cold were less.

Now, all these factors are of prime importance to agriculture. There has been frequent emphasis laid on the loss of wealth in the form of timber through destruction of the forests. May it not be that we are losing important—possibly greater—wealth through the effect on agricultural production of climatic changes wrought by the disappearance of our forests?

Today our forests are being laid waste by fire alone at the rate of three million acres a year. Insects and disease are taking further toll. Over a great part of this forest area the land is unfit for agriculture of any sort. Where once grew valuable timber, there springs up a scrubby growth of valueless wood. The thin layer of soil over rock, which held the roots of tall trees whose shade retained the moisture necessary through the summer for their growth, becomes dry in summer and loses annually in fertility. A land rich in resources of timber and moisture becomes semi-desert.

In every way the destruction of forests spells loss in industrial life. And from the facts referred to as to importance in moisture regulation and influences on climate, the loss from forest waste appears to spread much farther. Some day we may awake to the seriousness of this situation and take measures to remedy it, but we must not wait too long before awakening.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was quiet. The trade in car lots of grain with local and country buyers showed an improvement and the market was rather more active with no change in prices to note.

On account of the continued weakness in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation, a weaker feeling prevailed in the local market for spring wheat grades of flour, and prices were reduced 10 cents per barrel. The local and export trade was fair.

Prices for winter wheat grades of flour ruled steady with a moderate amount of business passing.

A good trade was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone to the market was firm. The domestic demand for standard grades of rolled oats was small but prices were unchanged.

The egg market was active and firm. The receipts were 1,175 cases.

The enquiry for butter was limiter and prices were inclined to be easier. The receipts were 5,982 packages.

The tone of the cheese market was easier and the volume of business transacted was small. The receipts were 10,874 boxes.

The volume of business done in beans was moderate and prices were unchanged. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were offered at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Aug 28 (Canadian Press).— Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.83 7-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—All grain values displayed a sinking tendency yesterday. Favorable harvest weather in the spring wheat region and ideal growth conditions everywhere for the corn crop, were largely responsible. Wheat closed unsettled 1 1-2 to 1 3-4 cents net lower, corn 3-8c to 1 cent down; oats 5-8c to 7-8c off, and provisions unchanged to 30 cents higher.

About the only support for the wheat market most of the time came from buying to collect a profit on previous sales. However, some demand from mills, exporters and foreigners helped to bring about something of a rally at the last. Aggressive selling was partly induced by the fact that Chicago quotations were relatively higher than any other markets. Besides, export call for North American wheat appeared to be slow, and there were advices current that liberal shipments out of Russia 976,000 bushels, were heading for Great Britain.

With Canadian wheat offered cheaper than United States wheat, and with larger yields of wheat in Canada than had been looked for, buyers here lacked any immediate incentive. Word of improved threshing returns in various parts of domestic Spring wheat territory also counted as a weight on the market. France, though, was reported to have purchased some new Canadian wheat for October-November shipment. On the other hand, some selling of wheat to go into store here was noted.

Further posting of corn here as out of condition contributed to the weakness of corn and oats. All deliveries of oats touched a new low price record for the season.

Provisions were responsive to a sharp upturn in hog values.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—For the past week receipts at the Union Stock Yards numbered 6,100 cattle, 1,284 calves, 3,490 hogs, and 3,126 sheep and lambs, as against receipts of 5,715 cattle, 1,358 calves, 3,800 hogs and 3,835 sheep for the preceding week.

Exporters bought 835 finished and store steers, with one car of bulls and one of heifers.

Finished steers brought from $7.50 to $8.15, store steers $7.25 to $7.50, heifers $7.25 to $7.40; bulls $4.75 to $5.25.

During the week choice butcher steers and heifers ranged in price from $7 to $7.50 and $6 to $6.50. Plain cattle moved slowly, being down about 25c.

Choice butcher cows remained fairly steady in price, with plain stock lower for the week.

Bulls were in good demand, at steady prices.

The baby beef trade was inclined to be slow, with ample receipts. As the abattoirs purchased a number of these last week, the demand during the last few days has been rather light, tops bringing 10 1-2 cents, with the bulk of offerings around 9c.

Exporters report requirements of about 900 finished and store steers for next week.

Springers and milkers—The demand has been good for choice springers at $85 to $100, with an odd choice cow higher. For good quality, price $65 to $80. Choice milkers, $75 to $85, good $60 to $65, medium to common, slow, $45 to $55.

Stockers and feeders: With the supply not too large, the demand was good with prices holding up well for good stock. Choice 900 to 1,000 lb. steers sold at 6 1-4c to 6 3-4c; 800 to 850 lbs. at 6c to 6 1-2; 700 to 750 lbs., 5 1-2c to 6c; yearling steers, 5c to 5 3-4c; stocker heifers, 600 to 700 lbs., 5c to 5 1-4c; yearling heifers, 50 to 600 lbs 5c to 5 1-4c medium common stock from 25c to 75c per 700 lbs. lower than good stock.

In the early part of the week choice lambs sold at 13 1-2c, a few fancys bringing 14c. With receipts of around 1,400 for Wednesday's market the price declined to 13c, a few fancys bringing 13 1-4c; medium 12c to 12 1-2c, buck lambs 11c, culls 10c.

Yearling sheep sold from 10c to 11c. Choice butcher sheep 7c to 8c, medium sheep 5c to 6c, heavy sheep and bucks 4c to 5c.

Calves. Choice veal calves remained steady in price this week at 12 1-2c to 13c, with a few fancys higher. Good quality sold from 11c to 12c, with medium to common stock at from 5c to 10c.

Hogs were slightly lower in price this week selling at $11.75 f.o.b., $12.35 fed, $12.75 of cars.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"HALF MAST" OR "HALF STAFF"

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

On the morning of Memorial Day, May 30, and on occasions of mourning for the dead, the American flag is raised to half its usual height. Some persons say that the flag is displayed at "half mast," others say that it is flown at "half staff." Which is correct?

If we accept the wording of the regulations of the United States Army covering the point, we must say "half staff," not "half mast." The dictionaries, however, give "half mast," and one of them cites "half staff" only as a "variant" of "half mast." So it would seem that either expression is correct.

It has been suggested, with considerable ingenuity, that the expression "half staff," as prescribed by the Army regulations, is correct on shore, where the flag is flown from a staff, but that on shipboard, where the flag is flown from a mast, it is better to say "half mast."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A COTTAGE

A cottage is a splendid spot
To go in summer when it's hot;
It's fine to go a little while
Out in the woods at least a mile,
And cook with kerosene or wood,
And have a bed that's none too good,
And have a lamp that's none too light,
And nothing just exactly right.

It isn't just the birds and trees
And lakes and streams and things like these
That cheer the heart, refresh the soul:
It's coming back to gas and coal,
Electric lights, a spotless tub,
The church, the movie and the club:
A cottage, when you homeward come,
Is something fine to get home from.

A cottage is a splendid plan
To rather re-adjust a man,
To make a woman see how blest
She was with things she once possessed.
For arm-in-arm we go around,
And, oh, the treasures we have found
We always had and hardly knew—
The joys we have to come back to!

SCAPEGRACE HEROES

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

It has long been an axiom that a scapegrace and a hero are often separated only by the presence of the opportunity.

Two heroic actions, recently featured in the daily news, give added evidence of its truth.

In Los Angeles, a "sleep stealer"—a roustabout who was stealing a night's sleep in a chair in the hallway of a rooming house—awoke choking with smoke.

The building was in a blaze and the lodgers had fled. As he was groping his way down the hall he heard a baby cry.

Feeling his way back through the smoke he broke down a door and rescued a family of four who had been overcome by smoke.

Then he disappeared, before the police could question him.

A Japanese vessel, carrying a deserter shackled in chains, was wrecked in Gray's Harbor in Washington.

When hope of saving the ship was given up and all hands were taking to the life boats the deserter was freed. As he was about to leap overboard he saw the captain thrown against the bridge compass by a lurch of the vessel. At the risk of his own life he returned, placed a life preserver about the officer's unconscious form and dropping him overboard swam beside him until they were picked up by a coast guard cutter.

In the World War the first Victoria Cross awarded for bravery was given to a newsboy from Edinburgh who had been arrested a score of times for breaking the law forbidding private citizens to scale the walls of the castle.

LEAGUE TAKING NO ACTIVE PART IN NEGOTIATIONS

Adopts "Hands Off" Policy With Regard To World Court.

U. S. RESERVATIONS.

First Item of Business To Be Effort To Meet United States.

GENEVA, Switzerland, August 28 (Canadian Press).—The League of Nations is adopting a "hands-off policy" in connection with the special conference of the powers which is to meet on September 1, to decide the fate of the reservations of the United States to the permanent court of international justice.

This policy will be demonstrated by the fact that the conference will take place in the International Labor Office building instead of the League of Nations palace, and by the announced intention of the League to refrain from interfering in any way with the conference proceedings.

The conference will be confined to the signatories of the World Court Convention as such, and not as members of the League. Only in the event that the delegates request to the League to send interpreters or other members of the personnel will the League organization function. Efforts are being made to have the sessions open to the public.

It is considered likely that the first step of the conference will be to turn the American reservations over to a committee for examination and report. Some of the delegates who are already here have announced that they will urge an earnest effort to have the reservations declared acceptable so as to bring the United States into the court as a member.

U. S. Files Treaties.

Living up to its announced intention of filing with the League of Nations for inclusion with the treaty series though not for official registration under the covenant, all treaties negotiated, the United States Government yesterday communicated seven conventions.

Three of these treaties are with Cuba, suppressing general smuggling between Cuba and the United States, suppressing the smuggling of liquors and spirits, and a new extradition pact. The other conventions are with Mexico, Latvia, Lithuania and tthe Dominican Republic concerning extradition and commercial matters. That with the Dominican Republic provides for assistance by the United States in the application of Customs revenues there.

Venezuela has registered a treaty of extradition with the United States.

Eminent English Jurist Plans Ocean To Ocean Trip.

MONTREAL, August 28. Canadian Press. — A tour of Canada, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, has been arranged by the Right Honorable Lord Darling, the eminent English jurist, who has planned to see as much as possible of the Dominion during his stay in this country.

On disembarking at Quebec on Sunday afternoon, Lord Darling will embark on the Maritime express proceeding eastward, and will arrive at St. John on Monday afternoon.

Following the sessions of the Canadian Bar Association there, Lord Darling will leave September 7 for Halifax. He will reach Montreal September 7, and will leave for the west the following day.

HE HITCHES HIS WAGON TO ZEBRAS

MT. VERNON, Ind., Aug. 28.—An animal that is as strong as a mule, possessing as great intelligence and with the ability to withstand terrific heat, has been produced on the farm of Dr. W. E. Hastings here.

It is a cross between a zebras and a percheron and has been christened "zebroid." Authorities believe that the cross-breeding eventually will prove a great benefit to the farmer. The Department of Agriculture once tried the experiment, but failed.

White Arabian mares and common farm mares were crossed with a zebra stallion brought from Germany by Dr. Hastings, but he found that the Percherons produced the zebroids with the best stripes.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 28 Jackson Barnett, world's richest Indian, has been "hankering" to come back to Oklahoma for three years, but his white wife made him stay in Los Angeles in their $100,000 home, he said yesterday.

Barnett was brought back here to face the Federal grand jury and is under charges of contempt of court for failure to appear before the grand jury in July.

"I was glad to see the officers that came to arrest me and bring me here," said Barnett.

Mrs. Barnett arrived in town yesterday. She denied that she had forced the aged Indian to remain in California.

"If he says that, someone has put him up to it. He can do whatever he wants," she declared.

Jackson was in a hurry to get out to his farm.

"I just soon not have money," he declared. "I like horse, pigs, hogs. I stay here and run my farm. Woman, she can go 'way. She got lot of money now."

REFUSE SUPPORT TO GOVERNMENT TEACHERS FIRED

Wholesale Dismissal of the Instructors in Mexican Public Schools.

IGNORE CIRCULARS.

Catholic Church Determined To Fight Religious Laws To Finish.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Three hundred teachers in the public schools of Guadalajara have been dismissed by the school authorities there, because they refused to reply to the government's circular requesting them to define their attitude on the government's religious policy, according to despatches received here.

Other advices received from Guadalajara say that the police arrested a group of young Catholic women picketing moving picture theatres and stores and asking persons who were about to enter them to refrain and thus strengthen the economic boycott.

The women's leaders protested to the governor of the state, Silviano Barbe Gonzales, who replied that efforts to injure private business were improper and that he intended to punish such activities in the state of Jalisco.

Will Not Yield

Until Mexico's religious laws are amended or repealed, whether it requires months or years, to attain this objective, there will be no resumption of Catholic church services in the republic. This announcement is made by the Catholic Episcopate in a statement to the faithful; in which the belief is expressed that the Mexican government is attempting to create a schism within their ranks.

"But with God's aid," the statement said, "Catholics will not yield to such threats."

It points out that Catholics in Germany "long endured Bismarck's tyrannical laws, but finally recovered their liberty, while the iron chancellor saw his efforts discredited and died abandoned in his castle."

It is now planned by the episcopate to present to congress petitions, signed by a large number of Catholics throughout the republic, for an amendment of the religious clauses of the constitution.

The business depression due to the economic boycott continues.

Queen Of Spain Clings To Hand Kissing Custom

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(United Press).—The Queen of Spain, who is English, has asked all her friends—during her recent visit to England—scrupulously to observe the Spanish custom and to kiss her hand when they greet her and when they take their leave.

Her Spanish husband, on the other hand, has adopted English customs in England. He shakes hands with everybody, high and low, and has even been seen heartily slapping on the back some of his old polo comrades up from the Riviera.

BISHOP LAUDED FOR HIS SPEECH ON MIGRATION

Daily Express Censures Criticism of His Toronto Address.

ENGLISH SETTLERS.

Believes By Telling Blunt Truth He Performed Valuable Service.

LONDON, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Daily Express disapproves of The Westminster Gazette's criticism of the Bishop of London's speech in Toronto on the subject of migration, in which his lordship expressed the desire to see British immigrants settling in Canada instead of Galicians, Poles "and God knows whom else who are populating Canada, and who do not know a word of English," and therefore could not be expected to have the same loyalty to British ideals. The Gazette expressed a hope that the bishop would explain his "lapse into imperialism" in his speech, but The Express says none of the remarks made by Bishop Winnington-Ingram require any explanation or apology.

"On the contrary," The Express says, "by telling the blunt truth at a very apposite moment, the bishop of London performed a valuable service to Canada and the Empire. On the eve of the imperial conference it is altogether admirable that one so completely above suspicion of political bias as Bishop Winnington-Ingram should lend his great authority to the task of awakening interest in the increasing serious problem of population within the Empire.

Paramount Importance

"Other subjects are dwarfed by the paramount importance of arriving at a common policy to bring about the transference of population from this island, to the great dominions, where there are too few."

Baby Alligator Mailed Eats Consignee's Name

IN THE INTEREST OF THE PARTY

Liberal speakers are thundering from every platform about what they are pleased to call the constitutional issue.

They are all terribly worried over the constitutional status of Canada.

But they will not succeed in convincing the electors that this loud outcry is not designed to mask the customs scandal.

It is the moral status of Canada and not the constitutional status that is the issue of this campaign.

If the people of this country condone at the poles the corruption and inefficiency of the King Government's administration of its chief revenue—producing department—they will be saying good-bye to the chances of honest government.

There is no constitutional issue.

What the Liberals are determined to call one is the result of Mr. King's efforts to dodge the censure of Parliament upon his administration of the Customs Department.

Mr. King tried to escape the condemnation of the House and failed—that is the "constitutional issue" in a nutshell.

Now he is trying to escape the condemnation of the people by raising a smoke screen—and again he'll fail.

The customs revelations cannot be hidden by talk about the constitution.

WHAT THE GLOBE SAYS

Only this week that bulwark of real Liberalism, the Toronto Globe, declared editorially:

"THE CUSTOMS SCANDAL ISSUE IS CLEAR-CUT. IT OPENS UP ONE OF THE SOREST SPOTS IN CANADIAN POLITICAL HISTORY, pointing plainly to the need of house-cleaning. The evidence presented at this investigation is bad enough. It required no garnishing by the imagination."

This it will be noticed is the studied opinion of the best known Liberal paper in Canada; not an extract from a campaign speech.

There is no hearsay about the customs scandal.

The facts were investigated by a committee which consisted of four Liberals, a Progressive and four Conservatives, with a Liberal member as Chairman and a Liberal candidate in the last election as

The evidence speaks for itself.

It shows conditions existed under Mr. King's regime that were a disgrace to this country.

IN THE INTEREST OF THE PARTY

And the most damning feature of it all perhaps was the connection between the notorious Bisaillon described by Inspector Walter Duncan as a bootlegger, perjurer, confederate of smugglers and a thief, and the King Government.

Bisaillon, put in charge of the Customs Preventive Service in Montreal by Hon. Jacques Bureau, got rid of the mounted police along the border, but even then there were Liberal politicians who evidently thought that smugglers should be dealt with more leniently. One of these politicians was Mr. W. M. Baldwin, Liberal member for Stanstead. Baldwin, who on one occasion put up his cheque for $25.00 to save Jenkins King of the Rock Island smugglers, wrote to Jacques Bureau, then Minister of Customs:

"You may remember that I spoke to you about removing the specials along the border in my county. . . . Trusting that you will grant my request, I am, with kindest regards." (Page 2741).

Bureau immediately wrote to his friend Bisaillon as follows:

"I am told that, since several months already, you have people working on the frontier at Rock Island. Would it not be possible to recall them? . . ."

Mr. Bisaillon at once wrote back:

"I also believe that IN THE INTEREST OF THE PARTY, it would be preferable to discontinue to watch the frontier."

The "interest of the party" prevailed. Bisaillon was instructed to see Hon. P. J. A. Cardin. The two gentlemen, statesman and thief-perjurer-bootlegger, met at the Windsor Hotel—and the party was looked after. The records submitted to the Customs Committee showed that the specials were all withdrawn. Bisaillon reported to Ottawa that one Jensen, the last man on the job protecting the public revenue in Mr. Baldwin's county, HAD BEEN TAKEN OFF UNTIL OCTOBER 29TH—THE DATE OF THE ELECTION.

THE PUBLIC WELFARE SACRIFICED

And so "in the interest of the party" it was thought desirable to discontinue to protect the public treasury.

"In the interest of the party" it was thought desirable to let a gang of crooks and thieves loot public property.

"In the interest of the party" it was thought necessary to encourage smuggling and fraud.

"In the interest of the party" it was thought desirable to make things easy for law-breakers.

A CHANCE FOR MR. MARSHALL

Just now Hon. Duncan Marshall, Liberal Organizer, is in the riding. "In the interest of the party." Mr. Marshall's stock-in-trade is his ability to talk. He talked himself into a job and is still talking to keep himself in one. But it is not likely he'll do much talking before his West Peterborough audiences about the customs scandal. If he does, however, happen to get round to that subject, the voters would be interested in hearing about Mr. Bisaillon's great anxiety that the interest of the Liberal party should not suffer by too vigilant a patrol of the border. And also, about how, while "the interest of the party" was being looked after, the crooks helped themselves to such an extent that the report of Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, solicitors to the Customs Committee, showed that more than $1,000,000.00 worth of goods had been smuggled into Canada at this point, including 130 tons of prison-made, disease-infected garments.

But it cannot be evaded; the people know the facts, and are not going to condone such corruption by their votes.

That is why in West Peterborough they are going to vote for Presenting the New "Modernized" Line of

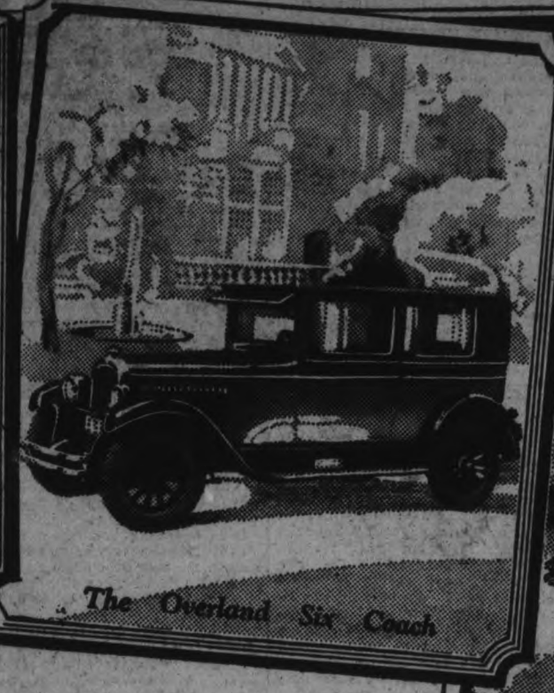
WILLYS-OVERLAND

FINE MOTOR CARS



New Features, New Advantages, New Values

THE European school of engineering thought is revolutionizing the building of automobiles on this continent to day.

For years in Europe, the trend has been toward the "high-speed" engine with small bore and long stroke. An engine capable of great power development and treméndous speed.

The pace has been set for an entirely new type of passenger car.

The direct result of the "high-speed" engine in Europe has been lighter weight with greater relative chassis strength . . . greater speed.

It has made possible cars hugging closer to the ground, with lower clearance . . . smaller wheels . . . lower height . . . less wind resistance. It has lead to the super-development of four-wheel brakes, quicker stopping, greater safety, speedier acceleration, greater economy and more efficient all round performance.

A Momentous Engineering Achievement

Through a far sighted association with British manufacturing interests established after the war, Willys-Overland engineers have been in a peculiarly strategic position to study at first hand the small bore, long stroke, "high-speed" engine development in Europe.

It was logical, therefore, that Willys-Overland should be the first to present a complete line of automobiles powered with "high-speed" super-efficient motors and engineered along modern European lines.

So now, after three years of intensive effort, the "high-speed" engine is available in a group of Canadian passenger cars especially designed to meet the demands of this new power principle.

A complete line of automobiles. The most comprehensive group of quality cars, at the widest price range ever offered by a single maker . . . One manufacturing cost—one overhead—one selling expense . . . Big-scale production—big scale purchasing—big scale operation at the source . . . and the resultant savings and economies passed on to the purchaser.

"The Buyer has a right to expect a Modern Car."

John N. Willys

Whatever your preference—a four-cylinder car, or a six . . . Whatever your choice . . . a quality car at least cost, or a car embodying the utmost in power and richness and luxury ever built into an automobile. In the great Willys-Overland line you will find what you are looking for—the world's greatest dollar-for-dollar value in the car you want, on easy time payment terms at the price you wish to pay.

THE OVERLAND WHIPPET . . . Canada's New type, 4 cylinder, 5 Passenger, Light car . . . . Travels 55 miles an hour in comfort . . . Picks up in 13 seconds from 5 to 30 miles an hour . . . 35 miles to the gallon of gasoline . . . . 1,000 miles to a gallon of oil. 4 wheel brakes. Available in Coach, Coupe and Touring.

THE OVERLAND SIX . . . a car of great power and fast acceleration . . . . Open its big doors and note the wide seats and spacious interior, made possible by the extra-long wheel base . . . The luxurious upholstery is but an indication of the superb quality which prevails throughout . . . . Available in Coach, Sedan, Coupe and Touring.

THE NEW "70" WILLYS-KNIGHT SIX . . . out-performing anything that ever was built of its size, or type, or class . . . Also available in Coach, Sedan, Coupe and Touring.

THE WILLYS-KNIGHT GREAT SIX . . . the car with the greatest performance record in America . . . . Exquisitely beautiful . . . Powered with the Internationally endorsed, Knight, sleeve-valve engine . . . Available in 5 and 7 Passenger Sedan, 4 Passenger Coupe, 4 Passenger Roadster, and 7 Passenger Touring.

Don't fail to see this "modernized" line of fine cars on display at your local Willys-Overland dealers' showrooms. Ask about the easy time payment terms and the small down payment with which you can buy any Willys-Overland Fine Motor Car.

There is a Willys-Overland dealer in your neighborhood.

Canada Flooded With Infected Prison-Made Garments

King Government Permit Canadian Men, Women and Children to be Endangered from Infected Garments from U. S. Prisons

Perhaps the most detestable class of smuggling which was brought before the Committee was that of the smuggling into Canada of clothing of various kinds which had been made in the prisons of the United States. The entry of prison-made goods into Canada from the United States is absolutely prohibited by law, even on the payment of duty.

The United States will not tolerate, within its own borders, the sale of goods made in its own prisons—it knows they are likely to carry contagion.

Many complaints had been made to the Government in reference to this traffic, and as early as August, 1924, a large deputation of business men had put the whole matter of the smuggling of prison-made goods into Canada before Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and members of his Cabinet. Nothing, however, was done by the Government.

On November 18th, 1924, the matter was taken up directly with the Minister of Customs. A complete list of prison contractors in the United States was forwarded, together with a great deal of information about this traffic, and the Minister was strongly urged to investigate the matter, but again no action resulted.

Giving evidence before the Committee, R. P. Sparks showed that the country was flooded with these goods, which were being sold openly with the prison labels on them, and he produced a prison-made man's work shirt with the prison label on it, being sold openly in Ottawa.

Dugald Donaghy, M.P., Liberal Member of the Committee, and the Minister of Customs and Excise, unsuccessfully endeavored in every possible way to discredit Sparks' evidence and protect the American prison contractors.

The firms handling these goods in Canada were practically all active Liberal politicians. One of them, Bissonette, was described by the Minister of Customs in a speech in the House of Commons "as a very good fellow, an intimate friend of mine and a young gentleman whom I have met on several occasions, both politically and socially."

In reference to another one, Jenkins, the King of the Rock Island smugglers and the largest distributor of prison-made goods, A. F. Holmes, Customs Officer at Rock Island, testified as follows: "I only talked with him (Jenkins) a few minutes: finally he belched out in pretty bold language and said he was a strong Liberal, and if I cared about my job, I wanted to let him alone, and he said he could have any of us dismissed if he saw fit."

W. N. Baldwin, M.P. for Stanstead, Quebec, was the friend and intimate of smugglers, as was shown by the fact that in the case of a seizure from Jenkins, the king of the Rock Island smugglers, Baldwin put up his own cheque for $2,500.00 as part of a penalty imposed on Jenkins for smuggling.

To show the shocking conduct of the King Government in allowing its political friends to flood the country with this filthy product of American convicts, the following extract from a report made by a Joint Committee of Prison Labour of the Union-made Garment Manufacturers' Association of America and the United Garment Workers of America, one of the sanest Labour unions in the United States, is enlightening. This extract was given in evidence before the Committee:

"Of far greater moment than the financial injustices involved is the matter "of public health. Prisoners are so largely recruited from the lower strata "of society that they are almost universally the victims of the communi- "cable diseases bred by poverty, squalor, ignorance and vice. The "percentage of venereal diseases runs abnormally high, trachoma is most "common, particularly in the South and among negro convicts, and the "styles of architecture make prisons incubators for tuberculosis among the "subnormal, underfed and overworked prisoners. In few, if any, of the "prisons where garments are manufactured, is there any adequate system "of physical examination, segregation and treatment of communicable "diseases. Prisoners suffering from all sorts of filthy and dangerous "diseases handle the garments, cough and spit on them, use them to wipe "infected eyes and pus-exuding sores, and then they go into the market "without disinfection to carry the germs of deadly diseases to the "merchants' counters and the people's homes."

With a complete knowledge of the facts, the King Government continued to permit the smugglers to defraud the revenue, corrupt our officials and endanger the health of our innocent children.

The tragic part of this traffic is that a large percentage of these goods were children's cotton play suits, overalls, etc., which Canadian children wear next to their skin. It was proved that thousands of these disease-carrying garments were smuggled into Canada.

Every man and woman in Canada should rally to the polls to defeat the men who allowed this condition to exist, particularly in view of the fact that it has been proven beyond dispute that the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the Hon. Jacques Bureau, and other members of his Cabinet knew for two years that this traffic was being carried on and never raised a finger to prevent it.

CONSERVATIVES HOLD MEETING IN SELWYN HALL

R. Denne and V. J. McElderry Attack Record of Liberals.

MR. PECK SPEAKS.

R. J. Soden Delivers Fiery Attack on Former Prime Minister.

A Conservative meeting, addressed by R. Denne, V. J. McElderry, E. A. Peck and R. J. Soden, was held last night in the Temperance Hall, Selwyn. Bruce Fitzgerald was unanimously elected chairman.

After the election of last year, declared Mr. Denne, the first speaker, Arthur Meighen should by all rights have been Prime Minister. The Progressives agreed at first to support Mr. Meighen, but King got round them and, getting their assistance, carried on for nine months. In 1917 a call was sent round the country urging the citizens to take part in a patriotic struggle against the enemy. The present fight they were asked to engage in was equally patriotic. Mr. King was trying to interfere with the Governor-General, and when one tried to interfere with the King's representative in Canada, trouble was sure to follow, and trouble had followed. The country had always called upon the Conservatives to come to its aid at a time of trouble, and the Conservative party had always responded. It responded to the call when the Drury Government went out after a regime of extravagance and mismanagement, loading the Province with debt, and Ferguson formed a Government that came to the rescue. As far as the City of Peterborough was concerned, the party was well organized, and he urged his hearers to work equally hard to beat the Liberals. To do so they had to beat Mr. Duffus in West Peterborough.

V. J. McElderry

Mr. McElderry declared that the evidence proved that the Liberal Government knew of the Customs corruption for months and probably years before the inquiry was instituted. It was for this offence against honesty and decency that the Liberal administration was arraigned before the country. That was the cause of the desertion of the Progressives and many other decent people who had been supporters of the King Government. Mr. McElderry quoted the letter to her constituents of Miss Agnes McPhail who with drew her support and voted with the Conservatives on the Customs debate. Miss McPhail in her letter told her constituents of 130 tons of goods smuggled over the border through the connivance of the very people whose duty it was to prevent such smugglery. Miss McPhail in the house said she felt compelled "in agony of mind" to vote against the Liberal government.

The Liberal Party that was now appealing for their support was not the grand old Libertl party of years ago. All the old stalwarts like Mr. Fielding had dropped out in disapproval of the King policy.

Touching on the dissolution question, Mr. McElderry declared the ex-Premier like a sulky boy who had lost a ball game was trying to blame the umpire.

E. A. Peck

The King-Forke alliance in the last session was described by the ex-Premier as co-operation in legislation said Mr. Peck. The Conservative candidate compared it to a car with three fairly good wheels and a very shaky one. The Progressive wheel work fairly well, but could not surmount the obstacle of the Customs report.

It was utterly unreasonable for the Liberals to come forward in the effort to convince the electors that Byng had made a mistake. They were dwelling on the Constitution in the attempt to cover up the Customs scandal.

The Governor-General had reason to believe that the Conservatives could carry on for Mr. Meighen had the assurance from the Progressives that they would aid in winding up the work of the session. The Governor-General did just what any man would have done who was anxious to advance the affairs of the country.

Mr. Peck read the resolution that had been adopted by the Progressives: "Resolved that we assist the new administration in completing the business of the session."

Mr. Peck criticised the Robb budget in many of its features saying that to a great extent it benefitted the people of wealth and business men rather than the working classes.

R. J. Soden.

R. J. Soden, in a characteristically lively speech, accused the Liberal government of permitting the natural resources of Canada to be depleted for the benefit of the United States instead of using the labor of the Canadian worker to turn them into finished products. He quoted a formidable array of facts in support of his assertions.

Ridiculing Mr. King's constitutional arguments, Mr. Soden declared the ex-Premier fled to a bomb-proof shelter in a time of danger for the Dominion, and had no right to come forward and pose as a defender of British institutions. Mr. Soden said he supported Meighen because the Conservative leader had a grasp of the problems confronting the country, and he supported Mr. Peck because the latter was a man who could be trusted.

The first and only slaves that were taken into Nebraska were owned in Nebraska City, in 1857. There were eleven in all.

TRIALS OF INDIGESTION.

Errors About This Trouble Into Which People Fall.

Many people so far misunderstand the digestive system as to treat it like a machine; neglecting it until it works sluggishly, then irritating it into work again by the use of purgatives. The stomach needs help at all times, but a study of the process of digestion will show that purgatives as commonly taken, are seldom necessary and often harmful.

To safeguard your digestion the diet must be controlled. Over-eating is always harmful, but one must assimilate enough food to supply the needs of the blood. Remember, the blood has to carry nourishment to all parts of the body and find fuel for its energy. Hence when the blood becomes weak and fails to do its work, indigestion arises. Therefore the sure remedy for indigestion is to build up the blood. If you suffer from any form of indigestion choose you diet carefully and take wholesome nourishment. Above all, start building up your blood by taking a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Then under the influence of the new blood supply, your digestive system will respond naturally, your appetite improve and your food will do you good. So begin to improve your digestion by starting to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now.

You can get these pills from your druggist or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CROPS IN DOURO BADLY BROKEN

Wind and Rain Have Done Great Damage During Past Week.

DOURO NEWS.

DOURO, Aug. 28.—The wind and rain played havoc with the standing crops, knocking them down and making cutting quite difficult. The weather of the last few days has been bad for harvesting. There is a great deal of red rust on the straw this season and the straw is broken a good deal as a result.

Miss Mary McManus visited friends in Peterborough recently.

Miss Mary Walsh has been visiting friends in Toronto.

Miss Josephine Fitzgerald underwent an operation on Monday, and is making satisfactory progress. She is a patient in St. Josephs Hospital, Peterborough.

Miss Anna McMurray has been visiting her uncle, Mr. Albert Hogan of Barrie.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hogan of Barrie are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McMurray.

Miss Mary Mcanus obtained her Junior Matriculation Certificate, and Miss Cecelia McManus obtained her Senior Matriculation; Misses Loretto Cavanagh and Ada Cummings pass the Form III. examinations; Miss Margaret Leahy will have one subject to re-write in September before obtaining Junior Matriculation; James Collins and James Walsh were partially successful in Forms III, and IV, respectively. Thus local pupils have maade a good showing. All were pupils of St. Peter's High Schol, Peterborough.

PARIS UNIVERSITY CANADIAN HOSTEL

Prince of Wales Will Officially Open New Building.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Some details have been received here regarding the new Canadian Hostel, which the Prince of Wales next October will officially open in Paris, France, in connection with the new "Cite Universitaire." A gift of 2,600,000 francs was given some time ago in the name of Canadian friends of the Paris University in order that a hostel might be built where 50 Canadian students would live during their residence in Paris. These students are to be chosen preferably from those who have decided to take up a teaching career.

The University City, of which the hostel is part, is one of the most interesting post war developments in Paris. In order to provide for the young and poor student, some six years ago a wealthy man with vision and thought for others, gave the University the sum of ten million francs towards the building of residential hostels. The only condition imposed was that these should be built on the highest ground of Paris near to the Montsouris Park, and on the side of the old fortifications. The State and the town of Paris gave the land and the gift was gladly accepted. In the Autumn of last year the conception of the founder has materialized and some 350 students, men and women, came into residence.

The students have their meals together in a communal restaurant, while there are reading-rooms and recreation rooms, where they can sit and write and talk together.

The Canadians are the first nation, after the French, to have their own Hostel, though another admirably designed building for the accommodation of 200 Belgian students is almost completed. The cost of this is five millions given to the Universitaire to Paris by M. and Mme. Biermans-Laporter. It is expected that before long an Argentine Hostel will be built. Lord Crewe, the British Ambasador in Paris, is also actively interested himself in a project for the foundaton of a British Hostel. Even the Turks and Japanese have recently visited this University City with a view to having hostels for their own nationals, and there are expectations that the United States, Sweden and Portugal will in time be represented.

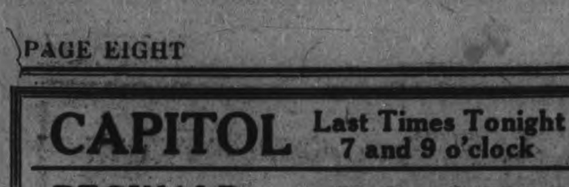
HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon



COMING UP FROM SHALLOW DIVE

After entering the water, the position of the hands, arms and head becomes of the first importance.

For a deep dive the body should be perpendicular when the head enters the water.

For a shallow dive the body strikes the water at any angle. Even in the shallow dive, however, there should be a minimum of splashing.

For a deep dive the hands are kept straight out before the face and the back is kept straight.

For the shallow dive the tips of the fingers bend upward and the back is arched so that the whole tendency is to curve upward.

In deep diving it is very necessary to keep the hands before the face until the depth of the dive has been reached, to guard against any hidden obstruction.

Something NEW in COMICS

It is ALGY a floppish Englishman lampooned by the famous BRUCE BAIRNSFATHER

who created "Old Bill," the funniest comic to come out of the war.

Algy is a floppish sort of Englishman. He comes to America and is much surprised on arrival.

He is pursued by stage vamps, society flappers, fond mamas who want a title in the family. He goes broke when his allowance does not arrive.

Oh, he has a beastly time of it.

There's a laugh in every strip.

LEAGUE SERIES IS EVENED UP

Belleville Beats Kingston 7-2 in Second Game of Play-off.

THIRD GAME MONDAY.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 28.—Belleville evened the count at one game each with Kingston yesterday, when they defeated the Limestone team, 7 to 2. The third and deciding game for the championship will be played in Belleville on Monday. The Trunks had a "bad break" in Kingston on Wednesday, but yesterday they made every post a winning one, and when the team gave Oulette a five-run lead in the early frames he eased up. The team behind him gave excellent support to the twirler, but the same cannot be said of the team behind the pitching of Cherry for Kingston. They made bad plays at critical times.

There were no features to the pastime, the plays coming in regularity, and straight baseball only was tried. Cherry weakened in the third frame, and with three healthy clouts, one a double, with a walk sandwiched in, the Trunks scored four runs. Kingston threw a scare into the homesters in the eighth, when they counted twice, due to an error of the first baseman, Mills, but the Railroaders came back with two more to even it up. The line-ups:

Kingston—Thompson, lf; Halbert, 2b; Batstone, 3b; Cherry, p; Britton, ss; Purvis, 1b; Tetro, c; Daley, rf; Teepel, lf.

Belleville—Ross, cf; Weir, 3b; W. Mills, c; H. Mills, 1b; Blakely, ss; Hagerman, lf; Meagher, 2b; Palmer, rm; Ouellet, p.

The score by innings:

		R	H	E
Kingston	....000000020—	2	5	4
Belleville	....10400002x—	7	9	2

AUSTRALIA MAY ALTER CONSTITUTION

Referendum Being Held To Give Federal Government Control of Labor.

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press Cable).—Premier S. M. Bruce has just concluded a tour of New South Wales and Queensland in support of the Government's proposals in the coming referendum for important changes in the Federal Constitution. The Premier says he is confident that the referendum will be carried.

Chief among the proposed changes in the Constitution is a provision to make the Australian Federal authority supreme on questions of hours of work and wages, instead of each State being its own authority thereon. Another proposal is to give the Federal Government power to control corporations and maintain essential services during strikes.

Hon. J. T. Lang, Labor Premier of New South Wales, speaking on the referendum at Aubrey, Victoria, urged the democrats of the Australian Commonwealth to reject the Bruce Government's proposals. He declared that the changes in the Constitution asked for by the Government would, if carried, enable the big employing interests to destroy the working conditions in Australia.

BOY IS HANGED IN OWN BEDROOM

Discovery of Tragedy Made By Father on Return To House.

READING WILD WEST.

TORONTO, August 28 (Canadian Press).—With one end of a leather waist strap looked around his neck, the buckle on the other slipped over a gas jet in the wall, and his feet dangling only half an inch above the floor, Sidney Seligman, aged 13 years, eldest of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Seligman, of this city, was found hanged to death in his bedroom upstairs at his home here at an early hour today. The discovery of the tragedy was made by the father when he and his wife returned from an automobile ride. A "wild west" novel was found on the boy's bed.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

I, Ben. McGill, say that I saw Mr. Peck about his vote on the budget and he admitted that he had voted against the budget.

I, J. H. Burnham, say that if that is so I owe Mr. Peck an apology, because I understood him to maintain that he did not vote against the budget.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE VOLGA BOATMAN."

The axiom pertaining to the superlative illness of a wind that blows nobody good might have been written with the perverse breeze in mind that is responsible for the erstwhile nobility of Russia rubbing elbows with "five-a-day" extras in Hollywood. For the tornado of Bolshevism upset the aristocratic applecart in Russia a short time ago, scattered titled Russians all over the face of the globe, installed new rulers, confiscated property, and exiled the members of the educated, wealthy class who were fortunate enough to survive.

Ill Wind Has Silver Lining.

But, to mix metaphors, here's the silver lining to the ill wind—the misfortunes of the Czar's nobility have become a real boon to the movies. Directors can now obtain genuine dukes, counts and princes, authentic generals and colonels, and dyed-in-the-wool bluebloods from one of the oldest nobilities in the world to give that much-sought aristocratic flavor of the Old World in motion picture productions.

Cecil B. De Mille is especially fortunate. Not only does his latest production, "The Volga Boatman," which will be on view at the Capitol Theatre next Monday, deal with Russia and the Red Revolution, but he has drafted a dozen members of Imperial Russia's bluest-blooded gentry to give an aristocratic background for the dramatic actions of his featured players, William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Victor Varconi, Julia Faye and Theodore Kosloff.

Noted General Takes Part.

For instance there is General Ivan Ikonnikoff, one of the ranking officers of the Czar's army, in service for seventeen years before the Bolshevists captured him. A year and a half in the mines of Siberia was followed by a fortunate escape, and he walked from upper Siberia to China, from whence he made his way to America. He still retains his miltary bearing and superb aristocratic aloofness, and he figures prominently in several scenes in "The Volga Boatman."

Many Refugees Are Seen.

Dimitrief Volgannin, uncrowned poet-laureat of Russia, whose lyrics in praise of the Volga were nationally famous, is another fallen aristocrat whom Cecil B. De Mille seized gleefully to give the much-desired Russian tinge to his picture, and Prince Sergis M'Divani, distantly related to the late Czar, and formerly possessing fabulous wealth, is also appearing in the production.

FAMILY RE-UNION.

Golden Wedding of Local People is Observed at at Same Time.

KIPPEN, Aug. 27 (Special)—Observation of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Walker of Peterboro' and of the silver wedding of the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. William Ivison, marked the reunion of the Ivison family here. Guests were present from Zion, Ill.; Goderich, Peterboro' and Blyth.

WARSAW NEWS

WARSAW, Aug. 27.—A very enjoyable time was spent in Mr. George Brown's Grove, on Wednesday afternoon. The United church Ladies' Aid invited the Woman's Missionary Society, and also the Woman's Institute, to unite with them in a farewell gathering for Mr. and Mrs. Richard Batten, who will soon move to Peterboro. Mr. Batten has been an active, and efficient member of each of these organizations. The Zion "Willing Workers" were present also.

The Aid did a little necessary business, and had a good social time. Among those present were four elderly ladies, Mrs. John Clements, eighty-eight years of age, the oldest woman in Warsaw, who told those gathered around her, tales of old times in mining towns in England. Mrs. Alex Watts, eighty years of age, a few days ago, walked over (she did not walk back) and brought a cake which she had made. Mrs. Miles and Mrs. Rome were the other two. Mr. Robert Payne was brought, and enjoyed the gathering.

There were about eighty present. After a social time and some ball games, covers were laid on the grass for eighty-four, and all sat down. Mrs. Watts declared she was going to be a girl again, and sat on the grass too. This method eliminated waiters, except those who poured tea.

Mr. Batten was not present, and Mr. Digweed went for him.

After supper, Mr. and Mrs. Batten were led to a central spot, and the following address was read to them by Mrs. Herrington:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Batten:

We have learned of your intention of moving from our community, and could not let the opportunity pass without, in some way, expressing our appreciation of your friendship and services among us.

You, Mrs. Batten, have been a very highly esteemed member of the Institute, the Ladies' Aid and the Woman's Missionary Society. Memory goes back to the days spent together in Red Cross work, work on the executive, and also on committees.

The Ladies' Aid has found you a valued member, taking your part, whenever you could be of service.

On account of the small numbers, the Missionary Society will, perhaps, miss you most, for you have been one of the faithful few, through all the thirteen years of membership, but we feel you will enter into the work of the church in your new home. As a rememberance from the three societies, we ask you to accept this reading lamp and chair, and may God's blessing rest upon you both, wherever you may go.

Signed—Mrs. David Miller, president Woman's Institute; Mrs. H. B. Herrington, president Ladies' Aid! Mrs. R. G. Moore, president Missionary Society.

Mrs. Batten replied, thanking the organization for the gifts, and even more for the thoughts that had prompted them. It was characteristic of her to feel and say she would like to have done more. Mr. Batten, too, expressed his thanks, and said Mrs. Batten did what she did because she loved to. All sang one verse of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

The gift was chosen by Mesdames H. Digweed, J. A. Sargent and R. G. Moore.

Rev. H. B. Herrington and Mr. Henry Clements contributed to the pleasure, by bringing some who were unable to come, unless brought.

Thanks were due Mr. Brown for his grounds, and Mrs. Brown for assisting.

Women's Picnic.

On Friday afternoon, August 20, about twenty members of the Warsaw Woman's Institute went to a picnic on Mr. Grover's grounds, Norwood, to which the Warsaw Institute had been invited.

Havelock Institute, Norwood Institute, and some others were there, and a very few gentlemen.

The well-kept, beautiful old grounds were a joy and rest to all. There were games including croque,t and a number of sports, races, potato race, three-legged race, nail driving contest.

About five o'clock all were seated on the spacious verandah or on seats on the lawn near. An address of welcome was given by Mrs. Grover, and replied to by Mrs. David Miller. Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith gave a short, earnest talk on the 'Institute Ode." Mrs. Vance was the speaker of the afternoon and her address was a whole hearted appeal to women to be true to their obligations. Women representing several organizations were there, and she urged all to do all they could for whatever organization they upheld. Wherever one is, and no matter how busy one is, one can always help in bettering conditions. Our lives must count for good in the world.

Supper was served, and before it was over, Mr. J. A. Sexsmith appeared, and was asked for an address. He approved the Institute work, and thought he knew about it, as he had lived with it for several years.

About six o'clock the gathering broke up, and the women went to their several homes, each one carrying happy memories of an afternoon most happily spent.

Mrs. Grover will address the Warsaw Institute on "The Moral Question", probably at the October meeting, on Thursday, October 14.

John Leslie.

The funeral of the late John Leslie took place from the residence of his foster-son, Mr. Fred Parcels, at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. H. B. Herrington conducted the services at the house and at the grave in Warsaw cemetery. There was a large attendance of friends and neighbors, as he was a man who was much respected by all who knew him. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Bruce and Howard Reid, Cephas Leslie, Robert Bolton, James McFadden and E. Duniord, all nephews.

Mr. Leslie was the youngest of a family of six. He was born in the house, from which his funeral took place, seventy-one years ago, shortly after his father was killed in felling a tree, quite near the house. He had lived alone since his sister, Miss Mary Ann Leslie died sixteen years ago. Another sister died in early womanhood, and a third sister married Lafayette Reid, but died some years ago. One brother, William Leslie, living in Peterboro, survives, and his brother died some years ago. He was unmarried, but brought up Fred Parcels. He lived in a house not far from Mr. Parcels' home, and rarely a day passed that he was not at the Parcels' house. He had, seemingly, been quite well, had seen Mrs. Parcels, and was to go to his own house, and return in a few minutes. As he did not return, Mrs. Parcels sent two of the children over, and they found him lying on the floor. Mr. Parcels was called, and the doctor sent for, but he had passed away.

A WAR AT HOME.

Sir:

Let us suppose that Mr. Meighen is again Prime Minister of Canada and that the British Empire as an Empire is at war or is about to be attacked. Mr. Meighen leaves the question of Canada's joining in the defence of the Empire to the people at a general election. Canada becomes a prey to internal strife. From one end of the countr yto the other we hear the sounds of turmoil with the result that Canada herself becomes a wreck. Let us suppose that the Reds of all Canada and the Nationalists of Quebec are not overcome and that after scene of rioting and the utmost disorder Canada finds herself compelled to say that she is not able to participate. Would Mr. Meighen and Canadians generally have the assurance to claim that they were still members of an Empire which they refused to defend? It is plain that from the very moment at which Canada declines to lend a hand in its defence she ceases to be a part of the British Empire. That is what Mr. Meighen's policy leads directly to. And all for what? To get the "nationalist" vote in Quebec, a vote which is opposed to the Liberals because the Liberals are, as Mr. King has clearly laid down and his prominent suppressure of conscription Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed his desire and in favour of the maintenance of the Empire and of Canada's continuing as a part of it. In 1911 Sir Wilfrid Laurier lost 25 seats in Quebec because the nationalists fought him and the Liberal party to a finish. Mr. Meighen is trying to defeat Mr. King and the Liberal party in Quebec by promising the nationalists that they will have a first-class chance to wreck the Empire if he becomes Prime Minister. Some will say that the nationalists in 1911 came to parliament and supported Sir Robert Borden. That is true but Sir Robert Borden did not promise to defer Canada's participation in the Empire's defence until he disrupted Canada by the fury of an election war at home. So far from doing so Sir Robert Borden, at the first intimation of war, sent 33,000 Canadian soldiers to the scene of war and followed it up by the most stupendous preparation for war this country has ever made. There may be doubt as to the wisdom of conscription. It has been said that compulsory service is not the free will offering of a nation and therefore no indication of its good intentions or of its desire for service. That may be true and that was Sir Wilfrid Laurier's view. Had it been a matter of volunteering without the pressure of conscription Sir Wilfriu Laurier expresed his desire and determination to do all that he could by speech and act to support the imperial cause. How far then has Mr. Meighen fallen from the level of these two great men. They were ready to spring to the defence of the Empire. They assumed that Canada was a part of the Empire and would do her part. Not so with Mr. Meighen. Lowering his flag to the reds and the nationalists he declares that he does not know and Canada does not know and the Conservative party does not know what its policy is, whether it would defend the Empire or not and that it will be necessary to hold a general election to find out. Thus have the nationalists and the reds triumphed in the policy of Mr. Meighen and dragged the name of the Conservative party in the dust.

Will you support such a policy as that? Are you one with the reds, the nationalists and the other smashers of the Empire? If so vote for Mr. Meighen and Mr. Peck. If not, then oppose them and all others advocating Canada's virtual withdrawal from the Empire. Sir John A. Macdonald declared that a British subject he was born and a British subject he would die. Can you think of that great chieftain announcing thrt he would wait for a general election before raising the flag of the Empire? Mr. Meighen and all who support his war policy must be taught at this election and not on a future occasion, that Canadians will not tolerate such a policy and that in all wars involving the Empire and in all attacks upon its integrity they are loyal and will defend it.

J. H. BURNHAM.

FROM "MR. MILLISON."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—The truth has at last come out about Mr. Peck's vote on the budget, from Mr. Peck himself. He read at Young's Point a letter to him from the Clerk of the House of Commons. This letter said:

"When I stated in my letter to Mr. Gordon, on August 5th inst., that you voted against the budget, I merely used a Parliamentary phrase in order to say that you had voted against the usual motion "That the Speaer leave the chair" for the purpose of considering the tariff resolutions. These resolutions were not then submitted to the House by the Speaker and were not the questions upon which you then actually voted. As a matter of fact, Mr. Robb, following the usual course, gave notice that they would be taken up later in committee. No further division was taken in the House on these resolutions.

Yours very truly,

(Sgd.) Arthur Beuchesne.

From this letter it appears that when Mr. Robb moved after his long speech on the budget that the Speaker leave the chair and the House go into committee to consider the budget and the resolutions rising out of the budget, Mr. Peck voted against that motion, so that the budget and the budget resolutions might be prevented from ever being considered by the House in committee at all, and so blocking the budget and defeating the government, and yet Mr. Peck says he did not vote against the budget. If frying to block all consideration of the budget is not voting against the budget and the resolutions rising from it, nothing else is, I would think. When Mr. Robb's resolution to consider the budget was carried in spite of Mr. Peck, it being very late at night, the consideration of it and the resolutions was laid over for a later day, but that day never came and because it never came Mr. Peck says he did not vote against the budget and the resolutions. I am afraid Mr. Peck stands convicted out of his mouth and from his own showing. Canadian politics have a bad name and apparently deserve it.

Yours truly,

F. W. MILLISON.

FAMILY RE-UNION AT BRIDGENORTH

Descendants of U. E. L. Settler Have Occupied Farm Over a Century.

75 ATTEND.

Seventy-five relatives by birth or marriage assembled last evening at the Hawthornes, the home of Allan B. Mann, for the Mann family reunion to to meet Misses Mildred and Blanche Mann, who are home on vacation. The Mann family has occupied the Hawthornes for upwards of 100 years, the first settler being a United Empire Loyalist, who made a perilous trip to Canada after the conclusion of the American War of Independence. Many of the descendants of the old pioneer are still located in and around Smith.

For over fifty years, the Mann reunion was an annual affair, but since the war the celebration has been held with less regularity.

Supper was served on the lawn last night, and community singing and old time reminiscences beguiled away a very pleasant evening.

Mr. William Mann, father of A. B. Mann, is the oldest surviving member of the family.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

A SURPRISING OFFER

As soon as everyone had left me to go on their several errands, I walked back to the library and called up Jerry. I could not find him at his own office and so I called his father's office.

The stupid girl at the switchboard, instead of giving me Mr. Gerald Hathaway, Jr., put me on his father's line. Mr. Hathaway, Sr., recognized my voice immediately, and asked.

"Is this Miss Dean speaking?

"I want very much to talk with you, my dear Miss Dean, immediately. My son tells me you have left Mr. Robinson and I thought perhaps you would like to come into my office."

"Thank you, Mr. Hathaway. It is very kind of you to ask me to do this—but Jerry should have told you that I have just taken a place as private secretary and companion to Miss Meredith."

"But my dear Judy, you will not like working for a woman. No girl does."

"Well, I cannot say that I'm real crazy about working for a man, Mr. Hathaway, and as I must work for somebody I cannot see how I can help working for one of the sexes. I think I shall stay with Miss Meredith for a little while at least. Thank you just the same."

Before I could hang up Mr. Hathaway shouted through the telephone: "Here, here, Judy, wait a minute. I have another proposal for you. You have probably heard this one before, but I'm going to try and cinch it.

"Probably by this time you very well know that that boy of mine seems to think he is greatly in love with you. I presume you knew this before he did. Anyway he has made it so uncomfortable around this office lately that we have not been able to do much work. He has got it into his head that I didn't like you or you didn't like him, or something foolish I told him this morning that he must go and marry you immediately, for until he got it out of his system he wouldn't be worth much to me or anyone else.

"When I asked you to come into my office, Judy, I was just kidding a little to see what you would really do about it."

"Well, I told you, Mr. Hathaway. You certainly heard me say that I am acting as secretary to Miss Meredith."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

BRET HARTE AND ANNA GRISWOLD

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

This is another of those husband-and-wife love letters which appear quiet and unromantic and in reality are more potent love letters than the ardent, phrases of the pre-ceremony missives. Bret Harte married Anna Griswold when he was but twenty-three and during his lecture tours and other trips away from home, his every change of mood, every recurrence of good luck and ill luck, every episode of his experiences was at once relayed to his confidante at home.

"I have telegraphed you twice from Washington," he writes from Pittsburgh, on January 9, 1872, to his wife "and once today from Pittsburgh. And now I send you many and happier returns of your birthday, dear little woman. I've gone along thus far and very fairly and without delay. My Washington letter was crowded: the audience was almost as quick and responsive as the Boston folk and the committeemen, to my great delight, told me that they made money by me. You will be sorry to hear that I felt dreadfully lonely on my Washington trip and you will be sorrier to hear, you infamous women, that my luncheon was mitigated by meeting Miss Binny Banks and her mother in the train. You may remember that I met Miss Banks at Burlingham's little dinner—but I don't know that I told you that she was lovely. . . .

"How you would have enjoyed this trip with me!

"Finding that I would be two or three hours in Baltimore on my way to Pittsburgh, I telegraphed to Chris Mayer to meet and sup with me. He met me at the depot: we went to 'Guy's'—a famous restaurant—and had a nice supper, and then we spent the last half hour of our limit at Branty Mayer's house with your cousins. 'Miss Kate' and 'Jinny' were on their way to a party and there were one or two others whom I had not seen before. They all regretted you were not with me and made me promise to bring you in the early spring to spend a few days. . . .

"I am looking from the windows of my hotel on the Monongahela River, with all sorts of queer, flat boats and barges passing and repassing. How you would have enjoyed it! The mail leaves in a few minutes. I conclude you are better or you would have telegraphed me. Kiss the chickens for me, Nan, and look for the safe return speedily of your own

"Frank."

During his courtship days Harte chose to address to his beloved humorous love poems, of which the following stanza is a sample:

SERENADE

(Adapted to the latitude of San Francisco.)

"O list, lady, list! while thy lover outside
Pours forth those fond accents that thrill thee:
O list! both thy doors and thy windows beside
For fear that some thorough draught chill thee.
The 'sweet summer moon's' hanging low in the sky,
And the fog's drifting wildly around me;
There's damp in my throat, there is sand in my eye,
And my old friend Neuralgia has found me."

Bret Harte was the pioneer novelist of the pioneer days of California. His short stories rank with O. Henry's and picture as faithfully and realistically American life of the period.

SOLDIER BOBBED HAIR.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28. — Bobbed hair has been traced to its lair. The vogue was started by the soldiers of the Revolutionary war. Capt. L. C. Baird, U. S. A., has discovered old Continental army records in the Schuylkill arsenal, showing America's first shingle bobs were worn by the American soldiers of our first war. Bobbing was a part of the general orders for 1776.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

Red Rose Orange Pekoe is extra good. Won't you try it this time?

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(United Press).—In spite of the heat women are beginning to think of fall woollens. Summer wraps and frocks have already lost their appeal with women who wish to be the first to exploit advancing fashions.

Woollens this year will be soft-finished and lustrous and among the prominent materials are kasha, crepella, velour, broadcloth, jersey with camel's hair finish, duvetyne and tweed weaves.

Kasha fashion suits ensembles and sports frocks. Crepella is popular for street dresses. Velours, duvetynes and dull broadcloths are endorsed as coat materials. Novelty woollens in tweed weaves, plaids and checks are used mostly in sports coats and suits.

Kashas in geranium red, grey, black, black and white mixtures, dull greens, Chanel red and the usual fall colors will all be smart. Sometimes two colors of kasha are used in strips as decorative notes. Again kasha is combined with novelty woollens or with jersey on sports apparel.

Black will be an important woollen mode this season. Black crepella vies with jungle green and wine red day-mode this season. Black crepella vies with white fashions some of the smartest of sports outfits. Black broadcloth coats of straight lines worn over colorful frocks are a Parisian idea which may be repeated in America. The broadcloth has a lustrous finish resembling duvetyne, and if fur is used on the collar of the black broadcloth coat, it is invariably a long-haired black fur.

A good many bright colored coats for early fall are shown in the smart shops. There's a wine color with a violet cast, rust, bright red, burnt orange and rosy shades. A woollen coat of rust color is fashioned on straight lines and is trimmed with a narrow mink collar outlined in mink tails.

Another of Chanel red flares at the front hemline where deep V's of tan-dyed ermine are inserted. A bright red broadcloth coat has wide sleeves set on at deep armholes, the sleeves and skirt hem being deeply trimmed with black sealskin. Bright colors, however, will be only found among the novelties since dull deep shades are more important for staple wear this season.

CONVICTS MAKE DARING ESCAPE

Twenty-five Men Overpower Guards at Michigan State Reformatory.

ALL YOUNG MEN.

IONIA, Michigan, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Twenty-five convicts from the Michigan State Reformatory were at large to-day, many of them armed, as the result of a sensational break in which they virtually took possession of the institution.

The plot, which prison officials believe had been planned for several weeks, culminated early to-day in a well-organized attack in which the escaped prisoners, all housed in one of the institution's dormitories, fell on the guards there, overpowering and disarming them.

They made their way to the administration offices, where additional guards and officials were seized. The prison authorities were then marched back into the cells formerly occupied by the prisoners and locked there.

The inmates of the institution are all young men, and most of them are first offenders.

Some of the prisoners escaped in automobiles and others on foot. According to the officials they include some of the most dangerous criminals housed at the reformatory.

About fifteen of the convicts later entered a garage on the outskirts of the city, commandeered four automobiles, and sped away in the general direction of Detroit.

GERMAN CRUISER SINKS DURING GALE

Dock Is Driven Against Hindenburg, Just Raised From Scapa Flow.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The German cruiser Hindenburg remains at the bottom of Scapa Flow. Divers continue to hunt for the damage done Wednesday when a north-westerly gale sank the ship after it had been raised from the bottom by a salvage crew who had been working on it for three months.

The shell-encrusted and weed-grown deck was awash as the giant cruiser lay between two great floating docks, with the Union Jack flying from her rotten mast. She was surrounded by divers' supply ships, with another salvaged German cruiser moored to the windward of her as a breakwater. The gale drove a destroyer on the floating dock, ripping a hole in its side that necessitated pumping out eighteen inches of water.

Then the dock was hurled against the Hindenburg, knocking a section thirty by fifteen inches off the conning tower and raising the circular cap from the rangefinder. Water poured into the hulk, sending the Hindenburg to the bottom again. Divers have been trying to repair the damage so the Hindenburg can be pumped out and refloated.

BROTHER ESCAPES.

PALMERSTON, Ont., August 28. — Lillian Diamond, aged three years, is at her home on second concession, Minto Township, two miles north of Palmerston, suffering painful injuries inflicted by a binder, hauled by a team of horses driven by her father, Ben Diamond. Her condition is serious and the escape of her brother is miraculous.

The accident occurred about two p.m. yesterday on the Diamond farm when Lillian, playing with her four-year-old brother, wandered into a tall field of grain where her father was at work harvesting. Not having the least idea that the children were in the vicinity of the field, he drove without warning onto the children. The boy was little the worse for his experience, but Lillian was terribly injured and had the right arm cut off above the elbow. Her recovery is uncertain.

ONCE UPON A TIME — HOW THE SEA BECAME SALT—II — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

Daily Short Story

Robert Rangely, seated in his luxurious car, was being driven down a certain avenue wherein are many shops and restaurants of the respectable but not fashionable sort. Peter Neiland, his chauffeur, was driving slowly owing to the traffic. Robert was well pleased with the world and with himself. He had riches, youth, "family," and was engaged to Flora Bedlow, the belle of the season. As the car crept along he was suddenly aware of an exceedingly pretty girl who, from the neighboring sidewalk, was casting repeated glances in his direction.

They were such glances, too, as any young man would feel a pleasurable sensation in having a pretty girl cast at him. Admiring and affectionate might characterize them; and Robert was so perfectly well aware of his many excellences that he would have been the last person in the world to condemn any young lady from sharing in his own opinion of himself. But it was with no thought of treason to Flora that he watched the maiden as she paused for an instant at the door of a restaurant, cast one more of her ravishing looks in his direction, and disappeared into the establishment.

The next afternoon as he stepped into his car he said to his chauffeur, "Peter, drive down —— Avenue; the same route we took yesterday—and when we come to —— Street drive slowly." And so it came about that at the same hour as the day before they were at the same place—and there was the pretty girl again, walking along the sidewalk toward the same restaurant and casting the same sort of glances toward the Rangely machine. "What a fool I am," thought Robert when the girl had disappeared into the restaurant. "The poor girl is evidently in love with me—there was no mistaking the looks she cast in my direction. I mustn't let her see me again."

And Peter Neilan thought: "What in blazes possessed the boss to want to want to drive down here for today, I wonder? I saw Kittie out of the corner of my eye going toward the restaurant. I am sure she was looking at me; but I didn't dare to look in her direction—the boss raises Ned if I recognize any of my friends on the street while I am driving him. I'll see Kittie tonight and explain."

And that night he saw her and did explain.

"Oh, that's all right," said Kittie; "you told me your boss didn't like you to recognize anybody when you were out with him. But he! he!"—and Kittie giggled very deliciously, "you just oughter seen the way he rubbered at me. You'd have thought I had been making goo-goo eyes at him instead of at you—the way he looked. Ain't he the silly guy!"

"Well," replied Peter, "if I ever catch him making eyes at you I'll punch his head and throw up my job. And as soon as I get a raise I'll take you out of that blamed restaurant and we'll set up housekeeping in that little flat we looked at last week—or one just like it."

The next morning Robert Rangely sat in his bachelor apartments in doleful dumps. He and Flora Bedlow had had a falling out. Flora had intimated that Robert was conceited, Robert had taken offense—and there had been a quarrel. He felt that Flora did not appreciate him, and it cut him to the heart—for he was really in love with Flora. When he came to think it over there were lots of people who failed to appraise him at his proper worth.

But there was one star in the darkness—that girl down on —— Avenue who evidently worked in a restaurant and whose soulful eyes had told the story of her heart as she looked at him. There was his refuge from a purblind world. He would go down to that restaurant, seek out the one person who valued him at his real worth, take her from her sordid surroundings and, by making her his wife, reward her for her perspicacity. The doorbell of his apartment rang and he let in Peter, who came to get his orders for the day and bring up his employer's morning mail.

"Please, Mr. Rangely," said Peter getting down to business at once, "I would like a raise if you don't mind. You see I am going to be married—and want a little more money to do it on. She's Kittie O'Brien; she works in a restaurant on —— Avenue. Maybe you noticed her, sir—she was going to work the last two times we drove by there. One could hardly help noticing Kittie. We've been engaged for a long time."

Robert's last lone star of hope blinked out. So it was upon the chauffeur, and not the master, that the nymph of the restaurant had cast those adoring looks!

"Very well, Peter," said Rangely in a hollow voice, "you shall have an increase."

With listless hand he picked up one of the letters Peter had laid on the table. The address was in Flora's writing. He opened it with trembling fingers and read: "Come and see me and make up—you goosie. Who cares if you do think well of yourself—I think well of you too."

"Hoorah!" cried Robert. "Peter, your salary is doubled from today."

THE ABSORBING ADVENTURES OF PROFESSOR BLOTTER

As a result of Professor Blotter's efforts to harness the energy expended in hand-shaking during the present campaign, and use it for milking cows, he was offered a position as Director of the Municipal Traffic Commission.

"My first official act," said Blotter, "was to apply the principle of the crossword puzzle to the traffic problem in Peterborough. I found that if the traffic were read diagonally left to right, on the far side of even-numbered streets only, it would spell out a four-letter word synonymous with Mayor Phelan.

While the heads of the city traffic are adapting this principle of Botter's—the venerable scientist often leaves the practical details of his inventions to the lesser minds—he has been giving his attention to the problem of eliminating the pedestrian from the city streets.

"At first thought it seemed best to invent a motor car that could jump sideways, diagonally, and up and down," he said. "This would be sure to get rid of most of the pedestrians in the course of time. If in addition these cars were equipped with a pick and shovel, a watering can and a packet of seeds, they could even bury the pedestrian and plant a neat little grave, all in one stroke

"However, after some deliberation, I decided on a betetr plan," he continued. "I shall simple request the city administration to furnish each man, woman and child in Peterborough with an individual motor car. Consequently no one will be a pedestrian any more, and we can do away with sidewalks!"

"But how about the traffic?" I gasped.

"I've settled the traffic problem once," replied Blotter sharply. "Please don't bring it up again."

FACE TO FACE.

A peculiar man moved into the house next to mine, so it was natural that I should ask him a few questions when the getting acquainted period was at its height.

"Tell me," I began, "just a few things about yourself?"

"Yes, but if you read the newspapers you wouldn't have to ask me," he replied with a very slight sneer. "I am in the habit of getting up at six-nineteen every morning, except Sundays, when I remain in bed until nine-thirty.

"Humph," I said with a sheepish feeling.

"I get $57.18 per week," he continued, "of which nineteen per cent. goes for food, seven per cent. for taxes, twenty-two per cent. for shelter, thirty-three per cent. for clothing and the three children and one-fifth that I have manage—"

"Hold on," I said, "you don't have one-fifth child."

"Yes," he said sternly, "and my mortgage is $3,479.08. I may as well confess, also, that I will die in 1956."

"How do you know?" I demanded hotly.

"Why," he replied scornfully, "I am the average man all the statisticians are yelling about."

IF THE POLITICIAN BARED HIS INMOST THOUGHTS

My friends, I am happy to be with you tonight. I ought to be. I'm looking for a job. I wanted a senatorship, but may be I can get that later.

First of all, I want to tell you that I never laid eyes on a homelier set of women in my life. Are they models for Tad and Goldberg? Gentlemen, I know you must have just lovely times at your stag parties.

Morever, the men of this community have no ambition nor any sense of get-up to them. This building in which we are gathered to-night is sufficient evidence of the manner in which they go about things. The monstrosity of its architecture is exceeded only by the number of mortgages with which it is burdened.

You should choose better leaders—men of progress and foresight. Why, if you only knew it, you are the laughing stock of the rest of the country, with your big time aspirations and your small town realities.

Most of my speech to-night is trite stuff, I'll admit; but what am I to do with an audience like this? I shall, of course, commend you volubly upon having reached this nth degree of intelligence; but the wonder is that you in this community have survived the ordeal of propinquity for so lengthy a period.

In closing I shall render that classic of epics—"Casey at the Bat." Anything deeper would go miles above your heads. Besides it's the only thing I know by heart. A little so-called poetry at the end of a speech and the audience always go home saying to one another, "What a wonderful memory that man must have!" And from the antiquity of the jokes I have interspersed throughout my message of this evening I am inclined to believe so myself.

At the next election I hope to be so far away from your gatherings that I shall be deaf to your entreaties to be with you—unless I fail to and that senatorship. You will excuse my leaving early. A couple of the visitors have arranged a real party at the hotel.

Oh, can't you hear the tramp
And the stamp, stahmp, stamp

Oh, can't you hear the din?
If you can, you surely win—
You've got better ears than I have,

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are tooting horns and racing motors too.
If you can laugh when hard-boiled cops shout out: "You!
Get back in line until I let you through!"
If you can wait, and not be tired by waiting,
While some dub wrecks your bumper and your lights;
Or, being cussed cut, don't give way to cussing,
Or pull a gun and line up both the sights.

If you can guess the other chap's intention,
And know if he'll turn left or turn to right;
If you're familiar with the fourth dimension,
And know just what to do when traffic's tight.
If you can watch the "Stop" and "Go" signs flutter,
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools.
If you can sass a cop without a stutter,
Each time you're stopped for violating rules.

If you can make a turn where there's "No Turning,"
Or drive the wrong way in a "One-way Street."
If you can smile when all your brakes are burning
And the motor balks each ten or twenty feet.
If you can keep on going without worry
When you know the gasoline is getting low;
If you can loaf along while others hurry,
And then speed past those warnings: "School—Go Slow."

If you can drive through crowds and never falter,
And miss pedestrians by an inch or two.
If you can wear a smile that will not alter
When five and ten-ton trucks lurch out at you.
If you can see your wheels and fenders crumpled,
And greet the man who did it with a grin:
You'll have no trouble driving in the city—
But you're a better man than I am, Gunga Din!

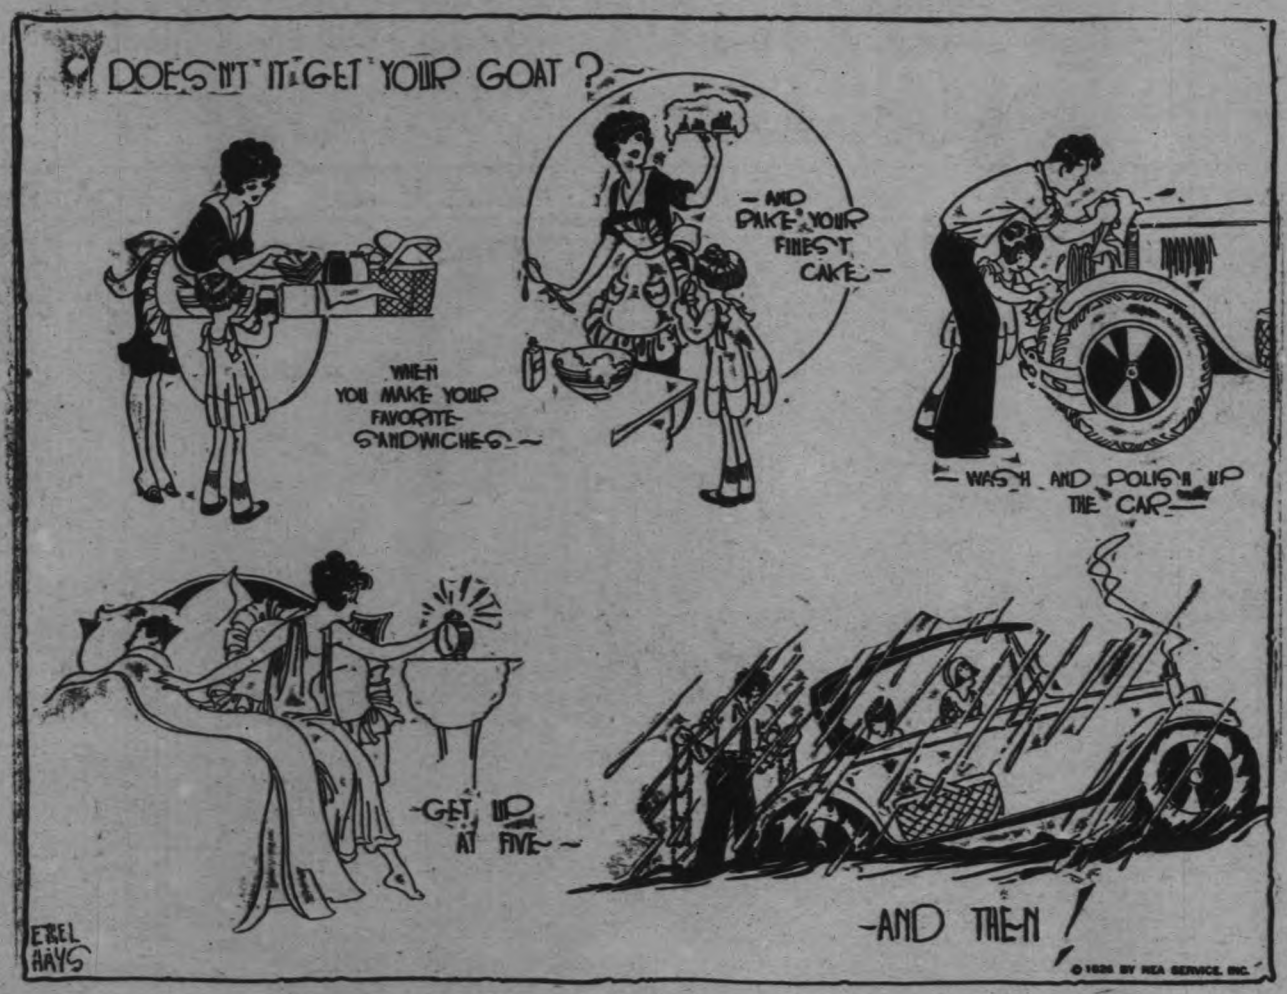
DID IT HAPPEN TO YOU



NOBLESSE OBLIGE - By Cyril B. Egan

To make a man forget a jumping toothache, truly a woman must be beautiful.

Beautiful was she who sat opposite me in the dental parlor. One look at her face, and the tiny but intensive inferno that vexed my incisors was, for the nonce, nonexistent.

So calm was she, as she pretended to read the antediluvian "Ladies Designer" which rested on her knee. Had one not noticed the handkerchief she tightly pressed against her mouth, one little would have suspected that this divinity could be beset by the pesky ills of ordinary mortals.

We were alone. . . From within, howls of agony could be heard as Snap and Draggem plied their forceps.

We were alone. . . . Were it not for the aforesaid howls, one might have said that a holy calm pervaded Snap and Draggem's anteroom. I took advantage of our mutual aloneness and the scream-punctuated calm to grasp the lady tenderly by the hand.

"Madam," I said impulsively—"You are beautiful! So beautiful that you have made me oblivious of my jumping toothache. I would that I were gazeonable as you, that you too, in gazing on me, might be oblivious of your dental agony."

She whom I would make my companion in a sort of mollified misery, dropped the "Ladies Designer" to the floor, and quickly withdrew her hand.

"Sir," she said, her eye flashing fire—"you are rude, you are unconventional!"

"Is it rude," I queried, "to inform a benefactress of her benefaction? And as for convention, should people stranded on a desert island permit themselves to be hampered by the artificial restraint of the drawing-room? Here are we two, stranded on a desert island of mutual pain. Why should we not comfort and console each other, and in some measure mitigate our diabolical agonies? If I seem overbold, remember, Madam, a man is not to be held responsible who has lain awake five nights with the jumping toothache, remember that, and forgive me!"

Something in my tone seemed to strike a tender chord in the lady's bosom. A tear started to cut a channel through the powder on the left side of her dainty nose.

"Poor fellow!" she condoled, "how long have you had it?"

"Since first I saw you!" I promptly replied.

The lady with the toothache flushed.

"I thought you said the sight of me rid you of your pain!"

"Ah," cried I, clutching my heart—"of one pain—yes!"

"Silly boy!" said the lady; but she smiled nevertheless.

I could see she, too, had forgotten her toothache. . . . Was I really as irresistible as that?

Again I took her hand, and patted it. She laid her head upon my shoulder. "Now isn't it nonsensical," said I, "the way patients in waiting glare and grouch one at another when they might be comforting one another—thus—in the hour of their trial?" And there was more talk of this sort.

I don't know how long we were seated thus; but it seemed no time at all until two final howls emanated from the interior, two cash registers rang out joyously on the pharmaceutical air, and Snap and Draggem smilingly and simultaneously made their appreaance at the doors of their respective dental dens.

"So long!" I exclaimed to my fair companion. "See you—"

But before I could complete the sentence, Dr. Snap had grabbed the toothachey lady and whisked her through his open doorway. So there was nothing to do but consign myself to the eager attentions of Dr. Draggem.

Isn't Fate great?

We emerged the lady and I, almost at the same moment. She was only a little ahead of me; as I stepped from Draggem's door, she was opening the door that led to the street.

I ran up to her. I took her by the arm. I led her gently to a seat. Again we were alone. . . .

She looked wan and sad. She held a handkerchief to her mouth. I held one to my mouth. . . .

I could not speak. My condition would not permit me. Yet I must say something. I grabbed one of Draggem's appointment blanks, and while the room swam about me, indited my ove this note:

Dear Lady:
I cannot permit you to get away from me.
You made me forget my jumping toothache. Any woman who has that power over me, deserves to marry me.
Will you? . . .

I handed her the note. She took it. Joy overspread her countenance. She dropped her handkerchief. She opened her mouth. She smiled.

"Yeth!" she said.

Horrors, her front tooth was missing!

But I was a gentleman. Noblesse oblige. I married her—knowing it would be such a comfort to the girl, to be mated to one who had also lost—a front tooth!

PAUL AMONG THE PROFESSORS

No woman is as bad as she looks to her enemies.

My name is Prying Paul. Having, at the age of thirty, completed my education and learned nothing, I resolved to make a thorough investigation of the causes of my ignorance, that I might embody said investigation in a book to be called, "Does Education Educate?"

I determined to start in at the top, and go clean through to the bottom. I did not intend to register, nor to strive for any degrees. For I had found by my scholastic experience, that not even an Annie Oakley ticket was needed to enter a classroom, as the main difficulty always seemed to lie in absenting oneself from the scene of lecture and study.

Taking my education in reverse, I began with an advanced class of post-graduate differential calculus. I learned nothing.

I then went to a law school, where I found the prospective upholders of the legal dignity of the State uttering loud caterwauls in contempt of their professors, who read from the book . . . As I expected, I learned nothing.

I then sojourned at a medical school, and found the faculty altogether incapable of importing anything to me.

I next tried an arts course in botany, history and fancy embroidery . . . I learned nothing whatsoever of these subjects, though I did pick up inadvertently some knowledge of footballistics together with a smattering of the chemistry of distillation.

Putting on short trousers I entered high school. There I learned how to read fraternity pins, but nothing besides.

Passing quickly, and innocently of all learning, through grammar and primary school, I ultimately disguised myself as an overgrown moron, and entered the kindergarten.

"Here at least," I thought, as I sat at my little desk waiting for the class to begin—"they must teach something. If they do not—Oh, what a book I shall write! I shall show up all the pedagogues in the world! I shall expose these chalk-talkers as the most colossal frauds and hypocrites of all professional people. I shall—"

At that juncture in my meditation, the kindergartner took my hand to give me a lesson in Palmer. There was something electric in her touch. I looked up and saw her bending over me. She was beautiful. Our eyes met, and we fell in love at a glance.

"Madam," I said impulsively, "will you marry me?"

It really was too bad that romance should so have spoiled my life work. The lady, admiring the dashing spirit of a lad who would dare to propose to his teacher, subsequently gave me many lessons in Palmer, and finally accepted me.

Yet in a way, though gallantry forbids me to write a book about it, the goal of my life work has been attained. I learned nothing, in these lessons in Palmer about Palmer; and thus, experimentally and triumphantly, I have clenched the cumulative proof of my thesis—that Education is the Cause of All Ignorance!

The Forgotten British By Sir Phillip Gibbs

A friend of mine who happens to be a Scot, and generous in his admiration of England and the English, suggests that I should write something about ourselves, or, as he puts it, "the much-maligned, much-misunderstood British."

The idea occurred to him after reading Mr. Baldwin's recent tribute to the Scottish character, with their love of thrift, their love of education for its own sake, and that high spirit of adventure which has driven the Scotsman out to every country in the world.

"Nobody stops to give us English a pat on the back," says my friend. "We're despised, suspected, hated, in spite of all our qualities and virtues. They're the better qualities because we don't often talk about them, but once in a while it might be good to take stock of ourselves instead of indulging in self-criticism."

Well, that is a pleasant idea, especially in this time of mental depression resulting from strikes and bad trade. But I think my friend rather underestimates the good opinion we have of ourselves, and exaggerates the ill-being of foreign peoples. Certainly in America since the general strike there has been a chorus of praise for the steadiness, courage, common sense and good humour revealed by all classes in this country during that crisis.

In other countries that recent chapter of story has been recorded with high praise. Even France, highly critical of our character, extraordinarily ignorant of our mentality, has acknowledged in the French press that it was filled with admiration for the behavior, the good temper, the whimsicality of the British people in that industrial conflict.

"Truly," said one correspondent, "they are a very odd people — those English—with many remarkable qualities that are only revealed in time of danger or difficulty."

We certainly are a very odd people, and foreigners are baffled by us.

The truth is that we don't understand ourselves. I have been trying to analyse the character of our own people for many years past, but I frankly confess that I am still perplexed. Have we any national characteristics at all, or are we only a collection of individualities working together now and again, but generally playing a lone hand, thinking our own thoughts, each one different from his neighbor?

Perhaps the many strains of blood in our race account for this lack of clear-cut qualities, making a definite national type. Perhaps that accounts also for the genius that crops up continually, and has done all through the ages, producing great artists, though we are not an artistic nation, great musicians, though we cannot support an opera house in London, great poets who were the sons of middle-class folk without a touch of romance or imagination.

When two young people get their heads together—they may be dancing.

We are the most paradoxical people in the whole world. We make almost a religion of home life, yet we were the pioneers of the world's wildernesses, the explorers, adventurers and sea rovers.

As an island people we are shy of foreigners, yet we have planted our flag at the far ends of the earth, and administer territories vastly bigger than our own country with more success than any other race.

We are, in many ways—outside Scotland—a badly educated people. At least, education is not taken very seriously, and is not allowed to interfere too much with the more serious pursuit of sport. But somehow we have given a lead to the world in most branches of scholarship, in many departments of science, in the general advance of knowledge.

We are, as a rule, an easy-going, tolerant, law-abiding folk, not passionate in politics, interested in the other fellow's point of view, instinctively in favour of fair play. But just now and again we ride rough shod over other people's feelings, narrow our vision to one object and become violently intolerant of any unpopular opinion. An odd people truly!

In my judgment it is our sense of humour which is our saving grace and distinguishes us from most other people.

We laugh at the orator who grows purple in the face over his own eloquence. We find something comic in discomforts and inconveniences as when we had to walk because trains had ceased running. We find something rather amusing in high faluting phrases.

We make rather a game of life, if possible, where other people would make a tragedy. If we must have a war our men go to it laughing, and call their dug-outs by fancy names, and have nicknames for the shells that kill them, and find a kind of grisly humour in the odd tricks of death itself, and keep smiling until the thing becomes beyond the strain of human nerves.

We shall never have a brutal revolution in this country because it would be too absurd to be governed by an A. J. Cook, too ridiculous to kill respectable middle-class citizens on their way home to the suburbs. A gust of laughter would blow our little revolutionaries into the middle of next week.

Some good fairy or divine dispensation put this sense of humour into the mid of the Englishman—a whimsical outlook on life which prevents him from taking life or himself too seriously. At least, he will always keep looking over his shoulder for any joke about the great man stumbling over a bit of banana peel, that pomposity coming a croppe before his audience, that glib fellow getting a snub from a man who knows the facts.

The Scotsman's humour is rather different, not quite so irresponsible and light-hearted, but very shrewd. The Irishman's qualities would need an article by themselves, and have no relation whatever to the English or Scottish temperament.

The Irishman has a long memory for ancient feuds, but the Englishman is not a good hater and will shake hands with his worst enemy after a hard fight. The Irishman is gay in good company, and hugs sadness to his heart when he is left alone. The Englishman is seldom gay, though always humorous, and he is able to take pleasure in his own society if he has a pipe to smoke and a dog at his heels.

The Irishman is passionate in defence of his principles, right or wrong, and follows them to the death, through fair ways or foul. The Englishman has no principles, but only tradition, instinct and good temper.

The Scot thinks before he speaks, makes a little secret philosophy of his own, and always gets the best job because he is more industrious than the Englishman and less temperamental than the Irishman.

Between us we have built up a great Empire, and given a wealth of genius to the world, although we cannot find a solution for the coal stoppage, nor pull ourselves together during this time of trouble, when all our past prosperity is gravely threatened! But because of those human qualities in our blood, those odd freaks of genius that keep breaking out in us, this combination of character, we may surprise the world again and muddle through once more.

LEADING QUESTIONS.

Government official (before the investigation)—What are me going to get out of it?

Same official (a fem weeks later)—How are we going to get out of it?

Prof.—Why are you late for class this morning?

Student—Well, a sign down here—

"Well, what has a sign got to do with it?"

"The sign said: 'School Ahead: Go slow.'"

To err is human. To keep it up is foolish.

HOW TO GET RICH QUICK

Organize the go-getters of your city into a club. At their first meeting they will all start talking about taking the word "can't" out of the distionary. Pretty soon some one will denounce Webster for ever putting it in. This is your cue. "Gentlemen," you say, getting the floor if you can (and every go-getter can), "I move we fine any member $10 who uses his detestable word or any of its synonyms." A deafening roar of approval will greet the motion, and it will be carried unanimously.

After the meeting you call on each member of the club separately. "I'm a little hard up," you say, "can you lend me $5 until Tuesday." "Sorry, old man," each go-getter will begin, "but." Then he will suddenly remember the fine. "Oh, sure I can," he will say.

After cleaning up from each member, you go to another town and do the thing all over. Any good man ought to make a thousand a week until he's caught.

BEAUTY TESTS

Check Your Charms On These Lists And Find Your Claim To Beauty

PERSONALITY.

BY BEVERLY SCHUYLER COLFAX
Who as "Mlle. Louise" is probably the highest paid social coach in the world.

Personality is the coin in which the business of life is transacted. In work, in play, in social contacts, it is the man or woman of charming personality who wins the prizes.

Beauty, style, brilliant intellect are not enough. Personality is more than these. But it is still a definite quality, to be attained by specific means, rather than the elusive and indefinable one which many persons imagine it.

Lack Is In Self.

Personality is that radiance from within which irresistibly attracts people to its possessor—that magnetism which brings friends, prestige, admiration and true affection.

When women come to me with a tale of loneliness, I say to them, "If your telephone does not vibrate with invitations from your acquaintances, if men do not admire you and women do not like you, the trouble is with you. There is a lack within which you must remedy."

We all "sell" our personalities a hundred times daily, to our business associates, to the street car conductor, the waiter, the saleswoman—in short to every one we meet. If we can attract their good will, our path through life will be smoothed and our joys increased.

The greatest obstacles to a pleasing personality are: lack of tolerance for the other person's point of view; stubbornness; violent partisan ship; lack of tact; the chip-on-the-shoulder attitude, poor vocabulary and envy.

By elimination of these negative qualities, any one can add to his attractions for other people and gain for himself a personality that will equip him for any situation.

Amazed at Weaknesses.

You will probably be astounded at the number of weaknesses in your own equipment for meeting the world—weaknesses which by a little work can be corrected.

INTELLIGENCE.

BY W. T. BENDA
Noted Artist.

The first requisite for beauty is intelligence. The most beautiful features and figure in the world are not attractive unless they express some spiritual beauty, some spiritual serenity.

If you would see examples you have only to watch the great dancers of the world.

Often they are women of almost plain features and not especially beautiful bodies, when viewed off stage. But in the dance, where their sublime knowledge of what is beautiful informs every movement, they create an illusion of ravishing beauty.

Since intelligence means beauty, any woman who wishes to make the most of her physical gifts should first examine them, note her weaknesses, and set about correcting them by the use of her intellect.

To my mind, grace, such as is born of exercise and joy of life, is more important than coloring or modeling. Proper outdoor exercise will correct deficiencies of the physique, develop grace, freshen the coloring and stimulate the mind.

There are, of course, fundamental principles that underlie physical beauty. Elementary as these may seem to the artist, they are generally unknown to the layman.

I have set down some of these simple rules to furnish the basis of a self-examination.

On the scale of 100 for perfection, value each question according to the number in parenthesis after it.

Proportion.

1. Is the relation of the length of the head to that of the entire body the relation of one to seven and three-quarters? (5)
2. Does the length of the legs equal that of the torso plus that of the head? Most modern women are too short-legged. (5)
3. Do the arms, outstretched, measure from tip of finger to tip of finger, the height of the body? Variation of an inch allowed here. (5)
4. Does the hand reach from the tip of the chin to the middle of the forehead? Much variation may be expected here. (5)
5. Are these three lengths equal—height of forehead, length of nose and measurement from base of nose to tip of chin? (5)
6. Is the length of the eye equal to the distance between the eyes? (5)

Features and Coloring.

1. Are the features neither over-developed nor under-developed? (5)
2. Is all unnecessary distortion of the face avoided in talking and laughing? (8)
3. Is all uncontrolled movement of the body avoided at all times? (8)
4. Is the face really quiet when in repose? The curse of modern life is the constant working of nerves and muscles of the face, to produce lines of strain and fatigue. (8)
5. Is the coloring fresh and healthy? (4)
6. Is the skin clear? (4)

Adornment.

1. Are the clothes simple and harmonious in line and color? (5)
2. Is the body well groomed? (8)

Intelligence.

1. Has the mind been developed until its radiance illuminates the body? (10)
2. Has the mind been trained to dominate the body, and avoid all things that would mar beauty? (10)

PHYSICAL BEAUTY.

By William R. P. Emerson M.D.

How far has the immense progress of modern medical science actually benefitted the mass of the people?

How far does the health intelligence of the average man of today surpass that of the man of 1826?

By "health intelligence" I mean that practical knowledge which you use in your daily life, as contrasted with whatever theoretical knowledge you may have gained from reading, from lectures, and from other sources. Such theoretical knowledge may have almost no effect on your own habits of living.

No amount of scientific discovery can be of general use unless the mass of the people can be persuaded to take advantage of it. Often the very people who have devoted their lives to helping others gain health have made little change in their own habits.

Physicians themselves are often sad specimens of the things they teach others to avoid. And in my extensive testing of school children, I have found that the children of doctors are no healthier, and sometimes less healthy than other children.

I have also found that college men are not superior in health intelligence to the uneducated man.

The first step toward real health intelligence is a checking up of one's present condition by a scientific chart. For this purpose I have prepared the following test, which will reveal exactly what your health status is.

Score yourself on a basis of five points for each question.

Control.

1. Have you had removable physical defects corrected?
2. Do you do anything habitually, which you can avoid, that you know is injurious to your health?
3. Are you regular in your habits of living? Especially as regards having your meals on time? Regular exercise? Time in the open air? Sleep?
4. Do you control your likes and dislikes in matters re[illegible] health?
5. Are you the [illegible] of worry and fretfulness?

Rest and Fatigue.

1. Do you go to [illegible] regularly at a reasonable hour [illegible] at night?
2. Do you take a [illegible] period?
3. Do you know [illegible] to stop work and play? Or are [illegible] the victim of overdoing?
4. Do you eat when tired?
5. Do you take real vacations, regularly, either yearly, monthly or week-ends?

Food and Food Habits

1. Are you finicky about your food?
2. Do you overeat or habitually not eat enough?
3. Are you a fast eater or do you wash your food down with liquids?
4. Do you have your meals on time regularly?
5. Have you the candy or sweets-between-meals habit?

Health Habits.

1. Do you work in good air with a temperature of about 68 degrees or less?
2. Do you sleep with your windows shut or only slightly opened?
3. Do you have regular time for the bowels daily?
4. Do you take regular exercise and spend sufficient time out of doors and in the sunlight?
5. Do you take strong tea or coffee or smoke to excess?

Golf's a good game after you learn what you are driving at.

The sun's age is said to be five billion years. Its long life may be due to its never staying out at night.

A Letter Of The Contract - By Basil King

A NEW WEEKLY SERIAL

CHAPTER I.
The Girl in the Park.

It was strange to think that if, on finishing her coffee in her room, she had looked in on the children, as she generally did, instead of going down to the drawing-room to write a note, her whole life might have been different.

Everything that morning had something of the force of fate. Why, on entering the drawing-room, hadn't she gone straight to her desk, according to her intention, if it wasn't that fate intervened? As a matter of fact, she went to the oriel window looking down into the avenue, with vague thoughts of the weather. It was one of those small Scotch corner windows that show you both sides of the street at once.

If she had gone to her desk, that girl might have disappeared before the lines of the note were penned. As it was, the girl was there, standing as she had stood on other occasions—three or four, at least—between the two little iron posts that spaced off the opening for foot-passengers into the Park.

She was looking up at the house in the way Edith had noticed before—not with the scrutiny of one who wishes to see, but with the forlorn patience of the unobtrusive creature hoping to be seen.

She might have been a person with a sorrow—a love-sorrow. At that thought Edith's heart went out to her in sympathy—she herself was so happy.

Her pity was sincere, and her happiness came from the knowledge of her security. She was genuinely sorry for the girl, if the girl needed sorrow; but she didn't see what she could do to help her.

It was well-known that out in that life of New York—and of the world—there were tempests of passion in which lives were wrecked; but from them she, herself, was as surely protected by her husband's love as, in her warm and well-stored house, she was shielded from hunger and the storm.

The miracle of it struck her afresh—that the great, strong man now entering the dining room, with his broad shoulders and splendid head, should be hers!

She herself was a little woman, of soft curves and dimpling smiles and no particular beauty; and he had stooped, in his strength and tenderness, to make her bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh, as she had become.

And he had become bone of her bone and flesh of her flesh.

She was no more his than he was hers! That was the great fact.

She was no longer content with the limited formula, "They twain shall be one flesh;" they twain had become one spirit and one life.

It was while asserting this to herself that she saw him start. He started back from the window—the large central window—to which he had gone, probably with vague thoughts of the weather, like herself.

It was the manner of his start that chiefly attracted her attention. After drawing back he peered forward.

It was an absurd thing to think of him; she knew that—of him of all people—but one would almost have that, in his own house, he shrank from being seen.

But there was the fact. There was his attitude—his tiptoeing—his way of leaning toward the mantelpiece at an angle from which he could see what was going on in the Park and yet be protected by the curtain.

Then it came to her that she was spying on him. Never in her life had she known such a rush of shame. Bending over the desk, she scribbled blindly, "dinner on Tuesday evening the twenty-fourth at—" When she glanced up again he had gone.

Later she heard him at the telephone.

CHAPTER II.
A Meeting.

"I've telephoned a taxi to take me downtown," he explained, as he pulled on his gloves. He generally took the street-car in Madison Avenue.

"Aren't you well, Chipman?" she thought it permissible to ask.

"Oh yes; I'm all right."

"Then why—?"

He made an effort to be casual: "Well, I just thought I would."

She had decided not to question him—it was a matter of honor or pride with her, she was not sure which.

Was it her imagination that watched while he crossed the pavement hurriedly, to spring into the automobile before he could be observed? She tried to think so. It was easier to question her own sanity than to doubt him!

Then before the car had got so far away as to be indistinguishable from other vehicles she saw it slowly draw up at the curb toward the Park—and from another of the little openings with iron posts to space them off appeared the girl in gray.

She advanced promptly, as if she had been called. At the door of the car she stood for a few minutes in conversation with the occupant. For one of the two at least that method of communication was apparently not satisfactory, for he stepped out, dismissed the cab, and accompanied the girl through the little opening into the Park.

In a second or two they were out of sight, down one of the sloping path ways.

* * *

During the next few months Edith had no explanation of this mystery, nor did she seek one. After the first days of amazement and questioning she fell back on what she took to be her paramount duty—to trust.

The wonder was that he never spoke of it. He was so much in the habit of relating to her all the happenings, both trivial and important, of each day, that his silence with regard to this one, which surely must be considered strange—strange, if no more—was noticable.

A wretched woman toward whom he was acting on behalf of a friend! It surely couldn't couldn't be a wretched woman toward whom he was acting, not on behalf of a friend, but——

CHAPTER III.
From Gray to Rose.

One May afternoon, going up the Park pathway leading to the opening opposite her house, she noticed a figure standing between the two iron posts.

It was not a figure in gray, but one in white—in white, with a rose-colored sash, and carrying a rose-colored parasol. Edith quickened her pace, dominated by a need—the need of coming face to face with this person and seeing who she was.

She had no idea what she herself would do or say, or whether or not she would do or say anything.

That was secondary; it would take care of itself. The immediate impulse was too imperative to resist.

She must at least see, even if nothing came of her doing so. If she had any thought of a resulting consequence it was in the assumption that her presence as wife and woman of the world would dispel the noxious thing she had been striving to combat for the past two months, as the sun dissipates a miasma.

But her approaches were careful and courteous. Edith, too, carried a parasol, negligently, gracefully, over the shoulder. It served to conceal her face till she had passed the stranger by a pace or two and glanced casually backward. She might have done so, however, with full deliberation, for the woman took no notice of her at all. Her misty, troubled blue eyes, of which the lids were red as if from weeping, were fixed on the house across the way.

Edith saw now that, notwithstanding a certain youthfulness of dress and bearing, this was a woman, not a girl. The face was of the blond, wistful, Scandinavian type that fades from pallor to pallor without being perceptibly stamped by time. It was pallor like that of the white rose after it has passed the perfection of its bloom and before it has begun to wither.

Edith paused, still without drawing the misty eyes on herself.

"Do you know the people in that house?" she asked, at last.

The woman looked at her, not inquiringly or with much show of comprehension, but vaguely and as from distance. Edith repeated the question.

The thin, rather bloodless lips parted. The answer seemed to come under compulsion from a stronger will: "I—I know—"

"You know the gentleman."

The pale, thin lips parted again. After a second, or two, there was a barely audible "Yes."

"I'm his wife."

There was no sign on the woman's part either of surprise or of quickened interest.

CHAPTER IV.
"Be ore He Was Mine."

"You knew he was married, didn't you?" Edith went on.

"Oh, yes. He always said he would marry some day. It had nothing to do with me. We agreed on that from the first."

"From the first of—what?"

"From the first of everything," said the other woman; "eleven years ago."

Before putting the next question Edith took time to think. She was so startlingly cool and clear.

"So it was—everything?"

In uttering the words she felt oddly shy. She looked down at the pavement, then, with a flutter of the eyelids, up at the woman. But the woman herself showed no such hesitation.

"Oh, yes."

"And is—still?"

And then the woman who was not a girl, but who was curiously like a child, suddenly took fright. Tears came to her eyes; there was a convulsive movement of the face. Edith could see she was a person who wept easily.

"I won't tell you any more!"

The declaration was made in a tone of childish fretfulness.

Edith grew soothing. "I'm sorry if I've hurt your feelings. Don't mind speaking, because it doesn't make any difference to me—now."

The woman stared, the tears wet on her cheeks. "Don't you—love him?"

Edith was ready with her answer. It came firmly: "No."

"Didn't you—ever?"

This time Edith considered, answering more slowly. "I don't know. If I ever did—the thing is so dead—that I don't understand how it could ever have been alive."

The woman dried her eyes. "I don't see how you can help it."

"You can't help it, can you?" Edith smiled, with a sense of her own superiority. "I suppose that's the reason you come here. I've seen you before."

"Have you?"

"Yes: several times. And that is the reason, isn't it?—because you can't help loving him."

The woman's tears began to flow again. "It's because I don't know what else to do. When he doesn't come any more—"

"Oh, so he doesn't come."

"Not unless I make him. When he sees me here—"

"Well, what then?"

"He gets angry. He comes to tell me that if I do it again—"

"I see. But he comes. It brings him. That's the main thing, isn't it? Well, now that you've told me so much, I'll—I'll try to—to send him." She was struck with a new thought. "If you were to come in now—you could—you could wait for him."

The frightened look returned. "Oh, but he'd kill me!"

"Oh no, he wouldn't." She smiled again, with a sense of her superiority. "He wouldn't kill you when he knew I didn't care."

"But don't you care?"

She shook her head. "No, and I shall never care again. He can do what he likes. He's free—and so are you. I'd rather he went to you. Eleven years, did you say? Why, he was your husband long before he was mine."

"Oh no; he was never my husband. We agreed from the first—"

"He wasn't your husband according to the strict letter of the contract; but I don't care anything about that. It's what I call being your husband. I'd rather you took him back. . . . Oh, Heavens! There he is."

CHAPTER V.
"We Three."

Chipman Walker stood on the other side of the street watching them. How long he had been there neither of them knew. Engrossed in the subject between them, and screened by their sunshades, they hadn't noticed him come round the corner on his way home.

He stood leaning on his stick. For a minute or more there was no change in his attitude, even when the terrified eyes of the women told him he was observed. As he began to thread his way among the vehicles to cross the street he displayed neither haste nor confusion.

Edith could see that, though he was pale and grave, he could, even in this situation, carry himself with dignity. In its way, it was something to be glad of. She herself stood her ground as a man on a sinking ship waits for the waves to engulf him.

Reaching the pavement, he ignored his wife to go directly to the woman.

"What does this mean, Maggie?"

His tone was not so much stern as reproachful. The faded woman, who was still trying to make herself young and pretty, quailed at it.

Edith came to her relief:

"Isn't that something for you to explain, Chip?"

He turned to his wife. "I'm willing to explain anything you like, Edith—as far as I can.

"I won't ask you how far that is—because I know already everything I need to know."

"Everything you need to know—what for?"

"For understanding my position, I suppose."

"Your position? Your position is that of my wife."

"Oh no, it isn't. There's your wife."

"Don't say that, Edith. That lady would be the first to tell you—"

"She has been the first to tell me. She's been extremely kind. She's answered my questions with a frankness—"

"But you're not kind, Edith. Surely you see that—that mentally she's not—not like every one else."

"Oh, quite. I don't think I am now. I doubt if I ever shall be again. No woman can be mentally like every one else after she's been deceived as we've been."

"She hasn't been deceived, Edith; and I should never have deceived you if—"

She laughed without mirth. "If you hadn't wanted to keep me in the dark."

"No; if I hadn't had responsibilities ——"

"Responsibilities! Do you call that"—her glance indicated the woman, whose misty stare went from the one to the other in a vain effort to follow what they were saying—"do you call that a responsibility."

"I'm afraid I do, Edith."

"And what about—me?"

"Hasn't a man more responsibilities than one?"

"A married man hasn't more wives than one."

"A married man has to take his life as his life has formed itself. He was an unmarried man first."

"Which means, I suppose, that the ties he formed when he was an unmarried man—"

"May bind him still—if they're of a certain kind."

"And yours are—of a certain kind."

"They're of that kind. I haven't been able to free myself from them. But don't you think we'd better go in? We can hardly talk about such things out here."

She bowed to a passing friend. He, too, lifted his hat. When the friend had gone by she glanced hastily toward the house.

"No, I can't go in," she said, hurriedly. "I'd rather talk out here."

"Very well, then. We can take a stroll in the Park?"

"What? We three?"

"Oh, she's gone—if that's the only reason."

CHAPTER VI.
"She's Quite Well Dressed."

Turning, Edith saw the woman with the rose-colored parasol rapidly descending the path by which she had come.

"I'd still rather stay out here," she said. "If I were to go in, I think it would—"

"Yes? What?"

"I think it would kill me."

"Oh, come, Edith. Let's face the thing calmly. Don't let us become hysterical."

"Am I hysterical, Chip?"

"In your own way, yes. Where another woman would make a fuss, you're unnaturally frozen; but it comes to the same thing. I know that your heart—"

"Is breaking. Oh, I don't deny that. But I'd rather it broke here than indoors. I don't know why, but I can stand it here, with people going by; whereas in there—"

"Oh, cut it, Edith, for God's sake! Can't you see that my heart's breaking, too?"

She looked him in the face, shaking her head sadly. "No, Chip, I can't see that! If there had been any danger of it you wouldn't have—"

"But I couldn't help it. That's what you don't seem to understand."

"No; I'm afraid I don't."

"Would you try to understand—if I were to tell you?"

"I think I know already most of what you'd have to say. She's a woman whom you knew long before you knew me—and from whom you've never been able—"

"She was the daughter of a Swedish Lutheran minister—dead now—established in New Jersey. In some way she drifted to the stage. Her name was Margarethe Kastenskjold. When she went on the stage she made it Maggie Clare. She had about as much talent for the theater as a paper doll. When I first knew her she was still getting odd jobs in third and fourth rate companies since then she hasn't played at all."

"I understand. There's been no need of it. She's quite well dressed."

"Let me go on, will you, Edith? I was about two or three and twenty then. She may have been a year or two older. That time Billy Cummings was in love with her. And somehow it happened—after Billy died—and she was stranded—"

She made an appealing gesture. "Please! I know how those things come about—or I can easily imagine. In your case—I'd—I'd rather not try." She got the words out somehow without breaking down.

(To be continued next Saturday.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SUMMER SNOW

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis.)

"Ho, Buster, where are you?" called Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy as she stood in the doorway of the hollow stump bungalow one day.

Buster did not answer.

"How about you, Custer?" went on the muskrat lady housekeeper.

Custer did not answer.

"Ho, Jingle, Jangle! Scooter, Tooter! Where are you all?" went on Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

But none of the little children bunnies answered, for they were off playing in the woods and fields, making the most of vacation time since, in a few weeks, school would open again.

Excuse me for mentioning it, but there is no help for it. I know you don't like to think about it, but never mind. Next summer will soon be here.

"Dear me!" murmured Nurse Jane as she went back in the bungalow. "What am I going to do?"

"What is the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily who was getting ready to hop away to look for an adventure. "May I have the pleasure of doing anything for you, Nurse Jane?"

"I need some white soap chips to wash out some fluffy dresses for your wife," explained Nurse Jane. "I am too busy, or I would go to the store myself and get the chips."

"I'll go," offered Uncle Wiggily. "It may bring me an adventure."

"It is kind of you," spoke the muskrat lady. "Bring me a large package of white soap chips."

Soon Uncle Wiggily was on his way, whistling a merry tune and saucily twinkling his pink nose up at the blue sky. It did not take him long to buy the pasteboard box of soap chips, which were as light and fluffy as feathers.

"It is a hot day," said Uncle Wiggily to himself on the way home, "so I will just go back by way of the swimming hole and take a dip." Then he laughed to think what might happen if he took the box of soap chips in swimming with him. "They would make a lot of foam and bubbles enough to fill a giant's pipe!" chuckled the bunny.

"Stop! Hold on! I want you!

He soon reached the swimming hole, and was about to take a dip in the cool water when, all of a sudden, he heard and saw a rustling in the bushes where he was going to hide his clothes.

"Ah, ha!" said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "That may be the Fox, the Wolf or one of the bad chaps, waiting to take my coat and vest so I can't go home after my swim. I must be careful!"

Uncle Wiggily looked carefully at the bush, and beneath it he saw the Skillery Scallery Alligator with the double jointed tail.

"Ah, this is no place for me!" shouted the bunny and he began to run. But the 'Gator saw the rabbit and came waddling after him, calling: "Wait! Stop! Hold on! I want you!" and all manner of things like that.

But Uncle Wiggily never stopped. Instead he ran all the faster. However the 'Gator waddled very fast also, and he had almost caught up to the bunny gentleman, and was just reaching out a claw to grasp Mr. Longears by his short, little tail, when all of a sudden Uncle Wiggily stubbed his toe on a stone.

He stubbed his toe and fell, and as he fell the box of white, fluffy soap chips bounced out of his paws, and striking on a sharp rock, broke and scattered all over. In an instant the air was filled with white flakes in a cloud.

"Burr Wow! Woggie boggie!" howled the surprised 'Gator. "Snow in the summer time! This is most remarkable. Uncle Wiggily must be a magician. He may turn me into a postage stamp! I'd better run!"

And run away the bad chap did thinking the soap chips was summer snow. Uncle Wiggily heard what the 'Gator said, and the bunny laughed to himself as he picked himself up and then picked up the soap chips which he took home to Nurse Jane.

"Thank you," said the muskrat lady as she started to wash.

"Pray don't mention it," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "I had a wonderful adventure!" And if the darning needle doesn't get an eye full of water when it looks up at the sky to see if it's raining, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the turkeys' tent.

Sweet Sixteen and Ought to be Spanked - By Dorothy Flack

"Sweet sixteen and never been kissed," it used to be.

But time, tide and blazing adolescence don't seem to wait for any man, nowadays. Youth will have its fling, and in the present generation is flinging things a bit far.

Cigarettes—blandly exhibited knees—jewels splashing everywhere—candles burning gaily.

But still she is SWEET sixteen, and, though you cannot vouch for the UNKISSED part of the story, you've got to admit she is charming, and innocent, too, in spite of her widely heralded naughtiness.

She is getting a KICK out of forbidden things. But don't worry—things lose their kick when they are no longer forbidden, and pretty soon sweet sixteen sees the shallowness of it all.

She finds that the much vaunted freedom she has tasted so avidly is, after all, only a figure of speech.

She settles down and learns how to cook—and how to laugh at herself for having been so silly!

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

R. H. Ferger, Advertising Manager of the Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer, says: THAT advertising is the driving force of modern business.

It is so essential that it is folly to expect any business to thrivs these days without the aid of judicious publicity.

"It pays to advertise" is a slogan that has become trite—we never stop to question the truth of it, although we all know instances where advertising has not come up to expectations, as far as results were concerned.

Close analysis invariably proves, however, that these failiures, in every instance, can be traced to the wrong application of the laws of advertising, such as unrepresentative copy, the use of the wrong media, or insufficient expenditure.

Repetition is the thing that counts in successful advertising.

This has been proved over and over again, by manufacturers of nationally distributed merchandise, who imagined that their brands were so firmly established that they could dispense with all advertising for a season or two. This policy has always resulted in an alarming falling off in sales.

The history of advertising is filled with striking proofs of human forgetfulness, so much that not even the greatest corporation or popular product can expect to build up a reputation which will endure without the sustaining power of constant publicity.

Modify the superlative—remember that the public is surfeited with exaggerations—concentrate on value and service, live up to your statements and your advertising will be a profitable investment instead of a doubtful expenditure.

League Leaders In International On The Losing End

CRESCENTS ELIMINATE LINDSAY FROM INTERMEDIATE PLAY-OFFS WINNING IN SUDDEN DEATH GAME

Local Entry in O.B.A.A. Series Has Little Trouble Gaining Victory.

SCORE IS 19-5.

Visitors Play Listless Ball, While Masterson Pitches Sterling Game.

Oakwoods, champions of the Lindsay Town League, passed out of the O.B.A.A. Intermediate series very easily yesterday evening, being beaten 19-5 by Crescents, champions of the East Peterborough League, in a sudden-death game at Exhibition Park. The visitors, a mixture of veterans and young players, managed by Les Richman, played a listless game, with the result that the winners scored a great many more runs than their hitting warranted.

"Casey" Masterson was the hero of the Crescents' victory. He struck out thirteen batsmen, made three hits, two of them doubles, drove in five runs, and scored two himself. In the hitting end of the game he was given good support by LeBarr, who had three hits, one a double. Good fielding efforts were made by the whole team.

The visiting hurlers were not up to the form expected of Intermediate players. They were all wild, and their catcher, Brown, set an example of listless play for the team by refusing to chase even the shortest passed balls. The rest of the team played rather poorly, and contributed a couple of bone-head plays in addition. Rich, at shortstop, made up for his mates' lassitude by making the feature catch of the game, running right over to the foul line to pull down a high ball from Scully's bat.

Fever, a substitute, was the only visiting hitter to make more than one hit. He had a double and a single, both timely. Murchison made the longest hit of the game when he lofted one far over McCarney's head, and streaked around the bases, pulling up at third as the ball was nearing the infield on its return trip.

The Crescents started out to chase Starr in the first innings. Joe Jones worked him for a walk and McCarney sacrificed. Jones stole third and scored when Langdon mussed up Scully's grounder. The latter was sacrificed to second by Ranger, and scored when Masterson doubled to right centre. Corbett struck out.

Starr was knocked out in the second. F. Jones was safe on an error, reaching second on a bad throw. He stayed there while LeBarr bounced a hit off Langdon's bare hand. Rishea hit to Rich but the shortstop's throw to third for the force out hit Jones in the back. With the bases full, Joe Jones was passed, forcing in a run. McCarney grounded to Forbert, LeBarr scoring. A play was made to the plate on Scully's infield tap, but Jones held third. A passed ball and a wild pitch put Jones across and Scully on third, while Ranger was striking out. Starr was yanked and Masterson greeted Goodhand, who came in from left field, with a double, scoring Scully. Corbett walked, but F. Jones rolled to Rich.

Four runs without a hit featured the third. LeBarr walked and stole second and third. Rishea and J. Jones struck out. McCarney was passed and he and LeBarr pulled off a double steal. McCarney advanced to third when Brown let the ball go through on the play. Scully was walked and stole second, and both runners scored when Cook dropped Ranger's liner. The latter stole second third and scored on an error by Murchison, which gave Masterson a base. Corbett struck out.

An error put one Lindsay man on in the first, but he went out trying to make third on an overthrow to catch him stealing. Another was safe on an error in the second, but was stranded, as was Fever, who walked in the third.

The first three innings required slightly over an hour to play, and were listless in the extreme. In the fourth the visitors brightened up a little, scoring four runs when Murchison's triple after Brown had been walked gave them a good start. Murchison scored on a wild pitch and Langdon walked. Goodhand and Forbert fanned. Langdon, who had stolen second, went to third on Cook's single and scored, followed by Cook, when Fever singled. The second runner should have been out but Rishea let the throw from the field go through. Rich fanned.

The Crescents didn't get a runner on in the fourth, and neither team did anything in the fifth. In the sixth Forbert doubled with two out, but Cook made the third strike-out victim of the inning.

The Crescents went on a rampage in their half of the sixth. Ranger dropped a single back of first. He stole second and Masterson walked. The runners took two bases when Murchison fumbled Corbett's grounder, and the big second baseman added to his laurels by standing about ten feet from the bag after throwing to Langdon. The latter prepared to throw back to get Corbett but Murchison was not ready. Two wild pitches put Masterson and Corbett in, and F. Jones and LeBarr drew walks. Rishea struck out, but J. Jones singled to score his brother and LeBarr. Rich threw out McCarney and took Scully's fly.

The visitors scored one in the seventh. Fever doubled and scored on a single by Rich. The latter was caught stealing second and Richman and Brown struck out. In the Crescents' half Ranger was walked by Cook, who had taken up the pitching burden, stole second, and scored on a single by Masterson. Corbett and F. Jones were out, and then LeBarr doubled and Rishea singled. Jones grounded to Fever. In the first of the eighth the visitors went out in order, and the game was called on account of darkness.

LEAFS' WINNING STREAK BROKEN BY THE BEARS

Triple Play By Toronto in Second Inning Features Game.

SKEETERS LOSE TWO.

Syracuse Hangs Up Its Seventh Victory Over Baltimore.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press)—The Newark Bears halted the Leafs' winning streak by taking yesterday's contest, 6 to 3. The feature of the game was a triple play by Toronto in the second inning, when Heath grabbed a line drive off Davis' bat, ran to first to double Carter and then caught Fonseca at second with a snap throw.

Syracuse hung up its ninth straight victory and its seventh straight conquest of Baltimore by beating the Orioles 4 to 2. Harold Haid allowed the Birds only six hits, two of them flukes and fanned eight. Hurst supplied the winning margin with a home run drive with two on in the sixth inning.

Rochester defeated Reading 9 to 3 in a loosely-played game. Reading's errors coupled with some well-timed hitting by the Tribe accounted for the lop-sided score.

Buffalo took two games from Jersey City, the first 13 to 9, and the night-cap 1 to 0. In the second game, Ferguson pulled out of a tight place in the seventh inning by fanning Moore when the bases were loaded, to end the game.

RECORD CROWD AT LADIES' DAY

Shining Light Captures Six Furlong Strech in the Fifth.

NO FEATURE EVENT.

KENILWORTH PARK, Windsor, Ont., August 28 (Canadian Press).—The third ladies' day this week attracted a crowd of around 6,000 at yesterday's races. While there was no feature events, the racing was keen and favorites and second choices had a good day.

A fair band of sprinters went to the post in the fifth, a dash of six furlongs, which went to the Beacon Manor Stable candidate, Shining Light. Jockey Barnett rushed the favorite to the top and just coasted under double wraps, winning unextended by two lengths. Perroquet, second choice, got the place, two and a half lengths further back, with Amir, a well-played good thing, getting the small end of the purse.

J. A. Gibson's Heretrix ran away with her field in the second event, a Canadian-bred dash, at seven furlongs. Jockey Ford indulged Pankets with the early lead and making his move rounding the turn for home won as he pleased. Pankets was driving desperately on end to stall off the determined challenge of Uptown.

An upset occurred in the first event which went to the long-priced Long View, owned by Johnny Farrell. The Campfire colt got the rail at the turn for home where the leaders, Indemnity and Colored Gal, went wide and was drivingf at the finish. Colored Gal, after bearing out, came again and was gaining on the winner. Big Mosquito, another long shot, got the show.

Tod Resenor, at a long price, accounted for the third dash of five and a half furlongs, but his margin was only a head over Elemental. The latter was the same distance in the van of Seclusion, who closed fastest of all and on an even break would have won easily.

Pandy, another trained by "Red" Womeldorff, who has had good success here, took the fourth, winning by a half length with Mildred Sherer, placing four lengths in front of Fear Not. The latter set the early pace but when Jockey Hutton set the winner down, the result was never in doubt, although Mildred Sherer made up some ground in the stretch run.

Reds Make Three Double Plays in Game With Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press)—Pittsburgh retained its lead in the National League scramble yesterday by trimming the New York Giants 4 to 0, Joe Bush yielding but four hits. The champions bunched five hits in the seventh to score all their runs.

Cincinnati remained right behind the Pirates by defeating Brooklyn 4 to 0. Eppa Rixey, pitching one of his classics, let the visitors down with three hits and did not permit one of them to get as far as second base. The Reds made three snappy double plays.

The St. Louis Cardinals dropped back into third place when the Phillies handed them another 9 to 7 defeat. Philadelphia overcame the Cards' lead three times and touched the home pitchers for 14 hits.

Tony Kauffman pitched a steady game for the Chicago Cubs and finished on the winning end by 5 to 1 over the Boston Braves. The Cubs have won six straight.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Far be it from me, Mac, to hold any post mortem over the passing of the Petes. 1 thing can be said of Mister Johnston's boys, and that is, when they decide its time to pass out of the picture they don't make no half-hearted job of it. 3 times in 3 years I have left Kingston by the aerial route with fragments of what was once a proud ball club all round me in the air. Anyway, to get out of Kingston satisfies me as a rule, but you gotta admit it's tough, Mister Sporting Editor, to check out at the end of each season in the midst of a balloon ascension. The Petes last week merely played their usual Kingston brand of ball, which, in passing, I might mention wouldn't be good enough to get them anywhere in the East Peterboro play-offs. The jeers of the Kingston fans usually gives our lads the heeby jeebies before the 1st ball is pitched, and they go out and play like the married men's team at a Sunday School picnic. You can't convince me on the season's play that Mister Peeney Mills and his playmates is a better ball club than the Petes, but when it come to the big serious they was there and our boys had nothing.

The firemen's softball team spent Tues. travelling to Kingston. So far as I know the records of the fire dept. don't contain the history of a slower trip than Mister Chief Gimblett's talent had on this occasion, the lads arriving just when the Kingston folks was taking in the sidewalks for the night, and getting back home in time to meet the milkman finishing his rounds. Beyond finding out how many garages they is in Eastern Ontario, the Firemen didn't get much benefit out of the trip. Next week they're going to try it again, hoping this time to include a ball game in the day's doings.

Mister Joe Daley's Kingston Ponies win the 1st game of the play-offs, which is a habit of Mister Batsone and Co. Still at that if Mister Johnny Ouellet hadda taken the trouble to get warmed up proper, the slipper mighta been on the other foot. The Ponies jumped on Mister Ouellet for 3 runs in the 1st frame, and that won for them.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, they ain't much to tell you this week, so I'll ring off now.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

ANOTHER WOMAN SWIMS CHANNEL

Mother of Two Children Makes Crossing To-day.

COMPANION QUITS.

DOVER, England, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press)—Mrs. Clemington Carson of New York, mother of two children and well known as a long distance swimmer, today swam the English Channel.

Mrs. Carson's victory was more impressive inasmuch as Frank Perks, an English swimmer, who started with her last night and swam most of the way on her trail was forced to quit when a mile and a half from the English shore after being in the water more than fourteen hours.

Mrs. Carson was the second woman to accomplish this brilliant feat in the stormy history of Channel swimming. Gertrude Ederle, who returned to her home in New York yesterday, was the first woman to conquer the grim stretch of water, crossing the Channel on August 6.

20TH VICTORY.

St. Louis Browns Defeat the Athlettics 7-1 in Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press).—Herb. Pennock hung up his 20th victory for the season yesterday when the New York Yankees won the opening game of the series with Detroit, 4 to 1. Pennock allowed eight hits, four of which were made by Heilman. Tony Lazerri sewed up the game in the fourth, his 16th home run of the season, coming with two on.

The St. Louis Browns won their first game of the season in Philadelphia when they defeated the Athletics, 7 to 1. It was their tenth contest of the year at Shide Park. Manus had a perfect day at bat with a single, home run, two doubles and a walk.

Chicago trimmmed the Washington Senators, 5 to 3, scoring three runs in the final innings after leading all the way, and then stopping the Senators' rally which netted two runs.

Pitcher Sherrod Smith's home run in the twelfth innings won the second game of a double-header for Cleveland, 5 to 4, after walking away from the Boston Red Sox in the first game by a 9 to 3 score. The first man up in the twelfth, Smith, sent the ball over the left field fence for the winning run, as Boston was unable to tally in its half of the inning.

Hon. Duncan Marshall Gives Address at Stewart's Hall Last Night.

Liberal principles and policies were explained to the electors of the townships of Otonabee and South Monaghan at Centreville and Stewart's Hall alst night by the Liberal candidate, Hon. Duncan Marshall and Joseph Wearing.

At Stewart's Hall, Beecher Matchet was chosen as chairman and in a few opening remarks spoke very highly of the Liberal candidate and the way in which he understands the rural conditions and he could not see at the present time how the farmers in this constituency could vote any other way than for Mr. Duffus for if the King government did nothing else for the farmers, it should be sustained for reducing the price of implements.

J. J. Duffus

Expressed much pleasure at the size of the audience at the meeting and in fact the way all his meetings had been so far attended in the country. He repeated his desire to help this riding and the Dominion of Canada as far as possible if elected and if not elected he will be the first man to get behind the man who is elected for he thinks it the duty of every citizen to aid the candidate who has the majority.

He criticized much of the propaganda used in the last election so as to defeat Liberal candidates all over the country. This propaganda talk has not proved true for today six or seven manufacturers are building additions to their plants, the C.N.R. is paying as it never did before and the farmers are prospering. The way in which the Conservative party obstructed the progress of the house in the last session received very unfavourable criticism from Mr. Duffus. In 1921 Mr. Meighen was defeated in his own constituency but he regained a seat by an acclamation immediately after the election. This year it was entirely different in Mr. King's place. He lost his seat but he was opposed, after the people's representatives had decided that he should carry on, holding up the government of the country for almost six weeks. It was the people who paid for keeping the house in session until King returned said Mr. Duffus.

Mr. Duffus declared that the large industries of the country are laughing at the people they have made millions of dollars out of and it is from them that the money is coming for what is found on the bill boards today. In the last six months 42,000 people have returned to Canada from the United States. He also attacked the Conservative advertising policy when a half page advertisement came out in the local papers the other night of a destructive nature to the welfare and good name of this country.

Hon. Duncan Marshall

The former minister's of Agriculture in Alberta speech was along the same line as the night before when he discussed the tariff issue. Declaring that a market was necessary so that the farmer could produce and every time farming has gone to pieces it was when there were no markets and the worst of these times were in 1891 just before Sir Charles Tupper was defeated when horses sold at $15, cows at $16 and calves at $1 and in 1921, the time Meighen was turned out, when farmers in the West were unable to ship their cattle and sheep to Winnipeg and sell them at a price that would pay the freight rate. There were also many idle factories then for the farmer had not the money to buy the manufactured article so many people went to the States. The Liberals came into power and the farmers prospered, many factories were built during the Laurier regime and the whole country prospered.

Mr. Marshall displayed articles to the audience which were being used as advertising for some high protectionist firms and these articles were made in the States and brought into Canada as they could be bought cheaper. One was the hand bag of the Maple Leaf Milling Company and the other was the card display of the McLagan Furniture Company The manager of this company was running against Wellington Hay in Perth.

In closing he touched on the constitutional issue stating that Ramsay MacDonald, although his party was in the minority and he had been defeated in the house was granted dissolution by King George because our king is a constitutional monarch. So he put it up to the people in this election to say whether Canada is to remain a Dominion or to revert to the status of a Crown Colony.

AROUND THE CITY.

A burst tire sent an automobile full of youthful joy riders into the ditch on Thursday night on Chemong Road, the occupants being very fortunate in escaping death or serious injury. The party, which consisted of a number of youths employed at Best station, was in the vicinity of the school on Chemong road when the mishap occurred. The front axle of the car was broken and the frame work was also badly damaged. The car lay in the ditch all night and yesterday.

Rt. Rev. Arthur Lea, D.D., Bishop of Kyu-Shu, Japan, who is to address Kiwanis Club soon, will have his sermon broadcast from St. Paul's Church on Sunday morning. Bishop Lea was born in Canada.

After an absence of seven weeks, Rev. R. K. Mills, pastor of Bethany Tabernacle, will be in his pulpit tomorrow. Mr. Mills has been preaching "the good old message of salvation through Christ" in Detroit, and God has set His seal to the mission in the winning of precious souls to Himself. TAG IN STREET PROVES FATAL

Lad Playing at Toronto Corner Crushed By Heavy Truck.

GOING SLOWLY.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—Another young life was snuffed out yesterday, when William Van Dusen, aged 13, was struck down by a motor truck driven by Edgar Bath, Pickering, at Fairford and Rhodes Avenue. The wheels of the heavy truck passed over the boy's body, causing injuries which brought about his death in the ambulance while en route to the Hospital for Sick Children. Internal and head injuries caused the boy's death.

At the time of the mishap the truck was going east on Fairford Avenue at a moderate speed. The boy was playing tag with a companion and was running in the wake of a motor car going in the same direction as the truck. Suddenly he darted out from behind the machine. In so doing he slipped and was crushed down by the truck. Eye-witnesses of the accident state that the driver of the truck stopped in a few feet. The lad was picked up by the driver, Bath, and a doctor was called. Oxygen was administered, but it was of no avail.

The boy was the youngest son of Mary Van Dusen, a war widow. In ill health herself, the death of her son has left her prostrate.

MEIGHEN VISITS HIS HOME TOWN

Premier Says That King Attacked Formation of C.N.R. in 1921.

REMARKS CHANGE.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man., April 28.— (Canadian Press.) — Premier Meighen was welcomed last night to his home town of the prairies which first sent him to Parliament. "Though the electoral battle might be easier for me elsewhere," he said, "I could not be satisfied personally if I did not feel I had been loyal to Portage La Prairie. Portage La Prairie was the right constituency for me as, a young man seeking a place in political life."

Mr. Meighen declared that Mackenzie King, following his appointment as Liberal leader, had uttered a tirade against the establishment of the National Railway system, a tirade especially against the inclusion of the Grand Trunk in the National system. "Mr. King declared," so Mr. Meighen proceeded, "that the inclusion of the Grand Trunk would ruin us."

"This man," Mr. Meighen added, "who denounced the whole creation of the National system out of the bankrupt elements which were bringing chaos into this country, this man now says he is the only person in the country to be trusted to see that the system lives. It is amusing, it is laughable."

FRENCH GOVERNMENT REFUSES TO GRANT SPAIN'S REQUEST FOR LEAGUE MANDATE OVER TANGIER

Briand Replies That Tangier Is Integral Part of Morroco Empire.

COUNTER COMPLAINTS.

In Conjunction With Britain Will Seek Solution Acceptable To All.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—General Primo de Rivera's efforts to obtain a modification of the Statute of Tangier have met with no success in France.

In reply to the memorandum containing the suggestion that Spain receive a mandate over Tangier under the League of Nations, Foreign Minister Briand has replied that, Tangier being an integral part of the empire of the Sultan of Morocco, such a suggestion cannot be entertained.

A League mandate can be conferred on a power, continues M. Briand, only in the case of the failure of the actual rulers to maintain order, or the incapacity of people to govern themselves, and neither of these is the case either in Morocco or Tangier.

The Foreign Minister adds that France will not refuse to examine with every consideration the Spanish claims and will seek, in agreement with Britain and conformably to existing treaties, a solution of the Tangier question which will be acceptable all round.

This polite reply to the Spanish Government cannot, whatever its wording, be interpreted otherwise than as a direct and final "No" to the suggestions which the Spanish Premier, in apparent concert with Italy, has put forward. At least that is the way the note is regarded here.

In the memorandum which the Spanish Government sent first to Italy the main subject of the Spanish complaint was the preponderance of French influence in the administration of Tangier. Their second argument was that contraband trade and nationalist propaganda were being extensively conducted through the international zone.

But to these two arguments the French reply is, first, that Tangier epends for its existence and prosperity on peace in and commerce with Morocco, and that the affairs of the part therefore are most largely their concern; second, that more contraband trade was done along the Riffian coast by the Spaniards during the Riffian war than was ever done through Tangier.

The Spaniards further attribute to the present statute the decline of trade and the unsatisfactory business conditions of the port. There again, however, the French reply declares that this is due more to the long war with the Riffian tribes and general world conditions.

During the past few days there have been several consultations between the British Embassy here and the Quai d'Orsay on the nature of the reply which was to be sent, and it is understood that an arrangement between the British and French as to the impossibility of making Tangier a mandated territory and their future attitude toward a re-arrangement is complete.

Basilica Is Erected Fulfils 40 Year Vow

DOMEREMY, France, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press). — The basilica or church which King Charles Seventh vowed he would build if Jeanne D'Arc succeeded in driving the English out of France, as she promised more than 400 years ago, was consecrated here at the birthplace of the Maid of Orleans on Saturday.

King Charles failed to fulfill his promise, but it was not forgotten, and to-day the little village where the Lorraine girl was born is gay with bunting and flags. The church was 33 years in the building, and faces the little house where Jeanne D'Arc was born.

LOVER SHOOTS GIRL AND SELF

Young Toronto Man Slays Nurse in Father's Home.

INSTANT DEATHS.

TORONTO, August 30. Canadian Press. — Elmo David Aldo, aged 22, shot and killed Winnifred F. Colwell, aged 22, in a room at his parents' home on Dundas street west to-day, and then shot himself dead, according to the police. Miss Colwell was a nurse at a local hosptial, and formerly resided at Newcastle, Ont. Aldo was found with a bullet through his brain, dead, on the floor beside the bed on which Miss Colwell lay.

Miss Colwell and Aldo, according to the police, arrived at his home early this morning. Aldo left the house about nine o'clock. At eleven he returned and went into the room where Miss Colwell was. Shortly after his mother heard two shots in rapid succession. Running to the room she found Miss Colwell lying dead on the bed and on the floor her son also dead. A thirty-two calibre revolver was lying beside him.

According to Aldo's mother, on Saturday the couple had gone motoring for a week end trip to the girl's home at Newcastle. They had returned home early this morning, some time between one and three o'clock. The girl slept in a back-room, the young man in the front of the house. About eight o'clock they arose and had breakfast. They seemed to be quite good humored and normal. The girl remarked that she was not feeling very well and Aldo slapped her on the back and told her she would be all right. After advising the girl to go back to bed, he went to work, but returned to the house about 10.30 a.m., and joined his fiancee in the back room, and there they remained till the shooting occurred.

COUNSEL ASKS APPEARANCE OF EX-MEMBER

William Duff, of Lunenburg, To Be Summoned To Customs Probe.

NOT AFRAID.

Ex-M.P. Reported To Have Said Lawyers Dare Not Call Him.

HALIFAX, N.S., August 30 (Canadian Press). — Proceedings before the Customs Commission took a sharp turn this morning when R. L. Calder, K.C., Commission counsel, made formal application for the appearance of William Duff, former member of Parliament. Mr. Calder made this application because of information received by him that Mr. Duff had declared the Commission counsel "were afraid to call him because of what he would spill."

"In view of this statement, I have no other recourse but to ask the Commission to return here after the St. John sittings and take up all these matters," declared Mr. Calder.

"In the past I have acted for Mr. Duff, and I tell him that I am not afraid of him in any place," declared W. F. O'Connor, the other counsel for the Commission. "I think the occasion is one which calls for censure."

L. A. Forsyth, counsel for Mr. Duff, tendered an apology to the Commission and counsel on behalf of the former member for Lunenburg if his client had said anything which reflected on them.

CANOE UPSETS; TWO DROWNED

Visitors at Gull Lake, Muskoka District, Lose Their Lives.

BODIES RECOVERED.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Aug. 30.—While canoeing on Gull Lake here yesterday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Nevetzral of Bridgeburg, Ont., were drowned when their canoe upset about 200 feet from the shore, at about 11.30 o'clock. The fatality occurred about midway between Scott's boat livery and Pine Dale Summer resort. The water at this point is about 40 feet deep.

The drowned couple were about 30 years of age and arrived here last Thursday to spend a short holiday in Muskoka. It was their intention to return to Bridgeburg yesterday evening.

It is stated by witnesses that Nevetzral was seated on the stern end of the canoe when a squall upset the craft. Nevetzral managed to cling for for a few minutes to the upturned canoe, which sank from his weight.

On acount of a number of cottagers on the lake having left this week, only a few people were in the vicinity of the accident. One little girl was on shore directly opposite the accident and gave the alarm, but Nevetzral in his frantic efforts to hold on to the canoe sank before a boat could reach them.

Both bodies were recovered, Mr. Nevetzral at 12.35 and his wife at 4.20 p.m. Nevetzral was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and was employed at Bridgeburg, on the Canadian National Railways, as engineer. His parents reside at Rodney, Ont. Mrs. Nevetzral's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Crowmeller, reside at Port Colborne, Ont. An inquest was considered unnecessary.

Speeds Across Continent In Eighty-Three Hours Claims Record In Beating Train By Ten Hours

NEW YORK, Aug. 30. — Louis B. Miller, San Francisco auto accessories dealer and speed enthusiast, arrived in this city Saturday afternoon after having completed the trip across the continent in eighty-three hours and twelve minutes, which he said was a record. Miller averaged more than forty miles an hour for the 3,367 miles he covered and broke the best train records for the distance by ten hours.

Mr. Miller and one companion, J. E. Wieber of Portland, Ore., who acted as mechanic and relief driver, stopped on the trip only to take on gas and oil and occasionally to eat a sandwich. Upon his arrival Miller, who is 51 years old, submitted to a physical examination by Dr. H. G. Bullwinkel at Roosevelt Hospital. He showed no effects from the strain except the loss of five pounds.

The men made the trip in a Wills-Sainte Claire stock roadster, in which Mr. Miller a year ago went from New York to San Francisco in 102 hours and 45 minutes. Mr. Miller said that improved roads were the greatetst factors in enabling him to cut his former time.

The route followed was the Lincoln Highway. No serious mishaps marred the trip and the only delay came in Newark, where a traffic policeman halted them for a few minutes.

Mr. Miller brought a letter from W. H. Fowler, assistant publisher of The San Francisco Chronicle to The New York Times.

HON. A. MEIGHEN CONCLUDES HIS WESTERN TOUR

Addresses Meetings From Station Platforms in Small Communities.

ATTACKS FORKE.

Will Spend the Remaining Weeks in Campaigning Quebec and Ontario.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of Canada, completed his Western itinerary on Saturday with the most picturesque meeting of his campaign. It had been a day of many speeches. Leaving Winnipeg by special train at an early hour, Mr. Meighen proceeded north by a line once regarded as a possible route to the Hudson's Bay, east of Lake Manitoba, through community after community. At almost every point there was a meeting, generally on the platform, on several occasions in a hall. At each point, the crowd on the special train received new additions until by the end of the long day seven coaches were filled and a baggage car had to be equipped with temporary seats. On the outside of the train hung political mottoes which a couple of days before had decorated the hall in which Mr. Meighen spoke in Winnipeg.

The end of the journey came well into the evening at Gypsumville. There, for a lack of a hall large enough, Mr. Meighen spoke outside. A few flickering kerosene lamps and a bonfire cast odd eerie shadows over the faces of the crowd scarcely visible in the darkness. As Mr. Meighen spoke there would be occasional half-muttered comment in Icelandic or other foreign tongue. A curious picture of fusing races, faced with problems of the new land.

Mr. Meighen at his various meetings, passed in review the political issues he has discussed in detail during his Western tour. He was confident that the Conservatve party would be victorious on election day. He thought Conservatives would gain in Quebec and in the three Western Provinces. In the three Maritime Provinces, taken together, there would also be Conservative gains.

He described Robert Forke, former Progressive leader, as having done chores for the Liberal party, as having been ready to whiten the "black record" of the King government.

The Premier left for the East this evening, where he will conclude his campaign with meetings in Quebec and Ontario.

GERMAN BEATS EDERLE'S TIME

Swims Across English Channel in 12 Hours, 40 Minutes.

NEW RECORD.

DOVER, England, August 30. — (Canadian Press).—Otto Vierkoeten of Germany to-day swam the English Channel.

He landed at 2.15 o'clock this afternoon at Langdon Stairs, halfway between Dover and St. Margaret's Bay, from Cape Gris Nez, France, where he entered the water at 1.35 a.m. The elapsed time of the swim, according to the figures, is 12 hours and 40 minutes, or nearly two hours better than the record of 14 hours and 31 minutes established by Miss Gertrude Ederle on August 6. Vierkoeten's landing was witnessed by only a few soldiers, who ran down from Langdon Battery, above the beach. The soldiers carried the swimmer to his small boat, which conveeyd him to the accompanying tug.

Gets Congratulations.

NEW YORK, August 30 (Canadian Press).—Cabling her congratulations to Otto Vierkoeten, the latest conqueror of the English Channel, Gertrude Ederle to-day challenged the German record-holder to a race across the Channel next summer.

LIBERAL LEADER OUTLINES POLICY IN MARITIMES

Pledges Party To Assist the Basic Industry of Fishing.

PRAISES DUFF.

Says Conservative Government Was Opposed to the Old Age Pension.

LIVERPOOL, N.S., Aug. 30. — (Canadian Press).—In the constituency of Queen's-Lunenburg, Mr. Mackenzie King Saturday spent an intensive day. The Liberal leader was met at Liverpool by William Duff, former member from the constituency, and escorted by a band through the village streets, decorated with ships' flags. The crowd overflowed the Town Hall, and a second meeting was held in a neighboring church. In the evening Mr. King motored to Bridgewater and spent the night in Lunenburg, and yesterday in Chester.

Mr. King reminded his audience of the appointment of Mr. Duff as Deputy Speaker. He had shown "marvellous tact and diplomacy" in the performance of his duties in the Commons.

"Our governments must give more attention to the great basic industry of fishing," he said. "It is the duty of the State to see that everything should be done to secure the safety of men in the fishing industry.

"A lot can be done toward getting wider markets for the basic industry. I hope it will be possible to have a Deputy or perhaps a Minister of Fisheries to give all his time to the problem of the industry," said Mr. King, who continued to assure his hearers that the return of a Liberal Government would mean the fullest consideration for the problems of fisheries, particularly marketing."

The old-age pension measure of last year was intended to be "something in the nature of a just reward" for those who had toiled through life.

The workers in the basic industry were doing really social service. Some compensation was due to workers in old age, who had given the best of their lives to the industry.

The Liberals were supported by Progressives, Labor and Independents in the passage of the old-age pensions measure through the Commons. The Conservative majority in the Senate threw it out.

Mr. Meighen had found in his campaign that people resented the action of the Tory Senators, and then he began to talk old-age pensions himself. But he would get nowhere so long as the Senate was dominated by Conservatives.

"The Liberal party is going to fight that battle with the Senate until a measure passing the House of Commons twice consecutively will become law despite the Senate."

William Duff, in preceding Mr. King, advocated a new reciprocal trade agreement with the United States to permit free exchange in natural products. The candidate said that Mr. Meighen had come through the Maritimes with Mr. Doucet on his platforms as "the horrible example."

SEVERE QUAKE IN NEW ENGLAND DAMAGE SLIGHT

Third Shock of Year Is Distinctly Felt in Many Counties.

BOATS ROCKED.

Tremors Preceded By Distinct Rumbling—Becoming Frequent.

BOSTON, Mass., August 30. — (Canadian Press).—Another earthquake, the third this year, and the twelfth within two years, has jarred New England. This time it was felt in a belt running through Western Maine, toward Canada. As in most previous earthquakes n New England, the tremors apparently were not severe enough to cause any damage to property or life. Reports indicated that the shock was felt simultaneously in Oxford, Franklin and Somerset Counties, and in the northern part of Androscoggin at about 4 p.m. Saturday.

No reports have been received to indicate that the tremors were felt in New Hampshire, which borders Maine on the west. Whether or not the shock was felt across the Canadian border in Quebec is not known.

In the famous Rangely Lake region boats were reported to have beene rocked on the surface of the water. In Oxford and Franklin Counties, where the tremors seem to be strongest ,the quaking was preceded by prolonged, distant rumbling. The duration of the tremors varied from a few moments to three minutes. In some towns residents fled from their homes.

Earth tremors have been felt in New England from time to time, but in recent years they were few and far between, until the autumn of 1924. Preceding that date, but four shocks noticeable to the inhabitants were reported in the New England region in more than four years. Two of these were in 1922, one occurring in New Hampshire and the other across the Canadian line near Edmundston, N.B. In 1923 another shock was reported in New Hampshire, and late in the year Waterville, Maine, felt earth tremors.

Beginning with the autumn of 1924, however, there was a series that apparently reached a maximum in frequency in 1925. Records show that on September 30, 1924, an earthquake believed to have originated in the Maritime Provinces of Canada was felt on the Maine coast, the New Brunwick border and in Vermont. On January 7, 1925, Eastern Massachusetets was jarred. Hard on the heels of this shock came the earthquake of February 28, 1925, felt over a million square miles in north-eastern United States and Canada, and classed by the Department of the Interior as "one of the great shocks that have affected North America."

It was said by Government geologists to have been caused by the slow return of rock beds to a position occupied before they were depressed by glaciers.

The subsequent shocks were of lesser intensity.

CANADIAN POLAR EXPEDITION PLACES MOUNTED POLICE POST IN ICEBOUND ISLANDS OF ARCTIC

Mackenzie Party Returns After Leaving Detatchment at Bache Peninsula.

MAKE RECORD TIME.

Stuck In Ice Floes — Hard To Blast Way Through.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., Aug. 30 (Canadian Press.—With all objectives attained, including the establishment of a detachment of Mounted Police at Bache Peninsula, Ellsmere Island, in latitude 79 degrees 4 minutes north, the 1926 Canadian Arctic expedition under George P. MacKenzie, of the Northwest Territories, and Yukon Branch, Department of the Interior, arrived here yesterday on the S.S. Beothic.

In summarizing the achievements of the expedition which left here July 15, Mr. MacKenzie stated that the Police detachments at Pond Inlet, Baffin Island; Dundas Harbor, Devon Island, Craig Harbor, Ellesmere Island, and C. D. Pangnirtung, Babbin Island, were re-provisioned in record time despite the prevalence of fog and heavy ice which made navigation at times a difficult and hazardous matter. Returning rfom Bache Peninsula, the most northerly Police detachment in the world, Buchanan Bay was filled with heavy kane, basin ice, the only outlet being a narrow lead between the grounded bergs and the rocky shore, through which the vessel rammed and blasted her way at considerable risk, on one occasion only three and a half fathoms being sounded.

Few vessels have penetrated Buchanan Bay and beyond, according to Mr. Mackenzie, owing to ice conditions and the present Bache Peninsula detachment was was only established after four efforts made in successive years. On arriving at Dundas Harbor, the flag at the Police detachment was half-mast, and shortly after it was discovered that Constable Victor Maisonneuve, stationed there, had died in June under tragic circumstances.

At Craig Harbor a wireless message was relayed through Godhaven, Disco Island, Greenland, where the expedition had previously visited and exchanged courtesies with the Danish authorities, stating that the auxiliary schooner Morrissey, was ashore near Etah, Greenland, and Captain Bob Bartlett, his crew, and the members of the Putham scientific expedition had been forced to disembark and were without provisions. On receipt of the S.O.S., the Beothic was proceeding with all possible dispatch to the scene of the disaster, when word was received direct from the schooner stating that she was released from her predicament and no assistance was required.

Mr. Mackenzie stated that the Police had made many notable patrols during the year throughout the archipelago and in Baffin Island and had visited all the Eskimo settlements, where the health of the natives was found to be good.

The commander spoke highly of the splendid work of Capt. Falk, his officers and the crew of the Beothic, and of Capt. L. D. Morin, ice pilot, formerly of the C.G.S. Arctic. He also expressed gratification at the capable manner in which E. J. Mead, of the engineering staff of the Canadian Marine had managed to keep in constant wireless communication with the outside world at Bache Peninsula, constituting a record.

At Pengmertung, the last port of call, Dr. L. D. Livingstone, who is undertaking medical work in Baffin Island during the winter, and Dr. L. J. Weeks and M. H. Jaycock, Geological Survey, left the ship which weighed anchor at 8 p.m. on the 22nd August, steaming through ice all night and clearing the pack by noon the following day in a heavy southerly ground sea. To make matters wrose, a gale sprang up which lasted for thirty hours, forcing the ship to lay head to sea for ten hours, two boats being washed overboard. On the 25th, the gale died out and a quick run was made to this port.

Those who disembarked with Mr. Mackenzie were W. Q. Ketchum, secretary to Mr. Mackenzie and historian of the expedition; Inspector G. H. Wilcox, officer commanding the Ellesmore Island sub-district of the R.C.M.P.; Capt. L. D. Morin; Sergeant. J. E. F. Wyght; Corporal F. McInnes; Constables Terence Higgins, Hugh Marcettes, P Derech, J. T. Makinson, and E. Anstead, R.C.M.P.

Crooked Bankruptcies Cost Millions Yearly

NEW YORK, Aug. 30. — The New York World to-day says legitimate business concerns in the United States are defrauded each year of $250,000,000 by a new scheme of crooked bankruptcies.

"The Crooked Bust," as it is known in police parlance, has its centre in New York, but it is being copied throughout the country and the law cannot aid the creditors, the paper says. The authorities say it is the most popular "racket' ever known to commercial sharks.

HURRICANE TOLL IS PLACED AT 25

Hope Has Been Abandoned For Others Missing Since Wednesday.

LOSS $10,000,000.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.) — Twenty-five persons to-day were known to have lost their lives, all hopes for the safety of an additional five were abandoned and more than a score of others remained to be accounted for as the result of the hurricane which struck Southern Louisiana last Wednesday. Estimates of property damage caused by the storm have fluctuated violently since rehabilitation machinery was placed in motion.

They now range between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000. Yousa Daigle, 20, to-day was the hero of the storm of the storm-swept Louisiana marsh lands. Yousa rescued his older brother Freddie and an unidentified man. He swam, carried and led them to safety after a struggle which lasted nearly three days and took a trip across approximately 150 miles of marshes that had been devastated by the hurricane.

FINE TERRIER IS POISONED

Brock Street Resident Loses Good Dog During Week End.

A fine male Irish terrier, the property of a Brock street resident, was poisoned by an unknown person during the week-end. The animal was seen in the street trotting after a passer-by and twenty minutes later it returned to the house in a dying condition, being hardly able to make its way up the steps.

J. D. Deyell, veterinary surgeon, was hastily summoned, but the dog died before Mr. Deyell arrived.

After an examination Mr. Deyell pronounced that the dog had died from strychnine poison.

Strychnine, it appears, acts on the heart and nerves and its effects are easily discernable on an animal.

The affair has aroused considerable indignation as the dog, which was well known in the neighborhood, was extremely intelligent and well behaved.

Mr. Deyell has reported the matter to the police.

Whale Rams Steamship Then Rues Being Hasty

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30. —Officials of the Dollar Steamsip Line are relating a chabpion fish story.

It's about a whale, and a whale isn't a fish, so maybe it isn't a fish story, but it's a champion story, anyway.

According to a radio report from officers of the steamer President Adams, en route to San Francisco, that vessel had considerable trouble with an arrogant and unruly whale off the coast of Lower California.

It seems that the whale wanted to race the President Adams. Now, although the officers of the boat have sporting blood, it is distinctly against company rules to race whales.

They told the whale as much and it became angry, real angry. Turning in it path, the whale came full steam ahead for the President Adams, determined to sink it. The ship proved a little stronger than the whale, however.

According to the wireless dispatch, the whale suffered abrasions, lacerations and internal injuries.

SYNOPSIS

"The greatest lover in the world" men called Don Juan enviously, women admiringly: all wondering why he was so cruel and indifferent to women, had no faith in them and never gave his heart in return for the ones bestowed so recklessly upon him. But Don Juan, as cynical as handsome, had locked in his secret heart a bitter memory of when as a child, he had witnessed his beautiful mother's shameless passage from the arms of her husband, Don Jose, as he left for the wars, into the ardent ones of her lover, Leandro, who entered as Don Jose left. Don Jose had returned and trapped them.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Frantically she had run back into the room, and stared about it, seeking some hiding place for Leandro. Two of the huge stones of which the wall was made had become dislodged, and were on the floor. Little Juan watched, bewildered, as she motioned Leandro to hide in the space they had occupied.

The door opened, slowly. Beatriz watched it, and even her small son had known her terror, so that now he could realize it as he had then.

She went to him, put her hands on his shoulders, fluttered about him like a snared bird. And he stood looking at her, making no move to return her caresses.

"Why have you come back?" she asked, over and over, and at last he told her.

"I have turned brck for certain evidence of an important nature," he said, and his voice dragged as his feet had dragged on the stairs.

He put her from him and went to the bedroom, pushing aside the curtains slowly, because he knew that no one hidden there could escape him. Beatriz waited, frantic with fear, to glance toward her lover's hiding place. Juan could imagine how she had stood clutching the curtains while his father searched the room, and how she had followed him when he came back to the circular room again.

Juan could understand when, later, Don Jose had told of the relief of that moment, when he thought that his search was ended in failure. He had said that he must go, had bent to kiss his wife once more. He had gone to the door, and she had followed him; hating more than ever to leave her, adoring her as she stood there with half the beauty of her body bare, he had bent his head for a last kiss.

It was then that he saw the opening in the wall, which he had ignored. Her eyes had followed his to it, and in her terror he read her secret.

He had walked toward it; the little boy on the hearth had watched him, wondering. Don Jose had stopped before he reached the wall, looked down at Beatriz' hand trembling on his arm at the pallor of her face.

"This wall has gone too long unmended," he had said. "It means danger for us all."

Striding to the door, he had thrown it wide, revealing the hunchback waiting there. An order was given briefly. Cowering against the wall, Beatriz had watched her husband turning again to face her; she had not moved or spoken when the hunchback returned with four men, who crossed the room and lifted the great stones, one after the other, into place in the wall. Once she had leaned forward, her clenched hands uplifted in protest, and Don Jose had signalled the men to wait a moment, while he asked her if she knew of any reason why the stones should not be sealed in place.

For an instant she had hesitated Juan could imagine what her thoughts had been, how keenly she must have realized that her lover was cowering in that hidden recess, facing his doom, how her love for the man must have surged up in her heart, and then ebbed as she faced the stern face of her husband.

She had said at last that she knew no reason, and Don Jose ordered the work to go on. Before her eyes her lover had been committed to a hideous death, and she had said no word to prevent it.

Their work finished, the four men had gone, and Don Jose turned contemptuously to his wife.

Years afterward, he told Juan of the faint sound of a man's fists beating frantically on unyielding stone, and of how it had died away, while the woman cowered against the embroidered curtains of the bedroom where she had betrayed her husband's love.

Then, suddenly, she had flown acorss the room and torn at the wall with her hands, had turned and thrown herself on her knees before Don Jose, crying 'Let him out! Let him out!" And he, had stood there laughing at her agony, hating her, motionless until she caught at him with her hands. Then he had thrown her aside, loathing her touch.

And as she shrank back from him, then ran to sieze him again, he had turned to the door.

"Out—before I kill you!" he had cried, and with the glory of her red-gold hair tumbling over her bare shoulders she had gone stumbling down the stairs, out of the lives of her son and her husband.

Behind her she left a man who could never again love a woman, and a little boy, who, believing all women to be as faithless as she had been, was to grow into Don Juan, "the greatest lover in the world."

Don Jose, feeding his own bitterness through the years by one orgy after another, did not foresee that result. It amused the man to have beautiful women about him, to entertain them lavishly, and treat them as badly as he would have liked to treat his wife. Night after night he sauntered into the banquet hall of the old castle, his son at his side, and listened sardonically while the loveliest women in all Spain did their best to captivate him.

Juan was a boy of fifteen when the last of these banquets was given. That night took its place in his memory with the one on which Leandro was sealed in the wall of the tower room. The ban quet had been spread, the guests were waiting, as Juan and Don Jose entered the hall. Even after Juan remembered little details, as if he had known how significant that evening was to be when he stood between the great curtains of the doorway.

He could recall the color of the scene, the gown of Venetian yellow that one girl wore, the gaudy plumage of a cockatoo that perched on the hunchback's hand, a strain of seductive music and the lovely line of a girl's body as she danced to it.

He could remember the face of a girl who had bent to kiss him, and the way he had avoided her, as well as his own contempt of her. His father commented amusingly on the incident; Juan replied: "Passing fair, but a trifle thin of shoulder," and had been rather proud of the remark.

He could not recall the blonde woman whose role was of supreme importance, however. Afterward the hunchback told him that she had stood behind Don Jose when he seated himself, that she had laid one hand lightly on the man's shoulder, and that Don Jose had turned to look at her, smiled maliciously as he saw the worship in her eyes, and turned away.

He had laughed, the hunchback said, and called to him the girl who had tried unsuccessfully to kiss Juan. When she came running to him, he had put his arm around her, drawn her close to him, and laughed tauntingly at the woman who stood behind him.

Then, suddenly, steel had gleamed and flashed in the torchlight. The woman had drawn a dagger and driven it into Don Jose's side.

OBITUARY.

CHESTER ASLING.

Mr. Chester Asling, who has resided in the village of Epsom for very many years, passed away on Wednesday, August 18.

Mr. Asling's birthplace was at Greenbank where he was born on January 10, 1859.

The deceased gentleman taught school at many places for nearly forty years. The schools with which he was most particularly associated being at Vaughan, Bowmanville, Manchester, Marsh Hill, Epsom and Bethesda. He retired on a pension allowance about three years ago, but was not permitted for long to enjoy the fruits of his industry.

Even after his retirement he was not often allowed to rest, for his neighbors and friends, being well cognisant of his artistic ability and general capabilities, were nearly always in quest of his services.

In 1883 Miss Jane McGregor, of Bethesda, became his bride and many years of domestic happiness followed. Mrs. Asling still survives him. His children consist of: William, of Epsom; Allan, of Toronto; as well as Mrs. Mary Sagar, of Madoc, and Mrs. Katherine Coates, of Port Perry, all of whom are still living.

Two of his brothers and four sisters are still living.

Mr. Asling was a prominent Mason. He was a member of Succoth Chapter, R.A.M., No. 135, G.R.C., of Uxbridge; also a member of Zeredatha Lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 220, Uxbridge.

The deceased gentleman won the hearts of all by his unfailing courtesy. He was a very reserved man of a quiet disposition, and those who knew him best loved him the most.

Many an old pupil of the departed felt deeply grieved at his passing, and a great number came from a long distance as a mark of tenderness and esteem and to show their deep respect for the one who had in his long and useful occupation been an ideal teacher.

His uprightness and manly character were an inspiration and those who were fortunate enough to come under his influence were greatly benefitted, and many a person who has won success in life owes much to his splendid example.

The floral display was gorgeous and many a wreath bore silent tribute to his worth

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Joseph Denny, the minister of the Epsom United Church. The last rites were held at the home of the deceased, after which the sad cortege left for the Uxbridge Cemetery, where the remains were laid to rest. The whole community is deeply grieved, and heart-felt sympathy of all goes out to the sorrowing widow and bereaved family, for Mr. Asling's passing means a great loss to the entire community.

BAND CONCERT

Northumberland Regimental Band Gives Good Program at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 30—The Northumberland Regiment Band gave an open air concert on Tuesday evening at the bandstand below Front street. A large crowd of people were present and all appreciate these concerts, which are well rendered. The bandsmen are deserving of praise, for these concerts are given voluntarily and are a pleasure for the community.

RALLY MEETING IN COMMITTEE ROOMS

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., Attacks Record of Mackenzie King Government.

This is not a whispering campaign but a shouting campaign, a straight attack on the record of the Mackenzie King Government, said W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., who was the first speaker at the committee room rally of the Conservative party on Saturday evening. Other speakers at the meeting, of which V. J. McElderry was chairman, were the candidate, E. A. Peck, ex-M.P., Mrs. Howard Fallis, and Fred Tuggey.

Referring to a report of a meeting held by Mr. Duffus, Mr. Bradburn said that he understood that one of the speakers had spoken disparagingly of Lord Byng. Men who served under him overseas will receive with ill grace an attack on a man of that character, said the speaker.

He referred to the customs investigation, quoting Mr. Bisaillon's letter, "I also believe that in the interest of the party it would be preferable to discontinue to watch the frontier." This, said Mr. Bradburn, meant "in the interests of party it would be preferable to permit the smuggling of goods, taking millions of dollars from the Dominion treasury, driving manufacturers into bankruptcy, and forcing honest workingmen to seek jobs elsewhere.

Mr. King knew, continued the speaker, that this smuggling was going on and that the department was deteriorating but did nothing to stop it. He urged his hearers to talk about these facts and discuss them with the friends in order to get out as large as vote as possible.

Fred Tuggey.

Fred Tuggey was the next speaker. He said Canada was a country second to none but had been dragged in the mud by the King administration.

What Canada needs is a government that will work in the interests of the country, he said. Now all her raw materials are being shipped out to the United States and other countries. Canadians doing the poorly paid "bull" work and skilled workmen of other lands doing the highly paid finishing processes.

Mr. Tuggey advocated an embargo on such materials as raw asbestos, pulpwood, wheat. If these were made up in Canada for export instead of being finished in and exported from the United States, there would be work for immigrants, whose need for clothing and food would provide more work and build up Canada.

Mrs. Howard Fallis.

Mrs. Faliis, who had just returned from Western Ontario, told something of the campaign in ridings there. She said that the Customs scandal was the main point and that not enough being said about it.

Mr. Peck.

Mr. Peck said that the issues are the same now as in the 1925 campaign, with the added point of the record of the King Government as shown by the customs probe.

The protection of labor, he said, is the main issue. Canada is a good country, with splendid resources, but it is necessary for many people to leave the country to get work. The natural products of Canada are being shipped out and manufactured goods imported.

The tax reduction in the Robb budget, said Mr. Peck, are not of great benefit to the masses of the people. A real reduction, helpful to all, would be the cutting of the sales tax on clothe instead of on automobiles.

The important point with regard to the customs scandal, the speaker said, was that the King Government had had knowledge of it for years and had taken no action.

In conclusion he urged his hearers to get out all the voters and try to have them vote for him instead of for a candidate pledged to support Mackenzie King.

Mr. McElderry announced several meetings of workers and a big rally with outside speakers in Victoria Hall next Saturday night.

Have you met Oh Henry!

RAIN SPOILS PICNIC

Races Have to be Postponed at Outing of Apsley Congregation.

APSLEY, Aug. 30.—A continual downpour of rain which lasted all afternoon and culminated in a severe thunderstorm in the evening marred the success of the annual picnic of St. George's church which was held at Loon Lake on Thursday last. All the sports had to be called off, with the exception of the motor boat race which was run when the rain abated long enough for the event. There were four entries, and first prize was taken by Mrs. Frees' driving Fred Haggart's boat; second prize was won by Harry Tanner with Mr. Johnston's "Scout," Vernal nd Stanley Woodsor came in next in order. The prizes were donated by Mrs. D. Brown and George Stephens through the kindness of the Couch families who lent their houses for the meals and for shelter, the crowd were able to keep dry. The event closed with a dance at Walter Couch's and a display of fireworks after the rain had ceased. The proceeds for the day amounted to over $60.

GARDEN PARTY

Messrs. Peck and Morrison Gave Short Political Addresses.

WARSAW, Aug. 30.—The garden party at Robert Girven's was very poorly attended, on account of the electric storm. Messrs. Peck and Morrison were there and gave short addresses.

A few cars from Warsaw braved the storm, as this is likely to be the only political meeting in this district.

There is no dearth of water nor of green pasture for cattle.

The Women's Institute regular meeting will be held in the Institute rooms on Thursday afternoon, September 9th. at half past two o'clock. Important business is on hand and there will be a demonstration in bandaging.

The schools open for fall work on Wednesday, Sept. 1st.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED.

Some motorists are of the opinion that the adoption of the through street plan locally should make it feasible to allow faster driving on the through streets.

That, of course, would be getting a long distance away from the object for which the legislation was introduced.

The bylaw is a safety measure; not a license to convert certain streets into speedways.

There has been enough fast driving on these streets already, and it should be thoroughly understood, as Chief of Police Newhall has already pointed out in an interview with The Examiner, that drivers on through streets will be expected to observe all the regulations as usual.

One of these—more honoured in the breach than in the observance—declares that cars must not be driven across street intersections at a rate faster than 10 miles per hour.

Loyal co-operation on the part of motorists with the Police Department will ensure the successful operation of the bylaw and give Peterboro safer driving conditions than have hitherto been possible.

PETERBORO'S EXHIBITION.

With $10,000 offered in prizes and a programme that calls for a full week's Exhibition, the directors of the Peterboro Industrial are quite justified in calling this Expansion Year.

The Exhibition from all viewpoints is on a bigger scale than ever, a day added to its length, more prize money provided and a greater list of attractions secured.

Only one thing is needed to ensure a triumphal success, and that is a record-breaking attendance.

Last year the paid attendance reached the splendid total of 36,000 people, and every visitor went away delighted with the Exhibition and satisfied that it had been put on a new plane of excellence.

The effect of the prestige scored last year, it is confidently expected, will be to send the 1926 attendance total soaring to heights that would have been undreamed of a few years ago.

Upon the people of Peterboro and this district the final success of the Exhibition depends, and The Examiner is confident that with good weather we will be able to announce that all existing attendance records have been completely smashed.

WASTED WEALTH.

Professor Howe's warning that the forests of Canada are rapidly becoming exhausted will, it is hoped, make an impression upon our various Governments.

Too much of the duty of protecting our timber wealth has been left to individuals and corporations, and it is only recently that either Provincial or Federal Governments have started to assume a proper share of the responsibility.

The Examiner believes with The Financial Post that "it is doubtful if any Province is spending what it should spend on its forests when the extent of revenues from the forest is taken into consideration."

From this source the Provinces of Canada draw $12,000,000 in revenue every year, and they should do more to protect the forest before the stage is reached when Canada will be consuming or allowing to be destroyed more timber than it grows annually.

These figures are of interest.

Canada once had a forest area of 1,300,000 square miles, and this area had 925 billion cubic 3feet of timber.

Today the Dominion has only 250 billion cubic feet of timber.

And yet of the 73 per cent. of the original stand that has disappeared, the country has only cut and used 126,000,000 cubic feet.

That means that 60 per cent. of all the timber has been wasted, some of it in clearing the land, but most of it in forest fires and raids by insects and other forest pests.

"HAS SAT DOWN TO REST."

(By Rev. J. J. Guiry.)

On looking over our community I am convinced that its civic, financial and moral status is equal to that of any other in our Province. However, we should be very blind indeed if we do not see that we are afflicted with the stale lethargy which extends across southern Ontario. Our city is in much the same condition as was Atri in Abruzzo. It has sat down to rest, and is sitting too long. I do not think this soninolence is due to any local malady, but arises from a Provincial lethargy over which we have but little control. Of course, in this district we made one sad mistake; we have allowed our power to be shipped away from us. Outside of Niagara we had the only water power in southern Ontario but we bartered it. Instead of bringing the mountain to Mohamed, Mohamed has gone off to the mountain.

In Ontario from east to west there does seem to be "sloth in the mart and heresy in the temple." Although we vote conservative, we are ultra-liberal, bordering on radicalism. Democracy with us has grown tired, and the signs of its fatigue are manifest in our experimental attitude to great public questions. The U. F. O. movement of 1919 was the last dying kick of vigorous democracy. The people were hungry for stable, honest order in the land, and Mr. Drury was thrown into office by the upheaval. The people were soon grossly deceived, hence the present Provincial Government is the result of a revolt. And still we drift. The various currents of public opinion neutralize themselves. Prohibition, 4.4, Church Union, Hydro-electric, Public Ownership, National Railways, Adolescent Acts, etc., form a morass into which we have floundered helpless but contending.

Of course, these Provincial ills affect our private good. On these I am willing to write.

THE REDISCOVERY OF CANADA.

An evidence of the increasing importance attached to Canada's progres s in the Old Country it is interesting to note that the Midland Bank gives this subject unusual prominence in its monthly review for August. This country is being rediscovered abroad as well as at home. The impression prevailing heretofore, as the bank's review states, tended to regard the Dominion as a land of wheat fields, forests, prairies, barren wastes, and frozen lakes and rivers. Now a new perspective has developed. Canada is becoming recognized more and more by business men in particular as a land of great resources, with fertile and varied fields awaiting exploitation.

It appears as though British business interests have suddenly awakened to the fact that they have been overlooking something. Before the war Canada was an important investment field. Under pressure of other matters closer at hand the Dominion was all but forgotten, and now that its existence is recalled it is discovered that it is a very different Canada. It has been advancing by leaps and bounds. Its industrial development has been phenomenal, but, in the opinion of the Midland Bank, indices of the growth of Canadian economic resources over a comparatively short period are far more convincing and quite as attractive.

From 1911 to 1925 the population increased only a little over 2,000,000, but in the same period bank deposits grew from $980,434,000 to $2,221,121,000, or from $136 per capita to $237, and bank clearings changed from $9,275,139,000 to $16,761,512,000. It is in foreign trade that the figures are most impressive, indicating increased production far in excess of the growth of population. Imports for consumption were $522,405,000 in 1911 and $927,403,000 in 1925, while exports of domestic produce in the two years were, respectively, $290,224,000 and $1,315,193,000. If allowance is made for 60 per cent. advance in price-levels exports still show a gain of nearly 300 per cent. in fifteen years.

The bank review points out that field crops have been multiplied by three in value, and could have emphasized the importance of agriculture still further by including all farm products. It points to the mineral output, which has more than doubled, and states that it appears not unlikely that Canada may reach second place in world production of gold within a comparatively short period. In showing how British investors are lagging behind in taking advantage of opportunities for industrial development it might have pointed out that some 3,000 new establishments were opened up between 1910 and 1924, and that the capital invested grew from $1,247,584,000 in 1911 to $3,538,813,000 in 1924.

For those who like to contrast Canada's progress with that of the United States this statement as to foreign trade will be interesting: "The value of Canada's external commerce was exceeded in the year 1925 by that of only five other countries, while export trade, with a population of only 9,500,000, is now in excess of the 1899 exports from the United States, which then had a population of 75,000,000."

The soundness of Canada's progress will appeal to the investor in other countries as soon as it is appreciated. The Midland Bank sums it up in a way which is a tribute to Canadian business methods as well as a recommendation to capital:

"From whatever angle the position of Canada is regarded, the vision is one of substantial and well-grounded prosperity. The immense developments in the utilization of the resources of the soil and the depths of the earth, as well as the growth of industry, based largely on water power, are seen to be no mushroom growths removable by the flick of the finger. The foundation appears to be sound, and progress to have been achieved on the whole by conservative methods. Given money and the right type of men, there are present all the elements of continued success and sustained growth in wealth and well?being, provided the hopeful prospects are not marred by seculation founded on exaggerated expectations."—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Examiner the other day mentioned four former Peterboro residents who are candidates in the Federal election. A fifth is Mr. James Ludgate, brother of Mrs. R. R. Hall, who is tne Liberal candidate in Parry Sound.

One good thing about the election campaign is that there is only a fortnight of it left.

Probably those bedrooms were built on the Margaret for the accommodation of captured rum-runners.

At all events they ought to give the gallant crew of the Margaret a couple of guns that could be used.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition is up to the minute. Thus it announces a complete election return service as part of the programme for the night of September 14th.

One way to secure a big vote would be to appoint returning officers everywhere like some of those who officiated in Athabaska last election. Out there you voted—even if you didn't.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain on the Montreal market Saturday was again extremely dull. There was some demand in the domestic market from country and local buyers for car lots of coarse grain and sales of Ontario malting barley were made at 75 cents per bushel, ex-track. The trade in Canadian Western oats was fair and prices were steady.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in Spring wheat grades of flour with English importers but the local trade was inactive but firm. The feeling in the Winter wheat situation was steady under a fair demand for new crop grades. Old crop grades have practically disappeared.

Owing to the continued good demand from all sources, the undertone to millfeed market was firm, but values were unchanged. Business in standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

The feature of the egg trade last week was the stronger feeling that developed and prices were marked up 1-to 2 cents per dozen and were firmly maintained at the close with prospects of a further upward revision in the near future. The receipts were 1,150 on Saturday.

Qwing to the continued liberal supply of butter coming forward, the steady accumulation of stocks on spot and the absence of any important demand from foreign or local buyers a weaker feeling prevailed in the market last week and prices were reduced 3-4c to 1 cent per pound. According to some of the traders, lines will have to be further reduced to attract any business. The receipts Saturday were 1,964 packages.

An easier feeling prevailed in the cheese market throughout the week and prices suffered a fractional decline. The volume of business was small. The receipts Saturday were 6,919 boxes.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.83 3-4.

Sterling cables $4.84 3-8.

CHICAGO WHEAT

CHICAGO, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press). — Aggressive selling broke wheat prices Saturday. Greatly enlarged arrivals of wheat at Winnipeg were an outstanding factor, and it was indicated that receipts there today will aggregate 500 cars. The wheat market here closed weak, 1 to 1 1-2c net lower; corn 5-8 to 7-8c down; oats 3-4 to 1 1-8c off, and provisions showing 7 to 15 cents gain.

Wheat finished at virtually the lowest level of the day. With the Canadian crop movement rapidly acquiring momentum, the wheat market here soon took a decided downward swing and selling proved persistent on every little rally. Favrable weather for harvesting was reported throughout the spring crop region, both north and south of the Canadian boundary. Meanwhile, export demand for North American wheat continued slack and talk was current that re-sellers in Europe were making cheaper quotations than the first hand offers from this side of the Atlantic.

RETURN OF MEN CAUSES TROUBLE

Railways Are Not Restoring Strikers to Positions Held Before.

SALARIED CLASSES

LONDON, Aug. 30.-(adian Press).—One of the bitterest aftereffects of the general strike has been that connected with the reinstatement of railwaymen of all class es. The Railway Service Journal returns to the subject in one of its latest issues. Complaints of victimization are made against the companies, who are further charged with aggravating the bitter feeling caused by the non-reinstatement of many strikers by prosecuting members of the Railway Clerks' Association "on the flimsiest of pretexts," and by removing men "to inferior positions without any cause being assigned save that they (the companies) disapproved of their salaried employees going on strike, whatever the wages grades might do."

After reviewing in detail a number of cases in support of the allegations made, The Journal states:

"The companies' application of the word 'disloyal' to strikers to distinguish them from the 'loyalists' who remained on work is on a par with the methods of those members of the 'stupid party' who arrogate to themselves the right to claim the Union Jack as their flag. We can only treat such tactics with amused contempt. If the companies continue to turn a deaf ear to the representations which have been and are being made, we shall not complain, but the association will act. The association will respond to just and generous treatment, but if it can take long views it also has a good memory. The association will abide its time, but all concerned may rest assured that if a change does not take place, if these association stalwarts are not restored the blow will fall when the companies least expect it."

COWS HIDE CHILD FROM MOTORIST

Tot Helping Father Drive Cattle Darts in Front of Passing Car.

SIMCOE, Ont., Aug. 30.—Leonard Judd, of Woodhouse, was almost instantly killed yesterday morning on the highway about two miles south of here, when struck by a motor car driven by Frank Reid, well kpown lawyer, of Simcoe.

Mr. Reid was returning from Port Dover, with his nephew, Lorne Reid, when he met a herd of cows on the highway, driven by Fred Judd, whose little boy and girl were with him. He slowed up and turned out to pass the cows when little Leonard Judd ran out from behind the cattle immediately in front of the car. The car struck him and stopped almost immediately, and the boy was found between the front and rear wheels of the car. He was rushed immediately to Dr. English's office, where he died about four minutes later.

Mr. Reid was overcome by the shock and required medical attention. He has been confined to his house under medical supervision. Dr. W. A. McIntosh, coroner, was called and empanelled a jury, who, after viewing the body, adjourned to meet again on Monday.

Burglars Steal Medals In Dutch Royal Palace

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 30 (United Press).—Burglars entered the palaces of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland on Friday, stealing medals from the uniform of the Court Chamberlain and then setting fire to the clothing. The smouldering uniforms were discovered by palace guards. The thieves left untouched many rooms of the palace which contains more valuable objects than those stolen.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness.—Prov. 16:31.

A comfortable old age is the reward of a well-spent youth, therefore instead of it introducing dismal and melancholy prospects of decay, it should give us hopes of eternal youth in a better world.—Palmer.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

A newspaper writer recently said:

"You know how it is when you are talking about somebody and, lo and behold, there they stand!"

This is a common error. Even good writers and speakers are guilty of it sometimes. It should read:

"You know how it is when you are talking about somebody and lo and behold, there he stands!"

With "somebody," which is singular, it is not proper to use "they," which is plural. You should use "he," which is singular, and which, in grammar, embraces both sexes, in cases such as this. If you wish to be very precise you may say, "Lo and behold, there he or she stands," but very few of us are so careful in our speech as that.

The heavy rain of Friday and Saturday put the grain and corn down badly. On account of the rust, so prevalent this season it may not straighten up again, which will make it harder to cut. Some of it may have to be cut one way. It helped the root crop and made the ploughing very much easier. The latter work had become almost impossible in some fields.

A very sad accident occurred at the home of Norman Fee, about two miles north of here, when Mrs. Ayres, of Peterboro, who is an aunt of Mrs. Fee, sustained a broken collar-bone and a severe shaking up. Mrs. Ayres was visiting with her niece, and while playing with the children, she backed against the cellar door, which opened, letting her fall backwards down the steps to the basement. Dr. Earle, of Omemee, was summoned and dressed the injured parts, and her condition is pitiful.

Miss Evelyn Bland has returned to her home after spending a few days with her friend, Miss Helen Rutherford.

Miss Laurine Best spent a few days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hayes, in Emily.

HEN LAYS AND LAYS.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A LITTLE HOUSE.

All we ask is not so much,
Yet that much is sweet;
That at night our hands may touch,
That our eyes may meet.
All we ask when day is done,
When the night is near,
Is a house, a little one,
Yet that house how dear!

Once I dreamed about a prince,
He about a queen.
Ah, but that was ages since;
Now the prince I mean
Is a prince of princely heart,
Not a princely gown,
And a little place apart
When the night comes down.

Once I thought I wanted gold,
Once he wanted fame;
Now I want two hands to hold,
Now he wants the same.
All we ask when day is done,
When the night is near,
Is a house, a little one,
But that house how dear!

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

USELESS SUPERIORITY
By Dr. Frank Crane.

When I was a boy I knew a man who wasn't rich or handsome or smart, but who was immensely proud of himself by virtue of a single accomplishment.

He was the long-distance spitting champion of the countryside.

For distance, accuracy and aplomb he was a world beater.

But beyond this single unprofitable excellence he was pretty much of a total loss.

He was one of that numerous assemblage qualifying for the Royal Order of the Uselessly Superior.

They are the ones who excel in the unimportant, who preen themselves upon over-topping others in things that do not matter.

The whittlers who used to hook themselves over the fences near village stores, who were dexterous with jack-knives, but generally incompetent with all else, were honored members of the order.

The whittlers and the spitters of the past have largely passed, but the uselessly superior are as insistent as ever.

Newspapers which feature the unusual are continually adding to the examples of those who pride themselves because they excel others in things that do not matter.

One man lays claim to fame because he has drunk fifteen cups of coffee a day for fifteen years; another because he has carried the same umbrella for half a century another because he has worn the same collar button most of his life without losing it; another because he has one side of his blacksmith shop piled to the roof with tin tobacco cans which he has used.

Men each year write in to the Secretary of Commerce and bitterly fight for the titles of the largest consumer of tobacco or the greatest consumer of coffee as if it were important and meritorious.

Useless superiority gives the man a sense of achieving a distinction when he has done nothing worthy of distinction.

It is a sort of mild innoculation which leaves him immune to struggling for the real thing.

THREE YOUTHS DIE SUDDENLY

Two Struck By Cars and One Falls Into Lake From Wharf.

ALL ON SATURDAY.

KINGSTON, Aug. 30—Clare B. Asselstine, aged 12 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Asselstine, was drowned at Swift's Wharf on Saturday afternoon. No one saw the lad fall into the water, but it is thought he tried to ride his bicycle along the side of the wharf where there is only a three-foot passage, and that the wheel of the machine hit the edge of one of the boards and before he could regain control he was hurled into the water. The bicycle hanging over the wharf caused officials at the Canada Steamship office to start grappling. In a few minutes the body was brought to the surface. Dr. Morrison, Coroner, decided than an inquest was unnecessary.

Cyclist Killed

CHATHAM, Aug. 30—Hurrying home on his bicycle with a bottle of medicine for his sick father, the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bassett was struck by a motor car driven by George Grainger, a neighbor, and fatally injured. Saturday evening the youth was brought to the St. Joseph's Hospital here, but passed away a few hours afterward. The young lad had ridden into Wallaceburg for the medicine, and was a short distance from his home on the return trip when the accident happened.

Injuries Fatal

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 30—Joseph Cote, 15-year-old high school boy, died at his home yesterday morning from injuries sustained when he was struck by an automobile driven by Theodore F. Norcott of Buffalo. Norcott is being held by the local police on a charge of manslaughter, and bail has been refused pending an investigation by Chief Crowe, and the inquest, which is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon.

The accident occurred early Saturday night almost in front of the boy's home. The lad was riding a bicycle when, according to the story told by Norcott, he swerved in front of his machine and was crushed beneath the wheels before the driver had any chance to stop.

Two bottles of alleged hard cider, bearing labels of a Buffalo soft-drink firm, were found at the point where the car came to a stop, and were alleged by eyewitnesses to have been thrown from the car. The men, however, denied ownership of the supposed liquor.

A PRESENTATION

Miss Ena Barry Given Purse Before Leaving Hastings.

HASTINGS, August 30.—On Friday evening a number of friends of Miss E. Barry gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Louderville to bid her farewell and present her with a token of remembrance.

Hastings, Ont., Aug. 26, 1926.

Dear Ena, — We, your many friends, have gathered together with you this evening to try and show you in a small way how much in the years past we have appreciated your friendship and acquaintance.

We have learned of your decision to make your home in a new land and we all wish you the greatest of success in your new environments.

When you have gone to your new home we will always miss you as a very dear friend, and your cheerful and congenial disposition in both business and social life will be a lost but loving memory to us all, but what is going to be our loss will be a gain for other friends.

Just as a token of remembrance we ask you to accept this gift, not for its value, but for the love we give with it.

Signed on behalf of your Hastings Friends.

Miss Barry, completely surprised over the occasion, with deep feeling thanked those present for their thoughtfulness and kindness.

IT ALIANS EXPEL PRELATE OF KOS FOR HIS PRAYER

Ordered To Pray For Mussolini, He Adds Pangalos' Name.

GREEK ISLANDS.

Seized By Italy During War in Tripoli, Their Return Is Desired.

ATHENS, Aug. 30.—The Archbishop of Kos, one of the twelve islands which the Italians seized during the Tripoli war and have never given back was "commanded" to say prayers of thanksgiving for the escape of Mussolini from assassination. And the Archbishop of that Greek church did so. But he also offered up similar prayers for Pangalos, then dictator of Greece. (The incident occurred before the most recent revolution).

The local Italian authorities were furious. When he left the church the Archbishop was arrested for praying for Pangalos. The good man looked most astonished.

"I know they are great friends, They are both dictators. They have both recently escaped from the peril of assassination. What more simple than to offer up prayers for them both?" was his defence.

But the Italians failed to see the humor of it and the Archbishop was promptly exiled from his native isle to Italy. He belongs to the Greek not the Roman Catholic Church.

The seizure by Italy of these twelve islands, known in Europe as the Dodecanese, distresses the Greeks that live there. As a patriot, Dr. Skeves Zervos is planning a revolt to get them back. Zervos, backed at the time by the millions of Basil Zaharov, the Monte Carlo millionaire, who is a Greek, carried on a great campaign to save them for Greece during the Peace Conference.

He fondly believed Great Britain and France would help him. But they did not. And, now, when several years of Italian occupation have worn out the islanders' patience, Zervos, with the money of another Greek millionaire, has managed to prepare the people of the smaller islands for revolt, if the favorable moment comes. But to all indications that moment is far off.

Italy Fortifies Rhodes

Meanwhile, Italy has made a fortress of the biggest island of all, Rhodes, near the Turkish coast. Kemal Pasha is anxious about this and the large number of Italian war vessels at and near Rhodes. He fears it means occupation of the mainland if the least friction between Turkey and any other power should arise. So, in the Eastern Mediterranean, things are not so sleepy as they seem.

While the islanders planned distant revolt the Grek dictator, Pangalos, just before his downfall, was negotiating with Mussolini for an arrangement. Italy, says Mussolini, will cede to Greece the nine smaller islands, keping Rhodes, Kos and Karpathos, the only ones that matter. For the rsles have failed miserably as colonies for Italian emigrants. The only industry is sponge fishing and the Italians cannot live at this work, which affects their hearts and heads.

So, if the arrangement is made, Italy will consolidate her position at Turkey's very doors and make a gesture of giving back the Greek islands, when in reality she will be giving up only what she cannot use for colonization.

And Kemal Pasha looks on anxiously.

No foreigners are allowed to visit the islands. The Italians will not give visas.

Mother Of Parliaments Becoming Belligerent

LONDON, Aug. 30.—(United Press).—The schoolboy challenge of "come into the alley and repeat that and I'll lick you," has recently become a byword of the House of Commons.

Bitterness between the ruling Conservatives and the Liberals and particularly the Labor members over the coal crisis, frequently results in heated passages of threats back and forth across the chamber.

On one occasion recently two members actually engaged in a fist-fight while returning from the House of Lords.

Captain T. J. O'Connor, Conservative member from Luton, on another occasion angrily crosed the House and asked a Socialist member to step outside the House and repeat what he had said while Prime Minister Baldwin was speaking on the Eight-Hour Bill.

O'Connor declared that the Socialist member had shouted the charge that Baldwin "was trying to line his own pockets in pressing for the passage of the bill."

DAUGHTER OF PIO NEER COUPLE RECALLS LIFE IN FORMER DAYS

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien Still Active and Bright in 83rd Year.

BORN IN OTONABEE.

Parents Came Out as Children With Robinson Settlers in 1825.

DOURO, Aug. 28.—Eighty-two years ago last April 28 there was born in Otonabee, on a farm now owned but not occupied by Michael Torpey, Elizabeth O'Grady, one of nine children of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Grady. Both Mr. and Mrs. O'Grady, then quite young, had come out on the Robinson immigration in 1825, but were married later in this country.

Elizabeth O'Grady is now Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien, who is active in body and bright in mind, with the sight and hearing of a young person, and when The Examiner called was engaged at quilting. Mrs. O'Brien has a splendid memory and can tell anecdotes of the past in an entertaining manner.

She says her grandfather took a frame church in Douro. The attend-Canada, taking the ticket of another family named O'Grady, who had decided at the last moment not to come. Both families had the same number of children, but the sexes were of different numbers and some of the boys had to be dressed in girls clothing to carry out the impersonation.

When Mr. and Mrs. O'Grady were married they settled on the farm mentioned above and there all the children were born, and the mother died, the father dying later in Asphodel.

The family consisted of John (who died about twelve years ago on the farm on which he was born); Thomas, who died many years ago on the farm now owned by David Devlin; Timothy, who died in Asphodel many years ago; Patrick, who died in Toronto forty-eight years ago. Next in age was the subject of this sketch; next came Mrs. William Doherty of Otonabee, who died one year ago; next, Mrs. Timothy Sullivan of Mount Pleasant, Mich., who died four years ago; next, Mrs. John Doherty of Norwood, also deceased several years ago; Michael, the youngest son, who resides at St. Leon Hot Springs, British Columbia is the only member of the family, except Mrs. O'Brien, who is now living.

Twice Married

Mrs. O'Brien was first married to John Smith sixty-four years ago, the ceremony taking place in the old frame church in Douro. The atetndants were John Clancy and Mary Fallon later Mrs. Rahelly) both of whom are dead many years.

Of this marriage there were eleven children, two of whom died in childhood. Those who are now living are John and Louise at home; Mrs. Margaret McKenty of Kitchener; Mrs. Daniel McKenty of Havre, Montana; Mrs. R. F. Young of Turlock, Cal., and Patrick of Seattle. Mrs. John Lonergan of Otonabee died ten years ago, and Mrs. James Conroy of Peterborough died five years ago, and Edward died twenty years ago at St. Leon, B.C.

Mr. Smith died over forty years ago, and later Mrs. Smith married Dennis O'Brien, who passed to his eternal reward five years ago. Of this latter marriage, there was one daughter, Mrs. Veronica Faux of Hastings.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Smith lived for a few years on their farm, one mile north of Indian River. Then they moved to the tiny hamlet of Guerin, one mile west of the farm where they kept a hotel for twenty years. During their stay in the hotel the Montreal-Toronto branch of the C.P.R. was built and the surveyors and workers on the right of way boarded with Mrs. Smith.

The local blacksmith shop was across the road and a little to the west. The blacksmiths, whom Mrs. O'Brien remembers to have worked in the shop were Bernard McGuire, Michael McCann (now of North Bay), Augustus Whibbs, still smith at Indian River; Dennis Sullivan, long since gone from here, and Stephen Murphy, now of Peterborough.

Some of the teachers of the old days who taught in S.S. No. 1 whom she remembers were Messrs. Doran, Burke, James Lonergan (now in Toronto), James Miles N. McNulty, (now Rev. Fr. McNulty of Owen Sound), James McNulty; B. Leahy (now Dr. B. Leahy of St. Paul, Minn.), and Eugene Torpey; also Miss Agnes Maloney (now Mrs. Underhill of Florida) who recently renewed old acquaintances here.

Old neighbors who have lived near Mrs. O'Brien and most of whom have passed to their eternal rest were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Guerin and family (who gave the name to the post office formerly located in the tiny village); Mr. and Mrs. William Walsh and children; Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Meade and family; Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien and family (Mr. O'Brien being still living); Mr. and Mrs. John Fox (who at one time kept a store at Guerin); Mr. and Mrs. Michael McCann; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Meade and family, etc.

When rs. O'Brien's father, Mr. O'Grady first settled on the farm, everywhere there was nothing but woods. His equipment was an axe, a pot, a crane for the hearth and a few other small utensils, and a year's provisions.

A "Silver Fox."

One evening, rather late, while going through the woods, Mr. O'Grady saw a small animal and caught it. He put it under his shirt and brought it home. Hailing his wife, he said, "Mary, we're made up forever!" His wife said, "What luck did you strike now?" "I caught a silver grey fox in the woods!" He put the animal in a trough and before morning they knew what the animal was from the scent.

Once, while walking where deer had a runway he saw a deer coming. He stepped behind a tree, and when the deer passed, he threw his arms out and caught the animal. Of course it put up a big fight, so Mr. O'Grady called to his wife to bring an axe. The more Mrs. O'Grady struck the animal the harder it jumped. Finally taking the axe himself, he killed the deer.

Mr. O'Grady at one time was employed by a man named Beckett. As Mr. O'Grady had no boots and the weather was getting cold for bare feet, he tried an experiment to provide himself with footwear. His employer had two large cats, and one day when he was away, Mr. O'Grady killed and skinned the cats and, taking the hide home, made a pair of mocassins. These served for a time till they got wet, when they stretched all out of shape.

Mrs. O'Brien tells one anecdote which shows a spirit of mischief in herself. At one time a man living not far away won a goose at cards. Two or three times the goose was put up by the winner and was won away from him, but he refused to give it up. So Mrs. O'Brien and a maid whom he was employing at the time went to the man's place when they knew he was away, with the intention of stealing the goose. However, on the first occasion, a cousin of the owner happened to be on the premises, so they made an excuse that they came to borrow soda. A few weeks later they went again and found the goose locked in the house. Going to the blacksmith they borrowed a crow-bar and prying the door off the hinges, took the goose. When the goose was ready for the table the owner was invited to dinner. Mrs. O'Brien remarked to him, "It's to bad about your goose being taken." Mr. Black replied "If I knew the man who took that goose, he'd never take another." She said, "What would do do to a woman that would take it?" "Well, it wouldn't be well for her, either."

Months later, Mrs. O'Brien told who had taken his goose.

ALLIES PROTEST ON NATIONALISTS

Bring Military Activity To Attention of German Government.

ROUTINE MATTERS.

LONDON, Aug. 30. — (United News).—Military activity of Nationalist organizations in Germany is among the subjects brought to the attention of the Berlin Government by the Council of Allied Ambassadors in Paris, the British Foreign Office stated on Friday. Other matters taken up in the Ambassadors' note were alleged illegal recruiting of Reichswehr organizations in German and ostentatious delay by Germany in granting requests of the Inter-Allied Control Commission.

The Foreign Office admitted that the note had to do mainly with routine matters but expressed the opinion that it was sent at an inopportune time. Fear was expressed that it may cause an increase in the opposition of German Nationalists to the League of Nations.

Ruins of Maya City Built Thousand Years Ago Found

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 30.—(Associated Press.)—The ruins of Maya City, supposedly built some 1,600 years ago, have been found near Santa Isabel in the state of Chiapas almost at the Guatemalan border. The discovery was made by two Mexican scientists, Enrique Juan Palacios and Miguel de Mendidabal, officials of the department of archaeology of the new museum. They have been on an exploration trip in tropical Mexico.

The ruins were found in the jungle near a well traveled highway.

The scientists report more than 30 buildings, mostly temples, are easily traced in the ruined city. Under many mounds, they believe other edifices will be found. The area of the city is estimated at more than 30,000 square meters.

MISS TORONTO WON'T BOB HAIR

Not Only Beautiful But Intelligent, is Comment of One of Judges.

WOULD BE WRITER

TORONTO, Aug. 30. — (Canadian Press).—A graceful brunette, "divinely tall" and with the ebony-and-ivory complexion of an Argentine senorita, is Miss Jean Ford Tolmie, who has been crowned "Miss Toronto," and chosen by unanimous decision of the five judges and by the 30,000 spectators who watched the judging, to represent Toronto at the Atlantic City beauty pageant next month.

"Miss Ford is not only beautiful, she is intelligent," said one of the judging committee. "Anyone is intelligent who has sense enough to wear her hair like that!"

Parted in the centre and brushed smoothly like burnished ebony about her face, "Miss Toronto" wears her luxuriant hair in a great close coil at the nape of her neck. "No, I would never think of having it bobbed," she said. "I think bobbed hair looks terrible on a tall girl." She is 5 feet 7 inches tall, is 21 years old and weighs 143 pounds, yet has the appearance of slenderness and symmetry. She takes a 5 1-2 shoe and a 6 1-2 glove. Did she diet? She smiled at the query. "Well, yes, to some extent. I live largely on vegetable foods. Not much meat. I used to eat candies quite a lot, but I have cut them out." She was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, her mother being Irish and her father Scottish. And her father does not approve of beauty contests, although now he is very proud of his daughter's success. "It won't turn Jean's head," he said.

"My ambition has always been to be a writer," Miss Tolmie said. "I would love to do that kind of work."

Miss Tolmie hasn't the slightest desire to marry a millionaire, to go on the stage or into the movies, or to stay in the United States, no matter how tempting an offer she may receive. When asked what was her ideal of a man, and her ambitions, her reply was: "My ideal of a man is the one I am going with. He is a Canadian of Irish descent and has a wonderful sense of humor. My ambition is to get married and have children."

New Zealand Whalers Use Metal Speed Boat

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(United Press).—Use of a 45-mile-an-hour speedboat with a 700-pound aluminum gasoline engine to chase whales has been reported to the Commerce Department from New Zealand.

Competition forced the South Sea whalers to abandon their picturesque wooden vessels, the report from Consul-General Lowrie, Wellington, said.

Powdered Bare Legs Again Fad In London

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(United Press).—Stockingless stockings have again become fashionable in London during the recent hot weather.

Special shades of powder are used on bare legs to give them the appearance of being clad with flesh colored stockings. One well-known society figure was recently observed to have painted a faint line down the back of her leg to simulate the seam of a stocking.

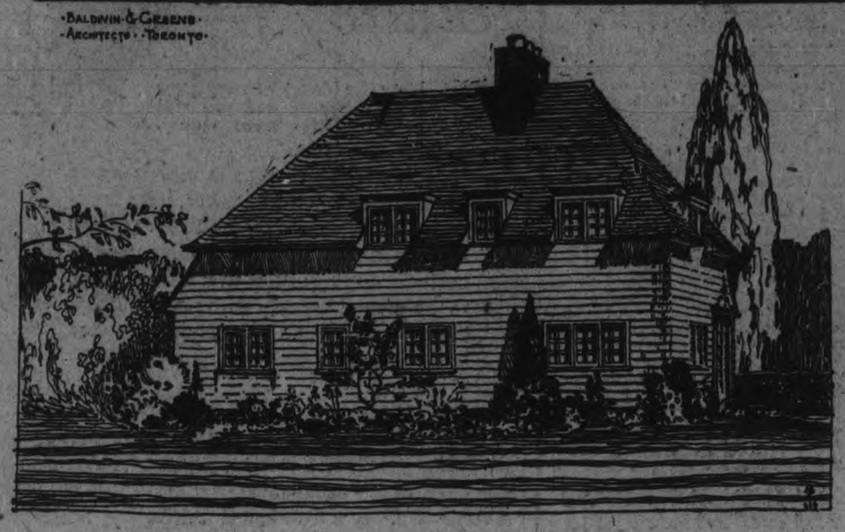
BALDWIN & GREENE ARCHITECTS TORONTO



DISTINCTIVE APPEARANCE AND MODERATE COST

(By Baldwin & Green, Architects.)

This home, 21 ft 6 in. x 35 ft. has already been erected by a client of the architects and including hot air heating, plumbing fixtures and septic tank, cost $5,500. The exterior walls are of lapped siding laid over tar paper and tongue and groove sheeting. The concrete cellar extends under the whole house and contains storage space for fruit and vegetables.

An interesting feature of the first floor plan is the elimination of the entrance hall or what would be equally true, its enlargement to form a sunroom This arrangement is far more preferable than a small hall for it really performs the same functions and at the same time is ever so much more utilitarian.

The living-room is 13 ft. x 13 ft. and the light problem is well taken care of by the two groups of casement windows More important than the area of the windows themselves is the fact that the light from these sources is absolutely unobstructed. Roof projections for verandahs are usually the most prolific source of trouble in this respect and it is invariably the living-room which suffers.

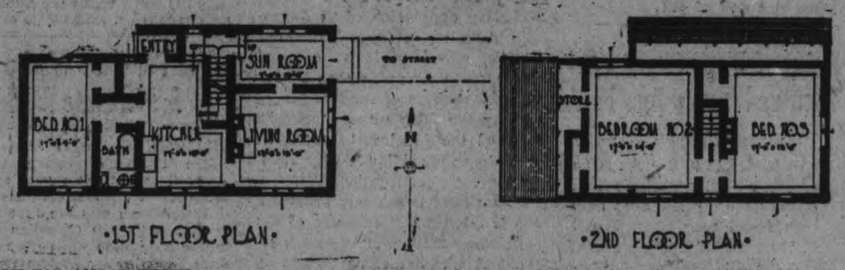
As there is no dining-room, the kitchen, 17 ft. x 10 ft., is intended to serve in a dual capacity. The large cupboard just inside the door contains a built-in refrigerator with outside icing door. This, of course, in addition to facilitating icing during the summer, also precludes the necessity of it in winter.

The architect's client insisted on a bedroom and bathroom downstairs and the dimensions of the former, 17 ft. x 9 ft. 6 in., indicate that his wishes have been complied with. The other two bedrooms upstairs are also exceedingly large, 17 ft. x 14 ft. 6 in. and 17 ft. x 13 ft. Spacious clothes closets and a store-room complete the second floor plan which could easily be altered to suit other preferences.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address, Messrs. Baldwin and Greene, 31 Bloor St. E., Toronto, Ont. Copyright, 1926, MacLean Building Reports, Limited.

Question.—Is a one-inch air space between a tile wall and the plaster coat sufficient to eliminate dampness?

Yes. And it is desirable to have waterproof paper applied between the furring system and the tile. Some patented wall bearing tile forms are available that do not require furring.



1ST FLOOR PLAN — 2ND FLOOR PLAN

O OK FAR AHEAD WHEN FINANCING THE PURCHASE

In regard to financing the purchase of a lot and the building of a home it is important that you should carefully weigh both your existing and future circumstances. It is unwise to count too heavily upon the prospective resources of your pocket book, and perhaps burden yourself with a load that your later situation may not enable you to continue bearing. On the other hand, it is often a mistake to skimp on the first cost and deprive yourself and your family of conveniences and comforts which will cost much more to install after the building has been completed.

To strike a judicious balance between these two extremes is not an easy task, and in working it out you should not trust to hearsay. Before you decide on the size and type of dwelling you propose to build, before you select a plan, it would be wise to consult a number of people who make building, home planning and financing a special business. They will be able to counsel you as to the pitfalls of skimping on the one hand or of plunging, on the other.

Generally speaking, it is better to plunge a little than skimp a lot, for it is usually possible to sell a well-built house with modern conveniences without much trouble if it becomes too heavy a burden to carry; whereas a skimped and inconvenient structure is invariably a drug on the market.

As to cash, it is necessary, as a rule, to have available about twenty to forty per cent. of the combined value of the lot and the building. Suppose, for instance, that your lot is going to cost $2,000, and the home you propose to build will cost another $8,000. On this total of $10,000 it should be possible to arrange mortgages of about $5,000. If you already own the lot the cash necessary to swing the transaction will amount to $3,000, or about 30 per cent. of the total value.

Building and loan companies, trust companies, trustees of estates, private individuals and other sources will usually lend from forty to sixty per cent. of their own estimate of the total value of land and buildings on first mortgage security and you will usually receive this in three payments as follows:

1. When roof is on, 50 per cent. of loan.
2. When the first coat of plaster is on, 25 per cent. of loan.
3. Thirty days after completion, 25 per cent of loan.

Should additional funds be required there are reputable firms making loans on second mortgages as security. Such a loan should be for as small an amount as possible, and payable in full within five years. It is necessary to pay a bonus for such accommodation.

SHOWER IS GIVEN MILLBROOK BRIDE

Miss G. M. Smith Receives Many Gifts From Her Friends.

MILLBROOK, August 28. — A delightful social event took place at the rectory on Thursday evening, the chief feature of the gathering being a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Gladys M. Smith, whose marmarriage to Mr. Havelock C. Graham. B.A. Sc., of St. Catharines, will take place in St. Thomas' church, on Saturday, September 4, at 2 p.m.

About 25 guests, friends of the bride-to-be were present, cards and music furnishing agreeable entertainment for the earlier part of the evening.

The "shower" was arranged in a somewhat unusual, but very attractive form, a huge bouquet being placed in the centre of the table, the vines completely covering the many gaily-hued flowers and drooping daintily wrapped parcels which filled the remaining available space.

Upon invitation from Mrs. (Rev.) Canon Allen, and Mrs. J. E. Allen, Jr., who had assumed the entire responsibility of planning, and carrying out the pleasing event, the guests entered the dining room, the hostess on behalf of her assistants and herself, asking the guest of the evening to accept the "bouquet,' and leading her by careful suggestion to discover the mystery of the hidden gifts.

Surprised by the unexpected turn of events which the change of rooms made happily possible, the bride-to-be voiced her appreciation and gratitude in a few brief but suitable remarks. The interest always attendant upon opening the various parcels, and reading the many messages of affection and good will which the enclosed cards contain, is one of the most enjoyable features of "shower" parties, and this followed as a matter of course when the presentation and reply were complete.

Silver and fine china predominated among the many beautiful gifts received, and as the last parcel was unwrapped and the contents of all were tastefully arranged in the waiting space, both the recipient and her friends had opportunity for general inspection, admiration and enjoyment being readily expressed.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Allen ,assisted by Mrs. J. E. Allen, as the final item before a most pleasurable gathering was brought to a close.

The many friends of Rev. Charles D. Clarke, a former Millbrook boy, whose sermons were much enjoyed during his brief visits to the village some few months ago, will be interested to learn that his present circuit is located at Anyox, B. C., eight hours journey from Prince Rupert, the western terminal of the C. N. R.

Anyox is a mining and smelting town, with the work going on seven days a week, hence as far as church work is concerned it presents about as big a problem as any place well could. Speaking of conditions in his charge Mr. Clarke says: "The only access to the outside world is by boat three times a week. We have a floating population of about 1800; people stay here from 3 to 5 years, some less —and one or two families have been here ten years. Being far away from civilization the people consider that they have a right to do anything they wish; in this case it is: 'The people can do no wrong.'"

Baseball and football on Sundays give lively opposition to the church services, and yet very often the men outnumber the women at the latter. Once a month last winter, in Mr. Clarke's church, an hour's song service was held at the close of evening worship, the ladies serving tea and cake. "It had a good effect and started many coming to church fairly regularly." There are but four adults in a Sunday school of 80 pupils, the children ranging from 4 to 13 years of age.

"The preacher here has to be jack-of-all-trades, superintendent of the Sunday school, preach, visit, advertise (post bills, etc.), light the fires,sweep and clean the church, and do any repair work required."

Last year Mr. Clarke personally trained the young people of his church for a pageant, "Following the Star," which met with marked success, and is planning to prepare an entertainment on a large scale this December.

The church at Anyox joined the Union, and since going there almost one year ago the pastor has followed the order of service in the former Methodist church, but uses the Presbyerian Book of Praise.

The small frame building west of the village which was used as a slaughter house, and belonged to W. Thorne, proprietor of the local meat market, was accidentally burned last week, taking fire in some unexplained manner from the one kindled to dispose of the offal from animals freshly killed. H. Nattrass and Ted Budd were on the premises at the time attending to the slaughter and preparation of two or three lambs, the meat to supply the Thorne store. Besides the loss of the building, another lamb which was being reserved for killing the following day, was burned. The building was a total loss.

Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Bentley motored to Toronto on Monday called to the city because of the illness of her sister, Mrs. C. Dayton, of Picton, who was undergoing a serious operation at the general hospital. Later Mr. Morden received word that the operation had been successully carried out and the patient was doing as well as could be expected.

Miss Marjorie Sayles has taken a position with a business firm in Peterborough, beginning her duties as stenographer last Monday.

Rev. F. H. Howard left for Toronto early in the week and will occupy his own pulpit next Sunday, his three weeks' holiday term having then expired.

Miss Ariel Curtiss, head clerk in Fowler and Pendrie's store, has returned to her business position after enjoying a two weeks' holiday in the Kawartha Lakes region.

Another placard for smallpox was put up on Thursday, a third case having developed; the other two patients are on the way to recovery, and so far all cases are of a mild type.

Misses Emma and Ducilla Olver of Toronto, were recent guests of their cousin, Mr. W. H. Coombs.

Mrs. J. Doak and son Albert, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bolton Price, Orillia, for the past few weeks, returned home on Monday, Mrs. Price accompanying them. The party came by motor.

Miss Shirley L. Muir, Principal of the Continuation School, is in Ottawa this week, attending the Centenary celebration.

Mr. Alan Mitchell took in the Harvesters' excursion to the west last week.

PROMOTER DIES BEING QUESTIONED

Seized With Heart Trouble While Being Interviewed By Attorney.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Jared Flagg, stock broker, real estate promoter, author of a scheme to "beat Wall Street," who was many time in trouble with the authorities for his methods of making money, died suddenly yesterday as he was being question by Deputy Attorney-General Keyes Winter about his latest scheme. He was 70 years old.

Flagg was stoutly maintaining to Deputy Attorney-General Winter at the office of the Bureau for the Prevention of Frauds, 66 Broadway, that his transactions were perfectly legal when he suddenly faltered, began to choke, and sank into a chair. For a minute Mr. Winter hesitated, thinking that Flagg was feigning illness to close an unpleasant interview. Then he summoned Dr. Barth of the Broad Street Hospital, but Flagg was dead upon the doctor's arrival. Death was due to heart trouble.

As "52 per cent. Flagg" the dead man was widely known fifteen years ago. In 1908 he began to advertise that he had perfected a scheme to "beat Wall Street," which guaranteed his clients a profit of 1 per cent.

Trades His Lottery Ticket For Beer—Then It Wins

BERLIN, Aug. 30.—(United Press).—A day laborer's thirst for a stein of good, cold beer, netted the widow of the local inn-keeper at Bad Ischl, Austria a fortune of $15,000.

The buxom widow is the winner of the big prize in the latest Austrian state lottery. A few years ago, her husband worked near Ischl as a miner. Today his widow is one of the richest inhabitants of the district.

The winning ticket was first bought by a worker, Joahnn Bart, at a little tobacco shop at the summer resort of Bad Ischl. But Johann couldn't conjure up enough patience to await the fateful drawing of lots. And so when he visited the local inn one evening, he decided that a glass of beer in the hand was worth an uncertain lottery-prize in the bush. Accordingly, he ordered a stein of Pilsiner and paid his bill with his lottery ticket.

When the lots were drawn the inn keeper's wife was officially advised that she had won $15,000.

In order to console Johann for his loss, the widow invited him to drown his sorrow in beer for a whole evening—at her expense.

THE SHEIK'S ADMIRERS

Mourners of Rudolph Valentino stormed the Broadway funeral parlors in the rain for a last look at their "Great Lover." Dozens of persons were injured and thousands were crushed in the jam.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ONTARIO:

During the last three weeks I have declared the Conservative policy on fifty platforms in the four great Western Provinces, and I am today returning to Ontario assured of a gratifying gain in the West amply sufficient to make certain a strong and stable Conservative Government.

While absent from Ontario I have been advised that ex-members and supporters of the late King Government have abandoned discussion of the great issues involved and are confining their efforts to misrepresentation of minor issues, and with poison pen and whispered falsehood seeking to fan local prejudice and inflame racial differences, and thus divert public opinion from the late Government's deplorable record of departmental corruption, Parliamentary barter, unstable tariff and hopeless misgovernment.

I am in this fight as Premier of the country and as Leader of the Conservative Party, and I have no word of apology to make for one single word I have uttered during the campaign. I appeal on the Issues, and on them alone, to every Canadian, Protestant and Catholic, English, French, European, Jew and Gentile alike. We are all fellow-countrymen, with equal rights, common ends and an indivisible future. What is good for one is good for all.

Furthermore, it would appear that special appeals are being made to certain classes in the community, as, for instance, the canvass of the employees of the National Railway upon the misstatement that I am harboring some sinister design on the life of that Railway System.

The Railway policy of the Conservative Party is:

First, to courageously develop the National Railway System, preserving its complete integrity;

Second, to avoid political interference while maintaining the rights of Parliament;

Third, to give a loyal and consistent support to the President and management of the undertaking in the due discharge of their duties, and in making a success of the operation; and

Fourth, to bring to this country under the Conservative National policy of reasonable protection such a period of prosperity as will solve all our railway problems and bring to the railway workers an era of full-time employment with full rates of pay.

It is the solemn duty of all Canadians at this critical hour to forget differences of racial origin, of religious persuasion or of class interest, and to concentrate, work and vote for five prosperous years of stable government.

On October 29th last the Province of Ontario gave the Conservative Party, under my Leadership, the greatest majority of seats and of electoral votes ever accorded to any Party since Confederation, and I appeal confidently for such a further electoral gain on September 14th as will ensure honest administration, a stable Government and such prosperity as this country has never heretofore enjoyed.

Liberal-Conservative Victory Committee, 25 King St. East, Toronto

DURHAM CONSERVATIVE PICNIC IN BOWMANVILLE HELD SATURDAY

Hon. Dr. Godfrey is Principal Speaker in Support of F. W. Bowen.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

About 3,000 People Gather To Hear Election Issues Discussed.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 30. — Premier Howard Ferguson, who was advertised as the chief speaker at the big picnic held at Bowmanville on Saturday, August 28th, under the auspices of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Durham County, was unavoidably absent, Honorable Dr. Godfrey, Minister of Health in the Provincial Cabinet, taking his place.

Probably no more suitable location than the "Cream of Barley" park could have been secured for the accommodation of the large gathering, the ideal weather making up for the heavy rain which caused a postponement of the event from the previous week.

At least three thousand people were were in attendance, and the prevailing atmosphere was one of good humor and enthusiasm throughout.

C. E. Redher, president of the Bowmanville Liberal-Conservative Association, was chairman when the speaking in the interests of the Conservative candidate, T. W. Bowen, who has represented the riding in the Federal House since 1921, began about 4 p.m.

Mr. Bowen was the first speaker called upon and received a hearty ovation when he rose in response to the chairman's request.

"It is gratifying to see such a gathering, representative of the entire riding, and with a number from the adjacent counties as well," Mr. Bowen said in opening, and proceeded to make appreciative reference to the beauty and utility of the ample grounds of the tourist camp, which were available for the picnic through the generosity of Mr. Morden, proprietor of the "Cream of Barley" Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Bowen referre. to the importance of adequate protection for the industrial and agricultural life of the Dominion and stated his conviction that there is no constitutional issue in the present campaign. His opponent, in the letters he has been publishing week by week had made reference to the fact that the candidate of the Conservative party is standing behind Mr. Meighen's policy, and the speaker said that he was proud to have such a leader to sit behind in the House, and to give all the support he could to the policy of the Conservative party.

"Has the Independent party got a leader in this campaign?" he asked, and cries of "No" came from a score or more of his listeners.

In conclusion Mr. Bowen said the Conservative party is pledged to do its utmost to promote prosperity and stability in Canada, and prophesied that the Right Honorable Arthur Meighen will be returned with a substantial majority in the next Parliament.

A. J. Fallis, M.P.P.

A. J. Fallis, M.P.P. for East Durham, was asked to introduce the Honorable Dr Godfrey to the audience, and in doing so stated that the large number present, in a very busy time and with other attractions to call them elsewhere, showed that an active interest in the political situation is being taken.

The disappointment of Premier Ferguson's unavoidable absence was referred to, and the speaker took occasion to express his own personal regard for the leader in the Provincial House. "The more I know him the better I appreciate him; I believe he honestly desires to give the Province of Ontario the best possible administration, and his followers stand solidly behind him with a consequent result that stability and reliability are assured."

Presenting Dr. Godfrey, Mr. Fallis stated that he had done more than any other man to promote the health of the Province of Ontario."

Hon. Dr. Godfrey.

After expressing his personal pleasure in being present, the Honorable Dr. Godfrey made complimentary reference to the American proprietorship of the park in use for the gathering, and said: "We appreciate the Yankee asset which comes over here to see a real people living in a real country; we give them courteous welcome, and are glad to have some of their American coin, which is no better than our own, the latter being at par over there as well as here."

A personal regard for Mr. Bowen was expressed by the speaker, who stated: "There were two outstanding contests in the campaign last fall, that of Herb Lennox in North York, and Fred Bowen in Durham; both brought home the bacon, and I am confident that they will repeat the performance on September 14 of this year." (Applause).

"This great country has been going on standing still — isn't that Irish? But we have been losing some of our best brawn and blood in the stream of ever-increasing volume which has been flowing to the United States, and have been replacing this Anglo-Saxon stock with immigrants from Europe. The leak will never be stopped while a 'wobbling Willie,' in the person of William Lyon Mackenzie King, is at the head of our Government."

Passing reference was made to "the two Communists from Winnipeg, Woodsworth and Heeps," and their influence in the late Liberal administration and the speaker averred that "Canada is all ready to go but the emergency brake must be taken off; we must have a Government strong enough to be bold, so that the defection of one or two soreheads (always to be found in any party) will not be felt.

"I don't like talking about nasty things," Dr. Godfrey stated, making brief mention of the Customs probe; "my advice is to clean up the sewer and put the sewer-rats in gaol, and thus straighten out the whole business.

Has anybody heard of Mr. Massey since Durham got through with him? He got mixed up in the machinery here last Fall, but is retired now. Is Durham going to elect Fred Bowen, who stands four-square behind his leader, again this year, thus helping the Right Honorable Arthur Mighen to receive a splendid start when the new House assembles?" "With 1,400 of a majority this time," was the reply from someone in the crowd near the platform, and applause followed.

"Thank God the Conservative party has control of the ballot boxes, so we don't start with the dice loaded against us this time. See that you in Durham fill them properly, and we'll see to North York. We're going to stand for a go-ahead Canada; we're going to take off the emergency brake." (Applause).

Arthur J. Trebilcock

The chairman next introduced "Arthur J. Trebilcock, a former Bowmanville boy of whom we are proud," and a rousing ovation gave evidence of the popularity of the speaker.

Mr. Trebilcock is just home from a business trip to Red Lake, and spoke enthusiastically of the immense wealth in natural resources, timber, furs, fisheries, pulp wood, and eventually of the gold and silver mines of that region.

"I don't believe in introducing the liquor question into politics, but here in Durham the temperance issue has been emphasized, so we must take up the sword which our opponent has sharpened. I am glad to be enrolled beneath the banner of the Conservative party, because I believe it has done more to advance temperance legislation than any other party in the Dominion.

"Ask a Liberal what his party has ever done for temperance, and you put him in a very embarrassing position," said Mr. Trebilcock, as he went on to state that he had been brought up under strong temperance influences and his personal temperance principles were well known.

He traced in detail the history of temperance legislation in Ontario from the time of Sir George Ross until the present, "Do nothing, and do it now," expresses fully the Liberal record, he said.

Confidence in the W.C.T.U. to bring an active influence to bear upon the deplorable conditions which exist in relation to bootlegging, the debauchery which results in the border cities from false destinations alleged for boats loaded from the distillery warehouses, and the Federal attitude of indifference, was expressed by the speaker who more than once asserted his pride in what the Conservative government had done in connection with the liquor evil.

In concluding his address Mr. Trebilcock made reference to the constitutional question of which he was personally convinced that Mr. King is heartily tired, 'and would gladly shake off if he could." Any interference with "that fine, invisible bond which binds together the component parts of the British Empire" is to be hotly resented. "Ultra patriotic, Imperialistic, All-British, are terms we are proud to have applied to the Conservative party." (Applause.)

W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P.

W. E. Tummon, of Belleville, late member for South Hastings, was the next speaker, and in his address dealt almost entirely with the customs scandal, giving detailed information of a number of cases brought to light by the investigating committee. "The real issue in this campaign is whether or not fraud, corruption, dishonesty, maladministration, government by barter and by bargain, legislation for the benefit of other countries rather than for the benefit of Canada, is to continue; or whether we are to have a government, led by Right Honorable Arthur Meighen, whose party stands for the cleaning up of the situation revealed by the customs' inquiry, and the promotion of stability and prosperity in the Dominion."

A. G. Anderson, K.C.

A. G. Anderson, K.C., of Toronto, late member for High Park, was the final speaker of the afternoon. Delayed by motor trouble, Mr. Anderson was late in arriving but glad of the opportunity to speak for his personal friend, F. W. Bowen, "who is always consistent and attentive to his duties in the House, and on committees."

Devoting some time to the question of the reduction of the taxes on automobiles, Mr. Anderson said, "There is not one of these manufacturing companies, except the Ford concern at Windsor, that is making a profit. If the tariff was not tinkered with so often they could be operated at a profit all our industries should be protected from unfair competition with the United States, Great Britain and Germany. A protective policy, and an honest administration of that policy, are outstanding needs. Have we had it? The customs' scandal reveals the answer."

The constitutional question is nothing more than a smoke screen, the speaker was assured, and queried, "Why should we not be proud to be part and parcel of the British Empire? Has Great Britain ever done anything that we should desire to break the tie?"

The immigration policy and the exodus to the States came in for a share of attention, and Mr. Anderson, in his final remarks, urged support of F. W. Bowen, and the return of Honorable Arthur Meighen as Prime Minister with a substantial majority, Durham doing its share toward this end when the Conservative candidate left his opponent far in the rear.

Three cheers for the King, and F. W. Bowen brought the main feature of the afternoon to a close, and picnic parties were almost immediately gathered in various parts of the 18 acres which compose the park grounds, for enjoyment of the supper hour.

Two bands, the Durham Regimental Band from Orono, and the one from Bowmanville, provided an excellent programme of music throughout the afternoon and evening.

The numerous children present had their hearts gladdened by the showers of candies, and the reward of sweets for every one, large or small, who competed in the various races. Mr. Jack Bantz, who is reputed to tip the scales at 365 pounds, superintended this part of the programme, his averdupois, and his large following of kiddies of all ages, giving him somewhat of the appearance and standing of Santa Claus.

The crowd was considerably augmented in the evening for the entertainment given by Duncan Cowan and his company, and this provided a pleasing finish to a successful day's outing.

FAREWELL GIFTS WERE PRESENTED

Springville Lady and Daughter Given Many Useful Articles.

SPRINGVILLE, Aug. 30. — The ladies of Springville and Fairmount United Congregations assembled on the manse lawn, Springville, on Wednesday afternoon, to bid farewell to Mrs. William Crowe and her daughter Minnie, who are removing to the town of Bracebridge.

Mrs. Crowe, who has been a lifelong resident of the community, will be greatly missed. With her late husband she was an earnest church worker. Mr. Crowe was for years a valued member of the Board of Management of the Presbyterian church in Springville and who in an unassuming quiet manner, materially assisted in all branches of church work.

The ladies of Springville and Fairmount churches feel that they could not allow Mrs. Crowe and Minnie to depart from their midst without expressing their good wishes for their happiness in their future home, so they asked them to accept an address and some gifts as a slight expression of their esteem and love. Mrs. Crowe and Minnie were asked to come forward, and Mrs. Murray McBain read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Crowe and Minnie:

There are times in life when it is specially fitting that we should express apreciation of one another, and say the kindly words of praise, and at the same time say "God speed."

You have arrived at such a time and we take the opportunity now to say what is in our hearts.

As a citizen you have earned for yourself a good name; you have been a good neighbor and a wise counsellor.

In the church we have learned to value you as a faithful Christian woman and a willing helper.

In the Sunday school, in the Women's Missionary Society, and in all women's work, you have gladly done your share.

We are sorry to lose your presence and help. It is a real loss to a country church especially. But we believe you are following the leading of Providence in going away. We have been with you in thought as you patiently nursed the sick for so long a time, and we have sympathized with you in your bereavement. God has given you strength to carry on and he will be with you to the end. We wish you "God Speed" in days to come. May you and your daughter enjoy good health and every blessing in your new home and may you make friends as dear as the ones you are leaving.

We ask you to accept these gifts as a token of the esteem and good wishes of the ladies of Fairmount and Springville United Churches.

Mrs. Ben Johnston, Mrs. Robert Armstrong and Mrs. A. Hunter presented Mrs. Crowe with an electric table lamb, a toaster stove, and a set of aluminum, while Dorothy Whitting ton presented Minnie with a fountain pen and Evershap pencil.

Mrs. Crowe's Bible Class of young ladies presented her with an address read by Miss Esma Johnston, and a book of poems was given by Miss Jean Fairbairn. Their address was as follows:

Dear Mrs. Crowe: As members of your S. S. Class we feel that in a special way you belong to us. We could not let you go without telling you how much we valued your presence with us each Sunday, and how dear you have become to the class. (We don't need to tell you that your place will be hard to fill. Such a teacher as you are is a rare gift.) You have made each Sunday school lesson more than interesting, because you have added to them your own experience of life. We want you to know that we have benefitted by your teaching and will not readily forget the truths you have made so plain to us, and we remember that even though you are leaving us, another class may be made richer by your leadership.

As a token of our love for you we ask you to accept this little book with the love and good wishes of the girls of your Sunday School class.

In a few well chosen words Mrs. Crowe feelingly expressed her appreciation of the kindness shown her throughout the years of residence in the community and for the beautiful and useful gifts presented to her today.

At the close of the proceedings the ladies served refreshments at which Rev. Mr. McConnachie and Mrs. McConnachie ably assisted.

D'ANGELO COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON TWO MANSLAUGHTER CHARGES ARISING FROM ALCOHOLIC DEATHS

Evidence Taken at Preliminary Hearing on Gill and Johnston.

NO BAIL ASKED.

Evidence Given Is Repetition of That at the Inquests.

OAKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 28.—As the result of evidence produced by the Crown at a preliminary hearing, Bert D'Angelo, fruit dealer of Hamilton, charged with manslaughter in connection with a number of deaths attributed, in each case to wood alcohol poisoning, was committed for trial by Magistrate J. H. Shields here yesterday. The hearing dealt only with the cases of James Johnston and George Gill, both of Oakville, who died at their homes on July 23rd and July 24th, respectively.

In the case of George Gill, two cans had been found on the premises containing wool alcohol, while in the case of Johnston the poisonous liquor had been traced to the home of William Maybee. In both cases it was shown that D'Angelo a short time before the death of the victims had supplied alcohol to Gill and Maybee, and the Crown produced a signed statement from D'Angelo, accounting for one supply.

In spite of the protests of D'Angelo's counsel, Hugh John Macdonald of Toronto, who declared that the statement had not been a voluntary one and should not be used against his client, His Worship declared the accused was guilty of gross negligence and recklessness in distributing the alcohol which justified his commitment on the charge of manslaughter. No bail was asked.

The evidence throughout the afternoon was in substance a repetition of that which has already been given at inquests held in Hamilton, Oakville and Toronto on the bodies of victims of bootleg liquor. The presence of Detective Crocker of Hamilton, however, was the feature of the afternoon's hearing and it was his evidence together with the signed statement of the accused which formed the connecting link between the tragic deaths of the two Oakville men and the man D'Angelo who, it is averred, sold the poison alcohol. The case for the Crown was conducted by W. I. Dick of Milton, who, after having on two previous occasions asked for a remand of the prisoner, was able yesterday to produce the necessary evidence.

Medical evidence, together with that of Professor J. L. Rogers, head of the department of analytical chemistry at the University of Toronto, showed that the deaths of James Johnston and George Gill had been due to poisoning 'of' an alcoholic nature" and that traces of wood alcohol had been found in the stomachs of both. A coherent account of the activities of the two men during the few days prior to their deaths was given by close relatives and told again the story and the awful consequences of fatal "drinking parties."

For the third time since his arrest, D'Angelo was brought from Milton to Oakville by Chief of Police Kerr and, appearing in court, pleaded "not guilty" to the charges of manslaughter laid against him in the two cases dealt with during the afternoon. These charges, read by the magistrate, stated that on or about the 22nd day of July he did "unlawfully kill and slay" George Gill and James Johnston.

Crown Attorney Dick, before opening the case, asked whether the evidence should be passed on to the accused through an interpreter, but Mr. Macdonald stated he was satisfied his client would be able to follow the proceedings.

The evidence concerning the case of George Gill was heard first, and Dr. Savage and Dr. Soan, both of Oakville, who had conducted the post-mortem examination, were called. They testified that there had been congestion of the internal organs and that an acute toxic condition had been the cause of death. He could not state how long the poison had been in the system, but disclaimed the suggestion of D'Angelo's counsel that it might have been there for a week.

Chief of Police Kerr produced two one-gallon cans which he testified had been taken by him from a group of hedges on the property where Gill lived. He had delivered samples from each can to Professor Rogers, analytical chemist at the University of Toronto. About fifteen other empty cans had also been found. About one quart, he thought, had been taken from the first can when it was found.

Both these cans contained, according to the evidence of Professor Rogers, alcohol which was practically undiluted. Cross-questioned by Mr. MacDonald as to the exact percentage, Professor Rogers stated that he had not been concerned with this, as his chief object had been to find the cause of death.

Names you should know

You like to know names that everybody knows—name of the man who tied lightning to a kite; name of the man who watched a tea kettle and went out and made an engine. Just knowing such names gives you pleasure.

Yet there are names that thousands of people know that can give you much more pleasure in a much more personal way. Names that stand for the best things to eat, to wear, to sleep on, you can buy. Names that if connected with the salad dressing, hat, mattress you select—or any other desirable thing you select—mean it is most desirable. Names written large in advertisements. Advertisements tell why those are wise names for you to know. Why such names greet you in the best groceries, department and hardware stores. Why those names are in the buying vocabulary of thousands....are believed in by thousands....justify belief!

Read the advertisements. Don't ask vaguely in a store for "cold cream," "a skillet," "a vacuum cleaner." Ask for So-and-So's Old Cream, So-and-So's Skillet, So-and-So's Vacuum Cleaner. Use the names, you have learned through advertisements, that stand for the product that means most to you and most to most everybody.

LARGEST SCHOOL OF KIND IN WORLD

Bentley Trains Men to Be Business Executives.

The remarkable growth of The Bentley School of Accounting and Finance of Boston is an outstanding achievement in the history of American educational institutions. Starting in 1917 with an enrollment of twenty-nine students, it has grown to the point where it is now the largest professional school of college grade in the world devoted exclusively to training men for the duties of office manager, cost accountant, auditor, credit man, comptroller, treasurer, and public accountant. The enrollment for the past year was 2,080.

The school maintains very high standards, and it has the reputation of turning over exceptionally well trained men. Because of this, business corporations and public accounting firms give preference to Bentley graduates.

Particular stress is placed on enrolling young men of the clean-cut, upstanding type because the kind of positions in which graduates are placed calls for personality as well as technical ability. Large business concerns engage Bentley-trained men for the purpose of developing them for positions of responsibility, and consequently they are more critical in their selection than they would be if they were employing men to be kept on detailed clerical work.

The incoming class will be considerably larger than last year, and will include men from all the New England States, Canada, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa and Indiana.

The president, Harry C. Bentley, is a certified public accountant under the laws of four states, and is widely known as a writer on accounting. Before entering the field of education he was engaged in public accounting for ten years.

The bulding occupied by The Bentley School of Accounting and Finance is at 921 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. Id

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

WHAT ABOUT JERRY

"But Judy, aren't you going to marry Jerry?" asked Mr. Hathaway in a surprised voice.

I do not know why, when Mr. Hathaway asked me that question that the sight of John Meredith should rise up in front of me, but it did.

So plainly in my mind's eye was his image planted that I even caught myself painfully trying to smile back into those tortured eyes.

I must have been silent longer than I expected, for I found myself again listening to Mr. Hathaway, who was repeating his question.

I looked around quickly to see if the apparition my brain had called up was still standing by the mantel. It was not there and I answered with perfect honesty:

"I don't know."

Then such is the perversity of one's brain that the moment I spoke the pleading eyes and sympathetic mouth of Jerry Hathaway arose suddenly before me, I drew my hand across my forehead and wondered if I was going mad.

I had come nearer loving Jerry Hathaway the night before as we had stood in that syringa-scented garden, than I had been since I knew him. Then I thought if he had asked me in so many words I would have given him my promise, but this morning I could not see myself married to him at all.

"I'll not worry you any longer, Mr. Hathaway," I said, with my eyes on the transmitter. I did not want to see either of the men whose pictured faces my mind had called up.

"Will you please tell Jerry to call me up at Mamie's. I'm going over there right away."

"Yes, I'll tell him, but, my dear girl, you must think that over. Gerald Hathaway is not to be lightly refused by any girl, provided his father favors his son's choice."

Remembering that Mr. Hathaway, Sr., had tentatively tried to make me feel that his son's attentions were purely without intention, I could not for the life of me refrain from asking:

"Are you intimating, Mr. Hathaway, that you approve of me as the wife for your son?"

"Come over to the office after luncheon and I will tell you—or better still, I'll meet you and Jerry at the Beaux Arts tonight for dinner and we'll celebrate your betrothal there."

Before I could tell him that I was not going with Jerry to the Beaux Arts he had rung off.

When I got to Mamie's and told her the whole story she said I had no business to tell Mr. Meredith that I would go with them when I had already made a date with Jerry.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Poor Alexander Pope may have been one of the world's greatest poets, but he was a sad sight as a man. His body was greatly deformed, so much so that his enemies unfeelingly compared him to an interrogation point.

In Pope's time there lived a Lady Mary Montagu, eldest daughter of Evelyn, Duke of Kingston. She was a most brilliant and beautiful woman, a leader in society and letters, whose correspondence is ranked today as an important literary achievement. It was then fated that Pope should conceive an affection for this woman, despite the fact that she was happily married. Lady Montagu was naturally a considerate woman, but when the mis-shapen Pope, one day, made impassionate love to her, the spectacle was too much for her. She burst out laughing. Keenly sensitive Pope withered under her ridicule and from that time became her implacable enemy.

The following is a letter Pope addressed to Lady Montagu when he was under the spell of his love.

"... if I were to write to you as often as I think of you it must be every day of my life. I attend you in spirit through all your ways; I follow you in every stage through books of travels, and fear for you through whole folios—you make me shrink at the past dangers of dead travellers. And if I read of a delightful prospect or agreeable place, I hope it yet subsists to please you. I inquire the roads, the amusements, the company of every town and country through which you pass, with as much intelligence as if I were to set out next week to overtake you. In a word, no one can have you more constantly in mind, not even your guardian angel (if you have one); and I am willing to indulge so much Popery as to fancy some being takes care of you, who knows your value better than you do yourself. I am willing to think that Heaven never gave so much self-neglect and resolution to a woman to occasion her calamity but am pious enough to believe those qualities must be intended to conduce to her benefit and her glory."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.)

N. H. Booth, assistant managing editor of The Manchester (England) Daily Dispatch, says:

That the greatest force in the world is the written word. Speech may be silvern, but, notwithstanding the catch-phrase, it is not silence that is golden, but the thoughts of men set down in print. "Let me see your proposals on paper," cries the statesman. "Put it in writing," says the man of affairs.

You have goods to sell. Don't talk about them. The world is too noisy for you to be heard. If you penetrate the noise how many folk do you reach? If you reach the few how many heed? The spoken word is too fleeting. It is the written word that is abiding—abiding, that is, if you have anything worth saying and if you say it often enough.

Therefore, put the "finish" to your advertising that you put to the goods you are selling. Let there be snap but not froth. Your advertisements should be news, and news is a world commodity. The more newsy your advertisements the more their pulling power. For there is nothing more certain in this year than that news is the world's meat and drink.

You have coined your slogans and you can deliver the goods. You have prepared your message for the printer and you are ready to honor your written word. What then? Your medium of getting your message to your town, your county, your state, your country, the world, is the newspaper. A second's reflection and this is obvious. The newspaper presses will whirl your written words where you will. The world's business, to borrow from The Humorist, is wrapped up in newspapers.

FASHIONS

(By Hedda Hoyt, Written fro the United Press)

NEW YORK, August 30 (United Press).—The smart sports dress today can't boast of a button, a snapper or a tie string. It must look as though it were literally pasted on the wearer. Zipper fastenings are the answer to this style simplicity. The zipper, which first began as a closing on tobacco pounches, is now used on galoshes, handbags, corsets, underwear and gowns.

When used as a frock fastening the zipper is hidden beneath a little fold or tuck and defies anyone to find it. One little tug and Madame slips in or out of her frock. Some of the smartest sports dresses have the popular open V-shaped neckline which by means of a zipper can be fashioned into a high-necked affair at a moment's notice. When the collar is left open the exposed zipper merely looks like a narrow band of gold or silver trimming. Even this trimming need not be exposed if the zipper is encased in a double fold of the dress material.

Zipper fastenings can be purchased by the yard at the notion counters of some of the larger stores, I am told. One woman informs me that they are wonderful time-savers on children's clothes since they eliminate the necessity of sewing on buttoms that come off during laundering. She has found them successful on boys' pyjamas, on little girls' frocks and underbodices and on women's brassieres and dresses. The improved zipper will not rust, according to our informant.

Newer frocks and wraps for early Fall wear are being displayed in New ork shops at this early date. Colors run deep dull shades of red and green. One would describe the new colors as faded shades rather than merely dark shades. Black combined with beige is noted in gowns and wraps. Very little navy blue except in tailored suits and ensembles is sponsored for Fall. The early frocks seem to be very little different from Spring and Summer models since stringht-lined effects, jumper effects and full hem treatments appear on most of the ready-to-wear garments. The bloused silhouette which will be a leading one this Fall appears only in better class models at present.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

MABEL

Mabel is translated to mean beloved, and certainly the name has a right to its significance, since it comes from the old Keltic word meadhail, meaning "joy." The fashionable miss of today who spells her good old-fashioned name "Maybelle," does not realize that she is trying to paint the lily: no name more redolent of poetry exists today than Mabel.

Mabel appears first as Meadhbh. The daughter of Eochaid Freidhleach, king of Erin, was so called, and was such a beloved heroine of Irish romance, that Congal Claen, according to the old story, bid the men of Connaught, her husband's kingdom, to "Remember Meave in battle."

Meave, the diminutive of Meadhbh, became popular in Ireland, and in honor of its first possessor, was bestowed on the Queen of the Fairies. Irish settlers brought her fame to England, where she was made immortal by Shakespeare and Ben Jonson. "Queen Mab" is still a character of great beauty, and adorns the fairy tales of Britain.

Mabel means "beloved," a significance probably given by the Irish, who are naively fond of fairy stories. In France she is called Mabelle. The name is too Keltic to appeal to the Latin countries, so she has no equivalents in Spain and Italy. Mabelle is merely an affectation, and has no raison d'etre except in the realms of fashion.

Coral is Mabel's talismanic stone. It gives its wearer wisdom and bodily strength, possessing the power to fade in color as a warning of fatigue or disease. If it is broken, or even chipped, this power vanished. Monday is Mabel's lucky day and 2 her lucky number.

A typewriter that writes, at the touch of a finger words as well as leters, has been put on the market. The machine's vocabulary consists of twnety-one words that have been found to be in most common use.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1926

This should be a fairly fortunate day for dwellers on the planet Earth, according to astrology, which reads certain aspects as helpful.

Under this planetary government it is wise to map out future plans rather than to start any new project.

Judgment should be trustworthy and vision clear while this configuration prevails.

Neptune is in a place that promises foresight and directness in business dealings. Many parts of the country will enjoy great local prosperity.

While American business and commercial interests are to be most satisfactory to banker, manufacturers and merchants, there may be labor troubles in more than one state.

It is well for both men and women to be careful in their investments and in all their financial transactions, the seers advise, for unexpected events are to take place.

All the signs appear to point to many honors to Americans and increase of power to the nation which is to have occasion to recognize new heroes.

Peace is to become more and more the watchword of many leaders in the United States, but they are to encounter serjous difficulties and to be much misunderstood, the seers announce.

This is read as an auspicious time for all intellectual workers and marvelous achievements are forecast for schools and universities.

American scientists are subject to planetary influences supposed to be wonderfully helpful. Great discoveries and inventions are prognosticated.

It is safe to trust one's fellow men—and women—while this rule of the stars prevails, for deceit is not encouraged by this position of the stars.

Increase of travel and of freight transportation will bring great profit to railways and to steamship companies all through the remainder of the year.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year in which they will be wise to advertise, study the press and push personal affairs.

Children born on this day may have dual gifts and may be capable of tremendous achievements, if rightly guided. They may be easily misunderstood.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Though the cat's eye is today's talismanic stone, caution should be permitted to slumber, since the jewel indicates the presence of treachery and deceit. False friends and particularly false lovers, likely to be discovered today and new acquaintances should not be made.

The natal stone for today is the aquamarine, which exerts its powers most successfully when the wearer is in good health. An old legend asserts that it ensures its wearer of freedom from small cares and worries.

The yellow daisy is the lucky flower for today. It protects from evil the home which it adorns.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A FALL STREET FROCK IN TWO MATERIALS

Today, a well-known tennis player, who is as attractive as any of Madame's clients, came in to see about some Fall clothes.

We manikins found many excuses to pass through the salon where she was, as we make a point of seeing all of the many celebrities who come to Madame's shop.

As I journeyed in to pick up a book of the many celebrities who come to Madame's shop.

As I journeyed in to pick up a book

"I feel flattered that you come direct-

"Dear Madame, t sn't the first time I've done that," the client replied. "You know I seldom go in for Paris shopping, when I can get such lovely things here. Of course I pick up a few things. How do you like this frock, which I bought from a famous couturiere?"

"I like it better than anything I've seen in town," Madame answered generously.

The young girl was referring to the frock she wore, which had taken my eye the minute I caught sight of it. It was a stunning, simple affair which combined beige kasha with navy crepe satin.

Pam, who nearly fell over the banisters of the wide marble stairway leading into the salon, to get a peep, had declared the combination of beige and navy one of the most effective she had seen, and my real mission in the salon was to ascertain what the two materials were.

"She has her back turned to me," Pam grieved aloud. "Do get in front and tell me how it is made."

As Madame was examining the frock, I had a good chance to see it too.

The little roll collar of the material was a tiny one that edged away to nothing as it sloped into a shallow V at the front. From below this collar, the right side of the dress slanted over directly to the left shoulder, where it buttoned all the way down the front.

I noted with satisfaction that it buttoned with covered buttons about the size of a quarter, those on the beige part being covered with blue, and vice versa.

I hastened back to tell Pam, who was busy deciding to manufacture such a frock for her own immediate use, using claret kasha and navy crepe satin, which I think will be a stunning combination.

In This Smart Street Frock Beige Kasha and Crepe are Combined.

Directions

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

IT'S interesting how directions get to be a matter of sense or feeling. One goes to a strange place and says, "That direction feels like North to me," but, of course, that doesn't mean he's right. Fortunately for us in orienting ourselves, the constant sun never fails to rise in the east, or we'd all have to wear a compass for a watch charm. Children most often associate directions with the location in which they learn them. After they have established one definite point of the compass, the remaining ones are soon figured out.

LARGE CROWDS ATTEND OPENING OF SOCCER LEAGUES IN ENGLAND

Players Show Excellent Foot-work Despite Lack of Practise.

OPENED SATURDAY

Ollacher Scores Four Goals in Newcastle-Aston Villa Match.

LONDON, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—The soccer season got under way in the old country on Saturday, with attendances in the English League games approximating three quarters of a million. In spite of a marked lack of practice on the part of some of the players, some excellent games were served up and there were bright individual performances. This was particularly so at Newcastle where Gallagher, the ex-Aidrieonian and now captain and centre-forward of Newcastle United, himself accounted for all four of the Northumbrians' goals against Aston Vila. The northerners had the Villa outplayed from the start of the game to the final whistle and their defence was weak against the great dash and trickiness of the redoubtable Scottish International.

Aston Villa's blanking was in strong contrast to their opener of last season when they rang up ten goals to nothing against Burnley. They had a slight touch of their own medicine at Newcastle.

Scoring throughout the first division was brisk, no fewer than fifty-two shots finding the net in the eleven games played. At Burnley and Leeds seven counters were notched up; there were six at Liverpool and at Upton Park, while in none of the games were fewer than three goals scored.

In the metropolitan area, the honors were with the London teams inasmuch as two out of three won, while the third game was drawn. At Highbury, the Arsenal secured the odd goal in three from Derby county, last year's second the same score brought victory to division team; at White Hart Lake the same score brought victory to the 'Spurs against Everton, while at Upton Par West Ham United battled to a three-three draw with Leicester City.

Only two visiting teams gathered in the full points on Saturday, Sheffield United and Bolton Wanderers. The United played in their home city, but on The Wednesday's round and celebrated the opening of the season by taking two points from last year's second string champions, the margin being three goals to two. At Leeds, the cup-home team, registering five goals home team, registering five goals holders were too strong for the to Leeds United's two.

Two games were drawn, Bury splitting the points with the League champions, Huddersfield Town, and, as stated, West Ham drawing with Leicester.

In the second division considerable interest surrounded the games at Barnsley and Swansea Town. At the former town, the home club had for their opponents Grimsby Town, who were promoted from the northern section of the third divison last season, while at Swansea the opposition was furnished by Reading, who were advanced from the southern section. In each case the newcomers dropped the points Barnsley winning two goals to one and Swansea Town blanking Reading by three goals.

Chelsea opened their season auspiciously by registering three counters against Middlesborough at Stanford Bridge without any response from the northerners. The pensioners were well on the way to promotion for a great part of last season, but fell away badly towards the end. They will be closely watched this year.

Smith of South Shields recorded three of the home eleven's goals against Notts county, last year's first division team who, with Manchester City, were relegated. The County were completely outmanoeuvered in every department of the game. Manchester City, who had the unique distinction of being runners-up in the English Cup and at the same time being four to two against Fulham.

Outstanding goal-getters on Saturday were:

Gallagher (Newcastle) v. Aston Villa 4.
Chandler (Leicester) v. West Ham, 3.
Smith (South Shields) v. Notts Co. 5.
Parker (Millwalll) v. Norwich 5.
Morris (Swindon) v. Southend 3.
Williams (New Brighton) v. Ashington 3.

OSHAWA ELIMINATES CAMPBELLFORD TEAM

Home Team Wins Final Game By One Run.

OSHAWA, Aug. 30—Showing a complete reversal of form Campbellford's Softball Association winners all but put the skids under the fast travelling General Motors team in the return game of the Ontario Softball Association elimination series played here Thursday night, Oshawa winning 28 to 27 and entering the second round. The game was played in the Armouries and fly balls that would have been easy outs in the open, would hit some part of the building and go for safe hits.

The visitors played far better ball than they did at home. They hit Bigger's offerings all over the building, and played fine ball in the field and the home crew were lucky to annex the verdict.

The Campbellford contingent, headed by president Davidson, were shown through the big Chevrolet factory where one complete car is being turned out every three minutes.

DEVIL HAS PUPS.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 27.—The "Jersey devil," terror of the forests near West Orange, has had a litter of nine pups, whelps, cubs, or what you will. The "devil" has been shot at scores of times by posses. Residents of the neighborhood who have seen the pest describe it as a "flying lion." The pups were found behind the stump of a tree by some boys. They have the heads of dogs, residents say, but the bodies are considerably heavier.

BROWNS DEFEATED

Two Triples and Double Pile Up Runs for the Senators.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—The New York Yankees handed Detroit a 6 to 1 setback yesterday and won the series, two out of three. Shocker yielded but six hits, one of them a home run by Tavener in the third inning. The Yankees got to Rip Collins early in the contest and he was removed for a pinch hitter in the fifth.

Although outbatted by the Browns, Cleveland defeated St. Louis, 2 to 1. Uhle was effective in the pinches, the Browns having thirteen runners left on bases. St. Louis' only run was scored on an infield single and two sacrifices, Robinson squeezing McManus across the plate. Manager Speaker drove in both of Cleveland's runs. It was Uhle's 22nd victory of the season.

Scoring eight runs in the seventh inning, the Senators took a 9 to 2 victory over Chicago. A triple by Rice and a triple and double by Goslin helped the home team pile up its margin. Reeves, a Washington rookie, singled with the sacks loaded, scoring two.

RANGERS RETAIN EARLY LEAD IN FIRST DIVISION

Victory Over Partick-Thistles Strengthens Position in Scottish League.

INVINCIBLES NEXT

Saturday's Games Reduce Number of Undefeated Teams by One.

GLASGOW, Aug. 30.— (Canadian Press.)— By virtue of third win at Idro Park Saturday over Partick Thistle, and also due to the fact that they are one game ahead of the majority of the other contenders in the First Division, Rangers held their position at the top of the Scottish League. With three games standing in the win column and one drawn, against Airdrieonians, the "Invincibles" are one point to the good over their nearest rivals, Dundee.

The number of undefeated teams in the senior department was reduced by one as a result of Saturday's matches when Greenock Morton succumbed to St. Mirren on their own ground. This left Rangers, Dundee, St. Mirren, Celtic, Motherwell and Aberdeen along the road for League honors in the order named.

Dundee scored a handsome victory over their intra-borough rivals, Dundee United, whom they blanked in a quintette of counters.

Two upsets featured the games, One at Hamilton and the other at Kilmarnock. In the former encounter the Academicals put a gap of two goals between themselves and the Airdrieonians, a result that was not specially looked for. Airdrie have begun the season badly, having already dropped a couple of games. They were trounced by Clyde in the other and have now dropped the points to Hamilton. Their third game yielded the only point they have secured thus far when they split the issue with Rangers a week ago.

Dumfermline's victory over Kilmarnock, on the Ayrshire Club's ground was another unexpected result. This marked the former Second Division team's first victory for the season. Dumferline came up from the second string with Clyde, following their successes last season. Kilmarnock have yet to win a game.

Both Edinburgh teams went down to disaster Saturday, the Hibernians falling before the onslaught of Aberdeen at Easter Road, and the Hearts bowing to Cowdenbeath on the latter's terrain.

Fascinating Widow Causes Six Suicides

BUDAPEST, Aug. 28.—(United Press).—Charged with inciting six different young men to commit sucide, a young Budapest widow has been taken into custody by the local police.

A seventh, instead of yielding to her persuasive argument that "it would be beautiful to take poison and die in the arms of a beautiful woman," broke away from her embraces and rushed to the nearest police station.

The woman's mentality in wishing to have the young men die in her presence promises several weeks of interesting study to local psycho-analysts. The method which she employed was to induce her victims to commit suicide with her. To each she gave real poison while she drank a harmless potion of the same color.

BALTIMORE LOST EASY VICTORY TO BUFFALO BISONS

George Earnshaw, Dunn's Pitching Ace, Battered From the Mound.

DIVIDES DOUBLE

Maisel and Sheedy Save the Orioles From Losing Shut-Out Game.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—The Orioles took another backward slip against the Buffalo Bisons yesterday by losing, 9 to 3. George Earnshaw, Dunn's ace, was battered from the mound and the Bisons continued against Chambers and Henderson for a barrage of 16 hits. Walsh and Lake led the winning attack with three hits apiece. Roy Auer gave a masterful mound exhibition, keeping seven Oriole hits well scattered and losing a shutout only because of a long triple by Maisel and Sheedy's homer in the ninth.

Newark's Bears were able to score only one run in each game and dropped a doubleheader to the Stars by scores of 2 to 1 and 4 to 1, the first contest lasting ten innings.

Rochester and Jersey City divided a doubleheader, the Skeeters winning the first game by 14 to 7, and the Tribe taking the second by 5 to 2.

CHICAGO TAKES EIGHTH STRAIGHT IN THE NATIONAL

St. Louis-Pittsburgh Both Games Called Without Winning Score.

GIANTS DEFEATED

Three Singles in Ninth Save Reds From Shut-Out.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press) — The "little world series" which opened in the National League at St. Louis Sunday did not change the standings of the Cardinals and Pittsburgh as the first game was called owing to rain and the second went ten innings and was called on account of darkness with the score tied, 2-2.

Chicago ran its winning streak to eight games today by defeating Cincinnati, 5 to 1, in the first game of the series. Carl Mays weakened in the sixth inning when the Cubs launched an attack which included a home run by Charles Root with a man on base. Lucas, who succeeded Mays, lasted one third of an inning and Meeker retired the next two men in the eighth inning. Root held the visitors to seven scattered hits until the ninth when three successive singles saved the Reds from a shut out. Adam led the attack for the Cubs with four hits, including two doubles.

With Jess Petty in the box, Brooklyn celebrated its return home from the west with a 6 to 2 victory over the Giants. Max Carey, making his debut at Ebbets field in a Brooklyn uniform, had a perfect day at bat.

FIREMEN LOSE TO ALL STARS

With the Firemen playing a very open game of softball, they lost to the All Stars on Saturday afternoon at Riverside, by the score of 12 to 8.

Nichols for the Firemen was the fielding star of the game, taking eight chances in left field. Dunkerley pitched a good game, but was wild in a couple of cases when walks meant runs.

McLean and Carruthers kept the hits well scattered except in the fifth and seventh innings, when they scored five of their eight runs.

PETES LOSE TO OTTAWA KIDS IN THE FINALS

Capital City to Play Western Ontario Champions for Championship.

ERRORS COSTLY

Franter, Catcher for Peterboro, Star Player of the Game.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 30.—Ottawa Bantams came through to a flying victory in the sudden death game with Peterboro Bantams at the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon running up a score of 13-7. This permits them to meet the Western champions, either Guelph or London. Ottawa had smaller boys than Peterboro, with the exception of the Petes' catcher, but they were better players. The members backing up the pitcher and giving a real good game. Tranter, catching for the Petes, attracted a great deal of attention. He is small, but could always get the wide or high ones, letting none pass him. However, he could not stand the full game and was changed in the seventh. Stringer, in center field for Ottawa, gave an admirable exhibition. On two occasions, he leaped into the air to make a good catch and the force of the drive knocked him over. The work of all the boys deserves worthy praise. They will make great players in later years.

Errors were the outstanding trouble with both teams. The boys would become excited and lose control but they will overcome this with experience in the game. The batting on both sides was good. Ottawa deserves a great deal of credit for the way they used the bunt to advantage, in one innings, knocking three in a row along the first base line, and then beating the ball to first. The pitching was good too, Brown making a good stand for the Petes, holding down well until the sixth. He was aided in then after four runs had been tallied for Ottawa.

Ottawa had the game their own way until the seventh, having eight runs while Peterboro had none. In the first of the seventh, the Petes scored three, and in the ninth, they scored four more. The boys from Ottawa were able to get in the odd run all along, their first counter coming in the second innings. In the third they banged Peterboro for three runs, and in the sixth they got four more. Then in the seventh frame they had three players across the plate. The eighth saw two more for the Ottawa boys. It was in the ninth that Peterboro started out to get runs, they got four.

FRANCE TAKES LEAD IN FINALS TO DETERMINE CUP CHALLENGERS

Victory Gives Start of Two To One in Series.

SETS RECORD.

Japan's Hopes Dashed By Easily Won Victory.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Flashing their first real display of power, France's Davis Cup stars swamped Japan yesterday in the doubles and put their country into the lead in the inter-zone series to determine America's challenger for the historic tennis trophy.

It took Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon just forty-two minutes to overwhelm their rivals, Tsumio Tawara and Takeichi Harada, 6-0, 6-0, 6-2, in a match which probably set a record for brevity as well as decisiveness in Davis Cup competition.

The victory gave France a commanding lead of two matches to one in the series which will be included with two singles contests today. Victory in either of these will put France once again into the challenger round which is to be played at Philadelphia, September 9-11.

Yesterday's set-back was a stunning blow to the Japanese pair whose hopes had been lifted high by the even break gained in the opening two singles matches with Cochet and Rene Lacaste Wednesday, but it left no doubt as to the relative merits of the rivals. Sturdy as was the defence of the contenders from the Far East, their best efforts were futile yesterday afternoon before an attack that struck with swift and deadly effect.

Apparently determined to atone for their disappointing showing on Thursday, the Frenchmen played as if inspired. At the net their motto seemed to be adopted from the war-time legend—"They shall not pass"—for they put up a barrier that the most courageous efforts of the Japanese could not penetrate with any consistency.

They took the first two sets with such swiftness that onlookers were in amazement. The dead lines of their volleying and driving carried them through fourteen successive games before the Japanese finally stemmed the tide for a moment. Even then, in the third game of the final set, points went to deuce five times before Tawara's service finally prevailed. Harada also took his delivery in the fifth game, but this was Japan's last stand except for a brief rally in the final game which went to deuce four times before Cochet pulled it out to clinch the match.

Only five games of the twenty played were carried to deuce, so decisive was the French advance, while in the second set, which lasted only ten minutes, the Japanese collected only six points. In the three sets, the point totals were 93 to 51.

Jean Borotra, fourth member of the French team, reached Forest Hills after embarking from the Berengaria just too late to witness yesterday's match. The "Bounding Basque" Wimbledon champion this year was not able to come in time for inter-zone matches, but will be ready for the challenge round. He had a practice workout yesterday afternoon.

To-day's schedule of matches, starting at 2.50 p.m., calls for Lacoste to play Tawara and Cochet to meet Harada.

HOW TO SWIM

by William Cannon

The front dive is naturally the first to be learned and it should be thoroughly learned before any of the fancy dives are attempted.

This dive is the act of combining the foregoing lessons into a perfectly executed entry into the water from the spring board.

The movements are, first, the running jump to the tip of the board; the downward movement of the board; the lift of the board assisted by the throw of the shoulders and the clean entry into the water.

The real art of diving comes when one can enter the water cleanly and dive either deeply or for a distance without floundering.

Again I want to emphasize the danger of diving anywhere where the depth of the water is not known.

Count is three balls and two strikes on the batsman. As umpire calls balk, pitcher delivers a wide fourth ball. Can batsman go to first?

* * *

The calling of the balk in no way affects the status of the batsman. He cannot go to first in the play ci

The calling of the balk suspended play and merely entitled all baserunners to advance one base.

The fact that the pitcher delivered a wide ball to the batter, after the umpire had ruled he had committed a balk, is given no consideration.

The throwing of such a ball to the batsman meant nothing, as the calling of the balk had suspended play and made the ball dead.

VALENTINO'S FUNERAL.

Thousands Line Broadway as Cortgee Proceeds To Church.

NEW YORK, August 30. Canadian Press. — Broadway, where Rudolph Valentino once worked as a dish washer, to-day paid a farewell tribute to the man who died at the height of his career as sheik of the movies. The famous thoroughfare was lined with many thousands as the funeral cortege moved from the funeral church to St. Malachy's Roman Catholic church two miles away. Polai Negri, the Polish actress, and Jean Acker, the "sheik's" first wife, followed the coffin, as it was carried into the church.

The feat of the Boston Red Sox in winning a double-header from the Browns evidently was too much for one of the royal rooters, who fell from the bleachers in Fenway Park and fractured his ankle.

OSHAWA WINS TENNIS TITLE

Fighting Finish To Take Six Events, Beats Out Peterborough.

CAPTURES TROPHY.

On Saturday the Oshawa Tennis Club played Peterborough in the final match of the Central Ontario Tennis League and defeated Peterborough by winning six events. The seventh event was set all, when called on account of darkness.

The Peterborough club were taken aback, as they were two points up on Oshawa, and winning three of the events would have given the cup to Peterborough, but Oshawa brought up the best they had, and although the Peterborough players started strong they faded away.

The scores were as follows:

In the Ladies' Singles Miss H. Richardson won from Mrs. J. A. Dewart, 3—6, 6—4, 7—5.

In the Ladies' Doubles, Miss Dorothy Myers and Miss M. Everson won from Mrs. D. M. Cruthers and Miss Jean Dilgar, 6—1, 6—4.

In the Men's Doubles, Carlyle and Fishleigh defeated Hewett and Bowness, 6—3, 6—3.

In the Men's Singles, Carruthers won from G. C. Scott, 6—1, 6—3.

Marshall and Jackson were set all 2—6, 6—2, when darkness put an end to the battle.

In the Mixed Doubles—Alger and Miss McGillivray won from Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Langley, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3.

Langnaid and Miss G. Morris won from Mrs. B. Moore and Cranfield, 3—6, 6—3, 6—0.

The Oshawa players deserve great credit for their fighting finish. They were not even considered dangerous at the first of the season, but they held on and pulled out on top.

The H. A. Morrow Cup has changed hands each year. In 1924 Cobourg won it. Peterborough took it from Cobourg last year in the last event played in the last match. This year Oshawa came here with a big job on their hands, as to win they must beat Peterborough 5—2. They took 6 events and tied one, and took the cup home with them.

The season has been a very enjoyable one for all the clubs and it is hoped that next season will be at least as good.

Local players are reminded that the City Tournament entries close next Wednesday, and that the first round will have a time limit set as it is desirable to get finished in the warm weather.

The result of the matched played were as follows. Visiting teams named first:

CRICKET NEWS

The Peterborough C. C. visited Oshawa on Saturday afternoon and played the local team and won an exciting game by three runs. The wicket was truly a bowlers one, some of the balls breaking and shooting so quickly that the batsmen had a small chance of protecting their wickets, hence the small scores on both sides. Peterborough batted first, opening with Thorpe and Coutts; with the score at 9 Coutts was bowled, with 4 runs added both Thorpe and Garbutt left in the same manner. Monkman and Stuart played each ball carefully and helped the score along. Dyer made some good hits before being caught, incidentally being the only Peterborough player to reach double figures. Ryland was shaping well, but could get nobody to stay with him; the score finally reaching 47 runs.

Oshawa opened disastrously to the bowling of Dyer and Thorpe, the first 4 wickets falling for 5 runs. The next 2 wickets, however, put on 35 runs, the score then being 40 for 6 men out. It looked as if Oshawa were sure winners, as they still had 4 wickets to fall and only 8 runs to get to win. Dyer, however, bowled magnificently, the last four men only making 4 runs, leaving Peterborough victors by 3 runs. Dyer took 6 wickets for 11 runs, and was practically unplayable on the tricky wicket. Hailey bowled well for Oshawa, taking 5 Peterborough wickets for 10 runs.

HEAVY SCORING FEATURES IN OLD COUNTRY CRICKET MATCHES

Notts and Surrey Secure Over Five Hundred Runs Each.

UNUSUALLY LARGE.

Two Players Obtained Centuries in Both Times

LONDON, Aug. 28 (Canadian Press)—Heavy scoring featured the county cricket matches which ended today with two teams, Notts and Surrey securing over five hundred runs each, and three teams, Lancashire, Middlesex and Hampshire registering over four hundred each.

As team scores were large, individual totals were correspondingly huge. Two players secured double centuries while two more obtained centuries in both turns at bat. The former were Andy Ducat of Surrey and Whysall of Notts, and the latter M. K. Foster of Worcester and Shepherd of Surrey.

Lancashire vs. Northants

At Blackpool—The home county secured the full five points by a margin of ten wickets. Scores:

Lancashire 411 (for 7 wickets, declared)—28 (for 0 wickets).

Northants—206, 231.

Batting—Lancashire, E. Tyldesley 127, Makepeace 83, Iddon 50; Northants, V.W.C. Jupp 53, Walden 67.

Nottinghamshire vs. Essex

At Leyton—The visiting county defeated Essex on their own ground by a full innings. Scores:

Notts 595 (for 4 wickets, declared.)

Essex—354, 151.

Batting — Notts, Whysall 109, George Gunn 86, A. W. Carr 53, Payton 87, Ben Lilley 86.

Essex—Freeman 133, J. W. H. T. Douglas 103.

Yorkshire vs. Sussex

At Brighton—Eight wickets was the margin separating the White Rose from Sussex in favor of the former at the end of the game yesterday. Scores:

Yorkshire—230, 139 (for 2 wickets)

Sussex—148, 217.

Sussex—Maurice Tate 67.

Middlesex vs. Gloucester

At Lord's — The home county emerged 75 runs the better of Gloucester in a game in which Middlesex reached the fourth century in the second innings. Scores:

Middlesex—111, 400 (for 7 wickets, declared).

Gloucester—191, 245.

Batting—Middlesex: H. J. Enthoven, 67; G. O. Allen 53, H. Haig 100 not out.

Gloucester: F. J. Seabrook 78, Seabrook (second innings) 57; Dipper 82.

Surrey vs. Leicestershire

At the Oval—Following a brilliant first innings, Surrey fell away badly in the second, but at that they came out of the game 119 runs ahead of Leicester. Scores:

Surrey—541 (for 5 wickets, declared), 197 for 6 wickets, declared)

Leicester—286, 333.

Batting—Surrey: Ducat 235; Shepherd 121; D. R. Jardine 69 not out; A. Jeacocke 62, Shepherd (second innings) 101 not out.

Leicester—Geary 100, Sidwell 105, Astill 85, Geary (second innings) 55.

Worcester vs. Hampshire

At Worcester—Three points were secured by the home county in an encounter whose chief feature was the powerful batting of M. K. Foster and Major F. S. Jowell, the Worcester captain, in this game head, the Hants professional secured the huge total of 177 not out. Scores:

Worcester—335, 307 (for 4 wickets declared)

WEIGHS WORDS.

LONDON, Aug. 27. — It takes hundreds of words t obalance a human hair on the scales, but a superscale has been devised by the Society of Inspectors of Weights and Measures which will weigh even a signature. The weight of a word can be detected only under the lens of a powerful microscope. The sheet of paper is first weighed, then the word is written upon it and the whole weighed again.

GOLF CLUB HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Bayview Club of Toronto Sustains Loss of About $25,000.

TORONTO, August 30. — Fire breaking out about ten o'clock last night completely destroyed the clubhouse of the Bayview Golf and Country Club, situated on the height of land facing Lawrence Avenue. The structure consisted of the old Watson homestead, which had been the home of that family for three generations, and the built-in cafeteria and locker rooms. The main building was two stories high and of brick construction, while the additions were one story in height, and of wooden construction. It is estimated that the damage will be in the neighborhood of $25,000. The blaze lasted for two hours. The motor 'bus used for the purpose of carrying members of the club to and from the club-house during the golfing season, is thought to have caused the blaze by a short-circuiting of the wires.

TURF SPECULATES ON AUTUMN RACES

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Publication of the entries for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire, the two great autumn handicaps staged at turf headquarters for more than 80 years has started the turf world on its annual quest for "stayers". These races have achieved a remarkable place among the great events of the turf, and speculation on their outcome is as earnest as on any other race save perhaps the Derby.

A wealth of first-class material is shown in the entries, which of course will be greatly reduced by post time. Despite the hardy annual complaint about the dearth of "stayers" the entry for the Cesarewitch is remarkably satisfactory. As the races are not run until the middle of October and the handicaps are yet to be allotted, first impressions of the entry list will probably undergo some revision.

The Cesarewitch is over a distance of 2 1-4 miles, and the Cambridgeshire a mile and a furlong. Both annually bring out large and first-quality fields. For the Cesarewitch, the six-year-old Forseti, winner last year, and Confirmation, winner of the Queen's Prize at Kempton Park, are among the favored entrants. Kyra, winner of the Great Metropolitan, Dracos, who performed well at Goodwood; Hidennis, Chester Cup winner; Cloudbank, former Queen's Prize Winner; Sol Joel's Pons Asinorum and Vermilion Pencil, all merit consideration for their performances in the season's important handicaps.

The Cambridgeshire entry of course includes many of the Cesarewitch aspirants. But outstanding would seem to be Masked Marvel, last year's winner. Three-year-olds are entered more freely in the Cambridgeshire, half the Casarewitch distance. Those nominated include such top-notchers as Sir Abe Bailey's Lex, who as a two-year-old defeated Coronach, the Derby winner; Comedy King, Harpagon, Craven stakes winner; and Linberg, winner of the Irish Derby. The older contingent is led by Rock Fire, Newbury Spring Cup victor, Lord Astor's Cross Bow, and such experienced campaigners as Purple Shade, Winalot and Brighter London. Competition seems, at this stage, to be unusually keen, and the races consequently even more interesting than usual. Nine or ten French horses have been nominated for both handicaps, which are favorites with horsemen across the channel.

The turf world is now entering on its final and perhaps finest phase, commencing with the Doncaster meeting during the second week of September when the season's fifth and last great three-year-old classic will be decided. During the same meeting are the Champagne Stakes, Princess Mary Stakes and Doncaster Cup. The Champagne Stakes, providing the race runs true to century--old tradition, will result in a serious contender for the 1927 Epsom Derby. Last year's winner, Coronach won the Derby this season and is unrivalled among the three-year-olds, and indeed is the warm favorite for the St. Leger. The two-year-old fillies have their innings in the Princess Mary Stakes, while the Doncaster Cup, for an older class of thoroughbred, being over two miles and a quarter, will also be keenly conetsted.

FEDERAL NOMINATIONS

The following candidates for the House of Commons were nominated over the week-end:

Argenteuil, Que. — Sir George Perley, Conservative.

Carleton, Ont.—W. F. Garland, Conservative.

Prescott—D. H. Kirby, Conservative.

Sherbrooke, Que. — Albert Reid, Conservative.

LADIES' SOFTBALL.

C. G. E. Ladies Win Game From Oshawa Go-Getters.

The C.G.E. Ladies' softball club journeyed to Oshawa on Saturday and played the Go-Getters at Lakeview Park. It was a real snappy game of softball. The C.G.E. team played airtight ball, resulting in another win for them, the score being 19 to 10. B. Vincent and Dot Mortimer played their usual game, and gave an exhibition the like of which had not been seen in Oshawa before this year. A. Janeway for the C.G.E. had a home run, and A. Logan came through as usual with two three-base hits. Oshawa played nice ball and the score does not signify the game; the C.G.E. getting their hits when they meant runs.

Batteries—For Peterborough were D. Mortimer catching and B. Vincent pitching. For Oshawa, A. Brown pitching, and A. Morgan, catching.

LIBERALS HOLD RURAL MEETINGS

Appeals Made To Electors at Indian River and Lang.

Intensive Liberal campaigning was the rule on Saturday evening when a "double header" was staged, on behalf of J. J. Duffus, meetings being held simultaneously at Indian River and Lang. A large audience at the former place heard addresses from Mr. Duffus and the Hon. Duncan Marshall, Liberal organizer for Ontario, Samuel Armstrong occupying the chair. The meeting at Lang, where George Renwick presided, was addressed by J. J. Duffus, J. A. Dewart, W. A. Anderson, Deputy-Reeve of Otonabee, and Hon. Duncan Marshall.

J. J. Duffus.

Mr. Duffus arraigned the Conservative party of Canada for the billboard and newspaper campaign, paid for, he declared, by money derived from charging the people one-third more for necessities than should have been paid for. This campaign was damaging the fair name of Canada. "Don't be foolish," he admonished his hearers. "Don't let them put it over you again."

Mr. Duffus referred at some length to the customs issue. Three things that made possible and profitable evasion of the customs duties were high-powered motor boats, automobiles and high tariffs. Smuggling had prevailed under previous governments. Last year a bitter campaign was waged in every constituency in the country and not a word or whisper was heard against the Liberal party so far as administration of the customs was concerned. When the matter was discussed in the House last session, the Conservatives on being asked why they had not raised the question before, replied, "We did not know about it." If the Conservatives did not know about it, then it was not such a very serious matter. Nobody could form an estimate of what had been lost. He criticized the statements that had been issued that $60,000,000 were lost to the revenue. There was no way of finding out how much escapes. He also pointed out that customs receipts last year were $19,000,000 also pointed out that customs refore.

Hon. D. Marshall.

Asserting that prosperity in agriculture was the only reasonable base on which a prosperous industrial Canada could be founded, Mr. Marshall carried his hearers back to the period between 1878-96, when a 35 per cent. tariff was placed on British goods entering Canada. British goods were shut out of Canada, said Mr. Marshall, and the result was that Canada found herself shut out of the British market. Prices fell rapidly in Canada. Butter was sold at 8 and 9 cents per pound, cheese at 6 cents, cattle at 2 and 3 cents per pound; and in 1893 he saw a steer sold for 1 cent per pound. Agricultural products unable to fetch a price were traded for blackstrap and whetstone. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier came into power, he made three successive cuts in the tariff and instituted the British preference, and agricultural prices in Canada began to rise.

If Mr. Peck and the Conservatives were in favor of the budget and did not vote against it, as they claimed, why had they all been kicking so much against it, and why were they now running as high protection candidates? They did all they could to prevent the budget being passed and having failed in the attempt, they now said they had never opposed it. The fact of the matter was, the manufacturers had put up the money for the Conservative campaign, and the Conservative party would have to carry out the wishes of the manufacturers.

The argument that 82 countries had raised their tariff and that Canada should follow suit was not convincing. In these countries, the men who had made fortunes were in power and had succeeded in manipulating things to their own advantage. Protection was not a new cry; it was as old as selfishness. Mr. Marshall concluded by a strong appeal to the audience to return Mr. Duffus on September 14.

An interested listener in the audience was William Hastie, a veteran of 94 years, who has been a steady supporter of the Liberals in Scotland and in Canada.

POLICE ESCORT BERLINS TO CAB

To Protect Song Writer and His Wife From Reporters and Photographers.

HAD VERY GOOD TIME.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (United Press).—Escorted by special policemen who shielded them from photographers and reporters, Irving Berlin, song writer, and his wife, the former Ellin Mackay, returned home in the early hours today after "A very good time" abroad.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN APPEAR SERIOUS

Censorship May Be Imposed Because of Opposition To Rivera.

GUARDS ON RAILWAYS.

LONDON, August 30. Canadian Press. — The Spanish Embassy tonight informed the press that in view of the serious state of affairs in Spain it was possible that a censorship on news from Spain had been imposed.

The Embassy made no statement with regard to the rumor that the supremacy of General Primo de Rivera, the Dictator Premier, had been challenged by a group of army officers, with the result that all telephone and telegraph communication had been stopped.

Despatches from frontier points indicate that civil guards have been placed in charge of the Spanish railways and that three Spanish warships have sailed for Tangier, Morocco.

LONDON, August 30 (Canadian Press).—A despatch to the Daily Express from Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, says the condition of the 19-year-old heir-apparent to the Spanish throne, the Prince of the Austurias, has taken a sudden turn for the worse and is causing fears to be expressed for his life. The Prince has been in delicate health from spinal disease since his birth.

The Spanish Cortes has been convoked to name the King's third son, Don Juan, 13, heir apparent. Don Jaime, the King's second son, has undergone operations for deafness and an impediment in his speech.

ALL SAINTS' ANGLICAN.

The proclamation of the Gospel to the unconverted everywhere, according to the command of Christ, was the definition of Christian missions given by the Rev. C. C. Robinson, who preached in All Saints' Anglican Church yesterday. A missionary, he said, is one sent out, proclamation means make known by authority, the Gospel is good news, and the unconverted are those not turned to Christ.

There are two classes of motives which cause people to go as missionaries. First, there is consideration of the state of the heathen, their temporal condition with its suffering, and ignorance, their moral condition with witchcraft, caste, and polygamy rife, and their spiritual condition of not knowing God nor living up to the light of their consciences.

The consideration of one's relationship to Christ gives another group of motives. There is loyalty. The apostles were loyal to their Master, although He seemed to have failed, and people to-day are also loyal. There is gratitude for being born a Christian, knowing Christ instead of the slave of witchcraft and superstition.

The greatest motive of all, which takes in all, is love—love for Christ, and because of Him for one's brethren in every land. When Peter said, "Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee," he was told, "'Feed my sheep," and lovers of the Master have continued to spread the Gospel ever since.

At the evening service Mr. Robinson told about some of the mission work in Japan, where he is stationed.

AROUND THE CITY.

The Hon. G. N. Gordon left on Sunday for Western Ontario, where he will address gatherings in the interests of Liberal candidates at Windsor, Ford City and Walkerville. Mr. Gordon will return to Peterborough on Wednesday.

A blaze started to-day at noon in the sign of the United Cigar Store on George Street, caused by faulty electric wiring. An alarm was sent in to the fire hall and the fire was soon put out by the chemicals.

The unemployment list in this city is the lowest it has been this summer. At present there are 42 on the list, mostly boys and old men. There were 35 new applicants last week and 41 placements.

FIRST HAND MINING NEWS

Cobalt has always been noted as a lively mining centre.

More so than ever, it is the mining supply and mining news headquarters of the north. Its mining organizations operate in all camps. To it comes daily men engaged in important operations, news filters in from all fields, and mining is the constant talk of all its citizens.

Rouyn is but an hour away, by plane; Gowganda and Kirkland Lake are three hours away, by car; South Lorrain is just down the road; Porcupine is but seven hours away, by train; Montreal and Toronto are only a night away. And the long distance phone extends to every camp, every manager, every president.

In the centre of the news gathering forces of the North is The Northern Miner. Its office in Cobalt is on the ground floor of all big developments. Its editors are constantly on the move, interviewing mine executives, looking at properties, keeping a watchful eye on anything that could make news of interest to the world of mining investors.

The news it gets is first-hand, official, accurae. It goes direct from the mine to the reader. The opinion of The Miner on an enterprise is valuable because it is based on personal knowledge and long close experience of the elements necessary to mining success.

Government officials, bank managers, other men in places of trust, accept The Northern Miner as the authority on mining—sound and reliable.

If you hold mining stock or property you should subscribe; the $2 subscription is nothing compared to the money it will save or gain you by keeping you in close contact with the mines.

Corn and oats were easy, corn opening 1-4 to 7-8c down and later rallying a little. Provisions advanced.

FORMER U. S. WAR SECRETARY URGES REVISION OF QUESTIONS FAVORING DEBT CANCELLATION

Such a Settlement Would Be Beneficial To Former War Allies.

NEEDS MARKETS.

Harmony and Good Will Should Be Preserved Among Nations.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31—Reconsideration of all questions pertaining to interallied debts, including the British settlement and the terms to France, is urged by Newton D. Baker, war-time secretary of war, who expresses the conviction the American policy should be one of cancellation.

"Personally, I believe that a cancellation policy will be wise," said Mr. Baker. "Such a policy ought to relieve Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and the rest of our war allies, and in turn ought to require the release of some part of the burdens imposed upon Germany.

"This ought to be done at a round table, where a representative of the United States should be authorized to speak with authority and to demonstrate to the rest of the world that America's interest is not in dollars, but in a reconstructed international order with as much as possible of the grief of the Great War swept from oblivion, and the great industrial nations of the world freed to start afresh with harmony and good will, in fair economic competition and in at least enough political co-operation to preserve peace in the common interest."

The former war secretary's views of the debt situation are contained in a signed statement in the current number of Trade Winds, the monthly business publication of the Union Trust company, of Cleveland. The statement is made public as an interesting contribution to the present international discussion of interallied debts.

Open markets, according to Mr. Baker, are more important than the dollars owed to this country, and he believes it inconceivable "that the rest of the world will continue to trade with us during 62 years in which every one of them would have its own industries burdened by crushing taxes, which would be paid to us for a cause and in a form to them not greatly different from the tribute which Rome imposed on her friends and enemies alike."

Seeds and Harvest

"We cannot sow seeds of international distrust, ill will and selfishness, and expect a harvest of friendship and eager trade," he says, adding that "there are springing up in the world economic unions and alliances against the United States vastly more important and significant than the emotional outbursts of street crowds in Paris against American tourists."

His view of the proposals for settlement is that they appear to have been determined largely by amounts thought possible of collection without revolutions in the paying countries; that the discussion of settlements had been unintelligent and the public misinformed as to the character of the debts and the economic consequences.

"Even where we have canceled a substantial part of a nation's debt, we have done it, not graciously and broad-mindedly in the interest of world rehabilitation," he states, "but contemptuously; not because we were generous, but because our calculations showed that we were going the limit of the debtor's capacity to pay. In each case the principle has been to see how much treading the worm will stand before it turns. More than that, there appears, at least in certain quarters, a concerted effort, once the debt arrangements have been completed, to place every obstacle in the way of the debtor's ability to pay.

"What a furore was raised over the fact that we have to look for our rubber supply to Britain's plantations! If it be true, as Winston Churchill stated in his recent remarks, referring to the Stevenson restriction legislation, that 'one of the principal means of paying the debt to America is in the provision of rubber' has not the American consumer lost his sense of humor when he rails against Great Britain's 'big returns' in the face of the fact that our own war-born monopolies in goods of every nature not only brought millions of profits to America at the expense of the entire world, but were the direct cause of adding hundreds of millions to the very debts whose payment we now demand?

Political Isolation

"In the modern world industrial nations are so integrated, by mutual investment and trade relations, that political isolation is an illusion. The overseas investments of the people of the United States now aggregate perhaps eleven billions of dollars,

TORONTO, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press)—Some fifty children of school age from Haliburton and East Muskoka district were guests of the Ontario Government for a brief period this morning, and were addressed by the Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General of Ontario, in the Legislative chamber, on Parliamentary practice. The children, who are in Toronto for "Young Canada Day" at the Exhibition, were in charge of School Inspector George E Pentland, and several teachers of the district.

After leaving the Parliament buildings the party motored to Government House to be received by the Lieutenant-Governor.

BUILD ADDITION TO CITY MARKET

J. Graham Has Contract for renovating Roof of Market Buildings.

TENDER $2,500

In the effort to cope with the problem of ice and water falling in spring and winter days from the Market Building the City Trust has commenced the building of an additional roof on the western side, at an angle to the existing roof. The water, which in the past has been a source of discomfort and annoyance to tenants and passers-by, will run along the bosom of the angle thus formed and will be conducted through a pipe passing down the interior of the building into the storm sewers below.

The difficulty of making satisfactory provision for the carrying away of ice and snow has been aggravated by the unusually abrupt slope of the roof on the western side, coupled with the fact that the large space occupied by the Market Hall has been heated at rare intervals only during the winter—thus permitting a large accumulation of ice and snow on the roof of the building. It is hoped by the City Trust, that this latest effort will lead to an adequate solution of the problem. The work is being carried out by J. Graham, a local contractor, the contract tender being $2500.

During the past few years, a noteworthy improvement in the general appearance of the Market Building has been in evidence. The City Trust has also found a gratifying increase in the amount of revenue produced by the building. The experiment of converting the Arcade of the building into a site for stores has been thoroughly successful from the standpoints of appearance and revenue.

VITAL PROBLEMS AFFECTING PEACE BEFORE LEAGUE

Committee on Council Seats Prepare for the Assembly Election.

GENEVA OPTIMISTIC.

Committee Meets in Final Conference Before the League Reorganization.

GENEVA, Aug. 30—The Committee on the Composition of the Council which today opens the second and final conference in preparation for the reorganization next week by the Assembly of the League Board of Directors, is intrusted with the most delicate task perhaps ever placed in the hands of an international body. It is dealing with lightning which may crash with the thunder of international discord in the Assembly meetings.

On the wisdom and fairness with which the body handles the task assigned depends the entity of the League of Nations, so far as Europe is concerned. And it must not be forgotten that the League's greatest usefulness is fostering good will and solving the problems arising between European nations, as League action is prevented in South America by the Monroe Doctrine and its usefulness in Asia is limited.

The world's greatest danger spot is Europe and the world's greatest hope against misunderstandings is the League of Nations. With Germany's coming entry into the League Europe will be bound together under the League covenant from the Russian frontier to the Atlantic Ocean—if Spain does not withdraw.

What Withdrawal Would Mean

Till now the League activities have largely been devoted to the situation created by the great gap in the centre. With Europe solidly in the League it will be free to develop more harmohiously. But with Spain's with drawal solidarity would be broken and with it the esprit de corps essential to the League's development.

Careful weighing of the situation givs one more reason to hope than was permitted after the June Council meeting. Time has worked in favor of the League.

At present the seat problem is as follows: Spain has ratified the amendment to Article 4 of the Covnant which places in the hand of the Assembly the rules dealing with the election of non-permanent members of the Council and the regulations relating to terms of office and conditions of re-eligiility. Therefore, it has not the power to prevent the Assembly doing what it pleases.

Previously the Committee on Composition of the Council drew up a proposal which would give the Assembly such power the head of any recalcitrant member of the council by the simple procedure of holding a new election and dropping those who refused to keep step with the majority. This proposal would make Spain's veto against Germany's election to a permanent council seat worthless.

But Spain is already committed to support the election of Germany to a permanent seat and there never has been a question in anybody's mind that Spain would break her word, as she had the unpleasant duty of pointing out to some nine other nations that they had broken their word to her.

Therefore Germany's election to a permanent seat is assured and it is a mere matter of procedure which will take up several hours after the Assembly's officials and committees are elected.

Task Is to Satisfy Spain

Poland, as much as she would like a permanent seat, no longer offers an obstacle. Brazil has cut the League for a time and China and Persian are quieted. Therefore the only questions facing the Council Committee is to try and invent some non-permanent seat plan which will satisfy Spain. Any combination of this sort would take care of Poland.

This is a large order but no larger than the one with which the committee was faced several months ago.

WORKMAN KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF STEEL MORTAR BEING USED IN FIREWORKS DISPLAY AT C. N. E.

Thousands of People Sit in Stand Unaware of the Tragedy.

HAMILTON MAN.

Had Been Emloyed at Such Work For Many Years.

TORONTO, August 31. — While joy and amusement reigned in front of the grand stand at the Exhibition last night, there was sudden tragedy backstage.

While 20,000 people thrilled with the roar and bang and flash of the fireworks display, a bomb which was intended to soar sky-high and there blow up in flame exploded prematurely, and instantly killed George Hall, the workman who set it off.

Hall, who was 30 years old, and lived at 223 Napier Street, Hamilton, an employee of the Hand Fireworks Company, was assigned to the task of setting off a series of bombs laid out in mortars sunk in the ground. The mortars are in the nature of heavy, upturned steel pails. In the bottom of each is a detonator connected with a fuse running to a small opening. Above the detonator is set the bomb.

Mortar Blows Up.

Normally, when the fuse is lighted it explodes the detonator, which shoots the bomb high into the air, there to blow up.

Hardly had the display of fireworks started when the tragedy was enacted. Hall, with a three-foot lighter, lit the fuse. Then, with a roaring bang, the steel mortar blew up. A great fragment of steel struck him across the chest. Death was instantaneous.

The explosion was so terrific that a hole four feet wide was all there was to show where the mortar had stood.

A hundred of the actors who had taken part in the snectacle, startled by the sudden explosion, turned to see Hall sprawled in the hole. Women shrieked. A man shouted for the St. John's ambulance. Others rushed to Hall's side. But he was dead.

Public Unaware of Tragedy.

And through it all the 20,000 people in the grand stand had no knowledge of the tragedy. A police ambulance, with siren shrieking, was rushed to the scene. But the roar of the fireworks deadened the sound, and to the spectators it seemed but an ordinary car that flashed across the Exhibition track and on backstage.

Thousands of people slowly made their way from the grand stand recalling their pleasures of viewing a magnificent spectacle, thousands of joyful people unconscious of the tragedy of it all.

Later in the evening a woman reported to the police that an automobile in which she was sitting over a hundred yards away from the scene of the tragedy was hit by a bit of flying steel, evidently part of the mortar.

Following the explosion, a bit of flaming wood hit a near-by tent and started a small fire, which was almost instantly noticed and extinguished.

MACMILLAN RETURNS.

Arctic Explorer Is On Way To Sydney After Summer in North.

PORTLAND, Maine, Aug. 31. — Commander Donald B. MacMillan, returning from a three months' expedition to the sub-Arctic to collect specimens for the Field Museum at Chicago, expects to be back in Christmas Cove, near Wiscasset, Maine, in ten days, according to a radiogram reecived to-day by D. Hoegg of the Evening Express. He planned to sail to-day to Sydney, N.S. from Battle Harbor, Labrador, with the schooners Bowdoin and Sachem.

Ticket On German Air Line Insures Holder For $6,000

BERLIN, August 31 (Associated Press). — Every time a traveller goes up in the air on one of Germany's seventy-five airplane routes he is insured for $6,000 at the expense of Luftansa, the concern which operates these routes.

Flying in Germany is regarded quite as safe as travelling by train or motor car. The insurance companies with which Luftansa has contracted for the insurance of passengers charge merely the usual accident rate, without the supercharge customary in the case of "extra-hazardous occupations."

According to official statistics the percentage of safety in airplane flights during 1925 was 99,997 per cent. Thus far during 1926 not a passenger has been injured.

OMNIBUS STRUCK BY FAST TRAIN

Nine Killed in Motor Bus Accident at Naworth, England.

NOON MONDAY.

CARLISLE, England, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press)—A motor coach laden with holiday makers was struck by an express train at a grade crossing at Naworth, near here yesterday. Nine of its occupants, some of them women and children, were killed, and many injured.

The express, which was making full speed, escaped damage. It pulled up safely and returned to the scene of the wreck, and its passengers assisted in the work of rescue.

TWO CHILDREN CLIMB UP PEAK

Remarkable Feat Performed on Mount Edith Cavell Yesterday.

DIFFICULT ASSENT.

JASPER PARK LODGE, Alta., Aug. 31.—Unknown in the annals of Canadian mountain climbing is the feat of two little children of Victoria, B.C., who, taking advantage of the favorable conditions that prevailed this year, climbed Mount Edith Cavell, one of the highest peaks in the Canadian Rockies.

They are Patsy and Billy, aged 10 and 12, children of Mrs. A. W. Agnew. Leavin Jasper Park Lodge with two Swiss guides on Sunday they made a base camp on the edge of the mountain, where they slept until the start was made at 5.30 yesterday morning. The children, each carrying his own pack, showed remarkable nerve and skill on the more difficult parts of the ascent, and slimbed steadily until the peak was reached.

ALL WAR DEBTS MUST BE PAID SAYS COOLIDGE

U. S. President Will Insist on Their Collection, It Is Reported.

BAKER UNSUPPORTED.

Has Always Been Backer of Lost Causes, Says Newspaper.

PAUL SMITHS, N.Y., Aug. 31. —(Canadian Press.) — President Coolidge knows of no reason for making any change in the government policy toward foreign war-time debts owed the United States.

While he has not read the proposal of Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, for the revision of debts, or cancellation, it was said at the summer White House to-day that Mr. Coolidge declared that the Washington Government had taken an attitude in the matter which would not be changed.

All the great Powers, with one exception, it was added, had funded their debts to the United States and it is apparent to Mr. Coolidge that France will adjust its debt in accordance with the agreement reached by its duly authorized representatives in negotiation with United States officials.

The money, it was emphasized, will have to be paid by the United States taxpayers, unless it is paid by the taxpayers of the countries that borrowed it.

NEW YORK, August 31. Canadian Press. — Special despatches from Paul Smith, New York, indicate that President Coolidge will insist that foreign nations pay their enormous war debts to the United States, despite the demand for cancellation made by Newton D. Baker, war time Secretary of War.

The Herald's Tribune correspondent asserts that Mr. Baker has specialized in lost causes ever since he went out of office, and that those close to the president attach little importance to his new move. Advisors of the president are reported to have said Mr. Baker "will not be able to rally twenty members of the House of Representatives to his proposal.

LITTLE HOPE IN BRITAIN

LONDON, Aug. 31. Canadian Press Cable.—Commenting on the suggestion made by former United States Secretary of W. Newton Baker, that the United States cancel the war debts owed to it by foreign nations, the Daily News in a leading article describes Mr. Baker as "the latest recruit to the politically unpopular but far seeing group of debt cancellers," and says that Britain is less likely than some continental nations to entertain any illusive hope of a change in America's war debt policy because a leading American statesman or business man comes into the open to advocate mutual cancellation of allied debts and a reduction of Germany's reparation burden.

The News thinks that a time must come when America will be compelled to drastically revise her war debt policy as a result of the slow pressure of economic circumstances and the clear thinking of long headed American citizens.

Woman Of Seventy-Nine Charges Mate With Bigamy

LONDON, August 31.—Mrs. Kate Suyden Horne, 79 years of age, appeared in Westminster police court here to charge Ernest R. Brandon, 56, with bigamy.

She declared that she employed Brandon as her secretary in New York in 1922, later taking him to South Africa where, in Cape Town, she said, he persuaded her to marry him. Later she learned that he had another wife, she declared, naming his wife as Mrs. Lillian Frances Brandon. She said that in 1925 the first Mrs. Brandon brought suit against her in the New York Supreme Court, alleging she had alienated Brandon's affections.

The court has remanded Brandon to jail for one week without bail.

POLL OFFICERS STUFFED BOXES

Confess That Vote in Three Polls Were Faked in Bush.

POLLS NOT OPENED.

LAC LABICHE, Ala., Aug. 31 (Canadian Press Despatch. — How three polls in the Frog Lake District, Cushing, Prairie Lake and Reita Lake, at the Federal election in the Athabaska Riding which elected C. W. Cross in October, 1925, were "faked" during a day spent in the bush, well out of sight of chance passers-by, was told by Peter Peterson, Deputy Returning Officer and enumerator at the Cushing poll, one of the four Deputy Returning Officers who fled to the United States following the conviction of two other Returning Officers for illegal practice at the same election.

Promised Protection

Peterson gave his evidence without hesitation upon being assured by Mr. Justice Clark that he would be accorded protection from criminal prosecution under the Corrupt Practices Inquiry Act. He made a clean breast of his part, naming Harry Bowtell, Postmaster and telegraph operator at Frog Lake, as the instigator of the scheme.

"Bowtell told us to get off at daybreak when nobody would be round and to go about fifteen miles north on the Colk Lake Trail," said Peterson, "when we were to turn off in the bush and stay hidden all election day."

Peterson then told of filling the ballot boxes with fake ballots, all of them but eleven marked for Hon. C. W. Cross, the Liberal candidate, and of entering a list of these in the poll book.

Other Polls Faked

Martin Grasdal, Deputy Returning Officer at Reita Lake poll, and Ernest Vasey, Deputy Returning Officer at the Prairie Lake poll, corroborated the evidence of Peterson in every detail. They did the same with their ballot boxes as Peterson did with him, they said. On April 8, 1925, these men, with R. Jamieson, Deputy Returning Officer of the Rates poll, and Harry Bowtell, fled from their home and took refuge in the United States.

All but Bowtell returned on assurance that they would be given protection under the Corrupt Practices Inquiry Act against criminal prosecution for any illegal act to which they might confess.

BOY KILLS SISTER SHOOTS HIMSELF

Pays With Life For What He Considered Inexcusable Accident.

CALUMET, Mich., August 31. — (Canadian Press). — Arthur Lawrence, 15, voluntarily paid with his life for what he thought was inexcusable carelessness on his part. The boys went to a barn on his mother's farm near Sidnaw, and shot himself with the shotgun which a moment before had killed his 11-year-old sister, Ilenore.

Young Lawrence was cleaning the weapon when it was discharged accidentally. The charge ripped through the kitchen door, killing the girl instantly.

Arthur rushed into the house, stood for a moment over her body, and then went to the barn and killed himself.

British Note Is Milder Than French—Paper Calls It Blackmail.

INTRICATE MATTER.

Question of Arranging For Regular Re-election of Spain Troublesome.

LONDON, August 31.—Spain will undoubtedly absent herself from the League of Nations assembly in September in view of the nature of the British and French notes despatched to Madrid Sunday on the Tangier question. Foreign Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlain yesterday in conversation with foreign diplomat, expressed his regret but also his resignation.

The French and British notes are different documents, but were examined in both London and Paris before being sent. One portion of the French note was modified at the suggestion of the British Foreign Office.

The British is the milder note, but does not represent the anger at what the Star last night calls Spanish "blackmail" in trying to get control of Tangier under threat of leaving the League. It is apparent this threat will not succeed whatever the attitude of Italy, which has been reported as siding with Spain. It is significant that Italy was not consulted by Britain or France.

Annexation Refused.

The French note rejects outright the Spanish suggestion that Tangier be annexed and adds: "No suitable formula could be found for giving Spain a League mandate over the territory. France is willing to consider modification of the Tangier statutes, but not a full conference of interested powers at Geneva, as suggested from Madrid.

The British note says British interest in Tangier is largely strategic and negative. Accordingly it adds, the British attitude will be dictated largely by the attitude of the powers more nearly concerned. But the British note ends by saying that Geneva is not the place nor the present moment for such discussion.

In view of these notes the Foreign Office is reconciled to the prospect that no Spanish representative will take part in the coming League sessions. It is pointed out, however, that Spain under the Covenant can only absent herself, cannot withdraw for two years and by that time there may be another Government in Madrid.

Afrance Mellofranco, the Brazilian delegate to the League, although he has written a farewell letter, has now received instructions from his Government to remain in Geneva in close touch with events. This is taken here to show Brazil is not as indifferent to the League as has been pretended.

An Intricate Problem.

GENEVA, Switzerland, August 31 (Associated Press). — The task of making Spain a permanent member of the Council of the League of Nations without directly and clearly designating her as such is proving a difficult undertaking. Eminent statesmen and leading international jurists struggled for hours yesterday at the session of the commission charged with re-organization of the council, seeking to elaborate a method whereby both Spain and Poland could be declared re-eligible for election as temporary members of the council, thus virtually making them permanent members.

The discussion became so involved over technicalities, that the matter was finally thrown into the hands of a sub-committee, which is ex-

ENGLAND AND ITALY SUMMONED BEFORE LEAGUE BY ABYSSINIANS

Protest Entered That Two Nations Have Agreed on Land Steal.

FRANCE BLAMED

Rumored That She is Behind Ras Taffari in His Appeal.

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Correspondent)

GENEVA, Aug. 31—(United Press).—When the League Council meets on September third and the League Assembly on the sixth, the League of Nations will be called upon to make an investigation into the protest of Ras Taffari of Abyssinia that England and Italy have entered into an agreement to split up his territory and have concerted to bring pressure to bear on him in the event he refuses to consent to the split.

League circles are frankly chuckling with undiplomatic glee at Ras Taffari's caustic note as constituting one of the greatest justifications the League has yet had for its existence.

In the first place it will consitute the first time in the League's history that its youngest and humblest member—and a black member at that—has been able to summon on the carpet before the world's greatest tribunal two of the latter's oldest and most distinguished members.

In the second place, supposing, as is currently rumored, that Ras Taffari was egged on to his protest by France, Leaguers point out that the affair constitutes one of the most striking examples of how the mere existence of the League prevents war.

In the old days, had England and Italy secretly agreed to divide Abyssinia into zones of influence and had France not been willing to accept such an arrangement she would have had no other alternative except to go to war about it.

Now, however, all she has to do is by a little diplomatic correspondence persuade Abyssinia to send a note of protest to the League, and both England and Italy are obliged to abandon any sinister designs which they may not have had; Abyssinia interests are protected, and France has the satisfaction of having thwarted any effort at "splits" without first consulting her.

Up to the present time it has not yet been decided just what will be done with Ras Taffari's protest. In his original note he merely asked that it be communicated to all members of the League which has already been done.

In the meantime the Secretariat has addressed him a note asking if any further action be desired. It is expected that his response will be in before the League Council meets on September 3.

Even, however, should Ras Taffari decide that it is not necessary that the League go further with his protest, League officials point out that already the desired end has been attained.

The mere publicity that is given by the League to such protests is regarded as almost always sufficient to rouse a world-wide opinion against any apparent injustice. In any event it is believed that in view of the storm of astonishment and criticism that has been raised against England and Italy as a result of Ras Taffari's note, neither is likely to proceed further in the matter.

GERMAN NATIONALISTS GATHER TO CELEBRATE OLD VICTORIES

Thousands Are Mustering in Old Free City of Nuremburg.

UNDER OLD LEADERS

Bavarian Crown Prince is Patron and Other Royalty Will Attend.

NUREMBERG, Aug. 31—(United Press).—Amidst a buzz of patriotic excitement the burghers of this quaint old city are making the last preparations for the great nationalist rally, officially beginning at dawn today with the strains of the reveille, which will see the revival of military pomp within their walls.

"In commemoration of the days of Sedan, Tannenberg, and the Battle of Jutland....to mourn the loss of our colonies....in spite of our enemies within and without....a challenge to all hypocrites and cowards" these sentences from the official program will characterize the spirit of the two days gathering—"under the patronage of His Royal Highness, the Crown Prince of Bavaria."

Thus, richly decked in flags from which the republican colors are conspicuously absent, with streets and squares clean-swept, the houses all profusely garlanded, the statues of Bavarian and Prussian kings adorn with a wealth of flowers, Nuremberg is awaiting the coming of its distinguished guests.

Besides the high patron of the reunion, there will be the German ex-crown prince and two or three of his younger brothers. A step lower on the military heirarchy, General von Ludendorff, Fieldmarshal von Mackensen and General von Kluck have promised to attend, And beyond them, forming a suitable setting for royalty and its entourage the fatherland's factories and offices are sending ten of thousands of ardent young nationalists to this rally in a hundred special trains.

Most of the prominent guests are expected here early this afternoon. A guard of honor, resplendent in pre-war uniforms, is already drawn up in front of the station in anticipation of the arrival.

Water So Highly Praised Derived Flavor From Soap

SEATON DELAVAL, Eng., Aug. 30 (United News).—Local patriots who used to boast of Seaton Delaval's water supply and the supposed medicinal properties are patronising saloons when they are thirsty. Other people are refusing to drink even local beer and are drinking bottled water.

Desiring to advertise the curative properties of the later, long noted here, town boosters hired a chemist to analyze the waters and list its ingredients.

He found that the peculiar flavor of the water was due to nearby miners washing their pedigreed dogs in the reservoirs with kitchen soap.

J. J. MORRISON GIVES ADDRESS

Speaks at U.F.O. Picnic in Dummer of Benefits of Union.

ATTENDANCE LARGE

WARSAW, Aug. 31.—The postponed South Dummer U.F.O. Club garden party was held on Mr. Robt. Girvin's grounds on Friday evening. There was a very large number present.

A stage was arranged and seats were placed in a large driving shed. Gasoline lanterns lighted the place well. The booth run by Harry Digweed did a rushing business. There were a great many young people present, and many mothers with their children, even to small babies.

Samuel Armstrong, of Otonabee Township, was chairman. The program began with the singing of "O Canada" by all standing and the men all removed their hats. Dr. Munro's orchestra led. Mr. Armstrong gave a short address. "Rastus and Bones" gave some of their amusing numbers. Dr. Embury was expected to speak, but when called upon was not present. Dr. Munro's orchestra gave another selection. Dr. Munro gave a short address, and among other things, said that a gathering together of this kind was a good thing. People are put into the world to be of service. He had nothing to say politically. He was inclined to think that since the war the governing of the country was left to a few. All owe a duty to society and to the state. All classes have organized; the ministers have associations, so have doctors, manufacturers, and every other group, and the farmers should also. They should utilize their power to vote. There is too much desire for power, ather than a desire for what is best for the country.

The cup which was won this year by the Peterboro Debating Club was presented to them. When won two successive years by any club it becomes the club's property.

Mr. J. J. Morrison, Provincial Secretary of the U.F.O., had remained over and was ready when called upon. He was surprised that so many people could be gotten together on so short a notice. He noticed the large proportion of young people present and considered the program the equal of any. Some of the points of his address were that farmers should not be ashamed of their calling. It is the basic industry, and why be ashamed of what gives us bread? He spoke of the peculiar surroundings. He stood at the door of a driving shed. People were seated on boards placed on blocks of wood, some were up near the rafters, lumber was piled over head, but they were like city people. They had their hair bobbed and their skirts bobbed, and all the rest of it. Urban people are only semi-urban, as they are dependent on the rural population for their supplies.

During the day he had been over a good part of the surrounding country and found it almost as good as his own county. Among others he had met Mr. Humphries, who told him much about the county's pioneers, and also spoke of the present-day neglect. Even the graveyards are neglected. These people were wonderful soldiers every day of their lives and their burial places should be kept decent.

He said and reiterated that there is no such thing as a Canadian. The census man comes around and enters you as of whatever nationality your paternal grandfather was. Canada has all kinds.

Speaking of the political parties, he said they both made a great noise and talk to get people to settle, just as people make a noise to make a swarm of bees settle, and then put them in a hive. The politicians will put people in a hive and keep them there to work for the particular party in power. No one knows why there is to be an election, but it is going to be a struggle to know whether Grits or Tories or Progressives are the strongest.

Policies are not discussed before the people, and all will depend on which party can blacken the other the most.

The Rebellion of 1837 was to give the people the right to say what would be done with their taxes and other rights. Now we have ceased to realize we have these rights. Many people do not vote. Rightly used, the franchise will do everything, and if the franchise be not used and used properly, a rebellion would do no good.

He compared the two great political parties to dogs, good dogs. After a time the dog learned bad habits, sucking eggs, killing sheep and other things, but the owner of the dog (the people of the party) would not believe the dog would do anything bad, but proof was so convincing that the people shot the dog, but only wounded it. At present both political parties are wounded. A new pup, the U.F.O., appeared. He was trained and he grew, and was very good, but he ran with the old dogs and learned their ways, and he too was shot and wounded.

Another pup will come and the people must train him themselves, else he too will learn bad tricks. The people will never go back to the old lines. They will develop, but no one knows how. Since the war everything has changed. There must be something to fit into the necessities of the people. Perhaps a woman will find the new way because she is not so saturated with partyism as are the men.

He said the United Farmers' Society is the best ever organized because it lifts them out of a position of which they were ashamed. It recognizes women as full partners with men. All the farmer organizations, U.F.O., U.F.W.O. and U.F.Y.P.O., have the same rights. As individuals people cannot cope with present conditions. As a union people can. Farmers are easily discouraged. The U.F.O. was combating institutions over one hundred years old. The ideals of agriculture have never been attacked. The U.F.O. has made mistakes, but has benefitted by these mistakes. Those who never made a mistake never did anything, and the U.F.O. did good. It is now impossible to count noses before elections. Over fifty per cent. of the voters are women, and a politician dare not canvas a woman as he would a man. Women can control, and he hopes they will control wisely. The U.F.O. first advocated women's franchise. One great object of the U.F.O. is to try to bring the producer and consumer more closely together and eliminate, as far as possible, the middle men. He went very fully into co-operative buying and selling, explained about the management of the co-operative stores and showed how farmers are losing by not using them. He instanced farmers selling eggs to ordinary dealers and these dealers get the extra profit.

Mr. Weir sang, "Keep on Looking," and was heartily encored, to which he replied with "The Little Shirt My Mother Made For Me."

There were cheers for those who had assisted and for Mr. Morrison.

Dr. Munro's orchestra led the National Anthem.

Those who assisted were entertained by the club.

Dan Moody Secures Almost Two-thirds Vote in Texas Primary.

FOR NOMINATION.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 31—With about seven-eights of the vote cast in Saturday's primary reported, Dan Moody, the youthful Attorney-General of Texas, has defeated Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson for the Democratic nomination for Governor by between 200,000 and 225,000 votes. The woman Governor has been overwhelmed by one of the greatest adverse majorities in the history of Texas, and on all sides is heard the comment that the result means the end of Fergusonism in Texas.

Ex-Governor James A. Ferguson, or "Old Jim," as his political enemies like to call him, has remained silent so far. Called on the telephone early yesterday, he said he had nothing to say, and then added that he might have a statement later on. Although Mrs. Ferguson is, under the law, the Governor, one seldom hears her name mentioned as the victim of the Moody landslide. Everybody, including the Fergusonites, appeared agreed that the blow was directed at "Jim" Ferguson, and not his wife.

The total number of votes so far reported is 699,266, and of these Moody has received 458,669, and Mrs. Ferguson 240,597, a majority of 218,072 for the Attorney-General. Moody's friends still claim, when the remaining precincts in the State report, his majority will be in the neighborhood of 250,000. The best estimate of the final majority, however, would seem to be about 225,000.

The returns so far indicate that of the 252 counties Moody has carried at least 231 and he has a good chance of adding perhaps ten more to his list when all the votes are in.

THREE IN FAMILY DIE IN ACCIDENTS

Brother of Drowned Woman Killed in Automobile Crash.

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 31—Within a few hours after word was received here of the drowning of Mr. and Mrs. Nevetzral near Gravenhurst Sunday, a brother of Mrs. Nevetzral, Reuben Cronmiller, was instantly killed when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a telephone pole on the Niagara Falls highway. Today a triple funeral will be held from the Cronmiller home.

Ernest Minor, driver of the car, is at his home severely injured, with his face badly lacerated and possible internal injuries. With Harry Sidey and Carl Jones of Port Colborne, the two were returning from a picnic at La Salle, when they missed a curve and went careening into a pole, the car being badly wrecked.

CRICKET ONCE CRIME.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—King Edward IV prohibited the game of cricket because it interfered with the practice of archery, which was then deemed necessary in training men for defense of the country. The law was repealed in 1748, and cricket is now England's most popular game.

GERMAN NATIONALIST REUNION MARKED BY IMPERIAL UNIFORMS AND PRESENCE OF EX-ROYALTY

Two-day Gathering of Ex-Service Men Starts Today in Nuremburg.

100,000 IN UNIFORM.

Princes and Generals Are Gaudy in Pre-War Uniforms.

NUREMBERG, Aug. 31.—(United Press.)— As a counterblast against the Republicans' celebration of Constitution Day, the nationalists in this historic city to-day began a two-day re-union of patriotic ex-service men, which, according to the programme issued for the occasion, is to be a "milestone on the road to the fatherland's patriotic revival."

If splendor and military exhibitions are indications of strength, the nationalist movement is, after its temporary setback, again coming to the fore. For these two days, ushered in this morning with their reveille, sounded by military bands stationed all over the city, promise to be an impressive martial spectacle, such as the country has not witnssed since the days when the kaiser reviewed such demonstrations.

Acoording to conservative estimates, 100,00 uniformed ex-soldiers have responded to the call of the nationalists. Almost all units of the imperial army are represented.

The ex-generals alone would form a small regiment. Clad in gaudy pre-war uniforms, the old Prussian eagle flashing on spiked helmets, their chests covered with tokens of distinguished careers, these generals return salutes with old-fashioned gravity, as if there had been neither a war nor peace.

Prominent among the guests of honor are the ex-crown princes of Germany and of Bavaria, princes of minor standing and cast and finally, General Ludendorff, making his first public appearance since his divo .

Fololwing the reveille, the troops will parade at noon on a large square in the centre of the city, where the princes and their suite of generals are to review the formations and to make speeches, with airplanes soaring overhead, dropping flowers and handbills.

Afternoon will see the principal guests in council considering ways and means to consolidate the forces which their appeal brought together. Towards evening there is scheduled a round of banquets and other festivities where important speeches are expected. And after dark will come the culmination of to-day's proceedings—a torchlight parade in front of the hotel of the princes and generals with patriotic speeches from the balcony.

NORWOOD NEWS

NORWOOD, Aug. 31.—Mr. Ralph Spencer, a probationer for the ministery in the United Church, who has had charge of the services in the Norwood Church for the month of August, preached two splendid sermons on Sunday. Norwood people who have had the pleasure of listening to his addresses during his stay in the village predict for him a very successful future in his chosen calling.

The musical part of the program in the United Church on Sunday was in charge of Prof. Edwards, of Niagara Falls. At the morning service he rendered a solo which was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. (Dr.) T. H. Norval accompanied him. At the evening service solos were rendered by Prof. Edwards and Mr. J. Stan. Weir.

The U.F.O. garden party, which was to have been held on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Girven on the boundary line, was postponed until Friday evening on account of the severe thunder storm. However, about one hundred braved the elements and were in attendance. Before dispersing Mr. J. Stan. Weir rendered a solo and short addresses were given by Mr. Peck, Conservative candidate for West Peterboro, and by Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the Provincial U.F.O. On Friday evening the weather had cleared and a large crowd assembled. The softball game between the Otonabee 6th line girls and the Warsaw girls resulted in a victory for the former. The program that was to have been given on Thursday was given and everybody went home well pleased with the result.

LABOR PROTESTS FURTHER RENEWAL

Jack Jones Suspended For Violent Attack on Baldwin Government.

LONDON, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press). — Sir Austen Chamberlain led the House in the absence of Premier Baldwin when Parliament reassembled this afternoon for the purpose of renewing the emergency regulations in connection with the coal strike.

When Sir William Joynson Hicks moved a resolution authrizing the continuance of the emergency regulations, there were constant cries from the Labor benches, and the Speaker suspended Jack Jones, Laborite, because of his verbal attack on the Government.

Jones took the longest route out, continuing such remarks as "contemptible lot," and "Trying to starve better men than yourselves." Sir William stated that whole mining districts were quiet. He added that if the union called out the safety men at the mines he would deem it the Government's duty to take all possible steps to prevent the destruction of the coal mines.

Replying o a question, Sir Austen Chamberlain said that he had no confirmation of a press report from Gibraltar, that all telegraphic and telephonic communication with Spain had been cut. He had no statement to make on the situation in Spain.

Coal From Poland

WARSAW, Aug. 30 (United News).—The Polish Trade Ministry announces that Great Britain has ordered 200,000 tons of coal to be delivered in September. The order provided that coal was to be entirely from the Upper Silesian coal fields.

MORE GROUPS.

Whatever may be the result of the Federal election so far as the composition of the Government is concerned, it is certain that the number of groups in the House will be augmented rather than decreased.

This is made a certainty by reason of the action of former Alberta Progressives in entering the present contest as United Farmers of Alberta, rather than Progressive candidates.

It is announced that the U.F.A. candidates will not sit with the Progressive party in the House or attend Progressive caucuses, and as a result the next Parliament will contain at least five groups—Liberals, Conservatives, Progressives, U.F.A. and Labour—to say nothing of Independents, of which there is fair sprinkling among the candidates already in the field.

Old politicians regret the presence on the political stage of so many groups, but, unfortunately, the tendency seems to be toward more rather than fewer groups, and there is nothing that can be done about it.

A GREATER EXHIBITION.

The opening of Peterboro's big Exhibition is less than two weeks away, and it is with genuine satisfaction that The Examiner is able to announce that in every detail Expansion Year will see a greater and more successful Exhibition.

Looking back to a few years ago, the thought strikes those who have followed the history of Peterboro's big fair that if any one had prophesied then that by 1926 the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition would be operating for a full week, offering a $10,000 prize list and confidently expecting a paid attendance of at least 40,000, he would have been laughed at as a dreamer, an incurable optimist.

The Exhibition has stepped into the world of big business, and its rapid progress should be a matter of civic pride for every resident of the city and district.

To build up such a huge organization has been a remarkable achievement on the part of the directors of the Exhibition, aided by loyal co-operation from the people of the whole district.

That such co-operation will be proffered even more freely this year there is every assurance.

MUST BE TACKLED.

The Examiner has no intention, if it can prevent it, of letting the civic and health authorities lie down on the job of making the Otonabee River safe for bathers.

The elimination of the pollution that has caused the closing of the Lake street bathing beach cannot be an impossible task, and it should be tackled by the authorities with determination.

The matter has been dealt with only half-heartedly in the past, with the results that usually attend a half-hearted effort.

Now the time has come to grapple with this problem with vigor, realizing that it is of the most vital importance to the community that the water in Otonabee should be clean enough to bathe in with reasonable assurance that typhoid fever will not follow.

It is ridiculous to think that with all the machinery that has been provided to safeguard the health of our citizens that we cannot find a way to prevent the river from being polluted.

Citizens are looking to the Board of Health and the City Council to clean-up this matter without delay.

TIME TO THINK ABOUT IT.

The lists are closed.

Registration of voters ended last night, and only those whose names are now listed will have an opportunity of saying by their ballots on September 14th which party they wish to govern Canada.

The Examiner has steadily urged upon citizens their responsibility in regards to protecting their franchise, believing that it was the duty of a newspaper to stress such an important task.

Now the campaign passes into another stage, and it becomes necessary to impress upon voters the imperative need of a general exercise of the franchise.

It cannot be said that there has been as yet any sign of an enthusiastic interest in the election, and the evident indifference toward the subject is not a matter upon which the public can be congratulated.

Perhaps in the two weeks' campaigning that will intervene before election day the voters will be aroused to a realization of the fact that the selection of a national Government is a task in which everybody must share the responsibility.

The slogan, "Vote as you like—but vote," perhaps hardly meets the situation, but at least it suggests what should be the general duty on election day.

DIRTY ROADSIDES.

(From The Farmer's Advocate.)

It is fortunate that the weeds are kept down on our Provincial highways and main country roads in Ontario, for tourists and short distance travelers carry away a good impression of the country through which they pass. And it is a good thing for the farming communities bordering on these thoroughfares, in as much as it helps in weed control and sets an example of neatness and cleanliness that is universally needed. Editors of "The Farmer's Advocate" have passed over many sideroads and concessions this summer that are a disgrace to any community, and worst of all the farms adjacent are usually just as dirty and unkept.

The people who dwell in every township are usually proud of their respective municipalities and make it known on every occasion. This is a good trait and one that should be encouraged, but it is boasting when the sideroads and back concessions are rocking with weeds and the farmers neighboring on them have become so accustomed to the outrage that instead of cleaning up or compelling the townships to do so, complacently stand by and share the general feeling of smug content.

Every township council in the Province of Ontario should strive to keep its roadsides clean and set a good example to those who live within the confines of the municipality and help the taxpayers in their eternal war on weeds. To have clean farms we must all the time have clean roadways and thoroughfares.

WHAT FOLLY!

Reference was made in these columns yesterday to the reported remarks of the Rt. Rev. Dr. Winnington-Ingram, who, speaking in Toronto, asked: "Can we ask the same loyalty from Galicians, Poles and God knows who else who are populating Canada, and who do not know a word of English?" The Border Cities Star answered the question by saying: "Yes, we can, and we are getting 'the same loyalty' from thousands of these people throughout Canada. The trouble is that the bishop, like so many other worthy people, is short on information and long on prejudice."

The Westminster Gazette, a well-known London publication, also takes exception to his lordship's indiscretion in an editorial headed, "A Bishop Let Loose." The Gazette refers to the bishop's inquiry as "frenzied," and expresses the hope that his "oratory on his trip will only occasionally, if at all, take these hectic flights. The Bishop of London should cease to regard himself as a missionary of empire, and be content to remember that it is no part of divine providence that humanity should speak the English language to please Tory clerics. Even non-Christians have gloried in the polyglot character of the British Empire, and have regarded it as a civilizing mission to bring English ideals of tolerance and liberty to millions of people of every clime and tongue. . . . The words of the bishop are likely to be misconstrued all over the empire."

There can be no doubt that Bishop Winnington-Ingram's query, uttered, perhaps, in a casual and harmlessly-intended way, is highly offensive to thousands of excellent people within our gates and elsewhere throughout the empire. There may come a day when everyone on this old earth will speak the English language, but one fancies that the linguistic Utopia, of which his lordship apparently dreams, is still a long way off. In the meantime, we must make the best of the existing situation, and it is not so disquieting after all, despite the bishop's fears. Within the circle of British Empire domain, or influence, one may hear spoken practically every language known to man. There is nothing strange about this; there is nothing in it upon which to base an alarmist speech. Indeed the British Empire—strangest mixture in all history—is built on a structure of varying languages, varying customs, varying religions. That is the secret of Britain's success as a colonial power. Native rights, languages, customs, religions, and so on, have been studiously respected. It is in this that the great statesmanship of Britain has been shown. It is through this that Britain has triumphed overseas, when other countries failed. It is through this that the British Empire exists today.

Many languages are spoken in Canada, and many languages will continue to be spoken, for all the nervousness of the good Bishop of London. Canada's whole success as a nation must be based on her ability to attract immigration. It is immigration that has brought us where we are today. It is more immigration that will put us in the position we hope to achieve. In fact of this fact, are we to demand that every person entering the country must speak the English language? Are we to demand that every person in the country must use English, or get out? What folly!—Border Cities Star.

PRESERVING THE FORESTS.

Henry Schott, writing in Outdoor America (Chicago), says that the popular idea of the lumberman as a destroyer pure and simple is all wrong. He confesses that he himself once held this opinion as late as four months ago. He then went west to investigate the lumber industry in Oregon and Washington. He was under the impression that within twenty or thirty years the forests would be all gone; those which escaped the axe would be destroyed by fire.

He found instead that the forest of those two States was being operated as a permanent industry; that they contained more fine commercial timber than there ever was in New York, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. The actual fire losses of merchantable timber in Washington were, in a period of ten years, only one-sixtieth of one per cent. a year. But Mr. Schott was not without justification for his earlier view, because he says that seventy-five years ago nobody thought of saving trees.

We had a somewhat similar experience in Canada. In early days the forest was something to be got rid of; trees which would now be highly valued were used for firewood, and we hear of fences made of walnut. The lumbermen of those days and even at a later period were careless and inclined to scoff at forest conservation. Now there are far-seeing lumbermen who are planting and thus making provision for the future. Mr. Schott says that the West—he is speaking, of course, of the United States—is seventy-five years ahead of the East, having profited by Eastern experience. Here is another interesting change:

"The lumber towns and logging camps today bear almost no resemblance to those of the early years. The towns have paved streets, all the public services, splendid school buildings, and in those particulars, surpass most of the communities of similar size in the East and Middle West. Those who would recall the old logging camps of twenty-five or thirty years ago with two-tier bunk houses, straw mattresses, could not recognize one of today: iron beds, two men in a room, shower-baths, sheets and pillow-cases.

"'One of my troubles is with some of the old-timers,' the superintendent of one of these camps told me. 'Many of them I knew in the old days, and they drop in here with their blanket rolls ready to go to work, but they complain bitterly about being asked to sleep between sheetse, and often refuse to do it. They say they know when they are comfortable.'"

One need not be too critical of the old prodigal habits. They were to be expected in a new country, while the resources seemed to be inexhaustible and the demand was less than it is today. Prairie farmers, in the same way, have been accused of "mining" the land and exhausting its fertility by growing nothing but wheat. Necessity and experience gradually bring about more provident methods; but before venturing to censure the old, we must put ourselves in the place of the pioneer lumbermen and farmers.—London Advertiser.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.83 3-4.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press).—There was some demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain over the week-end on the Montreal market and as the prices bid in some instances were in line with exporters' views, sales of a few loads of Manitoba spring wheat and Canadian Western barley were made for the first half of September shipment. A firm feeling prevailed in the market for ocean grain room and a moderate amount of business was done.

The demand for car lots of oats for domestic account was limited but values were steady.

Prices for all grades of spring wheat flour were firmly maintained under a moderate enquiry.

The market for winter wheat flour was without any special feature to note, prices being steady under a fair demand for small lots of new crop grades. Car lots of choice grades were quoted at $6.30 to $6.40 per barrel.

The millfeed situation was fairly active and the undertone to the market was firm. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was small but prices ruled steady.

Owing to the continued light receipts of fresh eggs of late and the somewhat scarcity of supplies on spot, a stronger feeling developed in the local market and prices were advanced 1 cent per doen. Prospects are that they will go still higher. The volume of business transacted was large. The receipts were 1,431 cases.

The undertone to the butter market was easier and prices were fractionally lower. The receipts were 906 packages.

All grades of cheese were advanced 1-8c to 1-4c per pound under a small demand. The receipts were 7,618 boxes.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for beans under a moderate demand and sales of odd cars of choice white hand-picked were made at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

HANDSOME BEAUTIFUL AND PRETTY

Perhaps it is well to say, at the outset of this article, that the differences in meaning of the words "handsome," "beautiful" and "pretty" must be "felt" by the mind. If such "feeling" is not present in the mind, it is very difficult, if not impossible, to put it there.

"Handsome" means, according to Webster, "agreeable to the eye or to correct taste; having a pleasing appearance, with symmetry and dignity comely." The word expresses, according to the same authority, more than "pretty" and less than "beautiful;" as "a handsome man, a handsome garment, house, tree."

We say that a man is "handsome," but we seldom if ever refer to a man as "beautiful," and we never call a man "pretty." But a woman or a child may be pretty, beautiful or handsome, and so may an animal, a plant or an inanimate object.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

MILK

Woman is a pessimist about a lot of things.
Matrimony heads the list, the husband that it brings.
Knowing men the way I do, myself among the rest,
Women have a reason to, have reasons of the best.
Women have a reason to, have reasons of the best.
Men are optimistic, they enjoy a lot of fun,
But I know another way that woman is the one—
Never knew a woman yet, no matter what the hour,
Who was willing to admit the milk was ever sour.

Hubby picks the pitcher up, and Hubby takes a sniff,
With the coffee in his cup, he says he wonders if—
Wifey says of course it is, as sweet as milk can be—
Hubby says there's sour in his, as anyone can see—
Wifey says it's just a waste to throw good milk away—
Hubby says, "Well, take a taste, and then see what you say"—
Wives to weeping are inclined, when men are fine as silk,
But they have a hopeful mind concerning cream or milk.

Woman is an optimist, I'm satisfied of that;
Man may be humorist, and giggle and grow fat,
Men may laugh and men may sing, while women sit and bawl,
But it doesn't prove a thing, a single thing at all.
Woman is the one who tries to make the bad the good,
Hubby is the one who cries the way no woman would—
Never knew a woman yet, in living's saddest hour,
But was trying to forget the milk was really sour.

THE BACKGROUND

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Behind every mind is a background.

Behind every overt deed and spoken word flow a mass of feelings, impulses and ideas from which these concrete things are chosen.

Men are hanged and otherwise punished for the actual deeds they accomplish; a more just method of judging humanity would be to take into consideration the whole background. Nobody can do this but the God who made men, and hence it is said that His thoughts are not as our thoughts.

And that is the reason why perfect justice can be meted out only at the judgment seat on the last day.

What a strange region is this background of one's self! There flow what strange ghost faces and inchoate deeds! What gusts of feeling, what streams of tendency, what lurking, buried seeds of heridetament!

A certain part of us is known to the world and we consider that part to be ourselves, but behind this there is another part, out of which the visible is created.

Wild and satyr-like lusts, holy longings, prickings of conscience, bonds of obligation, remorseful faces from the past, rosy plans for the future—all mingle in the strange phantasmagoria behind the soul.

Greater than any music that Wagner ever composed is the music that he dreamed, but could not express. Greater than any speech that a gifted orator has made are the speeches he thought of, but never made. Greater than any love which a man has expressed is that reservoir of love within him that has never been able to find expression.

If we would know a man through and through, therefore, we must not only know what he thinks and says overtly, but we must bore through the crust of this into those wells of feeling which have never come to the surface.

Probably the background of any saint is as bad as that of any sinner, and possibly the background of a murderer might be as pure and holy as that of any of us.

As Burns has said:

"What's done we partly may compute,
But know not what's resisted."

COUNSEL DEMANDS THAT MR. DUFF APPEAR BEFORE CUSTOMS INQUIRY CONCLUSION OF ST. JOHN SITTINGS

Calder Is Afraid of Him is the Reported Statement.

WILL DECIDE LATER.

Expect New Features Will Be Developed in Smuggling Traffic.

HALIFAX, N.S., August 31. — (Canadian Press).—Sir Francois Lemieux, Commissioner investigating administration of the Department of Customs, left for Moncton on his way to Saint John last night. The Commissioner made no announcement as to whether or not Mr. Duff, former member of Parliament for Lunenburg, will be called before the commission at the conclusion of the Saint John sittings. It is probable that the decision will be announced when the Commission meets on Wednesday or Thursday in Saint John.

Yesterday morning when the Commission met, R. L. Calder, K.C., counsel, asked that after the Saint John sittings are concluded, the Commission return here for the purpose of examining Mr. Duff. He did this, said Mr. Calder, because he was informed that Mr. Duff had stated in Lunenburg County that Commission counsel "were afraid to call him on account of the information he might spill."

"I have no other recourse, in view of this statement, both for my own sake as well as for the sake of the Commission, to make application to Your Lordship that after the sitting in Saint John this week we return here Monday and take up all matters referring to Nova Scotia, no matter who may be concerned in them," said Mr. Calder: "and I suggest and trust that in the interim, if there be any information in the possession of Mr. William Duff, he will serve his country by communicating that information to me, whereupon I undertake to call all necessary witnesses and to put all the facts before Your Lordship."

Sir Francois asked that he be furnished with an affidavit by the person who had heard Mr. Duff make the remark attributed to him. This Mr. Calder agreed to do. Sir Francois decided to take the application of counsel under consideration.

The sittings at Saint John may develop some new feature in view of the alleged smuggling of goods across the Maine-New Brunswick line. The Nova Scotia hearings were occupied with a consideration of the liquor smuggling problem, to the almost complete exclusion of any other form of illicit traffic. A little evidence in regard to the smuggling of cigarettes was gathered. While the smuggling of liquor is a problem in New Brunswick, there is also the land smuggling from Maine to Canada to be investigated. The sittings at Saint John will probably occupy the balance of the week.

NEW LOCK USED TO BAR PEOPLE FROM CHURCH

Presbyterians Find Beaverton Edifice Has Been Strongly Locked.

NO PERMISSION.

United Church Leaders Say They Authorized No Service in Buildings.

BEAVERTON, Aug. 31.— Continuing Presbyterians of this district went to the old Stone Church on Sunday to hold an advertised service, and found the way to worship barred by a brand new lock which had been placed on the door at the order of Frank W. Rilance, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the United Church. Mr. Rilance stated that the Stone Church was now the property of the United Church that the Contiuing Presbyterians had no authority to conduct a service either in the church or on the church grounds without the consent of the United Church Session, and that the extra lock had been resorted to because Rev. A. W. Hare, pastor of the Presbyterians, had told the Stone Church janitor that he (Mr. Hare) woldu have no hesitation in entering the place if he could get hold of a key to the first lock.

Rev. Mr. Hare's version of the incident could not be obtained last night.

Mr. Rilance further stated that the United Church Session, on first learning that the Presbyterians proposed to hold a service in the Stone Church, and had gone as far as to make announcements to this effect, sent the latter body written notice to the effect that no permission had been asked or granted for use of the Stone Church, and that the United Church would be obliged to forbid entrance to the church or grounds for the purposes of such a service.

This service, it appears, was to have been conducted by Rev. J. A. Brown, of Ingersoll. On Sunday the Continuing Presbyterians entered the church grounds, to find their way barred. In their possession was permission from three members of the Cemeterly Commission of the Stone Church to use both the building and the grounds.

According to Mr. Rilance's statements, this so-called authority had not been approved by the whole Commission, and even had it been it would have been invalid, he claims, for such authority can be granted only by the United Church Session. The Presbyterian worshippers, with the church door closed to them, turned to the churchyard, and there held their service. No effort, Mr. Rilance said, was made to resist them, notwithstanding the previous notification that the grounds could not be used under any such circumstances.

Questioned as to whether any legal action would be taken in the matter, Mr. Rilance said "he hadn't heard of any."

ACTORS' CHURCH SCENE OF RITES FOR VALENTINO

Five Hundred Extra Police Hold Back Throngs of Spectators.

SOLEMN PROCESSION.

Awaits Coming of Brother —Will Be Buried in Hollywood.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31. — Farewells were said yesterday to Rudolph Valentino.

While thousands gathered in the streets, the body of the motion picture idol who died a week ago, was carried through New Yorks theatrical district to the Church of St. Malachi—the Actors' Chapel—and there, while scores wept, priests intoned the prayers for the soul of the dead.

Then the body was removed to the gold room of the funeral chapel, where it will await the coming of Valentino's brother on Wednesday, and eventually will be sent to Hollywood, Cal., to be buried among other great of the movie world.

Valentino, who came to this country as an Italian gardener and became the screen's greatest lover, was given a funeral such as is reserved only for the highest in the public regard.

Uncounted thousands — chiefly women and girls — saw the funeral cortege move slowly down Broadway to the church.

Other thousands gathered around the chapel and were held in line only by five hundred policemen, standing shoulder to shoulder and with arms locked.

Mary Pickford, Pola Negri, Constance and Norma Talmadge, Douglas Fairbanks, and others of the stars of moviedom, wept as the solemn voice of the priest intoned the mass for the dead.

In the chapel were only five hundred persons, a motley crowd which ranged from the great of moviedom, down to unknown Italians who could tell of the days when Valentino was Rudolph Guglielmo, a school boy of Castellaneta, Italy.

The casket was carried down aisle and placed in front of the altar. It shone in the dimly lighted and simple interior of the church, the rays of six tall candles around it reflecting against the grey bronze of the coffin.

After the service eight pallbearers lited the casket to their shoulders, and carried it to the door.

The organ pealed forth Chopin's funeral march as the casket passed through the doors.

Suddenly the hysterical voice of a man broke out :"Good-bye, Rudy; good-by, Rudy," and a shout: "It's the last I'll see of you."

The mourners stepped sorrowfully down the aisle. Most of the women were in tears.

Valentino's body was returned to its hearse, and again through crowded streets to the undertaking rooms—the soul it once had contained resting with its Maker.

ENGINEERS TO SUBMIT REPORT

Prepare Document For Improvements on the St. Lawrence Waterway.

BOTH GOVERNMENTS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., August 31 (Canadian Press). — According to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, when the engineers' reports, which are now about completed, have been made to the Canadian and United States Governments, the St. Lawrence Commission and the Advisory Commission will prepare their recommendations to the two governments relative to improvements of the St. Lawrence waterway.

A detailed plan will be set forth for proceeding co-operatively with construction. The association says these recommendations should clearly indicate the terms of a treaty between the two nations. It will be impossible to dispose of the matter in the short session of the United States Congress this winter, the association says, but it adds there is no good reason why the treaty, should not be ready well in advance of the first session of the seventieth congress, December, 1927.

The association is demanding that all candidates for Congress declare publicly where they stand on the St. Lawrence waterway.

Mr. Cooke is one of the sales executives of the Walter M. Lowney Company Limited of Montreal and is in Peterborough with a special staff of salesmen to introduce a new candy to the sweets lovers of this city.

He was highly enthusiastic over the way that people here have taken to his new product and prophesied that inside of sixty days the new candy is going to be one of the best sellers that local retailers have ever had.

"This is certainly a candy loving city," said Mr. Cooke. "We knew that from our past and present sales on Lowney lines and we expected this new bar, which we call Oh Henry, to go big here but it is going over even bigger than we hoped for and I want you to express our sincere thanks to every one of the readers of The Examiner.

Mr. Cooke and his staff will be here for several days and will call upon every retailer in the city during that time.

SHOWER GIVEN.

Miss Margaret Little Is Being Married This Week.

Last evening about sixty young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther, Customs House, George street, to present a shower to Miss Margaret Little whose marriage to Mr. Percy Luther takes place this week. The early part of the evening was spent in song singing with Mrs. Bugg presiding at the piano. Miss Phylils Pink delighted the company by dancing the Highland fling. The surprise of the evening came when a beautifully decorated wagon was drawn in by little Elsie and Dorothy Lemmon, who looked very pretty as a miniature bride and groom. Much fun and laughter followed when Miss Little and Mr. Luther opened the presents and read the verses that accompanied them, after which the company all sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Miss Little and Mr. Luther thanked their friends for their gifts, which were very numerous and useful showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Refreshments were then served and dancing was indulged in until an early hour in the morning.

SYNOPSIS.

"The greatest lover in the world" men called Don Juan enviously, women admiringly; none knowing that his cruelty to women, his lack of faith in them, went back on wings of secret memory to the day when as a child he had seen his father, good Don Jose, trap his beautiful wife, Juan's mother, with her lover, Leandro; whom Don Jose had killed forthright, then banished the faithless wife and mother. Staid heretofore, Don Jose now passed from one orgy to another, schooling his son to cynicism and flaunting all love until laid low by a jealous woman's dagger.

"I know—I know—" Juan had cried at that point in the tale. He himself, realizing what had taken place, had drawn his short sword and leaped to his feet. But his father, still smiling mockingly, had waved him aside, as well as the armed men who had hurried to him.

"Let her go unharmed," he had said calmly. "She interests me for the first time."

"This is my legacy to you," he had said. "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Go out into the world. Take their love when it pleases you. Take it scornfully—and forget."

Strange advice to give a boy of fifteen. Strange enough to make him the famous Don Juan, whom all men envied and all women adored, the greatest lover of all time.

CHAPTER 2.

Love — and murder: luxury — and squalor; beauty and ugliness and cruelty and kindness, all contrasts could be found in Rome in the time of the Borgias, save only contrast for adventure. There was no monotony in the city overlooked by the mighty Vatican.

Lucretia Borgia and her brother Cesare held Rome, and, indeed, much of Italy in their hands. Blond, suave, crueller than anyone else but her saturnine brother, Lucretia played with the lives of men and the fortunes of her country. She hesitated over having a man—or woman—killed by poison only when it seemed that the knife might be more advisable. She had but one weakness, the one through which Don Juan conquered her.

The Borgias rode through Rome, one day in early spring. Their crest was embroidered on the trappings of their horses and those of their retainers. Lucretia's blond hair was held by a net of golden threads in which pearls were woven, and pearls and emeralds were caught in the embroideries of her dress. Behind her rode the falconer, her snow-white falcon on his wrist. Maia, her lady-in-waiting, also rode behind, and Count Giano Donati, her cousin. There was a Cardinal in the train, and there were gallant men and beautiful women; Lucretia had never yet had to fear the beauty of anyone else.

Sunshine glanced from the weapons of the men, and made the women's jewels sparkle, and slipped to the people who thronged the streets cheering the Borgias. One or two knelt, many threw flowers. It was well to cheer the Borgias, if you wished to live. They had enemies but even the faction led by the great Orsini family was less powerful than they.

Cesare Borgia and his sister received the crowds applause with set smiles; Donati's lips curled in a sneer. He was thinking that few men in the cheering throng would hesitate to knife either of the Borgias if the opportunity offered, that many of the women would gladly give Cesare and his sister poison, as the Borgias had caused it to be given to many. That great emerald ring on Lucretia's lovely hand; was it one of those with a setting so devised that it concealed a deadly poison? Probably. More than one emeny of Lucretia's had taken a glass of wine from her hand and died before he could take another. The ring no doubt held death, concealed beneath beauty, just as Lucretia's exquisite face and beautiful body concealed a mind so cruel and unscrupulous that nothing could stand in its way.

Smiling at the thought, Donati glanced over the crowds in the streets, and up the long flight of steps leading to the entrance of a church, his attention attracted by the burst of music that came pouring forth as the heavy leather doors were swung outward. A group of young girls was coming out, chattering softly among themselves, herded together by a white-robed nun. Donati studied them with interest, appraisingly. To him all women but his cousin Lucretia were merely possible or impossible objects for love making.

His bold glance would have swept away, after travelling over the little group, had not one of the girls stepped aside, revealing another whom he had not noticed before, a girl whose beauty was so arresting that Donati drew a breath sharp as sudden pain. His eyes dwelt on her, left her for an instant, were compelled to return. As his horse moved on he turned in the saddle and looked back.

"Who is that girl?" he asked Cesare, indicating her with a jerk of his head.

Cesare thought for a moment, then smiled ironically.

"The daughter of the Duke Della Varnese," he replied, adding, "A follower of our enemy, the Orsini."

Donati shrugged his shoulders, accepted the implication that for a cousin of the Borgias of course the girl was out of the question. Lucretia, moved by a sudden whim and by her hatred of letting any circumstance prove too much for her, turned to him amusedly.

"Cousin, your little fancies must be gratified," she told him. "Shall we include the duke and his daughter among our guests tonight?"

Donati accepted that suggestion eagerly, and Cesare glanced at her with genuine admiration: he knew that she had thought further and more quickly than he had, that beneath her words there was some deep laid plot, like a snake curled beneath a heap of pale green leaves.

The three rode for a moment without speaking. Then a sudden burst of laughter caught their attention. Maia, the Cardinal, the ladies-in-waiting, were staring at a house which they were approaching, looking at one of the upper windows, and laughing uproariously. Maia indicated the window to Lucretia, who, following the maid's pointing finger up the great stone pile, in her turn stared and laughed.

Priceless, embroidered silk and tapestries hung from the sills of many of the windows, from this one as from the others, trailing their colorful length down the grim stone of the house front. On the sill's very edge sat a monkey, holding a bit of frothy lingerie to the minds of such men and women as those in the train of the Borgias, that lingerie told volumes about its owner. The monkey prepared to clamber down the tapestry, and had already started on his way when a woman's bare arm and shoulder were seen in the window, as the owner of the lingerie tried desperately to rescue it.

All the retinue had stopped, crowded together in the narrow street; their laughter and the clatter of the horses' hoofs made the situation all too clear to the woman hidden above, obviously, for she made one last frantic effort, risking giving them a glimpse of her face, and dragged the monkey and his prize back into the room.

Lucretia, highly amused, turned to her maid, and asking "Who dwells there—do you know?"

Maia, still laughing, answered promptly:

"It is the home of Don Juan, my lady."

DENIES WHISPER CONNECTING HIM AS AN ATHEIST

W. A. Fraser Hotly Indignant Over Remark Circulated by Tories.

SEVERAL SPEAKERS

Large Attendance Present at First Liberal Rally in Warkworth.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Aug. 31.—Moving up toward the northern fringe of the constituency of Northumberland, Mayor W. A. Fraser of Trenton, the Liberal candidate, here last night said that in many parts of the riding he had heard of an "underground malicious whisper" that he was an atheist.

"That's the trail of the Tory machine from South Hastings", he asserted. "I've been through five campaigns, and the Tory maching hates me worse than hydrophobia. I suppose I can't run down every report they circulate, but I wish to say here that I am not an atheist, never was and never will be. I was baptized in the Church of England and I am contributing to three Christian churches. The Tories are circulating that sort of thing because they have nothing constructive to offer the people."

Mr. Maybee is a friend of mine and he's a first rate chap. However, when a man enters public life he leaves himself open to criticism for his public actions and for the manner in which he discharges his duty to the people who elect him.

I am opposed to party politics for party power as against the interests of the people of Canada. For example, Mr. Tummon, the Conservative candidate in South Hastings said in Belleville the other night that he had voted against the Robb budget because he was sent to Ottawa to support Arthur Meighen and he did.

That is what I mean by playing politics in the interests of party and against the interests of the Canadian people.

I would like to ask Mr. Maybee if he also supported Arthur Meighen or did he vote for the Robb budget that is saving Canadian people millions of dollars in taxes this year.

The Tories are fond of telling it around that you can't tell where Fraser stands. Now, if there is one thing I pride myself for it is my independene. I know where I am. I am an independent Liberal for the reason that no aggregation or individual, be it a cabinet or Prime Minister could dictate to me as to what I should do that would be contrary to my sense of business and to plain common sense and the welfare of my constituents. I've got my stake in Northumberland. I am in this battle on the nomination of the Liberal party and indorsation of the Progressives, and with your help I hope to hand you a victory against concentrated Toryism. I am a charter member of the U.F.O. of Murray Township because I am a farmer in Murray township. I operate a 215-acre farm in Northumberland and I have other interests here. For these reasons I have no apology to make to anyone for the title I'm running under. What gets me is when you find a fellow like W. H. Ireland, M.P.P. coming into Northumberland and trying to injure my reputation here. He flopped over to Toryism and is nothing more than a ward-heeler. That's Tory persecution and it makes me want to kick back. In the last general election Ireland took one of our scrutineers up to his home, got him drunk and then dumped him at the polling booth. We had to get some one to take him home."

Meeting Was Large.

Mr. Fraser addressed an audience of men and women that filled the hall to standing room. He was frequently interrupted by applause, and on his own part injected a lot of vigor into his delivery.

Mr. John McCubbin, Reeve of Percy township and Warden of Northumberland county presided and spoke briefly with several others who preceded the candidate. An interesting episode was the tribute the meeting paid to Mr. Samuel Black, who it was said, is past his nintieth year and is one of the ancients of the county. He was called to a seat on the platform with the speakers and H. S. Aylesworth.

The Excelsion Orchestra of Hastings directed by A. Shand played several selections very acceptably.

Mr. Fraser assured his audience that if elected he was in a position to devote himself to the service of his constituency at Ottawa. He asked the people to look around, to read the press any day, and realize for themselves how utterly confounded the Conservative "blue ruin" campaign of last autumn had been this year by the conspicuous evidences of prosperity.

"I went into a bank this afternoon with a friend who had $35 in American money, and the banker made him pay over 35c before he could get Canadian money in exchange. That is one of the signs of the times. Today the banks of Canada have $78,000,000 more deposits than a year ago. And I don't mean money just in the bank, as the Tories pretend. It is money on the credit side of the bank balances, and is out on loan to manufacturers, farmers, railways and so on.

Conservatives spent millions last fall to try to convince the Canadian people that Canada was industrially and financially sick and was going to the bow-wows. And the magnates that put up the money were the kind that expect to get it back, not once, but twice over."

However, instead of the dismal ruin they predicted, they are confronted with such prosperity that has silenced them. In twelve months the stocks listed on the Toronto and Montreal exchanges have appreciated $155,000,000. The Massey-Harris stock is paying a dividend for the first time since before the war, and has advanced 100 per cent. in the last eighteen months."

TORIES RALLY IN OTONABEE

Peck Upholds Lord Byng in Refusing Dissolution of Parliament.

R. J. SODEN SPEAKS

In the Town Hall, Keene, last night E. A. Peck and his two supporters, V. J. McElderry and R. J. Soden, addressed the electors of Otonabee. John Wedlock was elected chairman and the meeting went of very quietly.

The chairman in his opening remarks discussed the manner in which the King Government was defeated in the last few days of June and why an appeal to the people was necessary.

V. J. McElderry.

In discussing the Customs scandal he said the fault arose with the Liberals being aware of certain conditions in the Customs department and that they were very tardy in taking action, showing that months intervened between the time R. T. Sparks made his first report and any action was taken. It was this condition which turned Progressive support from Mr. King or today there likely would be no sign of an election. The question before the electors, declared Mr. McElderry, is choosing whether the people of this country are going to condone this scandal or to vote against it and against things that have stained the good name of this country of ours.

E. A. Peck.

As the Hon. Vincent Massey had spoken from the same platform a few weeks before Mr. Peck took up in part the speech of Mr. Massey. He discussed the constitutional question and stated that he did not believe Mr. Massey understood the actual terms under which Mr. Meighen took office. The Governor-General only used common sense when he refused Mackenzie King dissolution for there never was a time in the history of parliaments that a premier asked for a dissolution with a motion of censure waiting to be voted upon. Mr. Meighen accepted office on the pledge from the Progressives that they would help him to wind up the business of the session. So Mr. Meighen was as justified in taking office as Mackenzie King was in holding on to office before, said the speaker.

Mr. Peck then discussed the Robb budget and concluded that when you look into the reductions made they help but a small majority of the people except perhaps the penny postage reduction. He thought Mr. Robb, if he wished to bring down a budget that would help the great majority of the people, would have taken the duty off clothing. In the auto reduction Mr. Peck said the only question that arose in his mind was whether the auto industry could withstand such a reduction. The speaker explained that the old age pension bill was passed by the House and thrown out in the Senate, so as some agreement could be reached with the different provinces concerned as they had not been consulted in the matter.

Mr. Soden.

For a considerable length of time dwelt on the question of manufacturing the raw material in Canada and not shipping it out of the country to be manufactured so in this way build up home industry and keep the Canadians in Canada. He also characterized the big trade balance as a loss to the country for this balance was brought about by millions of dollars worth of raw material being shipped out of the country. He dwelt at considerable length on the wheat and coal question emphasizing the fact that Alberta coal should be shipped to Ontario and Quebec. He spoke about sixteen dollars a ton but a member in the audience told him that it was laid in Keene last winter for eleven dollars a ton.

STEEL BRIDGE CONTRACT LET

Percy Township to Replace Wooden Bridge Recently Destroyed.

DAMAGE CLAIM

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Aug. 31.—The Evans bridge below Norham which collapsed last week with the steam engine of George Palmateer's threshing outfit will be replaced with a steel structure at a cost of $1575. Percy township council held a special meeting at the bridge Saturday afternoon and let the contract to the Ontario Bridge Company. The cost is equivalent to 11-2 mills on the municpal tax which has already been struck for this year.

Percy Council is congratulating itself upon its action last spring in protecting the municipality against loss through damage claims by taking out a policy with the Globe Indemnity Company. As a result of the destruction of the old wooden bridge notice of claim against the township has virtually been given by Mr. Palmateer. No one was injured in the accident, the driver having escaped with nothing more than a "ducking" in the stream. The engine weighed less than ten tons, otherwise the Council could take action against the owner.

The concrete piers of the old bridge will serve for the new one which will be a 35-foot steel span with concrete floor.

and we are investing annually overseas at the rate of a billion a year. As this goes on, our interest in world peace becomes more and more insistent. Where our treasure is, there our hearts will be also. We can maintain the form of political isolation, but the fact is that we daily becoming, not merely entangled, but interwoven economically into the world fabric. Our enormous wealth demands this avenue of opportunity, our industries must have access to the raw materials of the world, our producers must have a world market, and these necessities are of reciprocal advantage to us and the rest of the world.

"The wisest thing that has been said by any responsible American on the whole subject of interallied debts was said by Mr. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, when he appeared before the senate committee in connection with the Italian debt settlement, to the effect that 'a prosperous Europe would be worth far more in dollars and cents to the United States than any possible returns from debts.'

Suggests Cancellations

"Every country in the world has had the experience of a vast and hopeless debtor class, and has realize that every so often it is necessary to wipe off the slate and start afresh, as in a scriptural year of jubilee. This releases the energies of men, restores hope, cures political disorder, and gives life a fresh start. The analogy applies perfectly to the present international situation. The United States needs, not dollars, but a confident, prosperous and peaceful world for its industrial and commercial operations. That condition cannot be brought about so long as we continue to exact payments up to the capacity of the debtors to pay."

OBITUARY.

CHARLES HANES.

MARMORA, Aug. 31—News was received in town on Friday evening that Charles Chester Hanes, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Hanes, had passed away that morning in Detroit. Besides his parents, deceased leaves to mourn his loss, three brothers, Will, Rex and Harvey and three sisters, Martha, May and Merle. The funeral took place in Detroit on Saturday afternoon from Northrop's undertaking parlors.

GEORGE McCAGUE.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 31.—The death occurred on Wednesday morning, August 25, of George McCague at his late residence, Ridout street, Port Hope.

The late George McCague was born in Emily township on September 19, 1872, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David McCague. He was raised and educated in that township, residing on a farm on the third line of Emily until six years ago when he removed to Port Hope, where he was engaged as agent for the Cockshutt Implements Company and De Laval Separators, and widely known throughout that district.

He was a member of Omemee Masonic Lodge and of Mount Pleasant Canadian Order of Foresters, and an adherent of the United church in Port Hope.

He was married some twenty-three years ago to Alberta Boyd of Emily township, who, with one son Stuart, survives; also four sisters, Annie, Emma, Agnes and Mrs. J. A. Macdonald and one brother Charles all of Vancouver are also left to mourn his loss.

The funeral was held from the family residence, Port Hope, on Friday afternoon and was very largely attended.

The remains were interred in Emily cemetery where a large number of old neighbors gathered to pay their last respects.

WEDDING BELLS.

DOAK—NESBIT.

MILLBROOK, August 31.—A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Anglican Church, Blackstock, at high noon, on Wednesday, August 25, when Mabel E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Nesbitt, of Nestleton, became the bride of Mr. Robert A. Doak, of Windsor, eldest son of the late Mr. R. J. Doak and Mrs. Doak, Millbrook, Rev. P. G. Powell officiating.

The church was attractively decorated with late summer flowers, and while the invited guests included only the immediate relatives of both families, other interested friends had gathered until every seat was occupied.

The bride, who entered the church leaning upon the arm of her father, looked charming in a dainty wedding gown of pastel blue georgette over a satin slip of a delicate shade of coral pink, tiny pink rosebuds being effectively used as trimming. Her only ornament was the groom's gift, a handsome rope of pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, lily of the valley, and maiden hair fern. A large picture hat of black velvet completed the becoming costume.

The bride was attended by Miss Norma Lindsay of Lindsay, who wore peach georgette, with picture hat of black velvet, and carried pink roses. Mr. Reg. I. Fallis, Millbrook, was groomsman.

Miss Malcolm, of Port Perry, the bride's cousin, played the wedding march, and during the signing of the register, Miss Laura Morton, of Bethany, sang very sweetly, "Because."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and later Mr. and Mrs. Doak left by motor on their wedding trip to Muskoka. Upon their return they will reside in Windsor.

The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, including fine china, silver, cut glass, daintily-embroidered linens, etc., showing the esteem and affection in which they are held by a large circle of relatives and friends.

Among the relatives from Millbrook who attended the wedding were the groom's mother, Mrs. R. J. Doak, Mr. and Mrs. Bolton Price of Orillia, Master Albert Doak, Mrs. H. Mulligan.

CHURCH RE-OPENED.

Rev. R. T. Richards Is Special Preacher at Oak Heights.

COBOURG, Aug. 31—The services at Oak Heights United Church last Sunday were of a very interesting character, it being the reopening after the decoration of the church. Rev. R. T. Richards of Mark street United Church, Peterborough, preached both morning and evening to large and appreciative congregations. He chose for the subject of his morning discourse "Christ as a Pioneer of Christianity," and the title of the evening sermon was, "He Saved Others." Both displayed thorough preparation, and the silence during the delivery of these showed that they were received in the spirit in which they were given.

Two special anthems were rendered by the choir and each was sung with much excellence. "Jerusalem, the Golden," the morning anthem, had a catchy melody that captivated the audience, and "I Will Extol Thee," the evening song, delighted all. Mrs. J. F. Haynes was the efficient organist and it is owing to her efforts that this choir has achieved such outstanding success. The choir in the morning was assisted by Mr. Richard Knight, tenor soloist, Norham, who sang exceedingly well. Mr. Frank Haynes, bass soloist from Castleton, sang "Open the Gates of the Temple," and Mr. Lewis Roberts, Roseneath, sang "The Holy City." Six men, Messrs. Cole, Knight, Hornden, Ourtmart, Roberts and Haynes sang a sextette, which was much appreciated.

"I now walk on velvet"

A prominent business man of Montreal, who suffered greatly with tender, painful feet, describing the relief he obtained from Radox Bath Salts, says, "I now walk on velvet."

If your feet are tired and ache like toothache after walking—or if they itch or burn—let Radox Bath Salts bring you FOOT COMFORT AND EASE.

When you put your feet into a hot footbath containing Radox Bath Salts, the pain stops and the tiredness slips away. The itching and burning disappear. The feet feel rested. You walk "on velvet."

If you should have a corn—a hard one on the outside of a toe, or a miserable little one between the toes, this is what Radox Bath Salts will do. The dead skin of the corn will combine with Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn. This protein salt dissolves in water like ordinary salt and so loosens the corn that it may be lifted out bodily, roots and all.

Isn't that fine for you—to get ease and comfort for your feet—to get rid of aching, painful corns—and to walk on velvet—just by resting you feet in a Radox Bath Salts footbath? 60c. Half pound Pink Pkg.

PARENTS TOLD GIRL INJURED

Mr. and Mrs. Colwill Not Yet Informed of Death of Daughter.

WARD'S VERSION.

NEWCASTLE, Ont., Aug. 31 (Canadian Press'. — Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Colwill, parents of Winnifred Colwill, who was shot to death in Toronto yesterday by her sweetheart, Elmo David Aldo, following a supposed suicide pact, are away on an automobile trip in Michigan, and do not know of their daughter's death. Mrs. Richard Allen, sister of Mrs. Colwill, stated today that they had been notified by telegram that the girl had suffered a serious accident. She also said that she could not guess any reason for a suicide pact between Aldo and Miss Colwill, as they had been in the very best of spirits when they were visitors at Newcastle on Sunday and had gone to church together in the evening following a picnic.

Friend's Statement

TORONTO, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press'.—Toronto friends of Winnifred Colwill, who was shot, refuse to believe that she was a consenting party to the double tragedy, in which both young people were killed.

In an interview today, Stanley Gordon Ward, who has been going out with the girl on occasions, stated that Aldo called him up about nine o'clock yesterday morning, asking him to "Quit going out with my girl." Ward states that his reply was that he would have to see Miss Colwill about it, and that Aldo was a fool to phone him. He added "Miss Colwill told me frequently that she loved me, and if she ever cared about Aldo I can only judge from the way she talked, that it was all over between them."

SPAIN LIKELY TO

pected to find a compromise solution.

The developments yesterday indicated that France, Great Britain and Germany had reached an understanding for an attempt at compromise with Spain by arranging what would be virtually a permanent seat, but in the lobbies of the League it is whispered that Spanish willingness to accept a semi-permanent chair will depend largely on what concessions Great Britain and France will make concerning the Spanish demand for sovereign rights in Tangier.

France submitted to the commission a system whereby three of the nine temporary members to be elected to the council could be declared re-eligible at the very moment of their election. This move was taken after consultation with Germany.

Delegates of various countries, however, especially Signor Scialiia, of Italy, attacked the French scheme. He contended, first, that it would permit the proclamation of re-eligibility before, instead of after, the members of the council had served their term of office, and, second, it would permit succeeding assemblies to declare other states re-eligible, thereby frustrating the aim of the French in their amendment.

The Uruguayan delegate, Dr. Guini, asked to have embodied in the re-organization scheme a specific provision that three of the nine temporary seats should be allotted to Latin-America. No decision was reached.

MILK WAGON HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Driver Misjudged Distance and Took Wheel Off Horse-Drawn Vehicle.

NOBODY HURT.

This morning, shortly before 9 o'clock the driver of an automobile on Chemong Road, misjudged the distance in trying to pass a light milk rig, and crashed into the vehicle destroying one of the wheels. The horse was taken out from between the shafts and was found to be uninjured.

IN POLICE COURT.

A young man from Otonabee was this morning committed for trial by Magistrate O. A. Langley, on a charge of having seduced a girl over sixteen and under eighteen years of age. The case will come up on September 30.

BLOW OF FIST PROVES FATAL

Argument Over Small Sum of Money Has Tragic Ending.

INSTANT DEATH.

HAMILTON, August 31. — A few edged words over money ended fatally last night in C. Theobald's barber shop, Upper Hamilton, when Albert Alderson died from a blow struck on his head, it is alleged, by James Wood, Wellington street, who is a well known wholesale butcher. Wood is held on a nominal charge of vagrancy pending an inquest by Coroner Rennie.

From what the police are able to learn, Alderson conducted a retail butcher establishment about five years ago and secured meat from Wood, who conducts a slaughter house on the mountain. This meat, it is said, was never paid for by Alderson. The amount owing was not large. It caused no enmity between the two men, friends say.

Met in Barber Shop.

Both men met in Theobald's barber shop about 7 o'clock last night, and Wood asked Alderson when the latter was going to "pay for that meat." Words fell between the two men, and Wood, it is alleged, struck Alderson on the side of the head with his closed fist. Wood is a man about 40 years old and of powerful build. Alderson, it is said, fell to the floor, gasped twice and apparently died. Some witnesses say that Alderson was struck twice. He did not injure his head in falling, it is said. He was smaller physically than Wood.

Wood then left the barber shop, and rushed to the nearest telephone where he called Dr.T.W.Nancekivell. Wood returned to the barber shop. Meanwhile Alderson had been carried into a rear room of the shop and placed upon a bed. Dr. Nancekivell found the man to be dead. Wood remained at the barber shop until the police arrived.

Both men were well known on the mountain. Wood is unmarried. Albert Alderson was 38 years of age, was married, and also leaves a son and daugther. No bail was granted Wood last night. He retained T. R. Sloan, who said that bail would be asked for to-day.

LOSS ESTIMATES GROW LARGER

Now Reported That 200 Died in Sinking of Vessel.

CRONSTADT, Russia, August 31 (Canadian Press).—Estimates of the loss of life in the sinking of the steamer Burevestnik continue to grow. It is now reported that more than 200 of the 563 passengers aboard were drowned in the foundering of the craft off the exit of the ship canal on Sunday night.

This little island fortress is plunged in deep sorrow as most of the victims of the disaster were residents. They were mostly workmen and their families returning from a holiday in Leningrad. Scarcely a family on this island escaped loss. Up to noon to-day more than thirty bodies had been extricated from the sunken wreck which lies in thirty feet of water.

The excursion steamer leaving Leningrad had just emerged from the ship canal in the thick fog when a German freighter loomed up out of the dark. To avoid collision the Russian steamer was turned sharply from her course and crashed into a stone pier, ripping a great hole in her bow. She sank in less than fifteen minutes.

Investigation shows that the Burevestnik had only one lifeboat and 150 life belts for 536 passengers.

WORKERS SOUGHT FOR HARVESTING

More Men Needed in All Parts of Prairie Provinces.

WINNIPEG, August 31. — The great demand for harvester workers in the fields of Western Canada has resulted in higher wages this year, especially in the Provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, where rapid progress has been made during the past week of fine weather in the cutting and threshing of all grains.

The workers from the Eastern Provinces and from British Columbia are eagerly sought, and wages generally range from $4.50 to $5 a day, as compared with $3 and $4 a year ago.

Labor Situation Acute.

While the situation has not reached an acute stage in Alberta, where harvesting is later than in Manitoba and Saswatchewan, the other Prairie Provinces are urgently in need of additional harvesters. Manitoba, with threshing becoming general in several sections of the Province, requires at least 3,000 additional workers, and appeals have been made by city officials for every available man to go to the country and aid in the important work of gathering in the 1926 crop.

An All-occasion Daytime Frock

Because of a flattering jabot and shirred treatment—both new and different—this frock assumes a distinction that makes it the choice of the truly smart woman. There's no denying the becomingness of the graceful jabot which is shirred before being joined to the neck of the dress. Shirring appears again at each shoulder, and over the hips, providing freedom of movement and extra width at the hem. The back is plain, and the short sleeves may be lengthened with a gathered extension which is provided in the pattern. A coin spot voile with an effective border design was chosen for this model, but any of the summer materials combined with a contrasting color for the jabot would be equally as smart. NO. 1296 is for misses and small women, and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3¼ yards 39-inch material for dress, and ¾ yard 36-inch contrasting for jabot; long sleeves require ⅝ yard additional contrasting. 20 cents.

Our Fashion Book, illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

MAMIE'S TRAGEDY

"What are you crying about, Mamie?" I asked. "Surely now that you have everything that you want and have been able to borrow twenty-five thousand dollars from Buddy for your musical education, you ought to be happy that he's gone back to Montreal. You told me just the other day you were afraid to have him stay here."

"Yes, I know," answered Mamie, tremblingly. "I suppose I should be very thankful that he has gone, but Judy, while Buddy has gone, his wife is staying on here."

"What's that you're saying?"

"I say Mr. Robert Tremaine has gone to Montreal, but his wife has decided to stay here indefinitely. The night before he left Buddy told me that they had the worst quarrel they ever had in their lives.

"'You see, Mamie,' he said, 'I have never quarrelled with my wife to any extent. She never seemed to care upon how many women I showered my attentions, provided I gave her plenty of money and let her do about as she wished. You, my dear, are the only women she has ever honored with her jealousy. Since we've been in Toronto, some of her dear catty friends have told her that you were here and she accused me of following you.

"'Of course, Mamie dear, I would have followed you if I had known where you were, but I did not and I got very angry because she would not believe me.'

"'But, Buddy,' I told him," said Mamie, "'You told her the truth. I ran away from you and came to Toronto. Did you tell her that?'

"'Yes,' he exclaimed. 'And I explicitly told her that if she would stop long enough to think logically, in the midst of her tirade, that it was she and not I who planned the trip from Montreal here. You see I didn't want to leave Montreal, for I always had the feeling that you were still in the city and of course being innocent of all evil intent, was much hurt to be accused.'

"Oh, Judy, if you could have seen the tender smile of Buddy when he said it. I love him so, it isn't wrong for me to love him, is it? Why, the only time I ever kissed him in my life was when I bade him good-bye the other day.

"I cannot understand how I am going to live without him. That wife of his does not want him. She just wants his money and his name.

"When he told me about her having decided to stay here I was so angry at her that if he had asked me, Judy, I think I would have gone back to Montreal with him."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON AND MRS. THRALE

The august Dr. Samuel Johnson, the man who commands nine pages in the Encyclopedia Britannica, was the compiler of the first important dictionary of the English language, and a famous author and essayist besides. In these days of dictators, he is also of interest, as he was appointed by popular acclaim in his time as the first dictator of English letters, a post which he kept very efficiently and stringently.

The romance between the literary monarch and Mrs. Thrale, the widow of a brewer, was rudely broken when the susceptible lady fell in love with a poor Italian musician named Gabriel Piozzi, and married him. Dr. Johnson was shocked by the news and at once despatched this angry note to Mrs. Thrale:

"Madam: If I interpret your letter right, you are ignominiously married; if it is yet undone let us once more talk together. If you have abandoned your children and your religion, God forgive your wickedness; if you have forfeited your fame and your country, may your folly do no further mischief. If the last act is yet to do, I, who have loved you, esteemed you, reverenced you, and served you, I, who long thought you the first of womankind, entreat that, before your fate is irrevocable, I may once more see you. I was, I once was, Madam, most truly yours, Sam Johnson."

"July 2nd, 1784.

"I will come down if you permit it."

Mrs. Thrale did not permit Johnson's visit. She was just as angry as he was and answered him a highly indignant letter. This ended their fond connection.

It is strange to relate that when Mrs. Piozzi was eighty and her second husband had gone to his eternal rest, she felt sprightly enough to fall in love with a young actor, William A. Conway. Conway was a failure in life and when he was playing in New York, committed suicide by drowning. Among his effects were found seven of the old dame's amatory epistles.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—(United Press).—Rain has knocked the kick out of the pastel mode during the past two weeks. Most of the light-colored silk dresses spot with rain and demand a cleaner's bill. Thus the new rainproof taffetas are becoming more important as women look forward to the Fall rainy spell.

In England and France these waterproof taffetas have met with great success. They come in all the unusual shades as well as in staple colors. The models so far displayed in New York are of the two-piece variety with jumper, pleated skirt and sash girdle in shades of Chanel red, jungle green and blue. Rainproof taffeta umbrellas and parasols also are among the imported novelties.

"Rust" is one of the newest Fall colors and a dull shade of amber, listed under the rust colorings, is to my mind, one of the most attractive shades one could wish for. A lovely afternoon frock of this shade is made of amber silk crepe with three tiers of amber velvet forming the skirt. The velvet is of the exact shade as the crepe and it is repeated on the bodice in deep yoke effect. The tiers of velvet on the skirt are set on with very little fullness since the straight lined effect is carried out.

Two-piece jumper dresses for sports wear are a bit newer if made with a velveteen jumper and jersey skirt. Slate blue, dull greens and reds are prominent in these models.

Purplish reds and blues are numerous among the new street frocks. Wine shades are inclined to be a bit more common than the purplish blues.

Have you noticed how the flappers are raising their waistlines by tying their narrow string belts tightly about their normal waists? There is nothing chic about this manner of pinching in a straight-lined frock. It's a makeshift way of suggesting that one is slender enough to expose one's waist measure. Well-dressed girls are not attempting this flapper mode. When the time comes for the raising of the position of the belt they will go about it seriously and not haphazardly. Tying a tight cord about a dress which was designed for a low waistline causes bulges which are ugly.

ROBERTA

Roberta, the charming boyish name signifying "bright fame," is one of the many examples of feminine names coined directly from the masculine cognomen, Robert. Though Robert can be clearly traced, there is no record of the evolution of the feminine, and it can only be deduced that some parent, disappointed at the birth of a daughter, bestowed the family name upon the girl-child and added the final "a" as a concession to the sex of the infant.

Roberta has a charmingly poetical heritage. Her counterpart appears in the most famous passages of England's early history. The origin of the name was in "red" which accounts for the translation of "bright." Curiously enough, Roberto was popular in Italy after being rejected by England, before its vogue in that latter country became so great.

One of the wild Dukes of Normandy brought it back to England, and numerous earls and nobles seized upon it, establishing its vogue permanently. The dearly beloved Robin Hood, whose deeds are recorded in English ballads, did much toward making it popular. Robin was the epithet by which Queen Elizabeth addressed the two earls, step-son and step-father, who sunned themselves in her favor. Robert of Bruce was the national hero of Scotland, and Robin Lawless was a favorite Irish character.

Roberta is essentially American, though the contraction Bertie, which is the endearment for several other names as well as Roberta, has the real Yankee sound.

Roberta's talismanic stone is the sapphire, which is said to guard her from danger and disease. Tuesday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1926.

Astrologers read this as one of the rarely fortunate days when good luck is forecast for many lines of effort.

The Moon is in a sign promising, indeed, for persons engaged in any sort of public work of a more or less fluctuating sort.

This is a most auspicious time for making plans that improve one's financial or professional standing.

Men in positions of authority should be approached while these aspects prevail and it is said that there will be unusual openings for men who have been well trained in any vocation.

Engineers and men able to accomplish big feats in construction are well directed; they will realize high ambitions

Military men and those able in planning defensive or protective measures are now under a planetary government that foreshadows extreme activity.

Although peace will be preached there may be need of preparedness in maintaining national integrity, the seers prophesy.

Again there is a good outlook for agriculturists who may expect high prices for certain food stuffs.

There will be increased demand for grains and large exportations, if the signs are read aright.

There is a sign indicating extreme mental activity and even extraordinary excitement affecting the group, or national, consciousness.

It will be recalled that astrologers predicted religious dissensions and clashes. Secret holy wars long smoldering are fanned under this sway of the stars.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of rather surprising experiences, which may prove interesting and beneficial.

Children born on this day probably will be high-strung and very sensitive. These subjects of Virgo should avoid heavy responsibility.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Today's talismanic gem and the natal stone are the same—the turquoise. In ancient times few women wore it, but we are assured by the legends that it may be worn if it keeps its blue color; if it turns green, one should discard it.

According to the ancients, it drives away evil and brings good fortune to those who can wear it and keep it blue. It is said that the greatest good luck comes to those who see the new moon reflected in its surface.

White should be worn today. Sacred to the moon goddess, it is symbolic of purity, and is particularly fortunate for young girls.

The little white flower known as the snowdrop, is believed to bring happiness today.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A SMART DAYTIME FROCK

Pam came dashing back into the manikins' room at Madame's earlier than usual this morning.

"Why, it's hardly nine-thirty, and I thought I would be by far the earliest arrival," I said by way of greeting.

Madame's seamstresses and fitters arrive early, but she allows the manikins to come in between nine-thirty and ten, except in the very busy season. Her smart clients seldom come in earlier than ten-thirty.

"I have work to do," said Pam with an important air. "And what's more, I want you to help me."

"Let's have it," I instructed.

"You remember my young friend out West who asks me to design clothes for her?" Pam asked.

"Certainly," I answered. "The crepe frock we all did for her last Spring was one of the most attractive I've ever seen."

"She thought so, too." Pam replied. "That's why she's asking us to do another."

"I love to design clothes for some really appreciative person," I rejoined. "Especially when it's someone far away who doesn't have a chance to see the newest fashions as they come out in New York."

"She wants a simple and very smart cloth frock of some kind that she can wear without a coat as long as the Fall weather is warm enough, and under a coat through the Winter," Pam explained. "You know she can't afford many clothes, so she likes to get something really smart and very advanced in style, without being extreme."

Pam and I began work on the design, and the dress we sketched is such a really stunning model that I am saving it here in my diary, as something typical of the smart tailored simplicity of the present Fall season.

To begin with, the material is tan wool crepe, which I think is one of the smartest mediums for a Fall daytime frock. Wool crepe is one of the favored fabrics of the French, and they choose well.

The back is perfectly straight, and the front is seamed and pleated in a most attractive way. The collar and cuffs are of antelope, and they could also be of batiste, with a few extra sets for frequent changes.

Daily Short Story

A DASH OF RED

"Would you wear it—if it were yours?" Maria asked, scowling faintly at the thing she held up—a long cloak, ever so warm, ever so soft, of the richest, royalest red.

"Would I!" Jasmine gasped, half extending her eager hands, then dropping them in shame as she caught Maria's grin.

"You could wear it," Maria went on. "But, patience knows, you're like enough to run wild in safe wear—brown, or black or dark blue. Think I'll either sell this thing to Peggy Smith—she sells to all sorts—folks we wouldn't know. Else dye it! I like such pottering—and the cloth would take 'most any color—"

"Don't! Please! I love it so—just as it is. Keep it—let me come and look at it. You—you don't need the price of it—not any more than you need the coat."

"Seems like you don't ever remember the poor heathen," Maria said loftily. "Five dollars ain't much, I know—that's every cent Peggy Smith 'd give for it—but at least it'd show a willin' mind, a thankful and contrite heart—"

Maria yearned for the red coat even more than Jasmine did, but the same acid common sense that had made rich Cousin Emily give away the garment, had shown Maria that it turned her sallowness livid. Emily gave Maria her tiny income upon condition of never seeing her, nor having her birthdate recalled. Thus, unwittingly, she made possible the Lewis menage. Jasmine owned the cottage with its garden, paddock, and fragment of orchard, but, lacking Maria's money, couldn't have paid much beyond taxes, even with the help of Peggy Smith, and the bees.

In happier old times the main road had run in fair sight of Lewisland, then a spreading estate. The new highway, seeking easiest grades, ran out of sight, but almost flush with Peggy Smith's front door. Hence the shop wherein she bought and sold pretty well everything offered, taking from Jasmine all her comb-honey, biggest new-laid eggs and choicest early fruit.

Jasmine went on to her jumble of hives—and barely in time. Two swarms were buzzing out—she was thankful they were not three. June was month of bee-trouble eke of bee-profit. Swiftly she was armed for the fray—and busier than any whole swarm of bees.

Thus she did not see Maria slithering away, with a fine long box under her arm. Neither did she note her return later—a third swarm had burst out, in fiendish temper, fully determined to fly away. That couldn't be allowed—prevention took strategy and all afternoon, to say nothing of many stings. Jasmine laughed at sight of her grotesque countenance as she went to bed. Sleep brought assuagement for the swellings, but the angry purples were even darker. There was nothing for it but shroud herself in a deep sunbonnet, when, answering Peggy's imperative 'phone call, she scurried to the shop, with a basket of choice fresh honey-comb. Her first glance showed her upon arrival the red coat, agleam in the show-window.

Peggy Smith was mainly eyes and mouth—the eyes keen, the mouth acquisitive. Yet it softened a trifle as she lifted out the combs—she even said less gruffly than common: "Wuth more'n I can afford to pay ye for 'em."

"Even if I take it in trade?" Jasmine began.

Before she was answered a horn honked imperatively at the door and as Peggy appeared a man asked hurriedly: "How much for—that red thing there in the window?"

"Ain't marked it yit—new stock," peggy returned. The man, hurrying in, caught down the box, shook out its contents. Suddenly he saw Jasmine, rather her back—and said eagerly: "I wonder—would you be kind enough to put this on?"

"Shorely she will," from Peggy. Jasmine could but obey, yet managed to shield her face from the stranger's gaze. As the softness enveloped her, he gave a small glad cry.

"I'm an artist," he said. "Here for quiet and color. I'm painting a picture—I hope to make it great—it needs in all this green richness a dash of red—and a classic figure. If—if this young lady would pose for me——" stopping there uncertainly, eager, yet afraid.

Peggy saved the situation. "I know she will," she said. "All she does is to study how to make her livin'—see, she even fools with bees, and gits her pretty skin all blotchy. By tomorrow she'll be just as good as new—and I'll know things about you—whar you come from, what's your moral ratin'—and any other thing I may think it's my business to find out."

"Come along to town with me—all the references you want at the bank," he said jovially—then almost tremulously to Jasmine. "I'm Larry Custis—back to my own country—if I haven't ever seen it before. If—if you will pose for me——"

"I will," Jasmine interrupted.

"And you'll do somp'n else—stay here, keep shop for me, while I go a-snoopin'." Peggy said, almost human in the excitement of going to town in a fine, very fine, car.

When a man and a maid meet in the green country with roses ablow, mocking birds singing day and night, and every wind of balm—when they meet June face to face all in the glory of dew and dawn, you may guess the inevitable result. Suffice it that Mrs. Larry Custis, born Lewis, no longer a bee-keeper, has found in life something sweeter than honey.

LOW MEDAL CHALLENGERS TIED IN CANADIAN LADIES' GOLF SETS

Both Cards Show Eighty-five Strokes for Difficult Course.

ELMHURST COURSE

Vancouver's Hope for Title Has Card of Eighty-Eight.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press.—Miss Ada Mackenzie, Toronto, and Miss Helen Paget, Ottawa, tied for the low medal score yesterday in the qualifying round of the Canadian Ladies' open golf championship, played over the Elmhurst course. Their cards showed 85 strokes for the difficult course. Mrs. Douglas Laird, Winnipeg, turned in a most consistent performance for an 87, and Mrs. Vera Hutchins, Vancouver's hope for the title, required an 88. These were the only ladies able to get into the 80 circle, the remaining scores being exceptionally high.

The scoring was hardly upholding the standard expected from such talent as took part in the play, especially as weather and scoring conditions were about as perfect as could have been wished for. Forty-five ladies teed off in the qualifying round and of this number thirty-two will star the playdown today for the championship. Ada Mackenzie is the present holder of the open championship. Helen Paget holds the closed crown. These two stars are expected to prove somewhat of a stumbling block to a good many in the process of elimination.

Miss Paget, one of the first to finish, got away to a somewhat indifferent start. She took 45 strokes on the first nine, there being sixes marked up at the second, third, fifth and seventh holes. Miss Paget's game improved considerably on the second nine, which she clicked off in an even 40. Only one six at the long and difficult 16th, was marked up to her.

Ada Mackenzie turned in a neat performance, the champion experienced very little trouble. She had all her clubs working well. She went out in 42, with sixes at the fifth and sixth. The inward journey was marred slightly by a six at the 12th and a seven at the 16th. She was back in 43, for a total of 85.

Mrs. Douglas Laird, Winnipeg, gave a very finished performance, especially on the outward journey. She was out in 41, her card showing nothing but fours and fives. Mrs. Laird had only one real bad hole. This was the 12th. She hooked her tee shot to the woods at the right and the recovery was strong and went to the woods at the other side of the fairway. She eventually took eight for the hole. The inward journey was completed in 46.

Mrs. Vera Hutchins, Vancouver, was slightly erratic at times. Her tee shots often got her into trouble. She started off with a six at the first and the trouble seemed to stick with her throughout. She had only a pair of fours going out, requiring 44 strokes. The inward trip was also a 44 with two sixes and a seven mixed on the card.

Miss Margaret Walsh, Toronto, turned in a 91 and the majority of the other Easterners were in the '90 class. It is expected that scores up to 102 will qualify.

PIRATES DIVIDE TWO GAME BILL WITH CARDINALS

Pittsburgh Retains First Place in National League Pennant Race.

HOLD POSITIONS

Phillies Win Shut-out Game From Boston at Quaker Town.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press)—The Pittsburgh Pirates retained first place in the close National League pennant race by dividing a double header yesterday with the Cardinals at St. Louis. The Pirates won the first game 3 to 0, and the Cardinals took the second 5 to 3.

The relative positions of the three leaders were unchanged, Cincinnati keeping hold of second place, by a 3 to 2 victory over the Chicago Cubs who had previously won eight straight.

In the first game at St. Louis Kremer held the Cardinals to two hits while his mates were garnering eight off the delivery of Flint Rhem, the home ace. The Cards made three errors against the Pirates' one. In the second game this was reversed, the Pirates making three and St. Louis one. Despite the fact that they lost the second game, the champions out-hit the Cards 7 to 6. It was a pitching duel between Bush and Haines.

The Giants walloped four Brooklyn twirlers at Ebbet's Field and left the field with an 8 to 2 victory. McQuillan held the Robins to five hits. Philadelphia shut out Boston in Quaker Town 5 to 0.

Seaside cities may soon be fighting their downtown fires with salt water driven through high-pressure mains by electric pumps that are started by the fire alarm system. This type of fire protection is considered to be cheaper and more dependable than the ordinary method of using fresh city water for the purpose.

DECISIVE TRIUMPHS

Johnston Thrills the Gallery in His One-Sided Matches.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 31 (Canadian Press)—Sixteen teams, including the Davis Cup players of the United States and France, came through the opening round of the national doubles championship yesterday without an upset.

Short and decisive triumphs fell to the racquets of the 1925 title holders, Vincent Richards and R. Norris Williams, the new eastern combination of William T. Tilden and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., and a far west tandem of William J. Johnston and the inter-collegiate champion, Edward G. Chandler.

All three teams came through their initial tests in straight sets as did the French combinations of Jean Borotra-Rene Lacoste and Jacques Brugnon - Henri Cochet. The sixth pair of the seeded entries —Lewis M. White and Louis Thalmier of Texas—was less impressive, however. The clay court champions, who last year accomplished a sensational upset in overthrowing Borotra and Lacoste, had to go five raggedly played sets to put out A. G. Watters and C. E. Granger of New Orleans, the southern title holders, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

One-sided matches gave the gallery few thrills during the afternoon's play and most of them came from the racquet of Johnston. He was more decisive in his volleying, more sure of his ripping forehand and more brisk in his court covering than at any previous period of his eastern campaign. Chandler's steadiness and powerful service were also factors in the Californian's triumph over the Leland Stanford Contingent, Lionel Ogden and Cranston Holman, 6-1, 6-1, 8-6.

Glaring errorr punctuated the brilliant net play of Richards and Williams in their match against Lem Baker and J. W. Hubbell of Kansas City, the Misouri Valley champions, which was decided in straight sets at 6-0, 6-4, 6-2.

Tilden and Chapin, although puzzled by the terrific serving of Wallace Scott, were extended at no point of their match against the Seattle player and Theodore McDonald, winning at 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. Both French teams likewise came through in canters, Borotra and Lacoste speeding through a match against E. W. Emms and E. B. Pierce of Salt Lake City to win at 6-1, 6-3, 6-4, and the team of A. S. Dabney-Karl S. Pfaffman falling before the spectacular net attacks of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

Manuel Llano and Claude Butlin, Mexico, defeated J. W. Foster, Boston, and B.G. Pearce, Montreal, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4.

LEAFS ADD TWO GAME MARGIN TO LEAGUE LEAD

Forced to Score Four in Ninth to Win Second.

ROCHESTER LOSES

Orioles' Defeat Brings Bears Half Game of Second Place.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press).—The Toronto Leafs added to their margin at the top of the International League yesterday by taking a double header from Reading at the Queen City. The Leafs thoroughly trounced the Keys in the first game, rolling up a 22 to 3 score. In the second, game, however, the visitors showed fight and the Canucks were forced to score four runs in the last half of the ninth in order to slip out with an 8 to 7 victory.

The Newark Bears were idle, but came within a half game of the second place. Baltimore Orioles, who bowed in defeat before Buffalo 11 to 3. Five runs in the fourth were enough to assure the Bisons the victory. The Bears, however, are close pressed themselves by Buffalo.

Five runs in the last three innings gave Jersey City a 9 to 4 win over Rochester.

BOOTBLACK IS WORLD TRAVELLER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31. — Johnny Rohine is going abroad again. Johnny is 67 years old, and a bootblack from Hagerstown, Ind., but he has already travelled in Europe and the Orient.

This time he is heading for Jerusalem—not that it has any personal attraction for him, but he says he has heard about it all his life and is curious to look it over.

After this trip, he declares he will quit travelling, simply because there will be nothing left for him to see. He is taking $800 and his shoe shining equipment to Jerusalem, expecting to ply his trade en route.

TIGERS DEFEATED

Detroit's Strong Defence Went for Naught Against Pitcher's Wildness.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press).—Chicago and Washington were victors in the only American League games played yesterday. The Senators were at the stadium and defeated the Yanks 12 to 6. Walter Johnson was the winning pitcher in the game which was loosely played. The Yanks used Jones, Braxton, Beall and McQuaid in an effort to stop the visitors. Joe Judge helped the Senatorial cause with a homer with the bases full in the first inning.

The Tigers could not solve Ted Lyons and the White Sox won 5 to 2 at Detroit. Detroit made five double plays but their defence went for naught as Gibson was extremely wild, walking 16 men.

WESTCLOX CHAMPS MERCANTILE LEAGUE

Winners of First Half Also Win Second—No Play-off Necessary.

By defeating the Lock Works 5-0 in a five-inning Mercantile League game at Riverside Park last night, the Westclox proved themselves champions of that League, having won both halves of the schedule.

The contest supplied a good brand of baseball, with few misplays and good hitting by both teams. Carl Wood worked on the mound for the clock makers, and pitched steady ball, allowing few hits, which were scattered, while Westbrook, a youngster recruited just when it was decided not to use "Chuck" Bradley, former Peterboro boy, as he was claimed illegible, filled in well for the Lock Works and showed much promise as a pitcher.

Irvine Bailey, of hockey fame, playing for the Lock Works, supplied the fielding feature, a shoestring catch of a short fly ball after a long run.

Only five innings were played owing to darkness.

The batteries:

Westclox—Wood and Delahaye; Lock Works—Westbrook and Hall.

Umpires—Taylor and F. Whaley.

BAILIEBORO NEW

BAILIEBORO, Aug. 31.—The oat crop throughout this district is very badly rusted. Saturday's rain and wind storm laid the crop almost as flat as if a roller had been run over it. But had it not been for the rust the majority of the grain would have come up again so that it could quite easily have been reached with the binder, as it is the farmers are finding it no easy problem to cut their oats.

The corn and buckwheat is almost up to its normal height again after the storm. The major portion of the fall wheat was safely under cover before the rains commenced so there is only very little fall wheat left in the fields to receive damage, while the alsike has mostly all been put in the barns or threshed in the fields. It is the general belief of the farmers that the rains have done the pea crop very little damage as the crop was still quite green, and only very few fields of the later variety were cut.

On a whole it is considerd that the heavy rains have been profitable to the country, as they have not only helped the potato and root crop as well as pastures and clover seeds, but also farmers have succeeded in getting a great deal of their land ploughed for fall wheat.

The local boys' soft ball team motored to Fraserville and played the Dufferin construction gang a snappy game of soft ball on Friday evening. Unfortunately for Bailieboro boys, only seven players turned out to the game, but they held the Fraserville nine down to a score of 8 to 8.

The Bailieboro battery was Barnard and Barnard, while Simpson and Hamilton played good ball for Fraserville.

The score by innings was:

Bailieboro	0020150—8
Dufferin Construction	2003210—8

Umpires—Waller at the plate and Wood on the bases.

VALENTINO'S STORY OF HIS LIFE

Studied To Be Scientific Farmer But Became Prodigal Son—Slept in Parks—Then Movies Sent To America Where He Lost All His Jobs and Found Him.

By RUDOLPH VALENTINO
(Copyright, 1926, Nea Service, Inc.)

In my early studio days I once tried to sell the story of my life as a scenario. It was rejected as being "too wild and improbable." To have one's life thus characterized by a company which specializes in the most frantic serials was rather disconcerting.

Now as I try to view my own historical record with detachment I can see clearly what the scenario editor meant. The hero of my tale is not at all consistent, like a movie hero. In fact, I am not sure that he is the hero. At times he has all the appearance of "the villain."

Yet again, he seems to have good impulses, which a movie villain never has. Nor does my life run true to dramatic form. It should mount in a straight line to a climax. Instead of that it bounds, like a kangaroo.

A Real Name

I was born in the little village of Castellaneta, Italy, May 6, 1895, and was shortly thereafter christened Rodolpho Alfonzo Raffaelo Pierre Filibert Guglielmi di Valentina d'Antonguolla.

Can you imagine how that would look in electric lights in front of a theatre? My real surname is Guglielmi. My mother was the daughter of a learned Parisian doctor, and my father in his youth was a captain of Italian cavalary.

When I was eleven years old father died and I was sent off to Dante Alighieri College, which corresponds to a high school in this country. I finished the course at thirteen and then went to a military school. But I was more interested in romantic novels than I was in my studies, so the authorities sent me home.

My mother was heartbroken and I was truly contrite because of her suffering. I determined to do better for her sake and enrolled in the Royal Academy of Agriculture to learn to be a scientific farmer. I was graduated with the highest honors in my class, much to the grtaification of my mother.

Following this accomplishment, I again slipped from grace and went off to Paris and Monte Carlo to see the world. After all my money was gone I returned home a prodigal son.

My family decided that I was apt to disgrace them and that it were better that I be shipped far, far away. So my mother scraped together $4,000 to finance my voyage to America, where I was to seek fame and fortune.

I arrived in New York just two days before Christmas, Dec. 23, 1913. The new land was very strange to me and I was very lonely. In order to find companionship I frequented the cafes. This took all my money but I did learn to dance, which was to be beneficial to me later.

When my funds were all gone I got a job as superintendent of the Long Island estate of Cornelius Bliss, Jr. This lasted only a short while, as I showed an irresponsible nature and was courteously dismissed.

My next position was as an apprentice landscape gardener in Central Park, New York City. After a month of this I went to the civil service bureau to get a regular job, but found I was not eligible because I was not a citizen.

I had no job and no funds. I was forced from one lodging to another. I went hungry and slept in Central Park. One hot summer day I walked five miles to the City Hall looking for work. Unable to get it, I walked back.

After doing any little odd jobs that I could get, I finally went to the head waiter at Maxim's and got employment as a dancer. This was really the start of my professional career, for I later obtained dancing engagements with Bonnie Glass and Joan Sawyer.

But I didn't want to be a dancer. Still dreaming of using my education as an agriculturist, I joined a musical comedy company headed for the Pacific Coast, with the hope that California might offer something. The troupe stranded in San Francisco and I was again without a job. I tried selling bonds but without success.

A Movie Venture

At this point Norman Kerry, whom I had known in the east, suggested that I try motion pictures. Norman paid my expenses while I made the rounds of the studios.

No one hailed me as an actor. In fact, it was a long time before I could get even extra work. I knocked about from pillar to post playing villains and small parts until June Mathis selected me to play Julio in "The Four Horsemen."

This was followed by another Rex Ingram picture, "The Conquering Power," and by Nazimova's "Camille." Then came the picture that "made" me—"The Shiek." It was followed by "Cobra," "The Young Rajah," "Blood and Sand," "Monsieur Beaucaire" and "The Sainted Devil."

I then transferred to the United Artists' Corporation and made "The Eagle." My latest picture, "The Son of the Sheik," is a sequel to the earlier desert picture.

FIREMEN BEAT KINGSTON WITH LITTLE TROUBLE

Score in Second Game of O. A. S. A. Play-off Is 11-6.

NEVER IN DANGER.

Winners Hit Frontenac Pitcher Hard, While His Support is Loose.

KINGSTON, Ont., August 31. — (Special.) — The firemen of Peterboro, won the second game of the series from the Frontenac Regiment in the Ontario Softball play-offs at the cricket field last night ,by a score of eleven to six. In the game at Feterboro a week ago the Peterboro team won by sixteen to ten. The Peterboro team won last night's game with very little effort. The local team was away o' color and for the first five innings the game was a regular walkover for the visitors. Up till this period Peterboro had the game tucked away by the score of 10 to 0.

The Kingston team came to life then and in the sixth scored four runs, with one tally in the seventh, and another in the eighth, but this was their limit.

The Peterboro team was never in danger and played rings around the Soldiers who had a night off, and made errors galore. Quite a crowd witnessed the match.

In the third in ings Gimblett playing first, and Dobson the catcher for the visiting team, both ran to catch a pop fly between first and home, and they had a bad clash. Both were knocked out for several minutes, but resumed play. Dobson carried off the honors in the hitting when he knocked out a home run with one man on in the fifth. In the second innings he had a two bagger to his credit, and scored Hall. In the fifth innings the Peterboro team batted all around, securing six hits and a walk. Galbraith hit for two bags and scored Dobson. The Firemen played a very heady game throughout the entire session and well deserved the win. Galbraith, who pitched for the Peterboro team, worked well, and was given splendid support.

Robertson, who was on the mound for the Kingston team, was hit freely at times but turned in a good game, but had ragged support, which turned the trick against him.

Stagg starred for the Kingston team with the bat. He made a three bagger in the sixth which started the rally and scored two men and reached the plate himself on an overthrow to the second base.

Following is the line up of the teams:

Frontenacs: S. Richards 3b; M Reid rf; E. Richards c; Stagg 1b; Burke ss; McCullagh lf; Vanelvey cf; Robertson p; Watts 2b; Montgomery rf.

The score by innings was as follows:

Peterboro iremen ....040150100—11
Frontenac Regiment .. ..000004110— 6

Umpires: at the plate, Liz Walker of Kingston, on first, Batten of Peterboro; on third, Casterton, Kingston.

KINGSTON WINS EASY VICTORY

Capture C.O.B.L. Title For Second Year By Beating Belleville.

SCORE 13-5.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., August 31.—Kingston Ponies are champions of the Central Ontario League and will enter the play-offs for the Ontario championship. The Ponies defeated the Belleville Canadian Nationals by the wide margin of 13 to 5 here yesterday afternoon before a big crowd. The visitors were by far the best on the day's play and landed on the Belleville pitchers for sixteen hits, while on the other hand, Bruce Cairns hurled good ball and kept the locals under control.

The seventh innings saw the winners land on Ouellette hard, driving out six clean hits for seven runs which put the game on ice. Ouellette was yanked in this frame and Goyer substituted, and he allowed four hits during the remainder of the fray. Cairns let the railroaders down with seven hits and struck out five. Teeple made the ebst catch of the afternoon when he stuck his gloved hand up and pulled down a screeching line drive off the bat of Weir.

Kingston team played a snappy game, completing two nice double plays and scooping up hot ground balls to cut the Nationals out of runs. Oscar Hett and "Babe" Sheppard of Toronto umpired and kept the situation well in hand.

How is it determined when a run has been earned off a pitcher?

* * *

It is impossible to have an earned run when the batsman reaches first base on a fielding error or a passed ball.

No run can be earned after the team in the field has had chances to retire the side and failed to take advantage of them.

The following items can figure in the making of an earned run: the player reaching the home base by the aid of base hits, sacrifice hits, stolen bases, bases on balls, hit batsmen, wild pitches and balks.

In all cases these things must happen before the fielding team has had chances to retire the side and failed to do so.

ROSSEAU, Aug. 31.—Fifty years ago yesterday Mr. and Mrs. William Ditchburn of this place paddled down Shadow River in a log canoe—the only craft available at the time—as a honeymoon venture following their wedding ceremony. Yesterday, with their children gathered about them, they celebrated their golden wedding. At home for the festivities were Mayor Alfred Ditchburn and his wife of Gravenhurst; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ditchburn, Gravenhurst; Alan B. Ditchburn, Fort Erie; Mrs. (Dr.) Skinner, Washington; Rev. TRANSPORTATION ROTARY SUBJECT

A. E. K. Bunnell, of Toronto, Speaks About Street Car Systems.

ADVISES PLANNING.

Civic transportation was the subject of the address delivered to the Rotary Club to-day at noon by Rotarian A. E. K. Bunnell of the Toronto Rotary Club. Mr. Bunnell is connected with a firm in Toronto that makes surveys into city planning, city transportation and other civic problems. "Cities have come to depend on transportation. We have had the horse-drawn cars, the electric cars, and the 'buses. In Detroit there are to-day the municipally-owned railway and 'bus lines, private 'bus lines and the jitney lines, all because of political reasons. In Toronto it is all municipally owned.

In smaller cities the competition which has developed by so many people owning their own cars has made the transportation problem difficult. In these small cities the street railway system is a matter of convenience, and this is the reason in a great many cases that the street railway company is only a lap ahead of the bankruptcy court, said the speaker.

Mr. Bunnell then gave the reasons why so many street railways were becoming municipally owned. The charters had been granted twenty-five and thirty years ago, and the contracts then entered into are not applicable to the times and in most cases the companies could not operate under the fares which the contract called for. As a result the service has been cut and conflict developed over the service, routes, and the stops. So these companies came to the municipalities with two suggestions: first, buy us out, or, in the second place, we will give you a service at cost in which the railway company becomes an operating department for the municipality.

The street railway system in Toronto is not tied up to any political situation, and this is why it is such a success, commented the speaker. The commissioners are appointed for three years, and cannot be members of the City Council. The only string the City Council holds is that it may refuse to grant money for capital expenditure.

Mr. Bunnell's firm made a report on the railway system in Brantford a few years ago. They found out that the road had earned enough to pay the operating expense, and up to a few years previous the interest on the sinking fund bonds. So they recommended that the cash fare be raised to 10 cents, for the people who pay the cash fare use the road occasionally because they have to. Secondly, the city could continue to meet the fixed charges out of the taxes. In this case it is not going to come out of the riders but out of the taxpayer.

It was also stressed that if Peterborough was ever expected to grow, that a definite transportation plan should be adopted so that in years to come the lines in the new territory would operate without a loss.

TORONTO, August 30 (Canadian Press).—His Honor Narcisse Perodeau, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, officiated at the formal opening of the exhibit of Canadian woollens and knit goods at the Canadian National Exhibition to-day. His Honor was presented with a coat manufactured completely on Saturday in a Brantford mill.

In an interview the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec stated that commerce and mutual interest would help immensely in bringing together Ontario and Quebec. "In that direction we are making great progress," he said. "Although both of us say harsh things at times, the feeling between these two provinces is immeasurably better than it was years ago." He declared that the bilingual question was solving itself.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

DRAMA OF RUSSIA IN REVOLUTION IS NEW DEMILLE FILM

Master Producer Does Excellent Work in Picture, 'The Volga Boatman."

The great drama of revolutionary Russia has received its first real unfolding under the hand: of Cecil De Mille. "The Volga Boatman,' is a striking and colorful reproduction of the absorbingly interesting events which occurred in Russia when servant became master and master servant.

"The Volga Boatman," originally inspired by the song of that name, takes no sides. It is merely a love story between an aristocrat, played by Elinor Fair and a Volga Boatman, impersonated by William Boyd, enacted against the background of the most stirring events of recent history.

Perhaps the most unique love sequences in pictures are played in a series of scenes when the life of an aristocrat girl is placed in the hands of the rough human mule of the Volga. The girl is given but five minutes to live. What happened in that five minutes is said to be one of the most original and gripping moments ever included in a motion picture.

Humor aplenty is injected into the picture by scenes showing the reaction of the various classes when announcement is made that the old regime has been overthrown. Mr. De Mille has provided a splendid spectacle when the Reds interrupted a gorgeous ball of the aristocrats by the shelling and capture o Yuroslav.

William Boyd is the crude Volga Boatman, servant turned master, leader of revolutionists. Elinor Fair, De Mille's newest "find" is the girl.What transpires in that room, how the unusual situation is built to a climax, provides the high spot of the strongly virile love story De Mille has constructed against the most grippingly dramatic background of current history.

Previous to this climatic sequence De Mille provides pictorial views of the Volga with the huge boats drawn by human mules, and striking pictures of the contrast of wealth and poverty before the overthrow .The two strange lovers are carried through an amazing series of adventures before the story is brought to its conclusion.

De Mille has chosen a strong and striking cast to interpret the tale. Featured are William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Victor Varconi, Julia Faye,Theodore Kosloff and Roert Edeson.

WHAT HAS BECOME OF THE OLD GUARD?

The decline of Hon. W. L. M. King's prestige with his own party is a most interesting political phenomenon. Of the Liberal stalwarts from all parts of Canada who attended the great Liberal convention held at Ottawa in August, 1919, when Mr. King was chosen leader, only a small percentage can be found actively supporting him today. A few, of course, have been removed by death, but many more have quietly stood aside.

Even taking his cabinet as it stood in 1924, before it had suffered the defeat of last autumn, it will be found that most of the old guard who then constituted it are absent from the present campaign. They have no hope of success under his banner. It was know that Hon. W. S. Fielding had tired of the King leadership some time before his final illness and death. And during the recent session it was noticeable that in the proceedings of the Senate old Liberal stalwarts like Sir Allen Aylesworth refused to support Mr. King's pet measures. The retirement of the best known surviving Nova Scotia Liberal, Hon. "Ned" Macdonald of Pictou under circumstances which frankly signify disapproval, is but one of the many losses.

Where in this campaign are men like HON. CHARLES MURPHY, Hon. Raoul Dandurand, SIR LOMER GOUIN, Hon. T. A. Low, Hon. James Murdock, Hon. Dr. King and Hon. E. J. McMurray? Hon. Jacques Bureau is still in the limelight but very unwillingly so. Veteran Westerners like Hon. Charles Stewart and Hon. W. R. Motherwell, have been cast into the shadow by the accession of Mr. Dunning to the position of "right bower," and nothing is heard from them.

For the old guard of Liberal stalwarts Mr. King offers SOME choice substitutes: Messrs. Woodsworth and Heaps, for instance, leaders of the Winnipeg General Strike and Communists who openly prefer Russia to Canada. CERTAINLY THE OLD ARMY OF BLAKE AND LAURIER HAS BECOME A GYPSY CAMP.

ALLIANCE ACT QUITE PROPER

Secretary Says Kingston Elevator People Were Merely Told of Law.

RIGHT PROCEDURE.

TORONTO, Aug. 31 (Canadian Press)—W. M. Rochester, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, issued to Canadian Press a statement in connection with the representations made by Rev. A. I. Terryberry, provincial secretary of the Alliance, that the grain elevator at Kingston should not operate last Sunday, resulting in its closing down for the day.

"The statement says: The action taken by our representatives in connection with the transhipment of grain from one vessel to another through the grain elevator at Kingston on Sunday last was solely to advise those in charge of these operations that their work was contrary to the Lord' Day act and an order of the Board of Railway Commissioners under authority vested in them by this statute, and was quite proper procedure on the part of the Alliance or any citizens."

CIVIC WELCOME TO VISITING BAND

Mayor Holloway and Ald. Denne Convey Greetings at Dinner.

COMES FROM FLINT.

Mayor W. T. Holloway and Alderman Roland Denne, on behalf of the city and council, extended a welcome to the visiting Salvation Army Band from Flint, Michigan, at a welcoming dinner held this afternoon in the Temple on Simcoe street. The band which has been making a tour through several Ontario cities, reached the last link in the outward journey on arrival here to-day from Oshawa, where the vociferous tooting of many automobile horns announced the presence of the visitors from across the boundary line. The Flint band contains several former members of the Peterboro corps.

Mayor Holloway, in officially welcoming the guests to the city, said that Adjutant Ham, in securing a visit from such a well known musical organization as the Flint Band, had proved himself to be a live wire. He assured the visitors that while they would find Peterboro to be a much smaller city than Flint, they would discover it to be an interesting place, containing some fine industrial plants. He was always glad to see the Salvation Army in a prosperous condition and he believed that the local corps was assured of a fine future under the leadership of Adjutant Ham.

R. Denne.

Mr. Denne expressed himself as being glad to say to the bandsmen from Flint: "Welcome to Peterboro." They would find Peterboro to be one of the best and cleanest cities in Ontario. More than that, it was a city possessed of a community spirit.

An outburst of cheering greeted Mr. Denne's recollection that he had been chairman of a committee that set out to gather funds to re-establish the Army in new quarters after the Temple was burned down. It was always a real pleasure to work with the boys of the Salvation Army. He had often come in contact with Adjt. Smith and found him to be a real fellow, possessed of a real community spirit.

When any service was asked of the Salvation Army bandsman, they were always on the job and they did dnot ask how much do we get out of it? It gave one real spirit to work with men like that.

The Salvation Army did work such as was done by no other organization. It reached out and helped the needy and re-established homes. He paid tribute to the labors of former officers: McElhiney, Buntin and Smith, and urged the bandsmen to make themselves at home in the city.

Short speeches were also made by Colonel Hargreves, Colonel Morris, Bandmaster Robinson of the local band, and Bandmaster Broughton of Flint. Brigadier Bloss occupied the chair.

After the reception the visitors were taken on a motor trip to the Lift Lock and other places of interest in the city.

To-night the Flint Band will give a concert in St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Agents of Conservative Nominee, D. H. McFadden, Late In Arriving By Car.

57 NOMINATED.

Twenty-three Straight Fights and Three Three-Cornered Contests.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Two men carrying the nomination papers of Dr. D. H. McFadden, Conservative, to Provencher were so delayed by muddy roads yesterday that they reached the town too late to file the papers, and A. L. Beaubien, Liberal-Progressive, was returned by acclamation to represent the constituency of Provencher in the next Federal House.

Two men travelling by automobile left Winnipeg at 10 a.m. for Provencher, 30 miles distant. Ten miles of the journey was made in fast time over asphalt roads, but from then on the couriers were forced to travel over dirt highways rendered almost impassable by overnight rains.

Nominations closed at the Town of Provencher at 2 p.m. At 3.15 p.m. the men reached the town. They reported that it had been impossible for them to secure other means of transportation when their automobile stalled.

Twenty-Three Straight Fights.

Twenty-three straight party contests and three three-cornered fights will be held for the remaining 26 ridings. In Quebec, Saskatchewan and Yukon Territory straight party fights will be waged for all the seats for which nominations were held yesterday. Three-cornered fights will be waged in Port Arthur-Thunder Bay, Peace River, Alta., and Springfield, Man.

Fifty-seven candidates in all were nominated. These include 25 Conservatives, 17 straight Liberals, 3 Liberal - Progressives, 1 Liberal-Labor, 1 Liberal-Labor-Progressive, 1 Liberal - Independent - Labor, 1 Progressive, 3 U.F.A., 4 Labor and 1 Independent.

These are the constituencies in which, on account of their expanse or inaccessibility, the Election Act provides an interval of two weeks between the nominations and election day. In the rest of the

Students Pray For Rain It Comes and Six Drown

TOKIO, Sept. 1.—When 13 members of the Young Men's Association in Gumma Prefecture went out on Lake Daido and prayed for rain to relieve the drought, a sudden thunderstorm overtook them and the downpour, accompanied by wind, capsized their boat and six of them were drowned. The others swam ashore. The rain was the heaviest in years and the crops were saved. Residents are searching for the bodies of the victims and they are to be mourned as heroes and accorded a public funeral.

MEXICAN RELIEF LOOKS DOUBTFUL

Congress Will Meet To-day on the Catholic Church Appeal.

SUPPORTS CALLES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—On the day of the convening of Congress, the prospect from the Roman Catholic viewpoint continues gloomy for any relief by that legislative body in the nature of repeal or amendment of the religious clauses of the constitution or of the regulations giving effect to the clauses. As matters now stand Congress apparently supports General Calles. In the very nature of politics, a president strong enough to control the country is strong enough to have elected the kind of Congress he wants.

The Catholic episcopate has made no further official announcement of its plans, which heretofore have contemplated going ahead with an effort to have Congress ameliorate the situation, however futile this effort may be.

The business situation seems increasingly depressed by reason of the economic boycott called by the league for defence of religious freedom in protest against the religious regulations.

Keynes Urges England To Drop Some Exports

LONDON (United Press).—England must face the bitter truth and permit about ten percent of her export trades to melt away, according to J. M. Keynes, the Cambridge economist.

"Great Britain is suffering the first pangs of another industrial revolution," he said in an address. "Only two alternatives face the country. One is to struggle on, ineffectually, as we are at present. The other is to allow the least profitable of our export industries—amounting to about ten percent—to wilt away, thus conserving our resources for export industries which do pay.

"The Conservatives are all for struggling on, ineffectually, and now Mr. John Wheatley, the Socialist, has rangled himself with them. This is a mistake. We should husband our resources. We cannot afford to waste them any longer."

SEVEN NATIONS ACCEPT WORLD COURT TERMS

Big Powers Reserving American Conditions For Parley at Geneva.

MEETS TO-DAY.

Each Government Must Separately Act on United States' Reservations.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Steps taken by Secretary Kellogg to obtain acceptance of the reservations imposed by the Senate as a condition of American adherence to the World Court protocol have resulted in their approval by only seven of the smaller nations. The only Governments accepting the American reservations are Cuba, Greece, Liberia, Uruguay, Albania, Luxemburg and the Diminican Republic.

None of the major nations have assented to the understandings imposed by the Senate resolution of last January and most of the forty-eight nations signatory to the World Court protocol have preferred to await the conference to be held at Geneva on September 1 on invitation of Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the League of Nations, for consideration of the American plan of adherence.

Until to-day, when the State Department announced the acceptance of our reservations by the Dominican Republic and Luxemburg, only five countries had taken action on them. The failure of most of the Governments to respond favorably to Secretary Kellogg's overtures appears to put the matter of aceptance or reiection of the stipulations squarely up to the International Conference, which is to open under the League's auspices on Wednesday.

The United States Government will not be represented at that round-table gathering of the powers, Secretary Kellogg having sent a note to Sir Eric Drummond last April, declining participation in the discussion of the American reservations for the purpose of framing any new agreement which the powers represented may consider necessary to give effect to the special conditions on which the United States is prepared to adhere to the protocol.

The Senate gave its consent to the adherence of the United States, Mr. Kellogg informed the League Secretary General, with certain specific reservations. Secretary Kellogg, with the approval of President Coolidge, took the stand that the reservations are "plain and unequivocal" and, according to their terms, must be accepted by the exchange of notes between the United States and "each" of the forty-eight States signatory to the statute of the court before the United States can become a party and sign the protocol.

Secretary Kellogg sent separate communications to each of the forty-eight powers. Under the Swanson resolution President Coolidge is barred from affixing the signature of the United States to the Court Protocol until all forty-eight of the signatories accept the Senate reservations.

This fact has raised important questions which affect the rights not only of those nations as adherents but also the rights of the League Council with respect to that tribunal, and these phases will be considered in the Geneva conference.

The American Government did not object to the States signatory to the statute conferring, as contemplated in the Geneva conference, but, if that gathering shou'd result in any decision to modify the reservations its action could not be accepted by the President, but would have to be referred to the Senate.

THE WEATHER.

Temperature this morning at six o'clock, 39 degree.. Our summer is passing all too soon. It has been a cool one, and excessive heat has been rare. Ninety degrees has not been reached this year, and will not likely be now. The following are a few facts relating to August: The warmest day was the 3rd, with 87 degrees; the lowest temperature was the 31st, with 42 degrees. We had rain on nine days to a total of 3.56. Thunderstorms occurred on 4 occasions. While rain and high winds did considerable damage to crops in this section, the storms were more severe in districts to the west.—W.P.

Boyish Bandit Blushes—Trades Kiss For Bracelet Girl Was Too Nice To Rob He Says, As He Flees

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (United News).—While her escort looked on, Miss Eleanor Sweet traded a boy bandit a kiss for her bracelet and $4.

Just before midnight, John Martin and Miss Sweet were hailed by a bandit who said, "Gimme." "What do you want," asked Martin. "Everything you've got," said the bandit.

Martin surrendered his watch and fifty cents; Miss Sweet, her bracelet and four dollars. The boy blushed into her frightened eyes then he pointed his revolved at her. "Kiss me," he ordered. She kissed him. "Keep your stuff," he said, handing it to her. "You're to darned nice," He ran.

The couple reported the robbery to the police, who found Martin's watch and money on James Murray, 16, an errand boy, who said he was hard up and found the revolver.

EQUINE VETERAN

What good care, good feeding and intelligent methods of driving can do for the preservation of a horse is amply demonstrated in the life history of "Ned," who recently passed his 31st birthday. "Ned" was raised in Otonabee by Michael Fitzgerald, and for 26 years was constantly used in drawing a wagon, after which it came into possession of Roland Denne for use in pulling wagons laden with sacks, as shown in the picture. The group consists of Michael Fitzgerald, who raised the animal, Roland Denne, its owner, and W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., who is greatly interested in agriculture and horse breeding activities in the county.

ADJOURN HOUSE TILL NOVEMBER

Labor Amendment Fixing Date at Sept. 7 Is Defeated.

BY 225 TO 100.

LONDON, August 31 (Canadian Press).—The Government motion that when the House of Commons adjourns this evening it rises until November 9, was adopted by the House to-day by a vote of 225 to 100.

Ramsay Macdonald, Labor leader, moved to amend by substituting the date September 7, in view of Thursday's meeting of the miners' delegate congress, after which, he said, the Government might be enabled to get the two sides together.

Winston Churchill replied that the Government was perfectly free to summon Parliament at any time conditions seemed to make such action advisable.

He Guards Gamblers Gun Carrier's Defence

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (United News)—Former Prosecutor Sullivan advanced a new argument on behalf of his client, James McCurdy, when the latter was arraigned for sentence for carrying a revolver.

"The defendant is employed by the proprietor of a gambling house to act as his bodyguard when he takes to the bank the profits of his games of chance," Sullivan declared. "Also he acts in a similar capacity to protect patrons on their homeward way after they have won large sums gambling in the establishment."

Judge Koenig's response was to send McCurdy to Sing Sing to serve from two years and three months to four years and six months.

PROVISION MADE BONDS EXCHANGE

For New Liquidation Debt With German States.

APPLICATIONS FILED.

OTTAWA, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Provision has now been made for an exchange of bonds of German States, Cities and similar bodies for new loan liquidation debt and drawing certificates, the Department of External Affair was informed yesterday.

The filing of applications for exchange of mark loans of the central German Government, it is stated, has already been completed. For the present, only old holders of State and Municipal bonds, that is holders who have been in uninterrupted possession of the securities prior to July 1, 1920, may file applications. These applications should be placed with the National City Bank, 60 Wall Street, New York, before November 1, 1926. Holders who do not file applications before that date, it is pointed out, will lose the special privileges of "old holders."

Due notice of the date upon which holders of bonds acquired after June 30, 1920, should file applications, will be announced later. It is intimated, however, that as special regulations have been issued regarding the exchange of new holdings of State loans, owners of such bonds who acquired their holdings after July 1, 1920, should apply now to the Special Commissioner for German Public Loans, 42 Broadway, New York, for detailed information.

A Special Commissioner established an office in Montreal earlier in the year in connection with the exchange of mark loans of the Central German Government; but as Canadian holdings of local German loans are not considered to be extensive, the applications will be handled as indicated, through the New York office.

GARAGE OWNER IS WOUNDED BY THREE GUNMEN

Tried To Jump on Running Board of Shopbreakers' Car.

MEN ESCAPE.

Country Around Port Perry Is Being Searched By Provincial Police.

PORT PERRY, September 1. Canadian Press. — Harold Archer, aged 30, a local garage proprietor, was wounded at an early hour to-day when he jumped on the running board of an automobile in which three gunmen made their escape from the scene of a shop-breaking expedition. While on the automobile Archer was shot in one of his legs. He is making good progress towards recovery at his home here. The three gunmen are still at large despite an all night search by posse armed with rifles and shot guns and revolvers. It is thought that the automobile went north on the road to Lindsay.

The man hunt is still proceeding. Provincial police headquarters in Toronto were notified early to-day and Inspectors John Miller and A. R. Elliott and three constables, armed with rifles, have been despatched from Toronto to take part in the search. The trio are thought to be armed and all precautions are being taken. The license number on the car was 22-828, which is owned by James Williams, Toronto, according to advices from that city, but the Williams' car is in a garage.

Hiding in Wood

Reports reaching here from the posse seeking the whereabouts of the three men who shot and wounded Harold Archer, local garage proprietor at an early hour today, state that the trio have been traced to a wood near Stouffville, Ontario, where they are now said to be hiding. The trail from where the trio left their automobile upturned in a ditch just outside Port Perry on the Lindsay road was followed into Uxbridge, ten miles from here, then on to Goodwood, and then into the bush near Stouffville.

CUSTOMS SHOW MONTHLY GAIN

Have Increased Every Month This Year—Gain Over Last Year.

TORONTO FIGURES.

The customs receipts at the port of Peterborough have shown a steady increase every month this year over the same month last year, and in most cases the month has been more than the previous month. For August the recipts were $129,608.01, and for August, 1925, $103,583.01, an increase of $26,048.38, and an increase of $3,981.65 over the month of July, 1926.

TORONTO HAS INCREASE.

TORONTO, September 1. Canadian Press. — Toronto customs figures for the month of August, 1926, srow a gain of $521,121 over August, 1925, according to statistics made public by J. H. Bertram, clerk of customs to-day. The amount in August, 1926, was $5,124,685, while that for the corresponding month of last year was $4,597,564. Mr. Bertram could not ascribe the half million dollar gain to any one particular thing.

PRESIDENT HEARS K. OF C. DELEGATES

Listens Patiently To Their Request For Help For Mexico.

PAUL SMITHS, N.Y., Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—The President is said to have listened "kindly and patiently" to the Knights of Columbus' delegation, headed by James A. Flaherty, Supreme Knight, which conferred with him on the religious situation in Mexico.

The President was told that the Knights of Columbus do not ask intervention in Mexico by the United States or the lifting of the embargo on arms shipments into Mexico, but they desire the exercise of whatever good offices can be extended under International law to ameliorate conditions.

HALIFAX WOULD BE A GRAIN PORT BY BUILDING TWO LOADING BERTHS ROYAL COMMISSIONERS ARE TOLD Present Elevator Has Room Now For Only One Vessel.

ACCOMMODATION BAD.

Represetnatives of Grain Pool Witnesses at Maritime Hearing.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press)—Halifax may become a grain port shipping some five to six million bushels of grain per season if three loading berths are provided for the present elevator instead of the one berth there now. This was held out as a definite probability by representatives of the Canadian wheat pool yesterday afternoon to the Royal Commission investigating Maritime Provinces matters. The port as provided for now, however, was presented in very drab colors so far as grain was concerned. It had no sufficient berth accommodation, steamer space was lacking, the experience of the pool in shipping some million bushels through there in the past year had not been favorable, and it was not known as a grain port.

D. L. Smith, general sales manager, and Albert Clare, traffic representative in Montreal, were the witnesses appearing for the wheat pool and they were subjected to close examination by the Commission Chairman, Sir Andrew Rae Duncan.

Five or six million bushels was given by Mr. Smith as the probable limit for the present to which Halifax could be used owing to the lack of liners making their terminals there. Some seventy per cent of the pool's wheat went liner space, this type of accommodation being especially good because of the small lot buying being done in Europe.

Under questioning by the chairman, Mr. Smith said the pool had gone to Halifax during the present season as a result of the invitation of the Canadian National Railways. No pool grain would have gone there if it had not been for the efforts of Sir Henry Thornton and Vice-President J. E. Dalrymple of the railways.

Chairman: "Did they over persuade you?"

Mr. Smith: "Not exactly that, but things weren't exactly as they should be." An Italian ship had been fortunately secured to take the grain but no attempt was made to ship any more. He explained the risk of heavy demurrage charges where only one berth was available, often holding up ships wishing to load. "It will be very unfortunate for the port if they try to carry on with one berth."

Chairman: "You are going to avoid that port in future if it continues as it is?"

Mr. Smith: "Invariably you will get a tramp at your bid price providing you leave Halifax out."

Chairman: "I assume you are willing to help Halifax providing conditions are improved and overlook your past experience."

Mr. Smith: "Any Canadian port, and Halifax, providing they will do a little more than provide three berths. They might do something in advertising their port to shipowners."

Mr. Smith said the pool would be quite prepared to fill the elevator if three berths were provided. As soon as the first million bushels was relieved satisfactorily it would be immediately refilled. He didn't think five or six million bushels could be exceeded without liner traffic. Halifax lacked such traffice making it a terminal. Further, to successfully operate Halifax as a grain port he thought the elevator capacity should be increased.

Chairman: "In any event it must be a matter of growth."

Mr. Smith: "Yes." He felt sure he could assure the growth under satisfactory conditions. At no time were United States ports considered if Canadian ports were available. However, for every one boat coming to Canada, ten went to the United States.

Sir Andrew Duncan asked what the witness thought about a proposal for the prohibition of shipments except through Canadian ports. The witness thought it would be a national calamity. The grain would back right up to the farm. He had seen more than three thousand cars come down to Winnipeg in a day. With the problem of clearing this through the Lake Ports and with a shortage of tonnage in Montreal, the result could easily be foreseen.

Chairman: "Would it be possible for the Canadian National to influence grain to Halifax rather than to Portland?"

Mr. Smith: "Not the slightest unless they could guarantee boats."

Chairman: "If the shipping condi-

Puppy Love Is Cheaper Where Pups Are Babies

BERLIN, Sept. 1 (Associated Press).—Recognizing with some limitations that modern mother love is often showered upon poodles instead of babies, the Board of Aldermen has reduced by 75 per cent. the tax on those dogs "which in the hearts of their keepers supplant the affection that under normal circumstances would be lavished on human beings."

Pups owned by spinsters or by childless couples over 50 years old are to be taxed $4 a year. Other less useful hounds, are to be assessed $15. But, the new ordinance says, one dog is enough for petting purposes. For a second pet the owner must pay $30 a year, for a third $45, and each additional $60.

EIGHT KILLED 200 INJURED

Hundreds of Homes Destroyed By Quake in Azores.

AID NEEDED.

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Eight persons were killed and 200 injured by yesterday's earthquake on the Island of Fayal in the Azores, the Governor of the Horta District reported in a message today. Four hundred houses were razed in the vicinity of Flamengas by a series of short shocks.

Other messages from the Azores reiterate requests for aid. The Civil Governor of Fayal urgently asks that army tents be sent for people rendered homeless. Warships are leaving today with aid.

A message sent by the Mayor of Horta to the authorities in Lisbon said the aspect of Fayal Island and the sufferings of the victims were terrible to witness. The catastrophe was beyond description.

In Horta most of the 8,000 citizens spent the night in the public squares. Large cracks have appeared in the streets and people are afraid to return to their homes in fear of renewed shocks.

Flamengos, a labor district, was totally destroyed.

That only eight deaths are reported is attributed to the fact that the quake occurred late in the forenoon after the inhabitants had either gone to work or to market.

GERMANY PAYS DEBT IN GOODS

Fifty-Three Per Cent. of This Year's Total Paid In Merchandise.

UNDER DAWES PLAN.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—Germany met nearly 54 per cent of her reparation payments in the second year of the operation of the Dawes plan, ending yesterday, by means of deliveries of materials. This will be shown in the report of S. Parker Gilbert, agent-general for reparation payments, to be published on November 15.

The total payments amounted to 1,220,000,000 gold marks (about $290,360,000), and the deliveries in kind, (56,800,002 gold marks (about $156,318,000).

The goods delivered to the Allies varied from coal to lion traps, from dvestuffs to kitchen ranges, from circuit breakers for motorcycles to Rosaries, from candy packing machines to Bavarian hops, from bottle washers to trout spawn and from cigar moulds to cotton gins.

According to the figures, Germany during the second year turned over to the agent-general on account of her reparation payments almost 1,167,000,000 gold marks.

Of the sums thus at the disposal of the agent-general of reparation, 1,063,000,000 gold marks were expended for creditor nations, of which France got approximately 567,000,000, Great Britain almost 227,000,000, Belgium about 116,000,000; Italy, 78,000,000 ;Serb-Croat-Slovene States, 38,000,000; United States 15,000,000. Minor creditors, such as Roumania, Japan, Portugal, Greece and Poland received altogether 21,000,000.

The remaining 46 per cent. were covered by the following classifications:—Occupation costs, almost 88,000,000 gold marks; reparation recovery acts, 243,000,000; cash transfers, 71,000,000, and miscellaneous, 4,000,000. The miscellaneous classification includes one interesting item—2,100,000 gold marks for the restoration of the Louvain Library.

MAJOR FRASER HELD MEETING

Gives Spirited Address, Aided By Outside Speakers at Campbellford.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

(Examiner Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 1.—The Liberal party in Northumberland last night introduced their candidate, Mayor W. A. Fraser of Trenton, to the electors of this town, who packed the Regent Theatre and gave him a spirited, cordial reception. With Mr. Fraser were the Hon. Vincent Massey, Mr. J. Verne Buchanan, ex-Mayor of Ingersoll, and two prominent manufacturers, Mr. Orville H. Moore, general manager of the Hinde-Dauch Paper Company of Canada, who are building a million dollar plant at Trenton, and Mr. Charles Collins of Toronto, who was vice-president of the Chemical Products Company of Trenton, of which he is now the liquidator, apart from his connection with a wire manufacturing company in Toronto.

Mr. Fraser re-asserted his political independence, although presenting himself as the Liberal candidate with the endorsation of the Progressives. From his reception throughout the riding he expressed his confidence of being elected and promised that at Ottawa he would give the interests of the people of Northumberland his undivided attention.

Mr. Don. Douglas fulfilled the duties of chairman with brief but adequate presentations of each speaker.

Mr. Orville H. Moore said that he was not a politician but a business man, and desired to aid Mr. Fraser because of his exceptional abilities. When the Hinde-Dauch company first considered coming to Canada they were told by C.P.R. industrial officials to go to Trenton and "see Billy Fraser because he's the only live wire in that part of the country."

"I talked with Mr. Fraser only twenty minutes. He then showed me a property in Trenton, and sold me on that proposition in thirty minutes. Our people investigated the town and Mr. Fraser, with the result that we decided to locate in Trenton. He has done a great deal for us, and has helped bring an industry to Trenton. I feel certain that he would not connect himself with a political party that would be detrimental to his business, and he is interested in mining, lumbering, farming, fruit-growing and he has a cooperage business and other interests. With such activities he must be a broad-minded man."

Mr. Moore added a personal note about himself on the cue of statements about opportunities in the United States and Canada.

"I am a Yankee myself" he said. "I came here about sixteen years ago on an option by our president of going as manager to a plant in New Jersey or to Canada. I knew this country because I had travelled through it, and I at once chose Canada and came to Toronto, because of the opportunities I saw this country offered young men. Our company has been operating in Canada sixteen years, and it was under the King Government we decided to build another plant in Canada. You may be sure that we were not afraid of the Government or we wouldn't have undertaken to build a plant that will finally cost a million. I may say that I like Canada so well that seven years ago I became a citizen of your country."

Mr. Moore said that the Canadian people had not been told all the facts about conditions in the United States.

"One of our salesmen a few years ago went over there and applied to three companies for a position. He was told that there were no positions open and was advised to stay in Canada because of its opportunities and future. We frequently get letters from machine operators asking for jobs here.

I have heard that Mr. Fraser has been criticized in Trenton about a strike of carpenters, and I just wish to say that he had nothing whatever to do with it. You know that a man who is good to his father and mother is a good man. I have heard that about Mr. Fraser. His parents are dead, and I know that Mr. Fraser goes at night to the cemetery to water the grass over their graves to keep it fresh and green. From all I know of Mr. Fraser, I trust that a lot of Conservatives will think favorably of him on election day. He will represent them 100 per cent."

Mayor Fraser.

"This is my first time on a platform in Campbellford," was Mr. Fraser's preface to his appeal for the electors' support, in which he said he was anxious that the people should know him and his principles and ideals from this meeting which would be the only opportunity for approach and contact in the brief campaign.

"My friend, Orville Moore, is here because a week ago he asked me what he could do to help me. He offered to sing for me, but I told him I'd be pleased if he would appear on the platform in Northumberland County.

"I assure you that you are going to hear a lot more about me in this fight. Some of it has already started. They are absolute fabrications of the Tory machine, and not very complimentary."

Mr. Fraser sketched the events leading up to his nomination and aceptance. Meeting a group of Liberals in Colborne the day he had promised to give his decision as to whether or not he would accept, Mr. Fraser said: "One of the men at that meeting who I see on this platform said I'd be a piker if I didn't take it. I said, 'Nelson (J. N. Stone), nobody ever called me a piker. Let's take off our coats and get into it.' And I'm in this to win as the representative of all the people who are opposed to Meighenism. I have many friends who are Tories. My closest friend is a Tory. He holds a high position as a director of one of the industrial companies of Canada. He came to me a short time ago and said, 'We don't agree in politics, but I'll do you all the good I can. I want to see you elected.'

"Perhaps the average decent Tory doesn't realize it. They haven't had an opportunity of digging into and seeing what's behind Meighenism. Those mean, malicious stories the Conservative machine is circulating are the last cowardly wails of a cracked and broken machine. They start that back-biting, behind-the-fence stuff when they're licked, and they're licked now and they know it."

Recently in his campaigning Mr. Fraser said he saw a farmer milking cows, and on going into the yard and offering to milk, he recognized and was recognized by the farmer, who said they hadn't met in 25 years when both worked for 40 cents a day for a lumber concern.

"'I didn't vote last time,' he told me," Mr. Fraser continued, "but I'm going to vote this time for you and so is my wife." I can feel the tide with me. I was first sure of it last Friday. As a citizen of Northumberland, I have over $100,000 invested in farming and manufacturing in this county. I ask you for your support, and if you elect me I will give my best in the interests of Northumberland County and the Dominion of Canada. Let us understand one another. My principles are the same as they will be four years from now. If for some reason the Liberal party should bring in something I think wouldn't do you any good, I'll come back and tell the electors of Northumberland County to get some one else. I don't seek the $4,000, I'm not looking for publicity, but I have taken on this proposition and I'm going to see it through in the interests of this country. I am a protectionist and a manufacturer. I not only worked for 40c a day as I told you, but I have sat in the board room of the Manufacturers' Association in Montreal. I know how I worked for 40c a day and how some of them work for a million a year. The tariff should not be a political football. It should be based on scientific investigation of the conditions any company has to meet, their books should be laid open, their competition should be known and all phases governing commerce and industry should be considered in setting a Customs tariff."

Mr. Fraser alluded to the phrase, "Canada for Canadians," in Conservative propaganda.

"Does the machine behind Meighen realize that statements like that are an insult to the great mass of the Canadian people? I want to tell them I am just as good a Canadian as Arthur Meighen and his satellites.

"There will be no personalities by me in this election. I was a friend of Mr. Maybee's three weeks ago, and I hope I am yet. So we are on common ground. I appeal to the electors on the facts of the case. I have nothing else to offer. But when the Hastings County Tory machine slips in and tells you I am an atheist, a carpet-bagger, that's not playing the game. They try to tell you I am trying to ride four different organizations. The Farmers' Sun handed me a compliment, although they didn't intend it that way, in an article entitled, 'Political Versatility.' I know where that came from, and I might add that I have just got a letter from Mr. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers, apologizing for that article.

"All I ask for is fair, square treatment. I hope you will consider whether it is in your interests to have a lower or a higher tariff, whether you are better off with a surplus as a result of the operations of the government of Canada or with an increased debt, better off since the Robb budget went into effect or before.

"After September 14 your interests will be mine. If Campbellford should have a post office you can rest assured I will move heaven and earth to get it. I say that in all seriousness, as when Orville Moore came to Trenton I said, 'We need that factory; we'll get it'."

Hon. Vincent Massey.

"In Mr. Fraser you have a candidate who possesses in a high degree the qualities we want to see in public life: energy, enthusiasm, and broad experience. He believes in a clean, hard fight. At the Liberal headquarters in Toronto there is a list of constituencies in Ontario which are listed as sure to go Liberal, and Northumberland is on that list."

Of the Conservative advertising Mr. Massey referred to the slogan, "Vote Conservative and avoid another election."

"The stability of government Mr. Meighen talks about is not to be brought about by voting Conservative. Northumberland voted Conservative last October, and we've had a new election in eleven months. If it does that again we may have another in shorter time. I defy you to look over the electoral field and try to estimate the result and come to the conclusion that Arthur Meighen cannot win this election. Give a working majority to the only party that come back; that's the Liberal party. Look over the west and you find no three-cornered fights in Manitoba that helped the Conservatives last year. Meighen candidates are being fought single-handed. The Maritimes don't want high tariff. This was shown by the statement by Mr. McCurdy, a Conservative, a short time ago, before the commission now travelling in the east. It will be good business for both town and country if you vote Liberal on September 14."

The Robb budget, the withdrawal of the "blue ruin" cry, the evidences of prosperity, the inclusion of Patenaude in the present Cabinet, and his anti-public ownership statements in reference to the National Railways were topics discussed by Mr. Massey as reasons why the Liberal candidate, Mr. Fraser, should be elected.

STONEY LAKE NEWS

Mr. John Bethune, Mr. Frank Creswick, Mr. Jack Harrott and Mr. John Scott, all of Toronto, who have been visiting Mr. Harry Grubbe at his island in Upper Stoney Lake, have returned to Toronto.

Mr. Arthur Wright, Mr. Denison Taylor, Mr. Kenneth Scott and the Baron de Ropp are week ending with Mr. Harry Grubbe at Haselwood Lodge, Stoney Lake.

Memorial.

At the last church service of the summer at Crowe's Landing two brass collection plates were dedicated by the Rev. Mr. Davis, of Cleveland, Ohio, "To the glory of God, and in loving memory of Robert William Radcliffe Grubbe and of his beloved wife, Ada Louise Haselwood Wrighton, of Haselwood Lodge, Eels Creek, Stoney Lake." The hymns, "Abide With Me," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Saviour Again to Thy Dear Name We Raise," were sung. These being the favorite hymns of the Mr. and Mrs. Grubbe, and Mr. Davis read Kipling's—

"E'en as they walked that day to God
So walked they from their birth,
In simpleness and gentleness
And honor and clean mirth."

The plates were of heavy brass, plain in design, with the inscription on the borders, and were given by Mr. Harry Grubbe, second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. W. R. Grubbe.

WEDDING BELLS.

HETHERINGTON—WALKER

MILLBROOK, Sept. 1.—A wedding of local interest took place this month at Oven, Alberta, when Ruth Leah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Walker, became the bride of Mr. J. Dunwoody Hetherington, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hetherington, Millbrook.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly gowned in silver brocade satin, with conventional veil and orange blossoms, and carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. The gift of the groom, a handsome rope of matched pearls, was the only ornament worn.

The bride's sister, Miss Gladys Walker, was bridemaid and wore a dainty gown of peach georgette, her bouquet being of sweet peas and gypsophil. Mr. Robert Nesbitt was groomsman.

While th register was being signed Mr. Tolland sang "Until", Miss Harriet Peterson presiding at the piano during the ceremony.

Immediately the marriage was concluded a reception was held, the bride's mother receiving with her, and afterward the wedding luncheon was served. The house was tastefully decorated with late summer flowers for the occasion. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a ring with aquamarine setting, to the pianist a carved necklet of Chinese design, and to the best man gold cuff links.

About forty guests were in attendance, and many beautiful gifts were received among these being several from friends at a distance.

The wedding trip was by motor to Banff and Calgary, and upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Hetherington will reside at Sunnybrook Alberta.

MARTIN—HUNTER.

A quiet but picturesque event occurred on Saturday last, August 28th at "Pepacton", Stoney Lake, the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hunter of Toronto, when the marriage was solemnized of Celia Irene Hunter of Millbrook, Ont., niece of Miss Emma Hunter of Millbrook, and Carl Vernon Martin, of Detroit, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Martin of Hope, Ont. The service was conducted outside a tower of evergreens and wild flowers, by the Rev. John Riddell, pastor of Grace Presbyterian church, Millbrook, in the presence of a gathering of immediate relatives.

A naturally beautiful setting was further enchanced by the color scheme of gold, white and crimson, as supplied by sprays and banks of ferns and goldren rod, daisy and cardinal flower bloom.

The pretty and youthful bride wore her travelling costume, ensemble of sand poiret twill, with embroidered vest, collar of squirrel smart green hat, and the gift of the groom, an exquisite cameo. She was given in marriage by Mr. S. Hunter and was otherwise attended.

Among those from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. John P. Martin of Hope, the Rev. John Riddell Mrs. W. G. Russell and Miss Emma Hunter of Millbrok, Miss Margaret Collingwood of Toronto, Mr. J. Parsons and Roy Martin of the Bank of Toronto, Waterloo.

After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Martin left by motor for the Kawartha Lakes, en route for Detroit, where they will reside in future.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents, including a case of silver from Mr. and Mrs. John P. Martin, clock and address presented by the members of Grace Presbyterian church of which she was a member.

FAMOUS FEET

..how they're kept free from corns..

LOUISE GROODY'S Famous Dancing Feet

"I always have Blue-jay on hand when trouble is a-foot!" writes dainty and delightful Louise Groody, now starring in the New York musical comedy success, "No! No! Nanette."

"Stage work isn't always kindly to a dancer's toes. But I never have corns. For at the least sign of an approaching callus, I put on a Blue-jay."

Blue-jay is an old standby to folks who reap fame and fortune from their feet. A soft, velvety cushion fits over the corn and relieves the pain at once. Usually one plaster ends the corn. But even an "old offender" seldom requires more than a second . . . . . At all druggists.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE.

With the biggest Exhibition in their history rapidly drawing near, directors of the Peterboro Industrial are already looking beyond 1926's Expansion Year fair to larger successes in the future.

One of them speaking to The Examiner on this point declared that more buildings will have to be provided to meet the growing needs of the Exhibition.

Were the necessary accommodation available, this director pointed out, the Peterboro Industrial could be sure of exhibits from some of the largest and best known firms in the country.

Many of those who are at present showing attractive displays at the Canadian National Exhibition have expressed their willingness to exhibit their products at Peterboro if they could be assured of proper accommodation.

The addition of such exhibits would add greatly to the prestige and fame of the Peterboro Industrial, and put the local fair in still a higher class.

Undoubtedly the erection of a building capable of supplying accommodation for many more exhibits will be one of the forward steps that will follow a record-breaking Exhibition this year.

STIMULATING TOURIST TRAFFIC.

Peterboro citizens have doubtless noticed the large number of motor cars bearing Ohio license plates seen in the city during the present summer.

It is a matter of common observation that cars from Ohio outnumbered those from any other State, and the credit for this condition must go to a considerable degree to the Information Bureau maintained at Cleveland by the Ontario Government under the direction of Mr. Leon Frazer, former Secretary of the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce.

The bureau dealt with thousands of inquiries, many of these from people who had not previously visited Ontario, and the volume of traffic from Ohio goes far to demonstrate the value of such an office.

The Examiner learns that the cost of maintaining the Cleveland bureau was only $1,700, and that plans are under way to establish ten such offices across the border next season.

Judging by the results from the Cleveland enterprise, the expansion of the plan is highly justified, and it may be that before long different districts in Ontario may further extend the work by themselves, establishing offices in the United States to ensure for their localities a fair share of the tourist traffic.

The city of Peterboro, on its own account, might find it profitable to study the development that is taking place in regard to stimulating tourist traffic and not be caught napping if other municipalities decide to act.

ELECTION APPEALS.

"Heaven help the country whose future is to be determined by the judgments of electors who can see no further than the immediate gain to themselves."—The Alberta Farmer.

There is much in that view that commands respect and defies challenge.

Canada, or any other country, would be in a bad way if there were not many citizens who conscientiously try to vote in accordance with what they believe to be in the best interest of the whole nation.

And yet it is no wonder that men think only of the "immediate gain to themselves."

What are the most of the arguments used by political leaders but appeals to the self-interest of the electors?

You are asked to support one party because it claims to have done something to put a few dollars in your pocket, or for another because it promises to do something that will have the same result.

The majority of the political speeches are direct appeals to selfishness.

Districts are asked for support because of something that will help those particular districts, just as individuals are approached along the same line.

Rarely are we urged to recognize the principle of "Each for all and all for each," to consider which party policy promises most for the general advantage of the whole country.

Rarely are we asked to think in terms of Canada.

It is not to be marvelled at, therefore, that one's person gain becomes the controlling factor in deciding which party to support.

LEARNING TO SWIM.

(By Rev. J. W. Gordon.)

There are many things that one might say in praise of our city—its fine men, its splendid earnest women, the almost complete absence of snobbery, the very satisfactory condition in our schools, the beautiful and dignified churches, the stores and business enterprise of its citizens—all are matters for comment and justifiable pride.

But at the present moment, in view of the tragic deaths by drowning during the summer, it seems to me that a very important matter to our city is the Rotary campaign to teach everybody to swim. No one should be allowed to grow up ignorant of the art of swimming. It ought to be as universally mastered as talking or walking, and with a very small amount of attention this desirable end would be attained. No doubt Rotary has in mind a closely related matter, namely, life-saving methods. Many strong swimmers would be quite helpless if suddenly they were confronted with the necessity of rescuing some one in danger of drowning. Probably in going to the rescue they would both be drowned. What to do at such a time and actual practice in doing it is almost as important as ability to swim.

Not only would many precious lives thus be saved, but the length and vigor and usefulness of these same lives would be greatly increased. In addition, one of the most natural, invigorating and delightful sports would become possible for practically every one. I believe there is no other form of exercise which combines so completely the elements which go to build up a human body well fitted for life's battle. Rollicking fun, the use of every bodily muscle, co-ordination of mind and body, sun and wind beating upon the skin, and all the delightful glow of the whole being if the water be not too warm. It is nothing short of tragedy that so few are able to avail themselves of these privileges. The local Rotary Club can not possibly be too warmly supported by the citizens.

Another angle from which this whole matter may be viewed is the support which our Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. receive and the use made of the swimming tanks in these institutions. Far more men should attend the classes at our Y.M.C.A. and swim at least twice a week all year. Instead of the secretaries industriously working up these classes to a decent size, as they frequently do, our men should crowd to the place and use our fine facilities for swimming and other forms of recreation. If everybody swam far less folk would need the doctor.

THE PRINCE AMONG THE SAVANTS.

In the performance of his public duties as a representative of Royalty, the Prince of Wales has played many parts, and in all of them has shown an adaptability to circumstances and conditions that is a source of universal wonder and admiration. In his tours abroad as Britain's unofficial Ambassador, in contact with diverse peoples and more or less alien modes of life; in official engagements at home, unlimited in character and variety; in military and social spheres, as well as in the realm of sport, he has acquitted himself in a manner which signifies a good deal more than merely the possession of a winning smile or a charming personality.

Of all the tests to which he has been subjected, however, perhaps the Prince would be the first to admit that none seemed more formidable than that involved in his appearance in the capacity of president, before that great body of scientists and scholars known as the British Association. To be called upon, in the scholastic atmosphere of Oxford, to address a gathering of "high-brows" and intellectual supermen, who, like Bacon, take all knowledge as their province, and who view all things with a critical eye, was indeed an ordeal for anyone but a philosopher to face; but from the accounts that appear in the British newspapers it would seem that his Royal Highness passed through it, as is his habit, with flying colors.

Taking as his subject, "The State and Science," the Prince addressed the savants, not as one with any pretensions to a knowledge of science, but as an onlooker interested in its development, and familiar with many practical instances of its application to the needs of civilization. His deliverance is described as an illuminating survey of the progress of scientific research and discovery during the past century, particularly in their relation to the daily life of the community and the nation, and a plea for the development of that relationship by the mutual co-operation of scientific workers and the state.

It was an inviting and inspiring theme, with a practical bearing, in the handling of which the Prince is said to have shown both insight and good judgment. There was a time, and not so very remote, as he pointed out, when the work of the scientist was as little appreciated as it was imperfectly understood; when Faraday was regarded as a freak, and Kelvin as an ingenious mechanic, and research and invention were considered as unworthy of notice by statesmen and scholars. The Prince could have recalled that nowhere more than in the very classical halls in which he spoke had the claims of science as a branch of learning and an important agency in national life been flouted and obstructed.

But the first quarter of the present century had witnessed a revolution, not only in the processes of scientific inquiry and discovery and their application to the needs of humanity, but in the public attitude towards science and in the recognition by those in authority of its value to the state. As illustrating the tremendous advance that had taken place in these directions within the past two decades, he pointed to the multiplication and co-ordination of research councils, scientific boards and laboratories created, and supported by the state; to the work accomplished during the war in an industrial connection, as well as for military and naval purposes, and to the achievements of medical research, in which field he singled out for special mention the discovery of insulin.

According to the Prince, there could be no plainer duty for a state charged with the health of an industrial civilization and responsive to the needs of humanity than to encourage and promote with all its resources scientific inquiry, and use all the means in its power to apply the results. But, with equal emphasis, he reminded his cultured hearers that such aid was not, and could never be, the exclusive function of the state. Co-operation was essential, but there was still as wide a field of activity as ever left to the individual research worker as well as to the scientific societies, educational institutions, industrial organizations and private benefactors.

If not a contribution to scientific knowledge of profound depth, the presidential address of the Prince of Wales must have impressed the savants of the British Association as a highly meritorious deliverance, and one that might, with advantage, be read by all who take an interest in the development of modern science and its relation to national life. In one respect, at least, the Prince may be said to have surpassed most of his predecessors in the chair; he actually perpetrated a joke in the presence of the "high-brows" and, what is no less notable for such a gathering, raised a laugh.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The German who swam the English Channel on Saturday would have found the going harder between 1914 and 1918.

At that it looks as if something will have to be done to prevent the channel from being cluttered up with long distance swimmers.

How the election is going depends largely upon what newspaper you read. You can find a wide range of predictions.

Registrations in Peterboro came within an ace of equalling last election's record. Perhaps there will be a similar response when the vote is recorded.

Mr. Calder evidently thinks Mr. Duff was a duffer to differ with the counsel employed by the Lemieux Commission.

There are 27 constituencies in which no more candidates can be crowded, nominations for these having taken place yesterday.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press). — The only important business on the local produce market yesterday in cash grain was the sale of a few odd lots of Canadian Western sample oats at 46 1-2 cents a bushel. The car lot market for undergrades of Canadian Western oats was weaker and prices were reduced 1 cent a bushel, but No. 2 were firmer at an advance of 1-2 cent a bushel with sales at 58 1-2 cents.

A weaker feeling developed for spring wheat grades of flour and prices were reduced 10 cents a barrel, which made the fifth reduction for the month of August, and a total of 70 cents a barrel. The market for winter wheat grades was also weak in sympathy.

Millfeed and rolled oats, unchanged. There was no change in the baled hay market.

A strong undertone developed in the egg market with a continued good demand for fresh eggs. The volume of business was large with every indication that consumption was higher than the average for this season of the year.

Beans were quoted at $2.25 a bushel for choice hand picked, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 a bushel.

Butter receipts were 1,505 packages, as compared with 4,826 for last Monday. An easier feeling prevailed in this market, but there was no actual change in prices.

Cheese receipts were 16,113 boxes as compared with 15,981 for last Monday. The export trade was quiet and in consequence an easier feeling was manifested.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press)—Month end liquidating sales to anticipate liberal deliveries looked for today on September contracts here carried the wheat market downward yesterday at the last. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy 3-8 to 1 1-2c net lower, with corn unchanged to 1 5-8c up; oats unchanged to 3-8c higher, and provisions unchanged to 37c down.

Forecasts of a rapidly swelling movement of wheat in Canada contributed to the late weakness of the wheat market here. However, export sales of wheat yesterday aggregated 750,000 bushels, and advices at hand indicated good prospects of an immediate end of the British coal strike. Furthermore, French threshing returns were represented as being smaller than had been looked for and the German wheat crop was unofficially estimated as 25,000,000 less than last year.

Corn and oats were in demand from shorts.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.83 3-4.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-8.

POLICE TRAP IS SUCCESSFUL

Hold-up Men Trapped in Car Barn In Attempt To Steal Receipts.

TWO KILLED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1. — Two hold-up men are dead, a third badly wounded, a girl who helped them is in jail, and four other men slightly hurt as the result of a police trap Sunday night in a west side car barn.

The trap was set by three detectives and the district superintendent of the trolley company. Into it drove three men and two women—James Maloney, Joseph De La Vergne, his brother Ernest, Frances Vaughn, Ernest's sweetheart and a Marie Nolan. The three men went into the barn to get the Sunday receipts, while the girls stayed outside as lookouts and to drive the car away when the men emerged.

The detectives waiting inside had hoped for a peaceful surrender, but the robbers tried to shoot their way out.

U.S.A. SHIPPING GOLD TO CANADA

Usual Fall Flow of Bullion Has Started Already.

LARGE AMOUNTS.

NEW YORK, Sept 1. — (Canadian Press). — Exports of gold during July amounted to $5,000,000, half of which went to Canada, according to the monthly review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank. Imports totalled almost $20,000,000, of which $14,600,000 was from Australia. These imports made total receipts of nearly $20,000,000 from Australia in June and July. The net import for the first seven months of the year was $96,135,000. Additional exports to Canada in August of about $7,000,000 were also reported, so that total shipments to Canada for the year to date now amount to about $34,000,000, as compared with imports from Canada of $79,000,000. The movement is usually toward Canada during the fall months.

"ANCIENT" AND "OLD"

Do not use the word "ancient" when you mean "old." For example, a suit of clothes or a dress cannot be "ancient," unless it was made a long time ago, in historic time. The suit of clothes which you bought a few years ago is "old," but it is not "ancient."

These two words, "old" and "ancient," afford a good example of the rule that one can tell a careful speaker by the manner in which he or she employs words that are similar in meaning, in some senses, and yet are different. A careful speaker will be sure to discriminate between the two.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE GIRL THAT I TOOK HOME

The night we took the first girl home!
The memory lingers like a song:
A firefly glittered in the gloam,
There was no hate, there was no wrong
In all the world that summer's night,
Only a mystical delight
That tingled to our finger-tips—
The years sail on like sailing ships,
Yet, after all, we often find
Some moment harbored in the mind.

And so in mine a thought remains,
I think perhaps remains in yours.
Whatever wealth a fellow gains,
The only wealth that long endures
Is some old thought of some old day,
Some night that long has slipped away,
That memory may linger on
When all our other wealth is gone,
Old thoughts that never quite depart,
Old ships still harbored in the heart.

I'm old, and gray, and bent withal;
I have a wife, a gentle dame;
To tell the truth, I can't recall
That other girl, her face, or name;
And so I guess the wife won't mind
If now and then I look behind
The curtains of the misty past—
For she's the girl I took home last,
Yes, after all, though fancies roam,
My wife's the one that I took home.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

BOTH AMERICANS

By Dr. Frank Crane.

America is singularly fortunate in the two greatest men of its history—Washington and Lincoln.

Perhaps both of them are equally revered, and that all classes of people respect them and their memory is significant.

For they come from different strata of society. Washington was an aristocrat. His habits and opinions and customs were those of the gentlemen of his time.

Lincoln was a child of the people. He was born in poverty and his early life was a series of struggles against adverse conditions.

Both men won their way to popularity against much that was adverse. That both equally served their country in time of need is significant. It shows that there is a place in America for all sorts and conditions of people.

There is opportunity to serve one's country for the rich as well as for the poor, for the highborn as well as the lowborn.

One of the amazing things in the late war was the readiness which was displayed by the blue bloods and nobility to take their place in the ranks and risk their lives for their country. Those who have means are supposed to dodge responsibilities, but the sons of the nobility and of the wealthy appeared to make as good soldiers as their less favored brothers.

That country is fortunate which receives the support of all classes, and it is significant that in America the poor are as patriotic as the rich.

Those who have nothing and who must fight their way in the world heavily handicapped by poverty are encouraged by the example of Abraham Lincoln, the greatest of commoners.

Those who are wealthy and whose blood is blue have the example of Washington before them and are made to see how the aristocrat may serve his country as well as the proletariat.

We are singularly fortunate that there are no classes in America. When we speak of Washington and Lincoln as being of different strata it is in an accommodated sense of the word and in deference to old ideas. Really, they were both of one class. They were both Americans, and the example of one is equally stimulating with that of the other.

SAUVE PRAISES PRIME MINISTER

Quebec Conservative Leader Says Statement Necessitated By Misrepresentations.

DEFENDS PATENAUDE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1. — Canadian Press. — Arthur Sauve, leader of the Provincial Conservatives, issued a statement Tuesday in which he declared that the party was deserving of the confidence and support of French-Canadians. He praised the Prime Minister for his attitude towards the province, and the citizens of Quebec, and instanced his mastery of the French language as a sincere attempt to understand and appreciate the people of the province.

Mr. Sauve deprecated the idea that Hon. Mr. Patenaude contemplated a political coup in 1923 when the latter was a member of the provincial house and declared that he had offered Mr. Patenaude to retire as head of the provincial Conservatives in his favor but that his offer had been refused.

The Provincial Opposition leader regretted that that he was too ill to attend the Premier's meeting in the Forum Tuesday, and concluded by explaining that his public statement was necessitated by misrepresentations that were appearing from time to time.

Marshal Foch, France's greatest military man, does not like to wear his uniform in peace time. He is extremely modest and knows that everybody recognizes him when he goes out in full uniform, wherefore he prefers to appear as an ordinary citizen and pass unnoticed.

When there was war, he proved what he could do, but now that the trouble is over, he wants to get away from noise and is perhaps the Parisian who cares least for movement so anxious is his desire for peace.

FIFTY KILLED AS RESULT OF QUAKE IN AZORES

City of Horta is Laid in Ruins By An Earthquake.

PROPERTY DAMAGED.

Portugese Government Sends First Aid To Sufferers at Porta.

HORTA, AZORES, Sept. 1—Three-fourths of this city was wrecked or damaged yesterday by an earthquake. The governor of the Porta district on the Island of Foyal reports about fifty casualties. Many houses are in ruins. The Portugese government has ordered warships to supply first aid to the sufferers in Porta.

Severest in History

The earthquake which has rocked the Azores was the severest in the history of the islands, with heavy loss of property and life, the American consul at Horta Fayal, Azores, reported to the state department yesterday.

The consular report said:

"Severest earthquake in history of Azores. Houses down and all houses suffered. Impossible to etimate loss of property and life.

"All residents are prepared to live out of doors."

Sympathy Sent

The department instructed the consul immediately to express the sympathy of the United States to the local authorities. The cable said:

"Your telegram received. Express to authorities of Azores profoundest sympathy of United States government for this shocking disaster.

"Please inform department immediately for information of American Red Cross as to whether Americans or others are destitute and what kind of supplies if any are urgently needed.

Greece Shaken

Greece was shaken by a strong earthquake effecting the entire country. No casualties were reported but there is a small amount of damage in Pireaus and Sparta.

Shock in Mexico

A violent earthquake has occurred in the city of Tehauantepec and a large part of the state of Oaxaca. No details have been received from the disturbed zone. The shock was recorded at the Tacuaya seismological station.

Registered at Ottawa

A moderately severe earthquake was registered at the Dominion observatory early yesterday morning, August 31. The first preliminary tremor arrived at 5.47.07 a.m., eastern standard time. The distance to the epicenter was 5.40.04 a.m. The record continued about an hour.

It was explained by observatory officials that this distance would correspond with the distance between Ottawa and the western side of the Azores.

Tokio Uneasy

Earthquakes of more than ordinary violence have shaken Tokio and the surrounding country several times in the past fortnight, creating uneasiness in the public mind as the third anniversary of the devastating shock of September 1, 1923, approached.

SEEK HARVESTERS IN UNITED STATES

Special Rates Given from the Border Points—Want More From East.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 31.—(Special).—Failure of the East to supply its usual contingent of men for the harvesting of the grain crop of the central provinces this year has necessitated the taking of steps to meet the shortage that is causing much anxiety in the west. Word received here yesterday, conveys the information that commencing September 1 and continuing to September 15 inclusive all points along the border, between the Prairie provinces and the United States will be thrown open to harvesters and that a charge of one cent per mile on the railways will be made between those dates to points in the wheat provinces, while the fare back to the border, will be at the rate of two cents a mile. In the meantime further efforts are being made to induce harvesters from Eastern Canada to go west. On August 31st an excursion will be run from Eastern Ontario and additional excursions will be operated from the Maritime Provinces on September 3rd and Qubec and Ontario on September 4th. It is hoped that these trains will have heavy passenger lists.

The shortage of twenty thousand harvesting hands to gather the crop is causing much anxiety in the prairie provinces, but it is felt that the above emergency measures will go far towards meeting the need of men. Better times, increased employment and later harvest in the east are given as the cause of falling off in the numbers of men going west this year. There is work in the west for all who take the trip and when work is completed on one farm it can always be found on another not far removed from the first. InManitoba, harvesters are already moving on to Saskatchewan while Alberta has just started harvesting.

MORE BALLOT BOX STUFFING REVEALED

Deputy Returning Officer Says He Put In Ballots For Cross.

LAC LABICHE, Alta., Sept. 1 (Canadian Press). — Mr. Justice Clark resuming yesterday at Lac Lebiche the enquiry under the Corrupt Pratices Act, alleging iregularities of polls in the Athabasca riding during the Federal Election in October, 1925, issued the first bench warrant of the investigation—a warrant for the arrest of W. E. Proctor, Deputy Returning Officer, at the Conklin poll. Conklin is a point on the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway between Lac Labiche and Waterways. It gave Cross sixty-five votes, and Kellner, one. Proctor, who is the postmaster and storekeeper at Conklin, was summoned to attend the enquiry at Lac Labiche on Monday last.

Yet another election officer has confessed to the stuffing of a ballot box in favor of C. W. Cross, the Liberal candidate declared elected over D. F. Kellner, Progressive, and Charles H. Gauvreau, Conservative. R. W. Lacroix, poll clerk at the Owl River poll, 25 miles north of Lac Labiche, stated that towards the close of the poll he and the deputy returning officer, Julian Cardinal, decided that they would put in some ballots, marking them for Cross. About 18 or 20 people voted, said Lecroix, and he put in ballots showing a final vote of 33 votes for Cross and one for Gauvreau.

A flat denial that P. D. Hamel, Mayor, Justice of the Peace and Postmaster at Lac Labiche, got ballats from him, marked them, and put them in the ballot box, was given by J. A. Simmoneau, Deputy Returning Officer at Lac Labiche rural poll. Frank P. Fisher, who was poll clerk at this poll, stated that Hamel had come into the poll and demanded from Simmoneau a ballot on behalf of one Bessitt, whom Hamel said he was representing.

TWO ELEPHANTS STILL MISSING

Circus Trainers Fear Animals Have Met an Untimely End in Mountains.

RENEW SEARCH.

CRANBROOK, B.C., Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Two of the five elephants which escaped here on August 6, from a circus were still at large and nothing has been seen of them for some time. Doubts are expressed if either will be found alive. Myrtle, a ten-year-old, fell down a 40-foot embankment, according to the latest report of the trackers, and has evidently gone into hiding, perhaps injured.

Charlie Ed., a five-year-old male, was being treated for an infected tusk when he escaped and the circus men fear he may already have met an untimely end. In the meantime Indian trackers and Cranbrook boys are getting a big thrill roaming the surrounding land looking for them.

MARITIME RATES ARE EXPLAINED TO COMMISSION

Vice-President of C. N. R. Goes Into Detail in Evidence.

ROUTING TRAFFIC.

Railways Can Do Little Towards Selecting Ports For Shipments.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—In a lengthy statement submitted to the commission investigating the economic situation in the Maritime provinces which opened a session here to-day, J. E. Dalrymple, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, replied to the submissions made on behalf of the Maritmies in the sessions at Halifax, Saint John and Charlottetown. He spoke on railway rates and went in detail into their development, their fluctuations in the east, their increase and their comparison with rates in other sections of the Dominion.

Regarding the rates of the Canadian Government owned lines in the United States in competition with the Canadian Government owned lines in Canada, Mr. Dalrymple said that the former could not be increased if the lines were to obtain a fair share of United States' business. He pointed out that in 1925 the deficits on the Atlantic region of the national road were $3,176,249.65. He spoke at length on the routing of traffic through Canadian ports and declared that too much emphasis had been placed on the control of the railways in the routing of export traffic. The railways had very little to do with it. Nevertheless they had made considerable effort towards interesting shippers in the advantages of utilizing Maritime province ports. This had met with some success, he added.

With regard to grain shipments through Halifax, he felt that with the operating of the elevator there an increase in traffic in this connection might be looked for in the winter months.

"I also believe that
IN THE INTEREST OF THE PARTY
it would be preferable to discontinue to watch the frontier"

In these exact words—only that they are the English translation of the French original—J. E. A. Bisaillon, Chief Preventive Officer for the Province of Quebec, wrote to Hon. Jacques Bureau, Mr. King's Minister of Customs, under date April 16th, 1925! And the letter is on file with the records of the Customs Investigation Committee in Ottawa.

All the examples of interference by members of the King Government in the interest of smugglers are eclipsed by the revelations contained in a series of letters filed with the Committee between W. M. Baldwin, M.P. for Stanstead, Quebec, J. E. A. Bisaillon, Chief Preventive Officer for the Province of Quebec, and the Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs and Excise in the King Cabinet.

Baldwin was the friend and intimate of smugglers, as was shown by the fact that in the case of a seizure from Jenkins, the king of the Rock Island smugglers, Baldwin put up his own cheque for $2,500.00 as part of a penalty imposed on Jenkins for smuggling.

On March 31st, 1925, Baldwin wrote to the Hon. Jacques Bureau, in part, as follows:

"You may remember that I spoke to you in regard to removing the "specials along the border in my county.

* * * * * * * * * * *

"Trusting you will grant my request, I am, with kindest regards."

On April 7th, 1925, Bureau wrote to his friend Bisaillon as follows:

"I am told that, since several months already, you have people work-"ing on the frontier at Rock Island. Would it not be possible to "recall them, and to see that the service, although being well done, "would not be conducted in the manner Mr. Baldwin complains of in "his letter. I take the liberty of enclosing for you Mr. Baldwin's letter.

"Mr. Baldwin has not ceased to importune me on this subject. I have "always delayed, from day to day, in the hope that I might meet you "and talk the matter over with you. This poor Baldwin must be "harrassed of this matter, since he pursues me even here.

"I hope to be perfectly well in a short time, and to be able to resume "my functions."

On April 16th, 1925, Bisaillon replied as follows:

"I have the honour to acknowledge reception of your letter dated 7th "instant, accompanied by that of Mr. Baldwin, relative to the officers "who work the frontier at Rock Island.

"Mr. Baldwin exaggerates; * * * * and I do not believe "that the people of Rock Island have become so fearful as wishes to "say Mr. Baldwin; only he is pushed by Jenkins and Wilkinson, who "are the greatest smugglers at Rock Island, but the latter are his "friends. I also believe that, in the interest of the party, it would "be preferable to discontinue to watch the frontier * * * * "Mr. Bureau, this question is very delicate; but if you prefer that I "recall these officers or else I talk the matter over with the Honorable "Mr. Cardin, I shall do so with pleasure. A new advice on the matter "will oblige me greatly."

At this time the Hon. P. J. A. Cardin was Acting Minister of Customs and Excise, and apparently, as asked for in his letter, Bisaillon got instructions to see Mr. Cardin, whom he testified that he met at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, about that time.

He apparently got the proper instructions, as the records submitted to the Committee showed that the specials were all withdrawn, and in reference to the last man on the job protecting the public revenue at this point, one Jensen by name, Bisaillon reported to Mr. Wilson, Chief Preventive Officer, that Jensen had been taken off until October 29th, which was the day of the election.

The facts revealed by this correspondence and the action of Bisaillon demonstrates that the Hon. P. J. A. Cardin opened the public treasury between early in September and election day on October 29th and invited a gang of crooks and thieves to help themselves.

That they did help themselves is shown by the fact that the report of Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, auditors, on the question of smuggling at Rock Island, presents documentary evidence of the smuggling in of over a million dollars worth of merchandise at this one point alone.

While the smuggling of goods, largely prison-made, to a value of a million dollars was proven, it is almost certain that the actual amount was very much greater.

Can you conceive of any more bare-faced prostitution of political power, any more shameful betrayal of Canada's interests? Surely men who would tolerate such things should have no place in the public life of Canada!

PARTY POLITICS NEW FOR JAPAN

Has Become Important Factor Only Since End of War.

WORK OF TWO MEN.

TOKIO, Sept. 1 — Party politics in the sense that it is understood in Canada, is decidedly a new thing in Japan. Only since the end of the World War has it become an important factor in determining the government and then it appears chiefly because of the exceptional ability of two men, both now dead, former Premiers Hara and Takaaki Kato.

The big obstacle in the way of political parties, as of popular government, in the earlier years, was the institution know as the Genro (elder statesmen). As previously explained the Genro never had any constitutional status. It was merely the group of founding fathers, who had planned and built the new Japan. They were the supreme architects of the national, whose sagacity had been proven by a multitude of accomplishments, and no man dared to dispute their wisdom.

The first political party organizations were formed shortly aftre the popular Parliament was created in 1890, but for nearly 30 years thereafter none paid any particular attention to what Parliament might do ,and much less attention to the political groups into which it was divided.

The Genro still exist in the person of one man, Prince Saionji, who by no means has abdicated the authority his position entitles him to. He is, however, 87 years old and with the certain knowledge that, with his passing, there can be no more elder statesmen, it is natural that the younger men who aspire to power have ceased to reckon with the Genro as a factor in their future calculations. Saionji's orders always have been respected but that may be because he has never crossed the politicians on a matter of importance.

As the elder statesmen began to be reduced rapidly by death and those remaining grew old and feeble, the big question in the minds of all Japanese publicists was as to who would succeed to the real power in government. There remained of course the supreme authority of the Emperor, but Emperor Meiji, who, like the elder statesmen, was counted among the great builders had just died and his son, the present Emperer Yoshihito, was known to be a weakling both in body and mind.

Next to the Emperor, the Privy Council in Japan occupies a peculiar position in the constituional system. It is not like the Privy Council in England ,out of which the British Cabinet system has grown. In Japan the Privy Council is separate from, and as the phraseology of the constitution appears, superior to, the Cabinet.

Emperor Given Advice.

The Privy Council's function is to advise the Emperor in all important matters of government. Its power is entirely consultative, but as the constitutionally authorized liaison between the all-powerful Emperor and the various administrative and legislative branches of the government, it seemed to be in the logical position to assume the sceptor of the expiring Genro. More than that the Privy Council was made up of veteran statesmen, all of whom had held important administrative positions.

The president of the Privy Council from 1912 to 1924 was Viscount Kilyouri, a statesman who had been continuously in the government since 1873, and who approached in prestige near the Genro level. Kiyouri undoubtedly visualized the Privy Council as the successor of the Genro, and he actually did maintain it as a highly important factor in the government until he stepped out of the role of an elder adviser and attempted to play practical politics at first hand, in 1924.

When the Seiyukai Party split and was ousted from control of the government in the latter year, the aged Kivouri was designated by the still older Prince Saionji to form a new Cabinet. Kiyouri did so, but he remained in office just four months before he was driven out by a combigation of the two largest party groups (the Seijukai and the Kenseikai) who, while they hated each other right royally, were unwilling to see the Diet completely flouted and government control reposed in a new oligarchy, dependent solely on the Emperor for its authority.

A coalition cabinet was formed, with Viscount Kato, leader of the Kenseikai party at its head, and it appeared that the Cabinet, as a creature of the Diet, has triumphed over the Privy Council, which derived its power exclusively from the Emperor. But Viscount Kiyouri was not willing to accept the verdict without another battle.

Viscount Kato had headed the Japaneses delegation to the Armament Conference at Washington, and when he became premier his major policy was the carrying out of the treaties there signed into full effect. He immediately proposed to withdraw Japanese troops from Shantung and other Japanese spheres in China ano to name delegates to the international commissions created to consider the question of Chinese customs and extraterritoriality.

Kiyouri objected on the ground that the Chinese question, being one of foreign affairs, was the province of the Privy Council to deal with and it was for the latter body, and not the Cabinet, to say when and how the Washington treaties would be carried out. Premerie Kato immediately demanded the resignation of Kiyouri as president of the Privy Council with the suggestion of Prince Saonji, the surviving Genro, that, unless Kiyouri did resign, the Cabinet would.

Cabinet won Test.

It was the final test of strength between the Privy Council and the Cabinet and the latter won a complete victory. Kiyouri resigned and his successor was named by the Premier. The Privy Council since 1924, has not been heard of as an important factor in the government.

Another body that, under the constitution, seemed to be designed primarily to check popular power as it might be expressed through the House of Representatives, was the House of Peers. Whereas the House of Representatives is chosen by a limited popular electorate, the House of Peers is made up entirely of persons of noble birth and appointees of the Emperor, the latter consisting principally of college profesors and the highest taxpayers.

Very much as Premier Kato put the Privy Council in place, Premier Hara previously had clipped the wings of the House of Peers. During Hara's administration the government proposed a bill to raise the official status of certain educational institutions from colleges to universities. The House of Representatives promptly passed the measure, but in the House of Peers it met with stiff opposition. One of its effects would be to increase the number of college profesors eligible to appointment to the House of Peers, and the group from the government-controlled universities, which previously monopolized this privilege, objected to having it extended. The professor-members of the House of Peers being the most active and intelligent of its membership, persuaded the titled members and big taxpayers to fall in with them.

Premier Hara refused to see his educational bill, which was decidedly popular with the mass of people, beaten by this upper house opposition. He went to the surviving members of the Genro with the suggestion that his resignation be accepted and that the leaders of the House of Peers be called upon to form a Cabinet.

The ruse worked beautifully. The nobles and the big taxpayers, who had supported the professors in opposition to the educational bill, completely lost their nerve in the face of a threat that they might be called on to take over responsibility for the whole government. They turned tail and passed the bill in short order.

Thus both the Privy Council and the House of Peers appear to have passed from first authority, for the time being at least, along with the Genro. It is possible that either of these bodies may stage a comeback, but only in the event that they develop individual leaders capable of attracting support from other branches of the government and from outside interests more powerful than is assembled behind the Cabinet. Rather it seems likely that the controlling authority, whatever its sources, in future will be exercised through the Premier, just as in the case in most other governments of the world.

It remains to be seen whether Japan is to take the further step toward Democracy, in the western sense, of having a Cabinet which derives its power from the one popularly elected branch of the government, which is the House of Representatives.

TWO MEETINGS HELD BY CONSERVATIVES

V. J. McElderry Questions W. L. M. King's Loyalty To British Empire.

Two meetings were held in South Monaghan last night on behalf of E. A. Peck, Conservative candidate. One was at Centreville, addressed by E. A. Peck, V. J. McElderry and J. F. Strickland. The other meeting was held at Bensfort where the candidate, assisted by R. J. Soden and V. J. McElderry, appealed to the electors. A. Anderson presided at the Centreville meeting and E. Wood at the Bensfort gathering.

Mr. McElderry who declared that Mr. King secured Progressive support in the earlier stages of the last session by promising legislation to the advantage of the West, said the Progressives withdrew that support not so much because of the scandal in Governmental affairs, as on account of the fact that MacKenzie King administration knew of the scandal and did nothing for weeks and months and even years. As an example of the light in which Mr. King was regarded in the United States, Mr. McElderry read an extract from the Minneapolis Journal of July 17 which stated: "The Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King represents the tendency to amalgamate with the United States." Did not this, asked Mr. McElderry make one consider whether the rumors were true which said that Mr. King was accustomed to submit his policies to Wall Street for consideration? The extract, Mr. McElderry quoted, said that Messrs. King and Meighen were divided ostensibly on a constitutional issue, but in reality one was steering for a port within the American Federation and the other for the open sea.

As electors, said Mr. McElderry, they had no right to take a chance with a man like Mr. King. He urged them to vote for Mr. Meighen and the British connection, quoting Sir John A. MacDonald's famous dictum: "A British subject I was born and a British subject I shall die."

J. F. Strickland.

Mr Strickland said that Mr. King's policy in the present campaign was to hunt up local issues in the constituencies in which he spoke and having discovered such, immediately made them the issues of the election. On the other hand, Arthur Meighen's policy was the same in the East and in the West, the same in British Columbia and in Nova Scotia. His policy was for every province. When Mr. King ran out of local issues, he fell back on the constitutional issue. There was no constitutional issue. Pleading for a return to the two-party system, Mr. Strickland criticized candidates who came forward under three or four labels. Canada needed stable government and the only way in which stable government could be achieved was by returning Arthur Meighen.

E. A. Peck.

Mr. Peck stated that so far as dissolution was concerned, the Governor-General had the right to use his own judgment to a certain extent. Lord Byng was conversant with affairs in the House and knew that the King Government was within a few hours of a defeat. He knew that the government had not the confidence of the House and might fairly argue, that it had not the confidence of the country. The position would have been quite different if Mr. King had a majority of thirty or forty members in the House.

Mr. Massey had argued that Mr. Meighen on being summoned ought to have declared the Governor-General had made a mistake and should have urged the recall of Mr. King. What Mr. Massey overlooked was that the Progresives had also realized that a dissolution was a serious matter and that they resolved to aid Meighen in winding up the session. A resolution to this effect was passed, typed and shown to the Governor-General and to Mr. Meighen who then went ahead and accepted the Premiership.

Referring to opposition allegations of inactivity on his part, Mr. Peck asked his hearers to remember he had been only two days a member on the Government side of the House.

AIR SLEEPING CARS.

BERLIN (United Press).—The world's first "flying sleeping cars" are in the course of construction at the works of the Deutsche Lufthansa, one of Germany's leading firms of aircraft manufacturers.

By a patented device the ordinary seats in the machines used for daytime flying are convertible into comfortable berths. The machines will be installed on long distance routes where plans are being laid to supplement day services with night-time air expresses.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan has locked in his heart the memory of when, as a child, he had seen his father, Don Jose, trap his faithless wife with her lover, whom Don Jose killed forthright, then banished the shameless wife and mother. Dying, Don Jose had warned his son: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love when it pleases you. Take it scornfully—and forget." This advice had made the boy the famous Don Juan, whom all men envied and all women adored, the greatest lover of all time, interesting even to Lucretia Borgia, when that woman ruled Rome.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"And who is Don Juan?"

"A young Spanish grandee, my lady, lately arrived from the University of Pisa."

"Yes?" Lucretia drawled, dragging out the word. "And how happens it that you know so much about him?"

The girl blushed, and Donati, riding close, replied for her.

"If rumor does not lie, half the lovely ladies of Rome have already fallen victims to his charms.

Lucretia shrugged her shoulders disdainfully, and he went on.

"He is the one they call the great lover,—the great, forgetful lover," he told her, with a sly smile.

"Think you not that—that there might be one whom he could not forget?" she asked. Her voice slipped and murmured over the words, as a brook may slip and murmur over jagged stones. Donati smiled, but he was careful not to let Lucretia see that he did.

He said merely, "A challenge to rumor means a lost battle," speaking carelessly, as if he had no idea of what was in his cousin's mind. Lucretia turned to the maid.

"See that a message is sent to this Don Juan," she said to the girl curtly. "Our evening ball will be made more interesting by his presence."

And the cavalcade moved on, with Donati's thoughts swarming like bees around the prospect of meeting the lovely girl he had seen leaving church, and Lucretia's around the thought of Don Juan. That lovely bare arm reaching for the lingerie, in the upper window —"the great, forgetful lover"—"a young Spanish grandee"—she smiled, and contentment settled over her beautiful, cruel face.

The young Spaniard might add interest to this evening—and to others.

The cavalcade rode on.

Back in the house before which the Borgias and their train had paused, and laughed, a girl sat waiting. Young, pretty, desired by many men, Trusia, sister of the Duke Margini, found this a new experience, this waiting for a man. Half an hour she would not have minded, but this matter of waiting while time slipped on, marking off one hour, two—that was different. She was almost in tears. She paced up and down the long, beautiful room, tore to pieces the handkerchief that had been the admiration of the convent workroom from which it had come, went to the great carved doors leading to the terrace and stared blindly at the sharp yellow and pink of the flowers blooming there, turned to walk with short, impatient steps to the smaller door leading to the garden, where a swan drifted idly over the surface of a narcissus-edged pool.

There were two other doors. One, leading to an anteroom, did not interest her: that was the way out. The other, leading to Don Juan's quarters, interested her too much; that was the way in. The way into Heaven-sent joy, into paradise, into Don Juan's arms.

She looked up sharply at the sound of a step on the stone floor. But it was only Pedrillo, Juan's servant.

He came over to her, shaking his head sadly.

"A sick friend doubtless maintains him, my lady," he said humbly.

"A woman?" She had not meant to voice that fear, but she cared so much for Juan that she could not curb it.

Pedrillo stared at her in shocked surprise.

"Madonna, you are the one love of his life," he told her, almost reprovingly.

That assurance made her happy again for a moment. She turned again to the garden, and Pedrillo, behind her back, glanced furtively, anxiously, at the closed door leading to Don Juan's rooms.

As she faced him again he had a sudden inspiration. Living with Juan brought them frequently.

"If I might presume—perhaps your ladyship might better not wait. It may be a matter of hours—if the friend is very ill. Sometimes he is out all night, sitting up with a sick friend—"

Trusia shook her head and went into the anteroom. Probably he would come in by that way: she would sit where she could see him the instant he arrived. She wished that she could wait in the street, could hurry up it to meet him when she saw him coming.

Pedrillo shrugged his shoulders helplessly; then, as she left the room, tiptoed to the door of Juan's sleeping apartment and listened for an instant, his ear close to the wood. Listening, he smiled. He could picture the scene within.

Tiptoeing away, he heard a sudden noise in the street. He glanced through one of the long windows, then ran to the street, arriving just in time to prevent the entrance into the house of the woman who had just stepped from her palanquin. She was as gorgeous as the parrot perched on the palanquin door, as domineering as Juan himself, Pedrillo reflected, this Imperia, famous for her beauty, beloved of the Duke Margoni.

"Where is he?" she demanded of Pedrillo. "For an hour I have awaited your master in the blistering sun on the Palatine hill. Where is he?"

Pedrillo bowed humbly.

"Don Juan did not forget," he told her, as if nothing but the possibility of forgetfulness could have come into her mind. "He was summoned by His Holiness to the Vatican."

She smiled contemptuously.

"Summoned—yes, by a woman, to a rendezvous!" she said curtly, her voice trembling with rage.

Pedrillo looked at her with that same shocked surprise that had been so effective a few moments before with Trusia. His words, also, were the same.

"Madonna!" he exclaimed, "you are the one love of his life."

And this woman, like the other, was satisfied.

She turned away, not quite believing him, yet wanting to, and as she went back to her palanquin Pedrillo went into the house, telling himself that he had handled that situation neatly. He did not know that Imperia, hesitating, suddenly changed her mind about going away, and was even then making her way around the terrace.

He knew it a moment later, however. For Trusia and Imperia were facing each other angrily in the anteroom, each uncomfortably certain of the other's reason for being there. After the first amazed moment they burst into a storm of words. Vainly Pedrillo tried to quiet them, but opposed to each other though they were, they were one in their indignation toward him, and he gave up the struggle.

He sighed with relief as their voices retreated toward the street door. All would be well if they would but go. Don Juan need not even know of their meeting. But at that moment the door of the sleeping apartment opened, and Juan himself stood in it for a moment, then slowly came forward, languidly inquiring the reason for the noise.

He greeted Pedrillo's explanation with amusement rather than annoyance, and sauntered on to the anteroom.

(To be continued.)

During the lemonade season it is well to remember that if a lemon is warmed before squeezing, it is possible to extract much more juice.

Wet Weather In West Strengthens Wheat Price

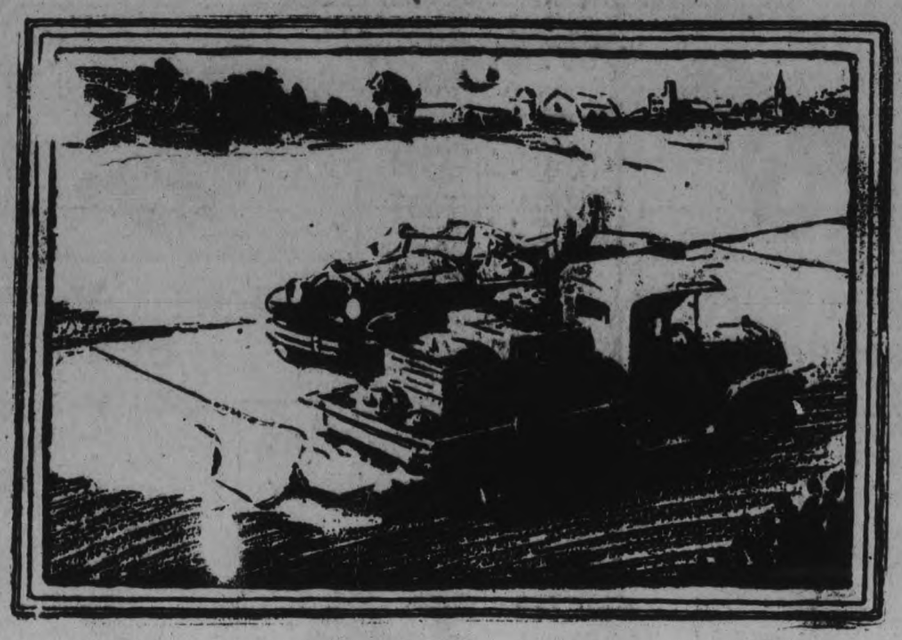
CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press)—Influenced by wet weather over the Canadian harvest region, wheat averaged little higher in price today during the early dealings.

Another element of firmness was the fact that the September liquidation in all grain had apparently spent its force.

Opening a half cent off to 1-8 cent up, wheat rose all around to above yesterday's finish.

Corn, oats and provisions were also inclined upward, corn starting unchanged to half cent lower, but soon scoring a material gain.

THE SPIRIT OF NEIGHBORLINESS



Another Little Message

About that cup of Sugar

RECENTLY we suggested that the essentials of the true spirit of neighborliness were exemplified in the borrowing of a cup of sugar.

Over the back-yard fence is a short cut indeed, to neighborliness. Miles so often are the fences that divide the comman ground of mutual understanding and good will. The less the distance, the lower the fence.

That's one reason why we've always worked so earnestly and faithfully for better roads. The road that brings you nearer to us is the same broad highway that brings us nearer to you. Literally and figuratively it increases efficiency in the delivery of the goods. Another essential to the true spirit of neighborliness.

You'll find the same spirit at this end of the road—in our stores and places of business. Courtesy, desire to please, eagerness to rectify error, sincerity in quality, fairness in price—these are the elements of neighborly dealing which we are constantly striving to improve.

Just call across the fence. We're neighbors you know.

SIX COMMUNISTS SEEKING ELECTION

Five Have Labor Support in Contest For Federal Seats.

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—Six Communists, one of whom has been nominated under that name, are to be candidates for election to the Federal House of Commons. The members of the party who have been nominated are: Michael Buhay in a Montreal division; John MacDonald, in a Toronto riding; Rev. E. A. Smith, in Port Arthur; John Lakeman and Carl Axelson, in Alberta, and Dr. Currie in Vancouver.

Labor Support.

According to officials of the party, which has its central office on King Street East, Buhay's membership in the Canadian Labor party was not acceptable to Montreal Laborites, but the remaining Communists are to enter the contest in their ridings with Labor support. Lakeman and Axelson are members of the United Farmers of Alberta, and expect to derive support from their connection with the organized farm movement of the Province.

"These are the Communists who have been nominated contrary to the views held by Woodsworth, Heaps, Irvine and others, who have been nominated to go to the polls as Laborites," said John MacDonald yesterday.

Manifesto Issued.

While it enjoys affiliation with political Labor, the Communist party has issued its manifesto and its own election literature, 70,000 pieces of which were sent to extremists throughout Canada yesterday for distribution. The manifesto is similar to that of the Canadian Labor party in many respects, but inclures as a party objective "the annulment of the British North America Act and a complete declaration of Canadian independence."

Other planks in the Communist platform are the forty-hour week; abolition of troops in industrial disputes; recognition of and credits to the Soviet Union! release of class-war political prisoners in Alberta and Nova Scotia; abolition of cadet training; non-contributory State unemployment insurance; capital levy on all wealth over $5,000 to wipe out the war debt; and the abolition of the Senate.

DIES FRM INJURIES.

Received in Automobile Accident Near St. Paul L'Hermite.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 1—(Canadian Press) — Salim Courey, 42, of Three Rivers, Que., succumbed yesterday to injuries suffered in an automobile accident near St. Paul L'Hermite. This is the second death as a result of the smash up, Mrs. George Wakim, 34, being instantly killed when the automobile in which the party were driving turned a triple somersault.

HALIFAX CAN BE MADE GRAIN PORT

tions are favorable might they have some influence then?"

Mr. Smith: "They wouldn't have any influence but they might advance good arguments."

The port of St. John was also dealt with, but more briefly. Mr. Smith said it had long been known as a grain port and had not the same need of advertising in that sense as Halifax. St. John was known as a first class partial port, but there was a lack of tramp accomodation. The liners occupied most of the berths. There were no berths definitely set aside for tramp steamers. But with what accommodation there was the pool had always had the best of service.

J. E. Dalrymple, vice-president in charge of traffic of the Canadian National Railways, proceeded from the point where he left off this morning in discussing Portland. The only grant of money the old Grand Trunk had from the Dominion Government was one of some £3,000,000 for the purpose of opening up a port for Canadian commerce. At that time there was no Canadian winter port. Portland started in as a Canadian port and in the old days received direct and indirect aid from the Grand Trunk.

The Canadian National now, proceeded Mr. Dalrymple, as the Grand Trunk in the past, occupied the position of an International Railway. It handled a very large amount of business from one United States' point to another. This had been a very great assistance in keeping open Portland as an export port. The railway owned all the terminals there, elevators, freight sheds, stock yard, and the wharves except one. There was more interest in Canadian ports since consolidation, but the fact remained that the investment remained in Portland it was the duty of the management to get a return consistent with their other obligations.

At another point Mr. Dalrymple said he had heard a great deal about Maritime rights, but had never been told what was wanted in that line.

The chairman proceeded to question the vice-president on the representation made to the commission in the Maritimes in regard to lumber, steel and the fisheries.

Mr. Dalrymple said these matters had been referred to the Railway Commission. The railways were studying them, but had not had time to complete their work.

In regard to fisheries the freight time from Halifax to Montreal was seventy-seven hours. There was a faster express service at a higher rate. As delivery had to be made here in the morning it would be necessary to cut the time twenty-four hours, if at all. If the Maritime shipping could guarantee ten cars a day they would be given a special fish train.

The chairman pointed out increased business from a faster service might supply the increased traffic.

Mr. Dalrymple: "The fishing interests have never thought it important enough to come to the railways and ask for a faster schedule." There had been a conference a couple of years ago about time of delivery, which had been satisfactorily dealt with.

The vice-president said the railways were in favor of a reduction in the tariff on lumber from the Maritimes into United States' territory, but this was out of thier control.

In regard to the iron and steel industry interests in other parts of the country thought the railways had been too favorable to the British Empire Steel Corporation. He didn't see any way of making one rate for Canadian coal ex-barge at Montreal and another for similar arrivals from the United States. If there was anything in the railway act offering any leaway in this, he had an open mind on it.

Mr. Dalrymple at another point said the Intercolonial Railway came under the Board of Rilway Commissioners in 1923. Any increases in rates had taken place before the present management took charge. Changes since had been downward and he fyled a list of these.

Sir Henry Thornton will appear before the Commission to-morrow morning.

TEMPERS SHORT AS HOUSE MEETS TO EXTEND RULE

Acrimonious Discussions of Emergency Measures in British House.

SPLIT IN MINERS.

Nottinghamshire Association Asks Permission To Negotiate Local Settlement.

LONDON, Sept. 1. — (Associated Press Cable.—The House of Commons recently by a vote of 332 to 91 adopted the Government measure continuing the emergency regulations for another month in connection with the mining strike. The House today will proceed with the debate on the coal situation.

A joint meeting of the executives of the Labor party and Miners' Federation was presided over last night by Ramsay MacDonald in preparation for the discussion of the coal difficulty.

The members of the two Houses of Parliament were called back yesterday, much against their will, from their pleasant holiday preoccupations of shooting and fishing to a special session, summoned by reason of the continuance of the mining strike. Their tempers consequently were rather short and the discussions of the emergency regulations for which the meeting was specially summoned were acrimonious.

In the absence of Premier Baldwin, Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, acted as Government Leader. The members took the opporunity to try to extract information on Spanish affairs from Sir Austen, but their efforts were not very successful.

At one time the interruptions by Laborites became so pronounced that the Speaker was forced to suspend Jack Jones, ardent champion of the miners, because of angry outbursts. The debate resolved itself into an argument as to whether emergency regulations were needed. The Laborites made strenuous efforts to have them modified, but all their amendments were voted down.

Home Secretary is Criticized

Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary, moved a resolution authorizing continuance of the regulations and at the same time made the declaration that the mining districts were quiet and orderly. Ramsay MacDonald reproached the Home Secretary, asserting that he had not the shadow of justification for insulting the peaceful mining population by asking for emergency powers. Other Laborites followed along the same lines. Mr. MacDonald suggested that wisdom would have counselled Sir William Joynson-Hicks to announce that the mining people for the past months had shown themselves so magnificent that he would not ask for special powers.

Nothing developed in the House of Commons to show that any advance had been made toward new negotiations on the mining dispute, but the debate was adjourned until today, when some information may be forthcoming as to whether the meetings yesterday between the Miners' Federation and Parliamentary Labor Party will lead to any new move.

Another Conference

The miners' executive last night decided to call another delegate conference in London on Thursday next. The Miners' Federation has been put into difficulty because the Nottinghamshire Miners' Association, which had previously refused to countenance the breakaway of the Nottinghamshire miners on the seven and one-half hour basis, has asked the Federation to relieve it from the pledge and not to negotiate a settlement locally.

This is the first case of a local union breaking away from the pledge for a national settlement.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks, in his speech declared that if the union officials called out the safety men at the mines he would deem it the Government's duty to take all possible steps to prevent the destruction of the coal-mines.

STRICT LAWS GUARD BALLOTS

Stringent Regulations Ensure Secrecy of Votes on Sept. 14.

HEAVY PENALTIES.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept 1 (Canadian Press) — Exceedingly strict laws protect the secrecy of the ballots to be cast on September 14 in the 16th Canadian General Election. No man or woman is required or allowed to divulge the name of the candidate for whom he or she has voted.

At this time, while the campaign is reaching its height, and voters are preparing to march en masse to the polls to elect a new Parliament, a resume of the regulations of the Dominion Elections Act is timely. The Act governs all federal contests and amply provides for the guarding of the citizen's right to the secret ballot.

The Act requires every candidate, officer, clerk, agent or other person in attendance at a polling station or at the counting of the votes to aid in maintaining the secrecy of the voting, and no candidate, officer, clerk or other agent shall:

(a) Before the poll is closed communicate to any person any information as to whether any person on the list of voters has or has not applied for a ballot paper or voted at that polling station; or

(b) At the polling station interfere with or attempt to interfere with a voter when marking his ballot paper, or otherwise attempt to obtain information as to the candidate for whom any voter is about to vote or has voted; or

(c) At any time communicate (except to a court or judge lawfully requiring him to do so) any information as to the number on the back of the ballot paper given to any voter at a polilng station; or

(e) At any time or place, directly or indirectly induce or endeavor to induce any voter to show his ballot paper after he has marked it; so as to make known to any person the name of the candidate for or against whom he has so marked his vote; or

(f) At any time communicate to any person any information obtained at a polling station to the candidate for whom any voter at such polling station is about to vote or has voted; or

(g) At such counting attempt to obtain any information or communicate any information obtained at such counting as to the candidate for whom any vote is given in any particular ballot paper.

Clause two of the section states that "any person who violates any provisions of this section shall be guilty of an illegal practice and of an offence against this Act punishable by summary convictions as in this Act provided."

It is against the law for any voter, unless unable to read or incapacitated by blindness or other physical cause from voting in the manner prescribed by the Act, to show his ballot paper when marked, to any person so as to allow name of the candidate for whom he has voted to be known "and any person who violates the provision of this Section shall be guilty of an illegal act," states the Act.

A person unable to vote without assistance is not debarred from voting, but he is required to make oath in the prescribed form of his incapacity and the deputy returning officer may then assist the voter by marking his ballot in the manner directed by such voter, in the presence of the sworn agents of the candidates or of the sworn electors, representing the candidates in the polling station, and other person, and place such ballot in the ballot box. The deputy returning officer is required by law to indicate in the poll book where such votes have been marked by him.

In the case of a voter applying for a ballot, when the deputy returning officer is required by law to indicate in the poll book where such votes have been marked by him.

In the case of a voter applying for a ballot, when the deputy returning officer does not understand the language spoken by the applicant, he is required to swear an interpreter, who shall be the means of communication between him and the voter with reference to all matters required to enable such voter to vote, and in case no interpreter is found, such voter is not to be allowed to vote.

Voters are required to vote without undue delay, and as soon as they have voted the law requires them to leave the polling station. Provision is made that in each polling station there must be separate rooms, or parts of the room curtained off, into which the voter may retire for the purpose of marking his ballot, and these must be fitted out with a table and pencil.

A section of the Act governing procedures under the Act provides that "no person may be required to state for whom he voted" in any proceedings which may arise.

Penalties are provided in the Act for persons guilty of illegal or corrupt practice at elections. Section 86 of the Act provides that: "Any person who during an election commits a corrupt practice or an illegal practice shall ipso facto become disqualified from voting and incompetent to vote at such election. He shall also in addition to any other punishment for such offence by this or any other Act prescribed, forfeit to any person who in any competent court shall therefore sue,

"(a) for every corrupt practice committed the sum of two hundred dollars and costs; and

"(b) for every illegal practice committed the sum of one hundred dollars and costs."

Tries To Steal Woman By Fake Suicide Attempt

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 (United News).—Joseph Buckley, whose girl married another man, tried to steal his rival's thunder by attempting suicide, but all he got was a cut throat.

Buckley, who had slashed himself with a razor, told the police that tht girl had married his rival after a suicide attempt had gained her sympathy. Therefore Buckley deduced if he tried to kill himself and took good care to fail, he too might gain the sympathy of the girl, and the bride of three days might renounce her husband for him. Thus far she hasn't.

DUTCH SUB K-XIII ENDS LONG TRIP

Reaches San Francisco From Helder Without Convoy Ship.

10,000 MILES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 1—The Dutch submarine K-XIII., which arrived here a few days ago, established a new record for a submarine without the protection of a convoy. The long slender craft in its trip from Helder, Holland, traveled about 10,000 miles.

The long voyage, part of which was under water, was made without accident, although Lieut. Commander L. G. van der Kun, the boyish commander, who has piloted submarines for the eNtherlands for ten years, was pessimistic throughout the entire trip.

"But for that matter I am always pessimistic on a submarine, for that is safest," he explained. "I do not let even the men become optimistic. The regular rations of Holland gin which the navy gives to every sailor is prohibited by me on the submarine. On the surface ship it is all right. You see on a surface boat the men may drink gin and get optimistic, but under the water they must be serious and take no chances."

Thus it was a serious crew of thirty-two men who left the K-XIII in San Francisco for a two weeks' vacation on shore leave.

The crew of officers and men, and even Dr. Vening Meinsz of the Dutch Geodetic Committee, an eminent scientist, share the same long narrow room for their sleeping quarters.

Naval officers do not like sumarine assignments, Commander van der Kun said, for the reason that they have no privacy in their living quarters, which they share with their men. Nor do comforts abound on the small shark-like vessels that can plunge 350 feet under the sea at a moment's alarm. The air becomes stale and foul after long periods under water and only men of good hearts and lungs are permitted to enter this service.

The K-13 did not, he said, spend a great part of her voyage under the waves, however, but plowed slowly along on the surface at eight knots an hour. The craft can travel eighteen knots, but the Commander barred speed in the long distance run.

Started Trip May 27

The submarine left Helder on May 27 and turned its sharp prow to the southwest. They were in familiar water to the Azores, for the Dutch submarine service manoeuvres constantly throughout European waters. While the craft can carry fuel for 11,000 miles and stores for a long period, the commander depended upon a series of stops for supplies. The next stop after leaving the Azores was Las Palmas, and from there the real adventure of the journey began.

"Althought we would have been helpless without a mother ship in case of accident the men never showed a qualm when we passed out of sight of the Canaries into the Atlantic," Commander van der Kun said.

"Because of the slow speed our trip was similar to that of Columbus. We were out for a season during which we knew we would not see land.

"Each day we dropped for a period of from three-quarters of an hour to two hours under the sea, where Dr. Meinsz studied gravity under the water. He made pendulum tests daily to ascertain the truth or falsity of the German theory of floating continents leaving gravity deficiencies in their wakes. I might say that we found no evidence of a deficiency of gravity to support this hypothesis.

Crew Gets Bored

"These pendulum tests bored the crew. The psychological effect of repeating exactly the same movements for an hour or two each day for three months, wearied the men. If we had found something of importance it might have relieved the monotony. But nothing was found.

After weeks at sea, we reached Curayao in the Dutch West Indies and remained there for a time. The time ashore was a rest to all of us after the days and nights of rolling in the small boat on the waves of the Atlantic.

"From here we made the short jump to Colon through the Canal to Balboa and were in the Pacific Ocean. We then began a careful examination of gravity conditions along the western edge of the American Continent and spent long periods under the water each day.

"Mazatlan, Mexico, was our next stop and then San Francisco and you must believe we were glad of the prospect of two weeks ashore."

To Sail for East India

From San Francisco the 230-foot submarine will go to Honolulu, thence to Guam, Yap, Manila, Ambon, Banda, Bima and finally arrive at its destination, Surabaya, the Dutch naval base which protects its rubber, tea and other trade interests in the East Indies.

There are fourteen other Dutch submarines there patrolling the East Indies, but none of these ever made the long trip from their Fatherland without mother ships as convoys, according to the Commander.

The K-13 embodies the latest ideas in underwater ship construction. It was commissioned last March. The boat is propelled by two four-cycle, six-cylinder engines, which develop a total of 2,400 horsepower. They use gas oil, which is an economical fuel.

Commander van der Kun said the trip was without any outstanding experiences. The remarkable thing about it was the unbroken monotony. The ship never lost its bearings during the entire trip, save when inside the placid harbor of San Francisco.

Lost in San Francisco Harbor

Because the slender steel boat arrived a day ahead of schedule, it entered without a reception and without any pilot to guide it into the transport dock. As a result the queer craft drifted aimlessly about the harbor for hours, crossing through the yacht regatta and taking the yachtsmen's attention from the race while Commander van der Kun sought a docking place.

Evenutally a Government tug sighted the submarine, investigated it and on learning the identity of the K-13 piloted it into its berth.

Commander Van der Kun does not boost the importance of the submarine beyond that of other fighting units on the sea. He believes as a result of this trip that the best field of usefulness for the undersea craft is in reconnoitering operations.

First 10,000 Miles Hardest

"No, they do not supplant the battleship," the Commander said. "The submarine cannot do that, at least not at the present stage of its development, but it has a definite place in moving about unnoticed and discovering the whereabouts of the enemy.

"Every nation is working on the submarine. It certainly has not been outlawed. Great Britain, who complained so severely of submarine warfare ten years ago is now building some of the world's finest undersea vessels. Japan is following suit."

Commander van der Kun, talking about the comforts of submarine life, thinks it is apparent to any observer that long trips on a submarine entail hardships and cramped living, breathing of foul air and lack of the necessary perishable food supplies.

"Navy officers in Holland shun submarine service," he smiled, "for they like privacy and comfort on shipboard. But as for me, I think I shall stay with the submarine as long as it is the pleasure of my Government to keep in service. And I think that the first 10,000 miles of this trip were the hardest."

FIRE ON FARMS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The annual fire toll on American farms is $150,000,000, according to a report of the National Fire Waste Council, compiled in collaboration with the insurance department of the United States Chamber of Commerce. It is believed that by simple precautions this loss can be greatly reduced and studies are being made along that line.

TO USE CAMERA TO FOIL THIEVES

Will Operate By Means of Trigger and Flashlight.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Sept. 1—A new camera film developed for use by the Air Service, and which has the power to penetrate the land haze which has curtailed the possibility of obtaining detail in aerial photographs, may be used also in a newly developed camera designed to photograph burglars and hold-up men, it was learned yesterday.

The camera, which is the invention of John E. Seebold of LaSalle, Ill., may be concealed anywhere in a bank, post office or office building for the purpose of photographing hold-up men by day or burglars operating at night.

In the day time the camera may be worked by the pressure of one or more buttons conveniently located. At night it operates automatically when intruders come in contact with triggers attached to door knobs, safe dials, drawer pulls or other means of reaching stored property or money.

The camera built into a steel case and hidden away in the wall, desk, filing cabinets or any other place desired, employs a flashlight for nightwork. Once the intruders touch the concealed triggers, the steel case opens to permit functioning of the lens, the flashlight is fired and the picture of the intruders is recorded on a film.

The camera withdraws into its steel case and concealment out of sight and out of the way of destructive tools.

Do not be misled, if someone says, "Madam, this suite is guaranteed to be treated against moths" or "This suite is guaranteed mothproof." Just ask him if he will give you a guarantee—in writing —to replace the suite, should it be damaged by moths.

The Snyder Sani-Bilt Guarantee is a replacement guarantee and it is an absolute guarantee. Snyder's, Limited, guarantee to replace any and every Sani-Bilt Suite of upholstered furniture, if moths do the slightest damage. And this written guarantee accompanies every piece.

Will Your New Chesterfield Be

A Banquet for Moths or Mothproof?

A CHESTERFIELD or a big upholstered chair is a favorite breeding ground and a veritable banquet for moths and their progeny.

If the covering is not to their liking, they crawl, sneak or burrow into the interior and do their nefarious work out of sight—unless the fillings are mothproof.

The damage a single female moth can be the cause of is well-nigh unbelievable.

Grubs from One Female Can Destroy 100 lbs. of Wool

Scientists say that the young grubs of a single female moth can destroy 100 lbs. of wool in a year. Each moth-worm increases its original weight 385 times in the ninety days it exists, before it spins a casing and turns into a moth.

Spraying poison onto the covering of a Chesterfield is only a makeshift proposition. It leaves the interiors unprotected—an easy prey to moths. And, even if the fillings as well as the exteriors were sprayed or dipped in a moth poison, the poison would evaporate in time.

For example: Arsenic dries into dust and evaporates in the air. Gasoline kills moths, but it, also, evaporates.

The only way to make coverings and interiors permanently mothproof is not to use a poison but to make the materials permanently uneatable by moth-worms.

If moth-worms cannot eat, they cannot live. They cannot live and grow unless they can find an ingredient known to science by the name of "keratin." This "keratin" is contained in wool, feathers, hair, fur, bristles and many other materials. "Keratin" is to a moth-worm what milk is to a baby. Absolutely indispensable.

Moth Worms Cannot Exist

The industrial chemists and scientists who, after years of research, discovered and perfected the mothproofing process used by Snyder's Limited, found a chemical compound that would change this "keratin" and make it uneatable to moth-worms, for the entire life of the fabric. Moth-worms simply cannot exist on a material given this mothproofing treatment, because, lacking "keratin," there is no food in it for them. Death from starvation is their immediate and certain fate.

We guarantee the permanence of our mothproofing. We give you a printed and signed Guarantee. Read it. It fully protects you. You cannot lose. You are absolutely safe when you select a Snyder "Sani-Bilt" Chesterfield and Upholstered Chairs.

CALLES' MESSAGE TO BE READ TO-DAY

Mexican Congress Will Later Consider Religious Troubles.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—The message of President Calles to be read at the opening of the new Congress this afternoon is expected to refer to the religious controversy and foreign affairs. At a later date the members are expected to discuss the religious situation growing out of the refusal of the Roman Catholic Church to comply with the regulation of church affairs as provided for by the constitution.

The Catholic Episcopate was continuing today the consideration of how and when to petition Congress for the repeal or amendment of the religious laws.

WOMEN GO HUNTING.

Grouse Season in England Is Featured By Fair Shooters.

LONDON, Sept. 1 (United Press)—England is fast ceasing to be the man-made, male-centered paradise it has long been considered.

With the exception of The Times, which adhered to the old tradition almost every morning newspaper in London, in announcing the opening of the grouse-shooting season "played up" the fact that women were going northward for the shooting.

Some of the headlines were: "Eve Goes North for the 12th"; "Eve Heads for the Moors"; "Women Keen for Shooting."

In the good old days there was one invariable headline on the story of the opening of the grouse season: "August Twelfth."

That was, to the English view, quite sufficient.

NATIONAL FLAG LAW DEPRECATED

Smuts Angered By Suggested Law Permitting Use of Union Jack.

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—"We have been asked to pass a law allowing the Union Jack to be displayed on certain occasions," said Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, former Premier, addressing 5,000 people at a rally of the South African party here last night. "God bless my soul! Do we need a law for that?"

Gen. Smuts devoted some time to the national flag question and deprecated the "Government's forcing an unwanted flag on a section of the people contrary to the Act of Union."

MAMIE'S DANGER

"That's just it, Mamie," I said. "A loving woman has not only to resist the man she loves, but resist herself. I'm very glad that he's gone, and as for your not being able to live without him, the great tragedy of life is that hearts do not break so easily.

"You had lived without him for a long time before you saw him the other night," I admonished. "It had been two years since you ran away from him in New York."

"I know it, Judy, but you never will know how I wanted him every day and every hour while we were parted. I thought he had forgotten me. Sometimes I almost believed that he never had loved me.

"Now that I know he had been wanting me quite as much as I had longed for him, and had been unhappy all the time, it makes it just that much harder for me."

She could not hold the tears back any longer. She just put her head down on my shoulder and sobbed. As soon as she could speak, she said: "I am afraid, Judy, I'm afraid. I just seem to feel that Robert's wife is watching me every minute."

"Oh, you'll get over that," I said comfortingly. "Are you sure that you have seen her since he left?"

"Yes, once. I saw her in a car on the other side of the street as I came away from my music lesson, and I am sure that her car followed me slowly as I walked to the room I had rented in the Studio of Music, where I could practice and still keep my mother thinking that I was working."

I looked at Mamie with interest, wondering what would happen if her mother found out she was no longer working. I knew that Mrs. Ryley would never believe anything but the worst of her own daughter if she realized that Mr. Tremain had loaned her money enough to complete her musical education.

Although I didn't tell Mamie, I was very much afraid that some day Buddy Tremain's wife would make trouble for her.

All the time we had been talking I had packed up my few possessions for I had determined to move out to Joan's home that evening. Somehow I was certain that we would not go abroad for some months.

I had just locked my trunk, strapped my suit case and tied up my hat box when Jerry called.

"Father said you wanted to talk to me, Judy," said Jerry.

"I only wanted to say that my new employer insists upon my going to the theater with her and some friends tonight."

"Did you tell her that you had promised to go with me?"

"I couldn't very well do that, Jerry."

"Then you're going?"

"Why, of course."

And he rang off.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

THE REV. LAURENCE STERNE AND LADY PERCY

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

The author of "Tristram Shandy" and "A Sentimental Journey" may be imagined to have been anything but reserved in the affairs of the heart, despite the fact that he was a clergyman. And he was a rather gay lover. He loved several women whose names are known today because of their association with the classic humorist and one of them he married, Elizabeth Lumley. Among his heart correspondence, however, one of the most characteristic letters was written to the Lady Percy. It begins:

"There is a strange mechanical effect produced in writing a billet doux written a stone cast of the lady who engrosses the heart and soul of an inamorato. For this cure (but mostly because I am to dine in this neighborhood) have I, Tristam Shandy, come forth from my lodging to a coffee house, the nearest I could find to my dear Lady ——'s house and have called for a sheet of gilt paper to try the truth of this article of my creed—now for it—.

"O my dear Lady, what a dishclout hast thou made of me! I think, by the bye, this is a little too familiar an introduction for so unfamiliar a situation, as I stand with you—where heaven knows, I am kept at a distance and despair of getting an inch nearer to you. . . .

"Why would you tell you would be glad to see me? Does it give you pleasure to make me more unhappy or does it add to your triumph that your eyes and lips have turned a man into a fool, whom the rest of the town is courting as a wit?

"I am a fool, the weakest and most ductile, the most tender fool that ever woman tried the weakness of and the most unsettled in my purpose and resolutions of recovering my right mind.

"It is but an hour ago that I knelt and swore that I never would come near you, and after saying my Lord's Prayer for the sake of their close, of not being led into temptation, I sallied out like my Christian hero, ready to take the field against the world and doubting not that I should finally tramp them all down under my feet.

"And now I am so near you, within this vile stone cast of your house, I feel myself drawn into a vortex that has turned my brain upside down."

Laurence Sterne lived in the eighteenth century and his works are celebrated examples of entertaining satire written in a genial, witty, unconventional style. Strangely enough, the audacious passages with which his writings are liberally sprinkled did not react against him as a clergyman and he enjoyed the privileges of the latter profession with the fame of a bold wit and satirist.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The diamond is both the talismanic and natal stone for this day. It attracts good fortune to all who seek it with honest endeavor, and endows them with courage and strength, to meet all difficulties. To those born on an anniversary of this date, it brings the power to attract sincere and constant love, if it is set in gold and worn on the left hand.

Jet, emblem of sorrow, is the natal stone of those whose birth anniversary this is. It must be worn against the flesh in order to secure its full benefits. When this rule is observed, the gem will guard its wearer from sorrow.

Crimson is the color for today. It is said to give strength and dominance and act as a shield between those who wear it and all diseases that threaten them.

The purple aster is today's significant flower. It is particularly recommended for those who are anxious to create favorable comment upon their social entertainments.

PHYLLIS

Phyllis might be classed with the flower names, or more properly, perhaps, with the sylvan names, of which Sylvia and Laura, and Daphne are classic examples.

Phyllis means "green bough." It comes from the Greek word phyllis, signifying green leaf or bough. The tragic legend associated with the origin of the name tells how Phyllis, a Thalian damsel, hung herself because her lover did not keep his promise of returning from the wars to marry her. She was changed into an almond tree, in somewhat the same manner that Daphne was transformed.

Domitian's nurse was called Phyllis, and the name also became popular in Arcadian poetry. Like Sylvia, it was bestowed so frequently upon pretty rustic maidens, that it came to be the generic term for young girls. Later it fell to the class of handmaids, and English literature is replete with references to a "neat-handed Phyllis in the kitchen."

In modern times, the name has returned to its classic significance. Phyllis is given in baptism by those who have a fondness for fanciful names. Aside from its Grecian origin, it remains completely English, adopted now by America, of course. No other countries have granted it popularity, since it is impossible to elaborate or contract.

The amethyst is the talismanic stone of Phyllis. It promises her steadfast friends, serenity, quick intelligence, and checks over-indulgences of every sort. Friday is her lucky day and 3 her lucky number. The primrose, signifying simplicity, is her flower.

The tremendous flow of water necessary in the operation of a large electric generating plant astonishes most people. The new Avon plant outside of Cleveland, O., uses 420,000 gallons per minute mainly for the condensation of steam from the huge turbines that drive the generators. This means that the plant uses about as much water every half hour as is consumed in a whole day by a city of 100,000 population.

Two Smart Sweaters in Modish Plaid.

Plaid is coming into prominence with the advent of Fall. Gay plaided woolen fabrics are used for smart coats, while plaid woolen sweaters are smart for sports wear.

A stunning Jacquard plaid in tan and brown is carried out in the short-sleeved vestee sweater, shown in the upper drawing. The effective little turn-over collar is plain tan, while the sports hat is tan felt with a brown grosgrain band.

The lower costume consists of a two-piece sweater frock worn beneath a coat sweater, this double sweater idea being one that we have adopted from modish Englishwomen. The frock in this case is soft blue, while the coat sweater is gray striped in two shades of blue.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

FOR THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1926.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Mercury and Uranus are in benefic aspect today, according to astrology. This should be a fairly fortunate planetary rule, although there are certain adverse influences.

Again the Moon exercises a pleasantly stimulating and helpful power, making for foresight and wise judgment.

Under this direction of the stars newspapers and magazines should have material for many sensations, part of them producing hopefulness and part forebodings.

Messages of great moment are to pass between nations, it is foretold, and new responsibilities for the United States are forecast.

Alertness of mind and power to use wisdom in making decisions should be added while this configuration prevails.

Religious and spiritual aspiration are supposed to be quickened while this planetary government continues.

This is not an auspicious day for leaders of any sort, whether ecclesiastical or political. Even the President may expect unjust criticism under this sway.

Revival of many lines of business with increase of good fortune for workers is indicated by the stars.

Manufacture of many sorts of machinery will be pushed this month, it is foretold, and this country will export many steel and iron inventions.

Aviation is to have an impetus by means of a new airplane which is to be made in the United States and much used in Europe.

London astrologers prophesy complete reorganization of the British Labor party and danger of class warfare in England.

Trouble over railway and steamship transportation appears to be foreshadowed with the possibility of a terrible accident.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a quiet year marked with great prosperity.

Children born on this day probably will prosper all through life. These subjects of Virgo usually are exceedingly patriotic and they attain prominence in public service.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(United Press).—Midsummer finds the fashionable women in the eastern part of the United States wearing extremely summery dresses in preference to dark silks. While silk predominates over cotton materials, colors are summery, ranging from white and pastel shades to brilliant reds, greens and yellows.

White is extremely popular wherever smart women gather. For day wear white pleated skirts with matching blouses or high lustered satin blouses predominate. Red is often combined with white, as where a white frock trimmed or flowered with red is worn with a matching red wide-brimmed straw hat. Entire red costumes including dress and hat are noted at Atlantic City.

Monotone costumes with hat and dress matching are a bit more popular than contrasting outfits. Pastel greens, rose beige, pansy purple, beige and yellow are popular colors used for these monotone effects.

For afternoon wear small-flowered georgette and chiffon frocks worn with wide-brimmed transparent hats are the rule. Lace of plain colored material is often combined with the flowered gown at hem, sleeves and scarf ends to break the figured effect. Flowing lines are strictly adhered to in flowered models. Backgrounds are either neutral grey or tan and are matched by shoes and hosiery.

Small felt hats are those generally worn with the jumper sports dress. Large or medium-brimmed hats conform best with the more dressy type of frock.

Black chiffon and black lace are very popular for evening and dinner occasions. Underslips are often flesh color and flesh-colored lace or chiffon is often introduced in the flowing skirt. Transparent hems are frequent. Beige dyed lace combined with net or chiffon forms dinner frocks for many smart young misses. Panels, tiers, pleats and aprons tend to give the fluffy effect so desired.

Shoes at present run to light colored kids, fancy straps, raffia trimmings, etc. Red and green shoes are worn with white costumes at some of the beaches. Hosiery remains in nude and deeper parchment shades.

Women find Bon Ami Powder convenient and time-saving on the bigger cleaning jobs—pots and pans of aluminium, copper, agate and tin, bathtubs and refrigerators, Congoleum and linoleum floor-coverings, and many other things.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PAINT BRUSH.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily was about to hop away from his hollow stump bungalow, he saw Johnnie Bushy tail, the squirrel boy, sitting on the front steps looking very sad.

"What's the matter, Johnnie?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Oh, I feel so sorry for my brother Billie," chattered Johnnie.

"Why, what has happened to Billie?" the bunny gentleman wanted to know.

He had to go to the dentist's to have a tooth pulled," and Johnnie almost sobbed. Oh, dear!"

That is very kind of you to have sympathy for your brother, but why cry about it?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

I'm not exactly crying for Billie," sighed Johnnie. I'm crying for myself, 'cause I got to have a tooth pulled tomorrow."

Oh, that's different," said Uncle Wiggily. But now, to make you and Billie both forget about such sad things as pulled teeth, I am going to take you on a picnic to the woods. Come, we'll wait outside the dentist's office until Billie comes out and then we'll have fun."

With that Johnnie's tears dried up and blew away, and when Billie's tooth was pulled (and it didn't hurt him half as much as he thought it would), the bunny uncle took the two little squirrels on a picnic. With them went Jingle and Jangle, two of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit girls. They found a shady place in the woods, near a spring, to eat the lunch Nurse Jane had put in baskets for them, but it was a little early yet, so Uncle Wiggily said:

I will sleep before I eat," and he picked out a mossy green log for his bed.

Pleasant dreams," chattered Johnnie, as Uncle Wiggily was closing his eyes and giving a last twinkle to his pink nose. Pleasant dreams!" Oh dear! I wish I could have pleasant dreams!" croaked a sad voice and from the rushes at the edge of the sprin sprang up a big bull frog

"Why can't you have pleasant dreams?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Because I am too sad," croaked the frog, and then the animals children noticed that he was all splashed with red, green, blue and yellow paint.

"Because I'm too sad," said the frog.

"I am an artist," went on the frog. "I have a picture almost done, but just now the blue jay bird swooped down and took away my brushes, and now I can't finish my painting. Oh, dear!"

And just then Johnnie looked at the rabbit gentleman and chattered: "Oh, Uncle Wiggily! Your tail is just like a brush. Can't you let Mr. Frog take it?"

"Not very well, it is too tightly fastened to me," said the rabbit. "But, Mr. Frog, if you had your partly finished picture here, and your paints, and would tell me what to do, perhaps I could dip my tail in the colors, and hop this way and hop that, up and down, putting on streaks and tints until the picture was done."

"Oh, wonderful!" croaked the frog. Quickly he brought from the rushes "Oh, wonderful!" croaked the frog. Quickly he brought from the rushes a square of white birch bark on which was a partly finished picture. The frog then spread out on a log some daubs of green, blue, red, black and yellow paint he had made from the flowers. "Now, Uncle Wiggily," croaked the artist, "please dip your tail in some red paint and hop to left," which the bunny did.

Next he dipped his tail in the blue paint and bobbed up and down, rubbing the color on the bark.

"What did I paint that time?" asked Mr. Longears, for, of course, having his back to the picture, he couldn't see what he was doing.

"You painted part of a house," said the frog. "And now dip your tail in the blob of black paint and jump up and down hard," and while Uncle Wiggily was doing this Jingle and Jangle screamed.

"What did I paint that time?" cried Uncle Wiggily.

"You painted the nose of the Bob Cat and a lot of the black paint got in his eyes!" croaked the frog, "and he's running away as fast as a roller skate!"

And that's just what happened. The Bob Cat, seeing Uncle Wiggily's back turned, tried to slink up and nibble the bunny's ears, but with the black paint in his eyes, Uncle Wiggily daubing it there with his tail as he flopped up and down, the bad chap couldn't see, and howling, he ran away.

Then Uncle Wiggily dipped his tail in yellow paint and finished the picture, and after the picnic, to which the frog was invited, the funny croaking artist sold the painting for money enough to buy a new brush. So everything came out all right.

And if the pepper caster doesn't sprinkle salt on the tail of the wild cucumber and make it tame, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the snow.

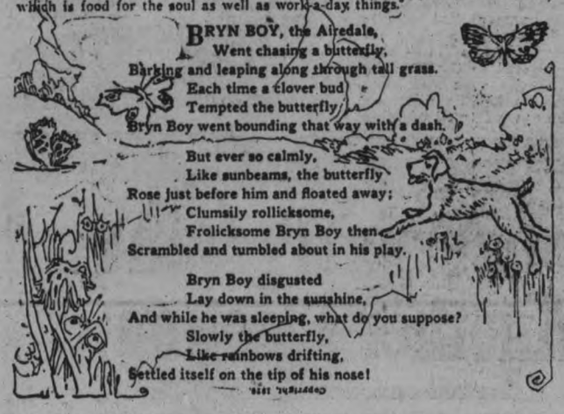
Chasing Butterflies

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

OH-O-O! the lovely butterfly!" cried the little girl running after the bright beauty. "Aw, but what good is it?" asked the little boy, and went on playing ball. So it is in life, there are those who run after the beauty of the butterfly, and those who are so engrossed in practical things that they have no time for the butterflies. In training our children to meet life let us take care that they strike a balance. Teach the little butterfly chasers that beauty and play is not all, and the little hard headed practical people that life holds that which is food for the soul as well as work-a-day things."



BRYN BOY, the Airedale,
Went chasing a butterfly,
Barking and leaping along through tall grass.
Each time a clover bud
Tempted the butterfly
Bryn Boy went bounding that way with a dash.
But ever so calmly,
Like sunbeams, the butterfly
Rose just before him and floated away;
Clumsily rollicksome,
Frolicksome Bryn Boy then
Scrambled and tumbled about in his play.
Bryn Boy disgusted
Lay down in the sunshine,
And while he was sleeping, what do you suppose?
Slowly the butterfly,
Like rainbows drifting,
Settled itself on the tip of his nose!

KERENSKY DEBTS MAY BE SETTLED

MOSCOW, Sept. 1 (United Press)—A high Soviet diplomatic official in an interview today emphasized that the Soviet government was ready to discuss the settlement of American claims without reservations. He declared it was possible for his government to recognize the Kerensky debt which contituted the bulk of the American claims without recognizing the Czarist debts which comprise the bulk of the English and French claims.

Daily Short Story

LOANED AND LOST

The telephone on the tiny table beside Mrs. Van Warner's chaise longue tinkled. It was the only telephone in the house that merely tinkled and its possessor had spent much effort in having the bell thus subdued. Problems such as these were the most weighty matters that fell upon the pretty shoulders of the mistress of Holme Hillside.

"Yes?" she said, putting her lips to the glass transmitter. "Oh, yes. Why——"

There was a long pause while Clarice Van Warner evidently listened to an amusing conversation.

"But—of—course. I couldn't refuse to let you have him—if you really think it would be all right. Yes, indeed, I'll have him there at nine sharp. Good-by, dear."

Clarice's neighbor, if one living two miles distant on the next estate may be called a neighbor, Helen Simpson, had made a most unusual request—if Clarice would lend Hawkins, the new English butler at Holme Hillside, to her for the evening.

"You see my dear, I have a guest for the week-end—a girl from London, who is perfectly mad about bridge, and Tom and I are just ordinary players. The snow has cut us off so thoroughly from communication with the rest of our friends that I was wondering if it couldn't be done with safety. Nellie is sailing home next week. We have four others in the house for another table and the happy idea came to me to ask you for Hawkins. He's really quite a gentleman. I know he plays the game because I have seen him watch us over at your house as we played when he was getting a bite of supper ready for us. He can be merely a house guest at a neighbor's home come to play bridge with us—and that's that."

Hawkins did not intimate by the flutter of an eye-lash whether the idea would be distasteful or agreeable to him. He merely dressed himself with great care and departed in time to be ready for cards at nine o'clock.

At the Simpsons' he was greeted as a friend and acted his part admirably. The tables were ready and he was presented to his partner, Miss Hutchinson.

No one noticed the several shades of pallor that chased each other across the face of the little English guest. Neither did they observe the effort with which James Hawkins held himself together when he beheld his partner.

The game progressed and both young people had resumed a calm that seemed almost natural. Both played a good game of cards and the hostess thought she had made a great success of her daring venture.

When the game was over there was to be the usual bit to eat, served on the card tables by the fireside.

Hawkins rose and spoke to his hostess. "I am taking a train tonight, Mrs. Simpson—perhaps my hostess told you?"

"Oh—I'm sorry—but if you must go—trains are most uncertain in this weather and driving is treacherous." Helen was relieved and yet she was a little sorry to have the fellow depart. He had proved himself so good a partner. What tommy-rot caste lines were, she thought.

Nellie Hutchinson was torn between a hopelessness at having lost again the man whom she had loved for years and who had gone out to America from their home in England to "make good" before claiming her hand—and relief at the strain she had been under to keep her knowledge of him a secret from those who were about.

Seven of them sat about the fire and chatted about the game, discussing, among other features, the charm and excellence in skill of their new acquaintance, Mr. Hawkins.

"He is a guest—or was—at the Thorne home just down the Lane," fibbed Helen glibly. "Quite a likeable chap I thought."

The telephone bell rang in the hall. Helen herself answered it.

"My dear, it is for you," she said surprised, and speaking to Nellie. "An unknown lover—at this hour!"

Nellie sought the telephone and closed the small closet that enclosed it.

"Jim——" she uttered.

"Nellie——"

And then the butler of Holme Hillside explained to her what was taking place. He was investigating the domestic service situation in America for a series of labor articles for an English magazine and he had been finding out at first hand just what were the vexing problems. He had written to her but no reply had ever reached him and his faith alone was holding him close to the belief that she was still waiting for him.

A few days afterwards Clarice Van Warner called up her young friend Helen to tell her that the splendid butler was leaving. "Whatever did you do to him that night?" she asked.

"Nothing, my dear," Helen replied, "but I am dying to talk to you about something that seems all very mysterious to me. A 'phone call late that night—Nellie's sudden engagement in town the next day and now—Hawkins leaving. I'll be over."

But by the time the two friends had been able to get together, the story had slipped out and the romance was being discussed in every group.

Nellie Hutchinson had married her old lover, Hawkins, the butler, pro tem, of Holme Hillside.

LIBERAL RALLY AT YOUNG'S POINT

Hon. Nelson Parliament Takes Up Robb Budget and Liberal Record.

On Monday night a Liberal rally was held at Young's Point before a crowded house. Hon. Nelson Parliament was the speaker of the evening, and in a few well-chosen remarks spoke of the pleasure it afforded him to be on the same platform as the candidate, J. J. Duffus, for he had known him for years.

Mr. Parliament dealt with the Robb budget, stating that everybody benefits by the reductions made, especialy in the income tax and penny postage. In the debt reduction he said that it scarcely ever was known that a Conservative Government, either Federal or Provincial, while in power reduced the expenses of the country, and that such reductions were made when the Liberals were in power. The unification of Canada was also a topic of Mr. Parliament's speech when he pointed out that all classes should unite for the general good of the country.

The achievements of Liberal rule were the Canadian favorable trade balance, debt reduction, reduction in the duty on agricultural implements, reduction of duty on automobiles, abolition of the tax on receipts, lowering of the income tax, return to penny postage, extension of the British preference, and the wonderful improvement shown in the Canadian National Railways.

The hottest spot on earth is probably an Italian settlement in the desert regions of North Africa, near Tripoli. In this district 136.4 degress in the shade has been registered.

CANADIAN DELEGATE OPPOSES FOURTH RESERVATION OF U.S.A. COVERING WORLD COURT ENTRY

Sir George Foster Points Out Significance of Clause.

BLOCKS AMENDMENT.

First Three Reservations Are Accepted With Little Debate.

GENEVA, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Opposition to the United States reservation that the statutes of the permanent court of international justice could not be amended without the consent of the United States was strenuously opposed by the Right Hon. Sir George Foster at the conference of members of the court considering reservations here today.

This condition is embodied in Reservation Number 4, which also provides that the United States may withdraw from the court at any time after adherence to the international tribunal. The conference had agreed to Reservations 1, 2 and 3, and were discussing Number 4 when Sir George rose to the point that the United States reservation, if accepted, would prevent members of the League of Nations to which the United States has no obligations from ever amending the court statutes without the permission of the United States. The Canadian Senator remarked that League members might deem an amendment necessary in future, and he doubted wisdom of the United States inhibition.

Sir Georges position was warmly supported by M. Markovitch, former Minister of Justice of Jugo-Slavia.

Three of the five reservations under which the United States is willing to become a member of the permanent court of international justice were swiftly approved at the conference of members of the court here today.

The reservations were Numbers 1, 2, and 3. They provide that United States adherence to the court shall not be taken to involve any relations by the United States to the League of Nations or assumption of any obligations under the Versailles treaty; that the United States shall be permitted to participate on a basis of quality in the election of the judges of the court by the counsel and assembly of the League, and that the United States be authorized to contribute a fair part of the court's expenses.

Opening this afternoon's session the conference took up the fifth reservation without definitely passing judgment on the fourth. It was explained that the conferees wished clarification on the points of international law involved in the latter.

"S. P. C. Cabbages Suggested In England

LONDON, (United Press.)—English science may shortly be confronted with a vigorous campaign for the establishment of a "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Cabbages," or some similar organization to take its place in the vegetable world beside the Anti-Vivisection Society.

One London newspaper editorially points out that the efforts of science to discover the sensitiveness of plant life "seems to me to have dealt a severe blow to the more sentimental sort of vegetarians."

Referring to Sir Jagadis Bose's recent experiments with the injections of poisons into plants, the columnist demanded, "Is it any less cruel to dissect a living guinea pig than a living cabbage?"

STATE POLICE FIRE AT CROWD

Strikers and Friends Try To Force Entry To Manville Plant.

TEAR BOMBS USED.

MANVILLE, R.I., Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—State police and striking operatives of the Manville Jenckes Company's plant here engaged in a pitched battle last night when a crowd of strikers and sympathizers, numbering 1,800, tried to storm the bridgehead leading to the mill.

A man whose name could not be learned tried to break through and was pushed back by the troops. The crowd then rushed the police cordon and the troopers drove them back with tear gas bombs. After three-quarters of an hour the fighting was still in progress, with the police still occasionally hurling a bomb as further a ttempts to take the bridge were made.

Shortly after 9 o'clock troopers fired a volley from their revolvers into the crowd. One man ran into a store bleeding from the arm. There were probably others injured.

At 9.40 p.m. the troopers fired another volley of six or seven shots and one of them struck a boy in the leg. A third person, a man, is reported to have been struck. The boy was carried to a store, of which a window was shattered by another bullet. He was in a practical state of collapse.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, Sept. 1.—For the past week a medicine company has been located on the school property with a first class magician, acrobat, actor and all round comedian, who assisted the doctor. A nightly programme has been attracting scores of people from village and countryside, while the side line of a popular lady contest whose votes piled up each night according to the medicine sales, was sufficient to draw the dollars, quarters and dimes from the pockets of those people who love to see a race, in exchange for medicine, tooth powder, etc. Excitement and sales ran high on Wednesday, the last night, hundreds being present to boost the winner of the silver wrist watch on to victory. Miss Vera Fisher was the lucky girl, having secured over 6,000 votes.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Callendar and two children, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Callendar, Sr., and their daughter, of Ashtabula, Ohio, and Mr. W. Callendar, of Texas, are holidaying at Fee's Landing.

The Public Principal L. Curtis, accompanied by his brother, enjoyed a unique vacation, having taken a hike or stroll to Niagara Falls and back. They were away about ten days and enjoyed to the fullest the freedom of the 'open road.' Carrying their sleeping blankets, they slept wherever night overtook them. One nights camp being held within view of the mist and the illumination of the mighty Niagara.

Extensive improvements have been made to the village restaurant, operated by Mr. G. Tripp. The tea room and ice cream parlor is an entirely new addition built recently, with hardwood floor, etc., the space permitting many more tables than formerly. The room is gayly decorated with pennants and Chinese lanterns, and a good radio prominute is usually on. An up-to-the-minute electric refrigerator has recently been installed, thus doing away with the re-packing of ice cream and also keeping foodstuffs in perfect condition.

The first corn boil of the season was held by a number of young people of the village and district to Stephenson's Grove on Monday evening, followed by a dance in the Tannery club rooms.

Mr. Harry Endicott has disposed of his farm and intends opening up a grocery store in Mr. Isaac Fee's new shop, part of which was recently occupied by Mr. R. Tate.

Digging operations have commenced for the cellar of Mr. Walter Mitchell's new residence, behind Mr. McGinness' store.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

THORNTON SAYS CANADIAN ROUTE IS IMPERATIVE

Just as Necessary For Rest of Canada as For Maritimes.

TELLS COMMISSION.

Management of C.N.R. Must Have Regard For Deficits.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—The construction of an all-Canadian route to a Canadian all-year port was just as imperative to the rest of Canada as to the Maritime Provinces, Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, told the Royal Commission investigating the position of these provinces in confederation to-day.

"I think that indisputable," Sir Henry later told Sir Rae Duncan, when the commission chairman told him the Maritimes made the point that they should not be called upon to bear the entire burden of the route. It was just a matter of deciding how the burden should be borne. The management of the National Railways understood their mandate was to relieve the country of the burden which the railways had placed upon it and give efficient service. Had the former burden been continued he felt it would have been a menace to the financial position of the country.

"I think it would be fatal for Canada if the railways are operated without reasonable regard for deficits and the national situation."

Sir Henry said he realizes there was dissatisfaction and even discontent in the Maritimes, and he had devoted much anxious thought to the problem. "If we admit, and I have felt it for a long time that it is in the interests of the Maritimes and the Dominion as a whole, that something must be done, and done speedily, to assist the Maritimes to share in the growing prosperity of the Dominion; then the problem is to find means."

He announced that he hoped to spend some time in an office in Moncton each month in order to get in direct contact with the situation.

FAREWELL PARTY.

School Teacher Presented With Wrist Watch on His Departure.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Sept. 1.—On Friday evening last a large number of the young people of the district gathered at the home of Mr. Roy Fry to honor Mr. Everett Fairman on the eve of his departure for Northern Ontario. Mr. Fairman has been for three years the very popular and highly successful teacher of S.S. No. 2, Petherick's Corners. Always prominent in the social life of the community and bearing office in the People's League and the local Orange Lodge, he has been one of the leaders in all community events ever since he began teaching here. During the past summer he resigned his position here, although pressed to continue for another three-year term, and accepted a position, as principal of the school at Parquis Junction, near Timmins in Northern Ontario. While the people of the district regret that Mr. Fairman has decided to leave, they feel that he is to be congratulated on his advancement in his chosen profession.

During the course of the evening's entertainment, Mr. Fairman was presented with a handsome wrist watch, the presentation being made by Arthur Petherick, one of his former pupils. Mr. George Brunton read the follow address:

Dear Everett.—We, your pupils of S. S. No. 2 and friends of Peterick's Corners, have gathered here this evening to spend one more social hour, prior to your departure from out midst.

In the three years that you have yourself the friendship of every been with us, you have won for member of the community and mere words cannot express our regret at your departure for another field of labor.

As a teacher your work has been of the highest order and your pupils hold for you feelings of affection as well as respect. In the work of the League, in the community life, social and sporting activities, your quality of leadership has made every undertaking a success.

As a small token of our regard for you, we would ask you to accept this gift and hope that sometime it may remind you of the happy years we have spent together here.

Rest assured that the good wishes and kind regards of your many friends will follow you to your new field of endeavor in the great northland.

Signed on behalf of the pupils of S.S. No 2 and the young people of Peterick's Corners.

Gerald Petherick, Donald Kerr, Clarence Barnum, Roy Fry.

Mr. Fairman, in a few words, thanked his friends for the gift and expressed his complete surprise at the event arranged in his honor.

The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, with music supplied by Spencer's Orchestra.

Everyone did justice to the good things to eat served by the hostesses of the occasion, Miss Jennie Fry and Mrs. Minnie Petherick.

New York Market Strong With Railroads Leading

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press)—The stock market today continued to display unusual vitality and strength for the Labor Day week session. Stimulated by the reduction in call money rates, operations for a rise were conducted with increased vigor in all sections of the list. Railroad shares continued to lead the advance, but industrials gathered strength rapidly when bullish demonstrations were started in steel and motor shares, recent laggards.

The weekly steel trade reviews emphasized the unusually high rate of mid-summer activity with prices holding firm. United States Steel Common was again taken in large blocks, one transaction of 6,500 shares at 152 1-2, involving nearly $1,000,000, attracting considerable attention.

The buying of Rails spread to the low priced non dividend paying issues, additional new 1926 peak prices being recorded by Colorado and Southern, Southern Railway, Delaware and Hudson, and Missouri Pacific preferred. Strong demand also developed for equipments under the leadership of Union Tank Car and Westinghouse Airbrake, on the theory that the unprecedented freight traffic would call for additional rolling stock and other material before the end of the year.

A rapid advance in some of the high price issues indicated a scarcity in flowing supply. United States Cast Iron Pipe was bid up nearly ten points before the end of the third hour, and Dupont climbed over six. Dodge Brothers "A" lert the advance in the motor group, selling at least three points above yesterday's final quotations.

Total sales crossed 1,500,000 shares before the end of the third hour.

Toronto List Broad And Prices Stronger

TORONTO, September 1. Canadian Press. — Consolidated Smelters reached a new high for all time in the trading on the Toronto exchange today, touching 251 7-8 at which figure it closed for a net gain of 1 7-8 points. Trading was fairly brisk in this issue. Winnipeg Railway closed at noon at 58 for a net gain of 4 points, and Brazilian firmed 1-2 to 117 1-4. Atlantic Sugar dropped 6 points to 19 3-4 in light trading. The market was spread over a moderate list and prices were generaly stronger.

Mining stocks were firm, Dome gaining 10c to 11.40 and Nipissing 20 to 19.20. Massey Harris common firmed 1-2 to 64 1-2 while Page Hersey preferred eased one point to 101. Bell Telephone, which was rather active, closed unchanged at 138 and International Nickle was also unchanged at 35 3-8. Gooderham and Worts new was off one eighth to 30 3-4. Bank of Toronto gained one point to 219.

Nipissing Gains 35 While Rest of List Drops

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.) — Nipissing's jump of 35 cents to 6.83 featured trading on Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Noranda firmed 15 cents to 19.20. Belle Ellen Lorrain which had been accepted for listing on the standard market was called for trading for the first time to-day, closing at 21 cents.

McIntyre declined ten cents to 26.20, Teck Hughes two to 4.57, Lakeshore five to 14.65, Gold Hill three to 46, Dome five to 11.30, Vipond one to 1.89, Wright Hargreaves one to 8.69, and Tough Oakes 1 1-2 to 45 1-2. Amulet was off five cents to 1.35 and Hill Top 2 1-2. Keeley gained two to 1.50, Hollinger was unchanged at 19.30.

Wet Weather In Canada Send Wheat Price Up

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press) — Reports of wet harvest weather in Canada led to an early advance today in wheat prices here. At some Canadian points heavy rains since yesterday were reported still in progress. Opening at 3-8 off to 5-8 up, wheat rose sharply all around. Corn and oats were also strong, corn starting 3-8 to 1 3-8 higher and subsequently gaining a little more provisions tended downward.

The unofficial crop estimates issued today averaged 215,000,000 bushels as the total production of United States spring wheat this season. These figures regarding wheat proved to be about as expected, but estimates on corn and oats were moderately bullish, corn estimates not showing as much enlargement as had been looked for.

Deliveries of wheat on September contracts in Chicago today amounted to 845,000 bushels. The deliveries were well taken and apparents had no effect in stopping the upward trend of values.

Vote Conservative and Avoid Another Election

This is the slogan that is daily growing more and more in favour as election day approaches.

The people of Canada are "fed up" with political bickering.

They have had five years of government under a Liberal-Progressive alliance, and they want no more of it.

They want to see a responsible government in power, with a working majority over all, a government that will not have to cater to a few irresponsible independents, but will establish stability in public life so that Canada may get down to business.

And, wanting these things, they are turning to the Conservative party, knowing that only by giving Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen a decisive majority can they get what they desire.

There is not the slightest chance in the world for Mr. King to go back to Parliament with enough straight Liberals to carry on a government.

The most sanguine supporter of Mr. King does not hope for anything more than the election of enough Liberals and Progressives combined to out-vote the Conservative party.

Is a Liberal-Progressive combination the kind of government the Canadian people want to put back into power.

Do they want to hand the reins of office back to a government composed of Liberals, Progressives, Independents and Labor representatives of the Woodsworth type, or a government which to hold the support of all these factions would have to give them all the freak legislation they asked for?

Do you workers of Peterborough want the industries that supply you with employment at the mercy of whatever tariff slashes some of the western wheat-growing supporters of Mr. King might decide they want?

The answer to all these questions will, unless all indications fail, be an emphatic "NO."

The people of Canada are turning to Mr. Meighen because they feel that only by his election can stability be secured.

Only by his election can Canada get a chance to put her house in order and attain that prosperity that her matchless resources should give her.

Only by his election can an end be put to the bartering and bargaining, the compromising and trading that has turned Parliament into an auction room.

West Peterborough will do a splendid day's work for Canada by re-electing E. A. PECK, the Conservative candidate.

West Peterborough may as well ride with the winners; for remember

Meighen is Sure to Win.

PERJURY CASE IS DISMISSED

Magistrate Finds Liberal Agent in Vancouver Had Been Deceived.

A SIMPLETON.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 1. — The charge of perjury against Amos G. Ferguson, Liberal campaign worker, in connection with alleged objections to nearly 4000 names on the voters' list in Vancouver constituency was dismissed in the police court yesterday by Magistrate J. A. Findlay who declared that apparently some person in connection with the preparation of the affidavits did intend to mislead the revising officer, but that person was not Ferguson. He is a "simpleton rather than a criminal," said the judge.

NO CONFIRMATION OF NEW MARRIAGE

Reported That Berlins Will Be Re-Married To Placate Father.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (United Press).—Reports that Irving Berlin, song writer, and his wife, the former Ellin Mackay, will be re-married to-morrow in a Catholic church to placate Clarence H. Mackay, the bride's father, and give their expected child a Catholic rearing are published here to-day, but are without confirmation.

Mackay, the wealthy head of the Postal Telegraph Company, opposed his daughter to Berlin, and has not seen them, so far as is known, since their elopement and marriage January 4th.

Berlin has denied the report since returning here from Europe and Canada, where the pair spent their honeymoon, but the report persists the priests of St. Patrick's Cathedral where the Morning Telegraph today says the re-marriage will be performed denied knowledge of the purported plan. Berlin was nowhere to be found, nor was Mrs. Berlin

KING TAKES UP TAX REDUCTIONS

Liberal Leader Speaks at Two Meetings in Nova Scotia.

STARTING WEST.

ANTIGONISH, N. S., September 1. — Surpluses in public accounts, reductions in taxation, old age pensions, and constitutional issues were matters dealt with by the Right Hon. Mackenzie King here last night.

The leader of the opposition said that the country as a whole prospered from the removal of considerable taaxtion this year. The Liberal leader last night concluded his campaign in Nova Scotia. In Port Hawesbury on Cape Breton Island, terrific downpour drove the crowd to the town hall. Here in Antigonish-Guysboro constituency the crowd filled the curling rink at the meeting. On Wednesday Mr. King wil hold two meetings on Prince Edward Island, and on Thursday he will start west again, stopping at Campbellton in New Brunswick and New Carlisle in Quebec.

The final week of the campaign will be spent in Ontario.

Many of the tax reductions introduced by the Liberals had been opposed by the Conservatives from Nova Scotia and it was to be wondered, he said, if these men felt that the right to lower taxes was among the maritime rights of which they talekd.

Mr. King was sure that the Maritime commission under Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, would do great justice to the Maritime provinces in its legislation to provide for coking ovens. It was not reached at the close of the session. One would have thought that the Conservative members from these provinces would have asked to have the measure re-introduced. But there was no demand and the matter remained in abeyance.

If the Liberals were returned and there was any demand for the establishment of the coking plants, the government would be prepared to carry it out.

OH, YES, CORN DOES GROW TALL

HUNTSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 1. — The tall corn stories have begun. Corn-belt farmers, having plowed and cultivated their fields into the assurance of a successful year, have turned to the creation of fiction.

Several report that they were lost for days in their fields. One Randolph County man declares he will saw his corn stalks up into firewood. A falling stalk is said to have broken the backs of a team of mules.

If all the tall corn stories were placed end to end, they would lie —and lie and lie.

SEAT IN COUNCIL ALLOTTED SPAIN

Commission Adopts Scheme To Give Semi-Permanent Status in League.

ONE FOR POLAND.

GENEVA, Sept. 1 (Canadian Preses).—The sub-committee of the Commission charged with examining into the reorganization of the League Council after a six-hour discussion yesterday, finally adopted Lord Cecil's scheme with slight modifications. This is calculated to satisfy the aspirations of Spain and Poland for semi-permanent seats in the Council, of which the tenure is three years. The sub-committee reported to the full committee at 11 o'clock this morning.

Yesterday's conferees, according to one of them, "reached perfect agreement with the exception of one resolution."

Another delegate pointed out that the Assembly under the draft approved by the sub-committee can, by a two-thirds vote, give re-eligibility to any non-permanent member of the Council whose term expires in 1926, and that the Assembly this year can also by the same vote endow the new non-permanent members with re-eligibility in advance.

Hereaefter, however, the re-eligibility of outgoing non-permanent members of the Council will be voted on by the Assembly only after the expiration of their three-year mandate.

Lord Cecil, author of the original plan, propounded last May, said that he was highly satisfied with the accord arrived at. Formal adoption of the Cecil-Fromageot compromise was greeted with applause by all the members of the sub-committee.

M. Sokla, Poland's reperesentative on the sub-committee, declined to state whether the accord satisfied Poland's aspirations, but M. de Brockere of Belgium expressed the opinion that both Poland and Spain should be content with the solution reached, as it met their desires.

Reply to Spain.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Now that the Spanish Government has been amicably informed by Great Britain and France of the status of Tangier, these two Governments are ready to do what they can to favor Spanish interests more directly in the administration of the Moroccan city without any change in the international form of its government. Both the British and French notes which were sent to Spain yesterday made it clear that the town cannot be annexed to the Spanish zone in Morocco.

Increase in Ships and Cargoes During June 1926.

DROP FOR YEAR.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The number of ships entering all French ports in the month of June totalled 4,028 as against 3,646 in May. The goods unloaded amounted to 2,021,400 tons, showing an increase of 38,000 tons over the preceding month.

According to advices just received by Bankers Trust Company from its French Information Service, the tonnage of goods loaded in June totalled 838,600 tons as against 725,400 tons in May. The general traffic of goods in French ports which, when compared to the statistics for France's foreign trade, represents 51.9 per cent. of the imports and 30.5 per cent. of the exports can be seen from the following table:

	Goods (in Tons) Unloaded	Loaded
January	2,502,300	898,000
February	2,690,800	814,000
March	2,759,600	947,000
April	2,505,600	884,000
May	1,983,400	725,000
June	2,021,400	838,000
1st six months 1926	14,463,100	5,106,000
1st six months 1925	16,083,800	7,167,000
Difference in 1926	1,620,700	2,061,000

The traffic of French ports thus shows a contrary tendency to that of France's general trade, which for the first six months of 1926, when compared with the corresponding period of 1925, shows an increase of 565,000 tons for imports and 819,000 tons for exports.

In the order of their importance, judged by the total value of incoming and outgoing traffic, France's ports ranked as follows during June:

Marseilles	401,200 tons
Rouen	396,800 tons
Le Havre	211,500 tons
Strasbourg	185,000 tons
Bordeaux	162,700 tons
Nantes	129,900 tons

DISCOVERS PLANT HAS 6TH SENSE

LONDON, Sept. 1. — Plants not only have their vices, vanities and regular hours of sleep, but some possess a sixth sense as well, according to Sir Jagadis Rose, one of Britain's greatest scientists and authorities on plant life.

The sixth sense possessed by certain species is a mysterious force which permits them to detect minute changes in the intensity of light, changes that go unnoticed by the human eye.

The mimosa plant spends its life in a leisurely way. It wakes gradually between 8 and 9 o'clock and noon, remaining alert until evening and falling fully asleep only in the early hours of the morning.

Sir Jagadis has perfected a marvelous piece of apparatus which gives plants under observation a questioning shock every hour of the day and night and records the answers.

FLINT S. A. BAND CONCERT

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was well filled last night for the concert by the Flint Salvation Army Band, from Flint, Mich., an organization widely known in musical circles, and a programme was given that showed the ability, individual and collective, that gained for the band its splendid reputation. Composed of some fifty members, the band presents a well-balanced and well-directed gathering of musicians. The programme given consisted of marches and selections of various types, with the compositions of a sacred nature predominating.

G. A. Gillespie was chairman. In his opening remarks he referred to the happy relationship between the Salvation Army and the citizens of Peterborough in general, and he welcomed the visiting bandsmen as representatives of the Army. The singing of the hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," followed by prayer by Adjutant Ham, officer of the local corps, preceded the programme.

Envoy Jeffries, the blind pianist, delighted the audience with his singing, for which he played the piano accompaniment. Gifted with a splendid voice and being a skilled pianist, his four songs were well received with prolonged applause. He sang "Sing of the Cross," "Deep in the Mine," "I Hear You Calling Me," and "Just as I Am."

The soloists were Bandsmen A. E. Sanford, trombonist; F. Smith, Jr., with the euphonium, and W. Campbell, cornet. Bandsman Sanford played "The Light to Guide," which is a composition of Bandmaster Broughton. "Men of Harlech" was given as a euphonium solo by Bandsman Smith, while Bandsman W. B. Campbell, a promising young cornetist, played a selection, "The Lily," which he himself composed.

The skilful leadership of Bandmaster W. Broughton was evident in the band numbers. The different instruments blended perfectly, while they came in or became silent without any dragging at solo or group parts of the selections. The march, "On the Firing Line," opened the programme, and was followed by an arrangement from Haydn's "Creation." "Discipleship" was the next number, followed by "The Voyage to Heaven," and "Adoration."

"American Melodies No. 2," a medley arranged by Bandmaster Broughton, included such well-known tunes as "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah!" "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," "The Old Folks at Home," and "Yankee Doodle." March "Toronto No. 2," another number composed by the bandmaster, was a stirring melody, ending with "The Maple Leaf Forever."

The 27th Psalm was then read by Ensign Larsen of Detroit, and the programme was brought to a close with another march, "On to the War."

Adjutant Ham expressed thanks on behalf of the audience to the visiting bandsmen and to the chairman, and thanked the audience for the splendid reception given the visiting musicians. Colonel Norris, commander of the Michigan Division, spoke on behalf of the band.

The following are the members of the party:

ATHLETICS WIN EASY VICTORY FROM YANKEES

Indians Retain Second Place In League By Defeating St. Louis.

TWELVE INNINGS.

Tigers Split Double Header With White Sox at Detroit.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The Yankees, who long have been figuring on this season's American League pennant, are not so sure now that they will win it. Yesterday they took an 8 to 5 setback from the Athletics while the second place Cleveland Indians were winning from St. Louis, 6 to 5. The result of these two games cut the New Yorkers' lead to five and a half games, with practically a month of the season yet to come.

Herb Pennock, the Yank mound ace, was sent in against the Athletics, who also had pennant hopes at one time during the season, but he was knocked from the box in three innings. The league leaders used twenty players in an effort to win the game.

The victory of the Indians over St. Louis was hard fought, the winners being forced to go twelve innings to gain the decision over Sisler's tailenders. Washington shut out Boston, 2 to 0. Stanley Coveleskie beating Russell in a duel.

Detroit and Chicago split a doubleheader at Detroit, the White Sox winning the first, 19 to 2 and the Tigers the second, 7 to 6. In the first game the Sox pounded four Detroit hurlers for twenty-three hits.

Soccer Notes

A special meeting of the Peterboro and District Football Asociation was called for last night at the home of George Nimmons but after forty minutes waiting, the number present lacked the necessary quorum to transact business which was needing attention right away.

Last Saturday, a game was scheduled for Saturday afternoon between the Thistle and Masseys in the Holloway Cup but the latter management never notified the secthe game. This is not the Association's fault but the soccer players themselves.

According to schedule the match for Saturday is Masseys versus De Laval in a league encounter.

At present, the Association secretary is out of the city and team managements are anxious to sign up new players on the "official form" but they will have to revert to a "scrap of paper."

The hero of the Buffalo victory over the Orioles was Andy Anderson, who slammed the ball over the left field fence in the seventh with two out and the bases loaded.

Jersey City defeated Rochester, 9 to 2, pounding Herb Thormahlen for 18 hits.

CARDS DISPLACE LEAGUE LEADERS IN THE NATIONAL

Win Both Games of Double Header With Pirates at St. Louis.

REDS SECOND.

Pittsburgh's Double Loss Places Them in Third Place.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press)—The St. Louis Cardinals displayed the Pittsburgh Pirates as the leaders in the National League by winning both games of a doubleheader from the world's champions, 1 to 0, but remained in second place, one point ahead of the Pirates, whose double loss sent them skidding into third place.

Southpaw Bill Sherdel and Sotheron were the winning St. Louis twirlers. In the second game Sotheron held the Pirates to three hits. It was the first full game he had pitched this year. Lee Meadows, one of the leading Pirate pitchers, was hamemred in the first game for seven innings, his delivery allowing the Cards twelve safeties, including two homers.

Cooney's double in the ninth followed by Gonzales' single broke up a pitching duel between Jones and May at Chicago, Cooney crossing the plate with the only run of the game. Jones held the Reds to two hits. May was touched for nine but was tight in the pinches.

The Boston Braves displaced the Phillies as the league cellarites when they lost a 7 to 2 verdict at Philadelphia. The Robins and Giants were not scheduled.

MILLER HUGGINS ALONE CERTAIN OF KEEPING JOB

Only Pilot in Major Leagues Not Faced With Re-organization.

MACK STANDS PAT.

Changes of Manager Are Mentioned For Many Teams.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 1—(United Press).—Miller Huggins, of all the major league managers, can face another season with less worry than his rivals. The manager of the prospective American League champions is perhaps the only pilot in the major leagues who is not faced with the necessity of a reorganization.

Strange things can happen in one year when the luck breaks. This time last season, instead of being out in front, the Yankees were firmly established in the second division and were seemed to be little hope for the future.

The Babe wasn't doing any too well, the pitchers weren't going and there was a huge hole in the middle of the infield. Huggins knew that he had to find a shortstop and a second baseman and luck was with him. He found Tony Lazzeri and Mark Koenig and they meant the diference between the second division and a pennant.

Any ball club can use a good pitcher and Huggins would not turn down a chance to get another experienced hurler and he also could use a good young catcher, but the club would not be lost without either one.

The Philadelphia Athletics are fairly well fixed with playing material and Connie Mack may not make any important changes. He believes that his team is a prospective champion and that it failed this year only because of a lack of experience.

The St. Louis Browns, which were such a disappointment this season, may change managers as George Sisler admits that he is discouraged and wouldn't object if the owners decided to get another manager. If Sisler is relieved, however, he probably will be traded as he said sometime ago that if he gave up he job he would leave the club.

The annual report that Ty Cobb does not want his job at the helm of the Detroit Tigers has been around again this year. Cobb is reaching the end of his active career and it is understood that he wants to get out of the game and get into private business. If Cobb does decide to retire it is understood that Dan Howley, manager of the Toronto International League club, will succeed him.

Wilbert Robinson, president-manager of the Brooklyn Robins, has announced definitely that he will not handle the club on the field next year and it is understood that Max Carey, former Pittsburgh captain, may be given the job.

Jack Fournier and Zach Wheat, two veteran Brooklyn stars, who had been considered as candidates to succeed Robby probably will be traded, it is understood.

John McGraw, manager of the Giants, has intimated very strongly that he is going to build over his club. He wants an outfielder to succeed Irish Meusel and a young catcher. He could also use some pitchers.

The Cincinnati Reds, failing this year because of infield weakness, will try to find a new shortstop and another third baseman. The team has plenty of good pitching but Jack Hendricks blamed the collapse of the team on a shortstop weakness, figuring that it cost the team at least nine games.

The Washington Senators will have to rebuild at several positions and Bucky Harris may decide to trade a couple of players who have not been getting along with him. He probably could use Goose Goslin to a big advantage in a trade.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, if they fail to win the National League pennant, may have a new manager next season. Despite the claim that Bill McKetchnie and Fred Clarke have been in perfect harmony in the role of dual managers, the release of Max Carey brought out some facts which served to prove that there was lack of harmony on the bench.

Diamond Disputes Decided

By Ray Evans

Pitcher tries to intentionally pass batsman, who steps across the plate and hits the ball safely. What is the ruling?

* * *

When a batsman steps out of his box, across the plate and hits a ball delivered by the pitcher, he is automatically out for so doing, whether the hit is fair or foul.

Only recently in an American League game at New York Babe Ruth was called out by Umpire Owens on such an act.

At the time there were runners on second and third and two out. The pitcher was trying to pass Babe, filling the bases, offering a play at each base and taking a chance that the man to follow Ruth would be easier to dispose of than the Babe.

FROM MR. WILLIAMS

Editor, Examiner, City:

I would be much obliged if the Liberal Candidate for West Peterborough would answer the following questions, and oblige,

JOHN WILLIAMS

311 oswell Ave., City.

1.—Why is it necessary for my neighbor's two sons (along with hundreds of others from Peterborough) to go to the United States, to earn a living after being educated and trained here in Peterborough?

2.—Why is it so difficult for a property owner in Peterborough to get a tenant for a $20 dwelling today, when five years ago it would be tenanted at once?

3.—Why is it that the population of Peterborough, with all its advantages, stays practically the same as it was five years ago?

CROP COMPETITIONS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have before me the different reports of the standing field crop competitions throughout Central Ontario and the Lakefield competitors have made an excellent showing standing high in the oat competition and Gordon Mann of Smith can be congratulated for having the highest actual score throughout the district with an actual score of 94½ points on his field of Victory oats. The Victory oat is not one of the four varieties that the department standardizes so he suffered a handicap of 2 points which reduced his score to 92½ points. The varieties that receive full points are O.A.C. 72, Banner, Alaska and Gold Rein. The Victory is possibly the most outstanding oat grown today. It was bred by the Swavolif school, Sweden, which is not surpassed by any pure bred seed breeding school in the world. Here is a copy of a letter that I received from the Seed Commissioner at Ottawa:

Ottawa, March 15th, 1924.

W. H. Merrill, Peterboro.

Dear Sir, — At the International Grain and Hay Show, 1923, Canadian exhibtors won 28 out of the 36 prizes in the oat class. We saw the exhibits and enquired as to the variety and found them mostly Victory although we cannot be quite certain on this point. We are very doubtful if any of those exhibits were O.A.C. 72.

Yours, etc.,

P. Stewart.

The standardizing of varieties is not fair to the competitor. In fact, varieties cannot be standardized and be just to the farmer no matter how carefully it is done in many cases the most profitable varieties are not standardized for instance in the corn competition some white varieties are standardized practical feeders and scientists have found all white corn low in vitimine and should not be encouraged for ensilage purposes. Our Fairs Associations should look into this matter fully and encourage the farmer to grow the best under his own conditions and see to it that every field is judged for the value of it.

This country cannot afford to pay for hobbyists no matter if it does effect Dr. Zavitz or Lockie Wilson or any one else.

The average farmer is looking for results and should be encouraged.

Yours, etc.,

W. H. MERRILL.

FROM MR. DOBBIN

Mr. F. H. Dobbin writes as follows:

"I was in Lower Canada and south of Montreal a few weeks ago and with friends motored across the international line to Plattsburg, N.Y., and eighteen miles beyond to the famous Ausable Chasm. At this point the rock surface of the earth has been rent asunder for a distance of several miles to a depth of 150 feet and a width of quite 200 yards. An extraordinary naturel convulsion must have brought this about. Three important appearing hotels have been established and throngs of motor cars line the roads leading to and from the highway, which skirts the western shore of Lake Champlain, being the main travelled artery to Albany and on to New York. The road passes through the Adirondack mountains offering to view scenery of marvellous interest.

But it is not to extol the scenic possibilities that I write but to note the commercial conditions as available to tourists. As we passed through Rock Island, of Customs investigation fame, we produced a pass procured from the Canadian authorities within the Canadian line, making affirmation as to period of stay in the U.S. and intention to speedily return. At Rock Island the principal street was crowded with cars parked within diagonal lines painted on the pavement. Several of these cars were undergoing examination, having travelled in from Montreal. Two had been rather thoroughly emptied of passengers and portables, the latter being strewed out on the pavement, bags and sacks quite open and explored. Following a short wait we interviewed the U.S. customs officer, (one of several), and were supplied at the cost of fifty cents with a blue paper of considerable length and width, which being signed and affirmed testified to all concerned that the trip was only a temporary one.

On the way back all this scrutiny was re-enacted, but more speedily. Eight or nine officials moved about the cars in waiting, securing the papers previously issued and on the assurance that the car in which we were travelling would at once proceed to and across the border line into Canada, we were free to return.

Having heard, while in Montreal, that visitors to the Canadian shopping districts might purchase of goods to the amount of $100.00 (personal effects) and that the articles if not exceeding in value the above amount were passed across the United States line free of any duty being exacted. I asked the U. S. custom official if this were true, and he replied, yes and no. The regulation provided that the tourist, or visitor, having crossed into Canada must have remained there for at least four days. If the stay was for a less period then duty was imposed.

The regulation, he observed, was directed at the shopipng tourist who crossed at Niagara Falls, Windsor or over the Quebec-New York line and makes purchases and returns to the U. S. the same day or the day after. The bona-fide visitor, making a tour of several days is able to prove the length of stay in Canada by means of the paper secured at the point of entry.

I do not know if Canadian visitors to the U.S. are privileged to buy on the same conditions, but the collector of customs in this city could advise if any contemplate crossing the lake to Rochested, N. Y., on a hasty visit, to return the day following."

F. H. DOBBIN.

YOU are richer today because of Liberal Policies

Meighen can't Win! If you want Stable Government Give King a Working Majority.

CONSIDER these outstanding financial reforms, inaugurated by the Liberals, which—

(1) Give you Cheaper Automobiles.

(2) Give you Cheaper Agricultural Implements.

(3) Abolishes Income Tax for one-third who paid it.

(4) Reduces tax on all incomes.

(5) Extends the British Preferenece.

(6) Abolishes Receipt Tax.

(7) Abolishes the Sales Tax on 236 groups of articles.

(8) And gives you Penny Postage again.

These benefits are not fancied— they are real. The country feels them, the home and the individual feel them, and business has reponded wonderfully.

NOTE WELL—Every Conservative in the House of Commons voted against these reductions in taxation.

MAGNIFICENT ACHIEVEMENT.

To-day our favorable trade balance has reached the enormous total of more than $400,000,000. Our factories are busy. Many are building additions and working overtime. We are exporting $15,567,234 more manufactured goods than we are importing. Our railways are piling up new records. In 1921 the Canadian National Railways had an operating deficit of $11,000,000. In 1925 it was changed to a surplus of $32,-000,-000. Our taxes have been reduced by $25,000,000. Government expenditure has been lowered, effecting a saving of $108,341,766 in 1925 as compared with the last year under Meighen. Our budget has been balanced. Our dollar is worth a dollar, and sometimes more, in all parts of the world. Our public debt is being reduced. There is but little unemployment. Agriculture is prosperous. Our people are happier than ever before in Canada's history.

A GOVERNMENT FOR THE PEOPLE.

The Liberal Budget of this year was accepted by the great mass of the electors as a Budget designated to benefit the average Canadian.

Hon. Mr. Robb, the Liberal Minister of Finance, has promised still further reductions in taxation if the Liberals are returned to office.

The record of the King Government shines with achievements that should lead every right-thinking man and woman to vote Liberal on Election Day, September 14th.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

"Hands Across the Border," one of the most spectacular of all Fred Thomson's western romances, comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow. Frank M. Clifton wrote the story, a rattling tale of smuggling along the Mexican line, and the amusing difficulties into which a young American can become immersed when he starts promiscuously to rescue young Spanish ladies from girl's boarding schools. Along with the chuckle that sprinkle the picture with the usual Thomson prodigality there is an unexampled number of thrills, in most of which Silver King plays a big part. That horse takes the palm as the best actor in Hollywood! And Mr. Thompson himself would be the last to deny such an assertion. Bess Flowers has the leading lady's part, and she proves a devastating damsel, both in distress and otherwise. Others who stand out in the strong supporting cast are Tyrone Power, William Courtright, Clarence Geldert and Tom Santschi. David Kirkland directed the production.

AT THE REGENT

"SHIPWRECKED" SCENES FILMED AT MAZATLAN.

Mexican City Used For First Time as Locale For Picture.

Historic old Mazatlan, Mexico, makes its bow as a location for a motion picture for the first time in Metropolitan's latest production, "Shipwrecked," which will be the feature at the Regent Theatre tomorrow (Thursday).

Mazatlan, at one time, was well on the road to becoming one of the chief seaports on the West Coast of Mexico, but it suffered a severe set-back when it was visited by a plague many years ago. Since that time a portion of the city has remained as it was originally built, while other portions resemble a moderen metropolis.

The sequences following the wreck scenes in "Shipwrecked" were filmed in and around Mazatlan, the traders' post, and subsequent discovery of the girl by the villain, her fight for recognition in the eyes of the world after she had killed a man, as she believed, to protect herself.

Seena Owen is featured in "Shipwrecked" with Josepeh Schildkraut, Matthew Betz, Clarence Burton, Erwin Connelly, Laska Winter and Lionel Belmore, also have important roles in this production, which features the most realistic storm at sea ever caught by the camera — scenes actually photographed in one of the worst storms that have devastated the Pacific Coast in many years.

"Every other year," continued Mr. Brasher, "I have been besieged with requests for harvest hands, but this year I have not had a single request up to the present time. I have not even heard anything from the country of a shortage in this respect.

AUGUST SHOWS SMALL DECLINE IN CONSTRUCTION

Total 6.4 Per Cent. Less Than in July of This Year.

LEAD OVER 1925.

Urban Building is 25.6 Per Cent. Ahead of Totals For 1925.

Following the trend indicated by previous years, the seasonal decline in construction contracts awarded for the month of August was to be expected. During the present month new work to the value of $31,696,500 was reported as actually contracted for. This sum is practically on a par with that reported in August, 1925, it being just 1.5 per cent. increase. The August total is the second largest in a decade and is well above the average of those years.

According to MacLean Building Reports, Ltd., projects in the business building classification repeated the precedent established in July and again took the lead, accounting for 43 per cent. of all construction or $13,638,700. Residential work takes second place again, having accounted for $8,671,400 or 27.4 per cent. Projects in the engineering classification were $7,723,700 or 24.4 per cent. and industrial 5.24 per cent. or $1,662,700.

For each of the two months previous to August, the Province of Quebec recorded larger totals than those for other Provinces. Now Ontario steps into the lead again, contracts having been awarded to the value of $11,225,000 or 35.4 per cent. of all construction. 27.6 per cent. was undertaken in Quebec, which contracts totalled $8,749,700. 15.5 per cent. or $4,901,700 are the figures for British Columbia, while the Prairie Provinces follow with $4,560,800 or 14.4 per cent. and the Maritimes $2,259,300 or 7.1 per cent. This is a remarkable total for the Maritimes as judged by the records of previous months. $1,500,000 of it is made up by one power development project at Grand Falls, N. B.

Western Provinces Active.

The respective accumulative totals for the year to date show that the most work has been contracted for in the Province of Quebec, where $102,647,300 worth of construction has been reported or 39.4 per cent. of all construction. The figures for Ontario are $92,157,700 and 35.4 per cent., respectively. It is very pleasing, indeed, to notice that the Western Provinces are making good on their promise of increased building. The total for this year just falls short of being double that of 1925. For the first eight months of this year the Prairie Provinces accounted for $37,309,900 of construction or 14.4 per cent., while British Columbia assisted by its large total of $4,901,700 for August, accounts for $21,762,000 or 8.4 per cent. and the Maritimes 2.4 per cent. or $6,225,900.

It seems that the business building classification intends to lead the others for the remainder of the year, as projects under the classification now account for 31.4 per cent. of all construction and total $81,675,600. The percentage for the residential classification has dropped slightly to 28.9 per cent., having a total of $75,241,400 for the year to date. Public works and utilities now aggregate $55,415,000 or 21.3 per cent., while industrial is now 18.4 per cent. on its record of $47,772,800.

The total of contemplated new construction for this year stands at $361,881,300, $24,778,900 being the figure for August. The ratio between contemplated and contracts awarded still continues to decrease. The average ratio for twenty months has been 1.68, whereas the ratio now stands at 1.19, indicating that consetruction is now closer to the market than at any time in the past few years. Construction jobs which come out for tenders now are considered to have a much better chance of being proceeded with.

Complete Solar Eclipse In England Next June

LONDON, (United Press.) — Greenwich Observatory, universally recognized as the centre of the world so far as astronomy is concerned, is greatly preparing for the complete solar eclipse next June.

The eclipse will cover only a narrow strip of less than 30 miles across England but every portable telescope in the United Kingdm is expected to be moved within the belt of the shadow.

These will include the gigantic fifty foot telescope at the Greenwich Observatory. This telescope is equipped with a Coelstat mirror enabling it to be operated while in a horizontal position.

The last total eclipse which visited England occurred in 1724. It was nearly total in London.

BRITISH LABOR IS STILL SOUND

Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas Brings Message To Canada From England.

SUPPORTS EMPIRE.

TORONTO, Sept. 1. — Labor in England is still sound. To no other class will it yield a broader Empire outlook or a more loyal support of those things for which the Empire stands.

That, briefly, was the message brought to the guests at the directors' luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday by Right Hon. J. H. Thomas, former Secretary of State for the Colonies in the Ramsay MacDonald Government, and General Secretary of the British Railwaymen's Union, a message regarded as particularly significant by those who heard it, since it came from the lipps of one of Britain's most outstanding Labor leaders.

"No greater political mistake has ever been made," Mr. Thomas told the gathering, "than the assumption that the Union Jack, which stands for democratic government and for the broadest and freest constitutional practice, is the monopoly of either class or creed.

"The British Empire, with all it stands for—and with all its imperfections it stand for a great Empire — is always protected in its darkest hour, always preserved in its hour of trial, not because of the virtue of political parties, but because the humblest and the richest have been prepared to subordinate their interests to the common good."

In Mr. Thomas the guests of the directors found one of the most captivating of this year's speakers. For nearly ten minutes he kept his audience in laughter with anecdotes relating to his experiences in the haughty precincts of the Colonial Office when he, as a Labor member, took over the duties of Secretary. Once in particular, he said, his statement to a flunkey that he was the new Minister merely brought the sympathetic remark, "Another shell-shock case."

MEIGHEN STARTS TOUR OF QUEBEC

Premier Speaks at Three Meetings in Richelieu Valley To-day.

MINISTERS SPEAK.

CHAMBLY, Que., Sept. 1 (Canadian Press).—Premier Meighen today opened his three-day tour in Quebec. From Montreal he crossed the St. Lawrence and proceeded south through districts rich in tradition and story by the famed Richelieu River to the County of Bagot.

Mr. Meighen's first meeting was planned for Longueuil, but there was a crowd waiting for him at the St. Lambert end of Victoria Bridge, and there he spoke briefly. At Longueuil the hall was packed and the Premier spoke in French and English. He promised that the needs of the neighborhood would receive every consideration at the hands of his government. No reference was made to the questions at issue in the election. Hon. E. L. Patenaude and Hon. Andre Fateuz also spoke.

At Chambly Mr. Meighen spoke in the open air and declared that from the Alantic to the Pacific the Conservatives will filled with every hope.

DURHAM CASTLE IN GREAT DANGER

Old Fortress, Erected By William the Conqueror, Slipping Down Hill.

POOR FOUNDATION.

LONDON, Sept. 1 (United Press) —Durham Castle, built by William the Conqueror, is slowly slipping off its perch on the edge of Castle Hill and threatens almost at any moment to slide down into the River Wear which runs at its foot. The castle, one of the oldest landmarks of England, is also one of the largest ancient buildings.

"It is impossible to exaggerate the condition," reported Sir Francis Fox, famous as a restorer and saver of old buildings. "This enormous building is in serious danger."

Instead of being built on solid rock, as had been supposed, Sir Francis' investigation of the foundation showed an underpinning so soft that his boots left heelmarks in it. For twenty-eight feet below the base of the massive walls, layers of shale and unformed coal were found.

Daily new cracks are appearing in the walls and the stairs of the fine old building are showered frequently with bits of glass as window-panes burst under the strain of the shifting masonry. About $250,000 is needed to save the building and not less than $500,000 would be needed to make it permanently safe, Sir Francis estimated. The castle is now the property of Durham University. It is the former seat of the Prince Bishops.

During the war, a raiding Zeppelin dropped a huge bomb near the castle, which shook it severely. This, with natural slow erosion, caused the present precarious condition.

CANADIAN SHOT IN LIQUOR FIGHT

Walkerville Man Is 25th Victim in Detroit Underworld Quarrels.

"KNEW TOO OMUCH."

DETROIT, Sept. 1 — Alvin C. Hoyle, 32 years old, a native of Wallaceburg, Ont., and whose two children still reside there, was shot eight times and instantly killed here early yesterday. His companion, Charles Phillips, aged 38, of Detroit, was seriously wounded at the same time. He received bullets in the head, back and right arm, and physicians at Receiving Hospital do not expect him to recover.

The shooting occurred at the Elmwood Cemetery as Hoyle and Phillips left the automobile in which they had been riding with three men, the identity of whom has not yet been determined. Police believe the tragedy to be a new phase of the Detroit underworld liquor war. Hoyle is the twenty-fifth man to fall victim to the bullets of the contending factions since the first of this year, officers state.

According to the disconnected story related by Phillips to police as he lay on his cot in the hospital, Hoyle's death was sought by gunmen "because he knew too much."
